313–317	" " "	401
317–320	" " "	402
320–321	" " "	403
321–323	Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases:
	Cincinnati, N.O. & T. P. R.R. Co. v. Commonwealth,
	Louisville & N.R.R. Co. v. Same,
	Chesapeake, O. & S. R. R. Co. v. Same,	414
323–326	" " "	415
326–331	" " "	416
331–334	" " "	417
334–336	" " "	418
336–339	" " "	419
339–340	Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Pendleton,	432
340–343	" "	433
343–346	" "	434
346–348	" "	435

Off. Rep. 115 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
348–349	Sargent v. Helton,	41
349–352	" " "	41
352	" " "	41
353	Watts v. Camors,
	Camors v. Watts,	40
353–355	" " "	40
355–361	" " "	40
361–363	" " "	40
363–364	Pope v. Allis,	39
364–367	" " "	39
367–368	" " "	39
368–370	" " "	39
370–371	" " "	39
371–373	" " "	39
373	Bell v. First Nat. Bank of Chicago,	41
374–376	" " "	41
376–382	" " "	41
382–383	" " "	41
384–385	Merchants Bank v. Bergen County	41
385–390	" " "	41
390–392	" " "	41
392	Deffebach v. Hawke,	41
393–395	" "	41
395–401	" "	41
401–404	" "	41
404–407	" "	41
407	" "	41
408–410	Sparks v. Pierce,	41
410–413	" "	41
413	" "	41
413–414	Alabama v. Burr,	41
414–417	" "	41
417–420	" "	41
420–425	" "	41
425–428	" "	41
428–429	" "	41
429	Eachus v. Broomall,	41
429–432	" "	41
432–434	" "	41
434–437	" "	41
437–439	" "	41
439–441	Gibson v. Lyon,	41
441–444	" "	41
444–447	" "	41
447–450	" "	41
450–453	" "	41
453	" "	41
454	Gage v. Pumpelly,	41
454–455	" "	41
455–461	" "	41
461–463	" "	41
464	Jones, Exrx. v. Van Benthuysen,
465–468	Leonard v. Ozark Land Co.,
	Leonard v. Chatfield,
468–469	" "
469	St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. McGee,
469–472	" "
472–475	" "
475–476	" "
477–479	Drew v. Grinnell,
479–481	" "
482	Bohlen v. Arthurs,
482–486	" "
486–487	" "
487–488	Kurtz v. Moffitt,
	Moffitt v. Kurtz,
488–496	" "
496–499	" "
499–502	" "

[illegible]	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 115 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
[illegible]	[illegible] v. Moffitt,		600	Hassall, Trustee, v. Wilcox, -	505
	[illegible] v. Kunz, - -	462	600	Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Traill County, - - -	477
	" " - - -	463
	[illegible] v. May, - - -	456	606	" " "	478
	" " - - -	457	606–609	" " "	479
	" " - - -	458	609–611	" " "	480
	[illegible] Pacific R. Co. v. Humes,	463	611	Bowman v. Chicago & N. R. Co.,	502
	" " " "	464	612–614	" " " -	503
	" " " "	465	614–616	" " " -	504
	" " " "	466	616–617	Clay County v. McAleer, -	482
	" " " "	467	617–619	" " " - -	483
	[illegible] R. Co. v. Terry, Note,	467	620	Campbell v. Holt, - - -	483
	[illegible] Sewing M. Co. v. Richards,	480	620–622	" " - - -	484
	" " " -	481	622–625	" " - - -	485
	" " " - -	482	625–628	" " - - -	486
	[illegible] v. Clews, - - -	467	628–631	" " - - -	487
	" " - - -	468	631–634	" " - - -	488
	" " - - - -	469	634–636	Baltzer v. Raleigh & A. R. R. Co.	505
	" " - - - -	470	636–639	" " "	506
	" " - - - -	471	639–641	" " "	507
	Perry v. Livingston,		641–644	" " "	508
	Livingston v. Perry, - -	489	644–647	" " "	509
	" " - - -	490	647–649	" " "	510
	" " - - -	491	650	N. O. Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., - - - - -	516
	Thompson v. Allen County, -	472
	" " " - -	473	650–652	" " "	517
	" " " -	474	652–655	" " "	518
	" " " -	475	655–658	" " "	519
	" " " -	476	658–661	" " "	520
	" " " -	477	661–664	" " "	521
	[illegible] v. Kenney, Trustee,	495	664–667	" " "	522
	" " " - -	496	667–670	" " "	523
	" " " -	497	670–673	" " "	524
	" " " - -	498	673	" " "	525
	Kenney, Trustee, v. Effinger,	498	674–675	New Orleans Water Works Co. v. Rivers, - - - -	525
	" " " - -	499
	[illegible] v. Merritt, Coll., -	494	675–678	" " "	526
	[illegible] v. Murphy, - -	491	678–681	" " "	527
	" " - - -	492	681–683	" " "	528
	" " -	493	683	Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens Gas Co., - - - -	510
	" " - - - -	494
	[illegible] Palace Car Co. v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., -	499	684–687	" " " "	512
	" " " "	500	687–693	" " " "	513
	" " " "	501	693–695	" " " "	514
	" " " "	502	695–698	" " " "	515
	[illegible], Trustee, v. Wilcox, -	504	698–700	" " " "	516

115

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States,

AT OCTOBER TERM, 1884.

COMMISSIONERS OF BUNCOMBE CO., ET AL., Appts.,

v.

VINCENT R. TOMMEY.

See S. C. Reporter's ed. 122 ET AL.

Mechanic's lien—statutes of North Carolina; railroad property not subject to.

1. The statutes of North Carolina of March 28, [illegible] and March 1, 1873, the first giving a lien to mechanics and laborers in certain cases, and the other [illegible] liens under mortgages given by corporations do not give to those performing labor and furnishing materials in the construction of railroads a lien upon the property and franchises of a corporation owning and operating such roads.

2. Mechanic's lien laws giving to mechanics and laborers a lien on buildings, including the lot upon which it stands, or a lien upon a lot or farm or other property for work done thereon, or for materials furnished in the construction or repair of buildings, [illegible] be interpreted as giving a lien upon the road, bridges or other property of a railroad company that may be essential in the operation and maintenance of its road for the public purposes for which it was established.

3. The proviso of the 3d section of the said Act (Battle's Revisal, chap. 24, § 48) has reference to grants and contracts of private corporations [illegible] under the Act of February 12, 1872 (Public Laws, C. 1871-2, chap. 199) and not those of railroad corporations organized for public use under the Act of February 8, 1872.

[illegible] for rehearing, State v. Rives, 5 Ired. [illegible] v. McGee, 28 N. C., and certain state [illegible].]

[No. 136.]

[illegible] 17, 18, 1884. Decided Mar. 2, 1885.

[illegible] from the Circuit Court of the [illegible] States for the Western District of [illegible].

[illegible] and facts of the case fully appear [illegible] opinion of the court. See also the re[illegible] opinion of this court on petition for [illegible], post, p. 308.

[illegible] F. Phillips and A. S. Merrimon, [illegible].

[illegible] Wm. R. Earle and Jas. H. Rion, [illegible].

Mr. Harlan delivered the opinion of [illegible].

[illegible] and Asheville Railroad Company [illegible] created by the consolida[illegible] year 1874, of a railroad company of [illegible], organized under the laws of [illegible] and of the Greenville and French Broad Railroad Company, of North Carolina—executed, under date of October 1, 1876, a deed of trust, whereby, for the purpose of securing the payment of its bonds, with interest coupons attached, it conveyed its franchises, railroad, rights, lands and property, real and personal, in trust for those who should become holders or owners of such bonds. The deed contained a provision by which the principal of all the bonds should become due after continuous default for six months in the payment of semi-annual interest upon them or upon any of them. Such a default having occurred in respect of [123] the installments of interest due January 1, 1878, the present suit was brought for the purpose of enforcing, in satisfaction of the entire amount of said bonds and coupons, the lien given by the beforementioned deed. Certain parties—Garrison, Fry & Deal, Clayton, and Rice & Coleman—were made defendants, because, as creditors of the railroad company, they claimed, respectively, a lien upon property covered by the mortgage superior to that asserted in behalf of the bondholders. Garrison alleged that, being a mechanic, he contracted, December 1, 1876, and June 2, 1877, with, and afterwards built for, the railroad company two trestles in Polk County, North Carolina, his work being completed February 18, 1878; Fry & Deal, the first named being a mechanic, that they furnished materials and work upon trestles in the same county, under a contract made with the company on June 2, 1877, and fully executed June 17, 1878; Clayton, that he performed work (grading, etc.), upon the company's road in the same county, under a contract made with it prior to the mortgage, but not executed until after its date; and Rice & Coleman, that they did work and labor, and furnished materials, on the company's road in Henderson County, North Carolina, such work beginning June 1, 1876, and ending May 1, 1878.

The decree below, ordering a sale of the mortgaged property, must have proceeded upon the ground that, under the laws of North Carolina, these defendants acquired no lien whatever upon the property of the railroad company. The contention here is that some of the defendants acquired a lien as well under a statute passed in 1873, regulating sales under mortgages given by companies upon all their works and property, as under the Act called the Workmen's Lien Law of 1870; and that one of the defendants has a lien under the former, while others have liens under the latter statute. The main inquiry now is, whether the court below correctly interpreted those statutes. It is necessary to a clear understanding of the case that their provisions be examined in detail.

By the Constitution of North Carolina of 1868, the General Assembly of that State was [124] required to "provide, by proper legislation, for giving to mechanics and laborers an adequate lien on the subject matter of their labor." Art. 14, § 4.

Subsequently, by an Act approved March 28, 1870, entitled "An Act for the Protection of Mechanics and other Laborers, Materials," etc., it was provided "that every building built, rebuilt, repaired or improved, together with the necessary lots on which said building may be situated, and every lot, farm or vessel, or any kind of property not herein enumerated, shall be subject to a lien for the payment of all debts contracted for work done on the same or material furnished"; § 1; that "any mechanic or citizen, who shall make, alter or repair any article of personal property, at the request of the owner or legal possessor of such property, shall have a lien upon such property so made, altered, or repaired, for his just and reasonable charge for his work done and material furnished, and may hold and retain possession of the same until such just and reasonable charges shall be paid," etc.; § 3; that "all claims under $200 may be filed in the office of the nearest magistrate, if over $200, in the office of the Superior Court clerk in any county where the labor has been performed or the material furnished. § 4;" that proceedings to enforce the lien created must be commenced in the courts of justice of the peace and in the superior courts, according to their jurisdiction; and, upon judgment being rendered in favor of the claimant, an execution for the collection and enforcement thereof may issue in the same manner as upon other judgments in actions arising upon contracts for the recovery of money. Pub. Laws N. C., chap. 206, p. 258; Battle's Revisal, N. C., chap. 65, p. 563.

By the general statute, approved February 8, 1872, entitled "An Act to Authorize the Formation of Railroad Companies and to Regulate the Same," provision was made for the formation by any number of persons, not less than twenty-five, of corporations for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating railroads. This statute contains sixty-six sections, and prescribes the mode in which a company may be organized under it; what its articles of association shall contain; what shall be the [125] amount of its capital stock and in what way subscribed; when it shall become a corporation, with the powers and privileges therein granted; to what extent its stockholders shall be liable for the debts of the company; when it shall be liable to laborers for the amount due them from contractors for the construction of any part of the road; the mode in which it may, by condemnation, acquire real estate needed for the purposes of its incorporation; an annual report to the Governor showing its operations and condition in every respect; when and under what circumstances the Legislature may alter or reduce its rates of freight, fare or other profits; and many other duties respecting the operation and management of its railroad and other property. Public Laws N. C., 1871-2, chap. 188 Battle's Revisal, chap. 99.

Corporations formed under that statute ar given power to do various things involving th raising and expenditure of money; and also "from time to time to borrow such sums o money as may be necessary for completing an finishing or operating their railroad, and to is sue and dispose of their bonds for any amoun so borrowed, and to mortgage their corporat property and franchises to secure the paymen or [of] any debt contracted for the purpose aforesaid," etc. The statute further declare that "all existing railroad corporations withi this State shall respectively have and possess al the powers and privileges" therein specified.

On the 12th of February, 1872, the Gener Assembly of North Carolina passed anothe statute providing for the formation of "privat corporations for any purpose not unlawful" b three or more persons. Pub. Laws N. C 1871-2, chap. 199.

At its subsequent session an Act was approve March 1, 1873, entitled "An Act to Regula Mortgages by Corporations, and to Regula Sales under Them." As the present case depen largely upon the construction to be given to th provisions of that statute, its 1st and 3d sectio (the 2d and other sections being immaterial i the determination of any question here i volved) are given entire, as follows:

"Sec. 1. If a sale be made under a deed of trust mortgage executed by any company on all its wor and property, and there be a conveyance pursua thereto, such sale and conveyance shall pass to t purchaser at the sale not only the works and pro erty of the company as they were at the time making the deed of trust or mortgage, but a works which the company may, after that time a before the sale, have constructed, and all oth property of which it may be possessed at the tin of the sale other than debts due to it. Upon su conveyance to the purchaser the said compa shall, ipso facto, be dissolved, and the said purchas shall forthwith be a corporation by any na which may be set forth in the said conveyance, in any writing signed by him and recorded in t same manner in which the conveyance shall be r corded."

"Sec. 3. When such corporation shall expire or dissolved, or its corporate rights and privileg shall have ceased, all its works and property a debts due to it shall be subject to the payment debts due by it, and then to distribution among t members according to their respective interes and such corporation may sue and be sued as b fore for the purpose of collecting debts due to prosecuting rights under previous contracts with and enforcing its liabilities and distributing t proceeds of its works, property and debts amo those entitled thereto; Provided, That all debts a contracts of any corporation, prior to or at the ti of the execution of any mortgage or deed of tr by such corporation, shall have a first lien upon t property, rights and franchises of said corporatio and shall be paid off or secured before such mo gage or deed of trust shall be registered." Pu Laws N. C., 1872-3, chap. 131; Battle's Revisal, ch 26, §§ 46, 48.

The first question to be considered is wheth the Act of 1870 gives a lien to mechanics contractors upon the property of a railroad c poration, for work performed or materials f nished in and about the construction of its ro or of its bridges constituting a part of its li We are of opinion that no such statutory li exists in North Carolina, or was intended to given by the Act 1870. In reaching this c clusion, we are not aided by any direct decisi of the question by the Supreme Court of No Carolina. Reference was made by counsel [illegible] v. Smith, 81 N. C., 340, where it was [illegible] that an overseer is not entitled, under that [illegible] to a lien, for his wages, upon the employ[illegible] crop or land over which he has superin[illegible]. After alluding to the constitutional [illegible] that laws be enacted to give to [illegible] and laborers an adequate lien on [illegible] subject matter of their labor, the court said: "A very large proportion of the laboring pop[illegible] of the State had just recently been re[illegible] from thraldom, and thrown upon their [illegible] resources, perfectly ignorant of the com[illegible] business transactions of social life, and [illegible] provision of the Constitution, and the Acts [illegible] to carry it into effect, were intended to [illegible] protection to that class of persons who [illegible] totally dependent upon their manual labor [illegible] subsistence. The law was designed ex[illegible] for mechanics and laborers." If such [illegible] the effect of the Act of 1870, there is strong [illegible] to hold that a mere contractor for the [illegible] of a railroad, or of railroad bridges, [illegible] entitled to the lien given by it. But with[illegible] accepting as conclusive an opinion delivered [illegible] the rights of the parties had become fixed, [illegible] v. Seligman, 107 U. S., 33 (Bk. 27, L. ed., [illegible]) we [illegible] our interpretation of the statute [illegible] the ground that it has no reference to [illegible] done or materials furnished in the con[illegible] of railroads. The words of the Act [illegible] adequate to express a purpose to [illegible] a lien upon a public improvement of that [illegible]. The words "building," "lot," [illegible] and "any kind of property not herein [illegible]" are too limited in their scope to [illegible] the conclusion that the Legislature had [illegible], by that Act, to give a lien upon [illegible] property. This view is strengthened [illegible] circumstance that, by the subsequent [illegible] providing for the organization of railroad [illegible] and regulating their affairs, no saving [illegible] of liens in behalf of mechanics and [illegible], and express power is given to such [illegible] to borrow, from time to time, any [illegible] necessary for completing and furnishing [illegible] their railroads upon bonds secured [illegible] upon their corporate property and [illegible]. Indeed, the idea of a lien in favor [illegible] actually performing work in the [illegible] of a railroad seems to have been [illegible] excluded; for, when the railroad [illegible] fails to pay such laborers, the com[illegible] upon notice, may become bound to do so; [illegible] lien is given therefor upon the property [illegible] corporation.

[illegible], however, from these considerations, [illegible] of opinion that a law, giving to mechan[illegible] laborers a lien on buildings, including [illegible] or ground upon which they stand, or a [illegible] a lot or farm or other property, for [illegible] thereon, or for materials furnished [illegible] construction or repair of buildings, should [illegible] interpreted as giving a lien upon the [illegible], bridges, or other property of a rail[illegible] company, that may be essential in the [illegible] and maintenance of its road. In [illegible], as in most, if not in all the States, [illegible] although constructed for the private [illegible] of those engaged in such enterprises, [illegible] which have been established, [illegible] the authority of law, primarily for the [illegible] and benefit of the public. The [illegible] of February 8, 1872, authorized the formation of corporations to construct, maintain and operate railroads "for public use in the conveyance of persons and property, or for the purpose of maintaining and operating any unincorporated railroad already constructed for the like public use." Battle's Revisal, chap. 99, § 1. The pecuniary profit derived by those who project and operate them is the reward which they receive for maintaining a public highway. Municipal taxation to aid in their construction has been maintained only upon the ground that they are, in a large sense, instrumentalities or agencies for the purpose of accomplishing public ends. Upon that ground rests the authority of the State to invest them with the right of eminent domain in the condemnation of private property, and to prescribe from time to time, in the interest of the public, reasonable regulations for their control and management. Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S., 68, 69 (Bk. 26, L. ed., 1011). Such being the relations existing in North Carolina between these corporations and the public, it should not be presumed that the Legislature intended to subject them to the operation of ordinary lien laws, enacted for the benefit of those performing labor [129] and furnishing materials in the construction, repair or improvement of what the Statute of 1870 designates as buildings, or who perform labor upon lots, farms and other property belonging to private persons and having no connection with public objects. A different construction of the statute would enable parties having liens for amounts within the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, to destroy a public highway and defeat the important objects which the State intended to subserve by its construction. No such intention should be imputed to the Legislature, unless the words of the statute clearly requires it be done.

There is nothing, it may be observed in this connection, in Brooks v. R. Co., 101 U.S., 443 (Bk. 25, L. ed., 1057], in conflict with the views here expressed. The decision in that case rests upon the construction given to the mechanics' lien law of Iowa by the Supreme Court of that State. Besides, the Iowa Statute in terms included, among those entitled to the lien it gave, "contractors, subcontractors, material furnishers, mechanics and laborers engaged in the construction of any railroad or other work of internal improvement." Iowa R. S., 1860, § 1846. The legislative will was there expressed so clearly as to leave no room for interpretation of the statute.

It is, however, contended that the proviso of the 3d section of the Act of March 1, 1873, is sufficient to sustain the lien asserted by such of the appellants as were contractors and mechanics. That Act, as we have seen, regulates sales under deeds of trusts or mortgages "executed by any company on all its works and property," and provides for the purchaser becoming a corporation, with all the franchises, rights and conveyances of, and subject to the duties imposed upon, the original corporation. In connection with a general provision for the disposition of the assets of corporations which shall expire or be dissolved, or whose corporate rights and privileges shall cease, it is declared "that all debts and contracts of any corporation, prior to or at the time of the execution of any mortgage [130] or deed of trust by such corporation, shall have a first lien upon the property rights, and franchises of said corporation, and shall be paid off or secured before such mortgage or deed of trust shall be registered."

It must be admitted that the broad language of this Act gives some support to the proposition that it was intended to apply to all corporations, including those formed for the construction and operation of railroads. But there are reasons of great weight that have brought us to the conclusion that such is not its proper interpretation. The language of the proviso in question is fully satisfied by restricting its operation to merely private corporations, which may be formed by three or more persons. And to this may be added the important consideration, that any other interpretation might defeat the express power given to railroad corporations to raise money for completing and finishing or operating their roads, upon bonds to be secured by mortgage upon their property and franchises; for, such bonds, in the very nature of things, could not be readily, if at all, disposed of, if the lien given by the railroad mortgage is subordinate to a lien for "all debts and contracts," of whatever nature, "existing prior to and at the time of the execution" of such mortgage. Did the Legislature intend that the power of a railroad corporation to mortgage all of its property and franchises for money with which to complete or operate a road for public use should be exercised, subject to the condition that every creditor it had at the time of the mortgage, no matter how his debt originated, nor whether there was an agreement for a lien, should have a first lien upon the corporate property and franchises? If this construction should be adopted, it would follow that mechanics and laborers would acquire, as between them and the holders of mortgage bonds, a first lien for work done or materials furnished to the railroad company without filing a claim therefor, as required by the Act of 1870; and this although the Legislature had in that Act refrained from using language that necessarily gives them a lien upon railroad property and franchises. We are of opinion that the proviso of the third section of the Act of 1873 has no application to deeds of trust or mortgage given by railroad corporations.

[131] This view is strengthened by the history of the compilation of the statutes of North Carolion, known as Battle's Revisal. At the same session of the Legislature at which the Railroad Act of 1872 and the Private Corporation Act of the same year were passed, another statute was enacted providing for the publication of the public statutes under the supervision of Wm. H. Battle, who was directed "to collate, digest and compile all the public statute laws of the State," distributing them under such titles divisions, and sections as he deemed most convenient and proper to render them "more plain and easy to be understood." Acts N. C., 1871-2 p. 373.

His revision was reported to the Legislature in 1873, and was formally approved, to take effect January 1, 1874. Upon looking into that revision, we find that the Act of 1872, relating to private corporations, and that of 1873, in reference to sales of property under deeds of trust or mortgages executed by "any company on all its works and property," are consolidated, in one chapter, under the title of "Corpor tions" simply; the former constituting sectio 1 to 44, inclusive, of that title, and the latt Act constituting sections 45 to 49, inclusiv while the Act of 1872, in reference to railro corporations, organized for public use, is place under the separate title of "Railroad Com panies." We have thus what may not unre sonably be regarded as a legislative indicatio of the original purpose of the Act of 1873, viz to make provision for the sales of property co ered by deeds of trust or mortgages execute by merely private corporations, formed by thr or more persons, leaving the rights of partie in respect of like instruments executed by ra road companies organized for public purpose subject to the terms of those instruments ar the general principles of law. While Mr. Ba tle had no power, by any mode of revision, change the words or to modify the meaning, the statutes themselves (Sikes v Bladen Co., N.C., 34; State v. Cunningham, Id. 469; State Taylor, 76 Id. 64), he had authority to arran them under their appropriate titles; and, wh the Legislature approved his placing the A of 1873 in direct connection with that of 187 relating exclusively to private corporation that fact is not without weight in determini the scope and effect of the original Act of 187 This circumstance would be entitled to ve little weight, if the language of the last nam Act necessarily embraced all corporations, pu lic or private, and was not, as we have sai fully satisfied by restricting its operation private corporations, as indicated by the re sion in question.

In view of what has been said, the iss made by the County of Buncombe, as a stoc holder of the company, in reference to Inma conduct as trustee, need not be examined. U on the facts disclosed, the County does not se to be in any position to question the decree favor of the appellees.

There is no error in the record, and the dec is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

Cited—115 U. S. 257.

Same case, on a petition for rehearing.

[Filed May 4, 1885.]

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opin of the court:

In the opinion in this case it was stated t in North Carolina, as in most if not in all States, railroads, although constructed by vate persons or corporations for their o emolument, are highways, established un the authority of law, primarily for the ben of the public. For that reason, in the abse of an express statutory declaration to the c trary, we were not willing to presume that Legislature of that State intended to sub railroads, within her limits and established her authority, to the operation of ordinary laws; for such a construction of her stat would enable creditors to enforce their l upon distinct portions of a railroad, and th by easily destroy a highway and defeat the portant public objects intended to be subse

by its construction. The petition for rehearing suggests that the court is in error as to the policy of the State with reference to the seizure of railroad property by execution or other process, and we are referred, upon this point, to State v. Rives, 5 Ired., 297, and Gooch v. McGee, 83 N.C., [illegible] authorities not heretofore cited by counsel.

In the first of these cases it was decided that, under the law of North Carolina as it then was, the writ of fieri facias lay against the land on which a railroad is laid out. In support of that view reference was made to an Act passed in 1850. But, from the decision in Gooch v. McGee, determined in 1880, it is apparent that the court was not satisfied with the correctness of that decision; for it said that, "so far as the opinion, except by force of the statute, extends the liability to the estates of corporations for public purposes, indispensable to the exercise of the conferred franchise and to the performance of correlative duties, it is not in harmony with adjudications elsewhere of the highest authority, and we are not disposed to enlarge the sphere of its authority." After citing several adjudged cases, including Gue v. Tide Water Canal Co., 24 How., 257 [65 U.S., bk. 16, L.ed. [illegible]], the court proceeds: "In our researches we have met with a single case (Arthur v. Bank, [illegible] & M., 394) recognizing the authority and approving the decision in State v. Rives, and in opposition to the current of judicial opinion. The general words of the statute, which to some extent influenced that decision, may, without violence to their meaning, admit of a narrower scope, and be restricted to the property of private corporations, and to that of public corporations which may be replaced and is not indispensable to the exercise of their necessary functions, and the discharge of public duties, upon the distinction taken in the cases cited." It is difficult to resist the conclusion that the Supreme Court of North Carolina intended, by their opinion in Gooch v. McGee, to intimate that State v. Rives was wrongly decided, even with reference to the statutes in force when [illegible] the latter case was determined.

It is suggested that section 9, chap. 26 of the Revised Code of North Carolina, adopted in [illegible], indicated a public policy in that State in harmony with the decision in State v. Rives; for it is claimed by that section, the franchises and property of railroad corporations, having the right to receive fare or tolls, may be taken in execution. Upon this point it is sufficient to say that we are not satisfied that the statutory provision referred to, as being a part of the Code of 1855, was in force after Battle's Revisal was adopted. By express enactment, "all Acts and parts of Acts passed before" the [illegible] of the Legislature which directed the publication of Battle's Revisal, "the subjects whereof are digested and compiled" in that revisal, [illegible] were "repugnant to the provisions [illegible]," were declared to be repealed and of no force or effect from and after the first of January next thereafter, with certain exceptions and limitations, not embracing the present case. Battle's Revisal, p. 861. Independent, however, of this question, and even if section 9, chap. 26 of the Code of 1855 be in force, we adhere to the opinion that there was no purpose, in the Act of 1870, to give a lien upon the property of a railroad corporation for work performed or materials furnished in and about the construction of its road or of its bridges constituting a part of its line.

In the original opinion we were in error in supposing that the Act of 1873 was passed at a session previous to that at which the Act was passed approving Battle's Revisal, and directing its publication under the supervision of the compiler. Both Acts, it seems, were passed at the same session. The incorporation of the Act of 1873 into that part of the Revisal which related to private corporations was, therefore, the work of Mr. Battle and not in pursuance of any previous express direction by the Legislature. Making this correction in the statement of a fact to which we attached but little weight in our interpretation of the Act of 1873, we perceive no sufficient ground for extending its provisions to the property of corporations operating a public highway.

The rehearing is denied.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

REBECCA GRAY, Admrx., etc., of WILLIAM H. GRAY, Deceased, Appt., [116]

v.

NATIONAL STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 116-121.)

Sale of corporate property—liability of vendee on judgment against vendor.

1. The National Steam Navigation Company, a corporation formed under the English statute known as the Companies Act of 1862, went into liquidation on August 15, 1867, selling its property to the appellee, a corporation organized to continue the same business. The appellee is not chargeable with the payment of a judgment, recovered against the former company, for damages for loss of life occasioned by a collision with one of the vessels subsequent to its transfer to the new company.

2. A suit in equity will not lie to charge an incorporated company with a judgment recovered against another company.

[No. 216.]

Submitted Mar. 31, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. John Fitch and Siegmund Spingarn, for appellant.

Mr. John Chetwood, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court: [117]

This was a suit in equity to charge the defendant, the National Steamship Company, with the payment of a judgment recovered against another company, known as the National Steam Navigation Company. Both of the companies were English corporations, formed under the English statute known as the Companies Act of 1862. The National Steam Navigation Company continued in business until August 15, 1867, when it went into liquidation. On the following day it sold its ships and its other property and delivered the same to the National Steamship Company. This latter company was incorporated on the first of July, 1867, under the name of the Steamship Company, limited. The change of its name to the National Steamship Company was made August 8, 1867. After the sale of its property the Navigation Company had no power to do business under the Companies Act, and existed only for purposes of liquidation.

On the 24th of October, 1867, the steamtug Princeton was going up the harbor of New York with a tow of fourteen canal boats loaded with coal. When near the mouth of the Hudson River she met the English steamship Pennsylvania, owned by the National Steamship [118] Company, and a collision took place between the canal boats and the steamship, by which three of the boats were sunk, and a man by the name of Wilson W. Gray was killed. The widow of Gray took out letters of administration upon his estate and then brought an action in the Superior Court of the City of New York, under a statute of the State, for damages caused by the loss of her husband, against the National Steam Navigation Company, evidently supposing that this company continued the owner of the steamship as it formerly had been. In May, 1868, she obtained a verdict, and in June following judgment was entered thereon for $3,289.05.

The National Steamship Company was formed for the purpose of buying the property of the Navigation Company and conducting the same business. The consideration for the purchase was stock of the new company to such of the old stockholders as would consent to take it; and money to the dissenting stockholders. Provision was made to raise the money necessary to fill up the capital stock to the required sum, and the sale was subject to the debts of the old company on August 16, 1867. The officers of the old company became the officers of the new company.

The widow Gray issued execution on her judgment to the sheriff of the county of New York, which was returned unsatisfied. In December, 1869, she assigned the judgment to one Asa F. Miller, and in January, 1870, he commenced a suit in the Supreme Court of New York against the National Steamship Company, setting forth in his complaint the judgment of the superior court, the return of the execution unsatisfied, the incorporation of the National Steam Navigation Company, and that a short time before the commencement of the action it was engaged in the shipping business between New York and Liverpool, employing steamers, and having a general agency in New York; that at the time of the accruing of the cause of action it was thus engaged in business; that about the time the judgment was obtained and the execution issued the company assumed and became known by the name of the National [119] Steamship Company; that the sheriff was thereby disabled from levying on the property which up to that time had stood in the name of the Navigation Company; that the change of name was to cure a technical defect; that the Steamship Company was incorporated under a statute limiting the liability of the stockholders, and to that company the Navigation Company had handed over its ships and all its other property to a sufficient amount to pay the judgment; that such property remained under the same control; that the change of name was mad fraudulently to prevent a levy upon the prop erty; that the Steamship Company held the ship of the Navigation Company as trustee for th creditors of the latter company; that the Navi gation Company had not been within the Stat of New York for a year, and had no propert except that standing in the name of the Steam ship Company; and that this last company ha a steamship and other ships in its hands, th property of the Navigation Company. Th prayer of the complaint was that the Steamshi Company might be decreed to pay the judgmen and be enjoined from disposing of the propert it had received from the Navigation Compan and for the appointment of a receiver.

The Steamship Company answered, admittin the judgment of the plaintiff, the return of ex cution issued upon it unsatisfied, and the org nization of the Navigation Company, allegi its own distinct incorporation; admitting t sale, transfer and delivery of the steamshi and business of the old company to the ne company, August 16, 1867, the conduct of i shipping business and its employment of stea ers by the old company, up to such transfer a sale; and alleging that the old company had property in the State, with a general denial other allegations. The case was heard up the pleadings and proofs, and at a special ter of the court on December 12, 1870, judgme was rendered dismissing the complaint. May 7, 1875, at a general term of the co this judgment was affirmed. A year after affirmance an order was entered at a spec term by consent of parties discontinuing t suit. Before this was done Asa F. Miller, t plaintiff therein, assigned the superior co judgment to one Morrison, and in Februa 1877, Morrison assigned it back to the plainti who soon afterwards commenced the pres action in the Supreme Court of New York. motion of defendants, it was removed to Circuit Court of the United States, and th the plaintiff filed a bill in equity in place of complaint filed in the state court. This set up the agreement between the two com nies of August 16, 1867; alleged the identity the officers of the two companies; mentio the recovery of the judgment of the plain and the various assignments of that judgme the unsatisfied execution issued thereon, transfer of the ships and other property of old Navigation Company to the new Steams Company; alleged that the Navigation Co pany had not made a change of ownership the steamers by sufficient bills of sale, accord to British law; mentioned the winding up the Navigation Company, and averred that new company held the property of the company in fraud of the right of the plaintif have his judgment satisfied out of it, and t the Navigation Company had no property embraced in the transfer to the Steamship Co pany out of which execution upon the judgm could be satisfied. The bill prayed for a ceiver of the property of the Navigation Co pany at the time of its assignment, for an counting by the defendant of such prope and that the receiver be directed to sell property and pay the debts of the plaintiff, for general relief. The defendant, in its swer, admitted the agreement, the substan

[illegible] of the officers of the two companies, [illegible] judgment recovered in the Superior Court, [illegible] executed execution issued thereon, and [illegible] and delivery of all the property of the [illegible] Navigation Company to the defendant on [illegible] August, 1867, for a full consideration; [illegible] that the defendant at that time became [illegible] of all the property including the steam- [illegible] the fraudulent transfer alleged and [illegible] ship of the steamships by the Navi- [illegible] Company at the time of the recovery of [illegible] judgment, or of the return of the execution; [illegible] the sale and delivery of the steam- [illegible] before the judgment by good and [illegible] instruments; and admitted the liqui- [illegible] of the Navigation Company, and the [illegible] up of its affairs. It also set up the [illegible] recovered by the defendant in the [illegible] of Miller against it, in the Supreme Court [illegible] York, as a bar to the present action; [illegible] all fraud in the transfer of the property [illegible] company, and asked that the bill be [illegible]. The case was heard upon the plead- [illegible] and proofs, and a decree was rendered [illegible] by the Circuit Court dismissing the bill. [illegible] that decree the case was brought here by [illegible].

[illegible] not necessary to consider the position [illegible] the judgment of the Supreme Court of [illegible] York, in the case of Miller against the de- [illegible] is a bar to the prosecution of this suit. [illegible] sufficient for the affirmance of the decree of [illegible] below that the judgment of the Supe- [illegible] Court of the City of New York, which was [illegible] to be enforced against the new company, [illegible] recovered against the old company. That [illegible] had then ceased to do business of any [illegible] and was incapable, under its articles of [illegible], of doing any except so far as [illegible] be necessary to wind up its affairs. It [illegible] only for purposes of liquidation. It [illegible] no more own and run a steamship than [illegible] own and manage any other property. [illegible] nothing in the transfer of the property [illegible] the old company to the new of which the [illegible] can in any way complain. It took [illegible] before the collision occurred which caused [illegible] death of the plaintiff's husband. The [illegible] of the old company do not com- [illegible] of that transfer; and it does not appear [illegible] comes from any creditors then [illegible] of that concern. The debts of the old [illegible] assumed by the new; and there is [illegible] nor sense in attempting to fasten [illegible] the new company a judgment for dam- [illegible] only against the old. If the [illegible] by mistake, commenced an action [illegible] the wrong company, it is a fault of [illegible] cannot complain. At least the new [illegible] not chargeable as though it had it- [illegible] and had its day in court. The [illegible] Company never made any pretense [illegible] after its affairs were closed up, [illegible] the plaintiff nor her counsel were [illegible] by the action of the representatives [illegible] company. The case is too plain for [illegible].

[illegible] affirmed.

[illegible] copy. Test:

[illegible] McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

GEORGE W. FRASHER ET AL., Plffs. in Err., [102]

v.

M. J. O'CONNOR.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 102-116.)

Public lands—state grants, adjustment of—jurisdiction—surveys under Act of July 23, 1866—certified lists—title.

*1. In adjusting Congressional grants of lands to a State, the only questions for consideration by the officers of the General Government are, whether the State possessed the right to claim the land under her grant, and whether the land was subject to selection by her agents. Those officers have no jurisdiction to review transactions between the State and her purchasers, nor between the State and her locating agents, and determine whether such purchasers or locating agents complied with the provisions of her laws relating to the sale of the lands.

2. Surveys under the 8th section of the Act of July 23, 1866, "to quiet land titles in California," become operative by approval of the United States Surveyor-General for the State, and his filing in the local land-office of the township plats. Upon such approval of a survey and filing of the township plats, lands thereby excluded from a confirmed private land claim become subject to state selections and other modes of disposal of public lands. Previous approval of the survey by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office is not necessary.

3. Lists of lands certified to the State by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, and the Secretary of the Interior, convey as complete a title as patents; and lands embraced therein are not thereafter open to settlement and preemption.

[No. 244.]

Argued Apr. 10, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Geo. F. Edmunds, William J. Johnston and James K. Redington, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Edward R. Taylor, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court: [103]

This is an action for the possession of a parcel of land in Los Angeles County, California. The plaintiff, the defendant in error here, traces title to the premises by a patent of the State, issued to Robert Thompson on the 21st day of April, 1874, and certain mesne conveyances from the patentee. The title of the State was derived from selections of land in lieu of sections sixteen and thirty-six granted for school purposes by the Act of Congress of March 3, 1853.

The defendants below, the plaintiffs in error here, contend that the selections by the State were void, because made within the asserted limits of a claim under a Mexican grant before the survey of such grant, which excluded the disputed premises, had become final; and set up a right to the land as preemptors under the laws of the United States by settlement and improvement subsequent to the state patents, with a tender to the officers of the Land Department of the required sums in such cases to entitle them to patents of the United States.

The position of the defendants below is that, being entitled as such preemptors to patents from the United States of the lands in controversy, they are in a position to call in question the validity of the proceedings by which the land was selected by the state agents and listed to the State. To determine the questions thus presented, it will be necessary to give a brief history of the legislation of Congress, and of California with respect to the lands granted to the State for school purposes.

* Head notes by Mr. Justice FIELD.

The Act of Congress of March 3, 1853, "to Provide for the Survey of the Public Lands in California, the Granting of Preemption Rights [104] therein, and for other Purposes," placed the public lands in that State, with certain specified exceptions, subject to the general preemption law of September 4, 1841. 10 Stat. at L., 246, §6. Among the excepted lands were sections sixteen and thirty-six of each township, which were declared to be thereby granted to the State for the purposes of public schools, and lands claimed under any foreign grant or title. The Act also declared in its 7th section that where a settlement by the erection of a dwelling-house, or the cultivation of any portion of the land, should be made on the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections before they should be surveyed, or where such sections should be reserved for public uses, or "taken by private claims," other lands should be selected in lieu thereof by the proper authorities of the State.

The lands in controversy were within the boundaries of a tract claimed under a confirmed Mexican grant, known as the Rancho Sausal Redondo. As sections sixteen and thirty-six of townships were covered by the grant, a case was presented within the 7th section of the Act of Congress, in which the State was authorized to select other lands in lieu of them.

The Legislature of California, by an Act passed April 27, 1863, provided for the sale of certain lands granted to the State by Congress, and, among others, of the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections in the several townships, or of lands which might be selected in lieu thereof. It prescribed the proceedings to be taken for the purchase of the lands, and required each state locating agent to keep a record of applications to purchase made to him, and when they amounted to 320 or more acres, to apply on behalf of the State to the register of the United States Land-Office of the district for such lands, in part satisfaction of the grant under which they were claimed, and to obtain his acceptance of the selections thus made. Various other proceedings were required by the Act to secure a proper presentation to the Land Department of the United States of the lands thus purchased of the State; that is, of lands thus selected in satisfaction of the grant to her.

Surveys of the public lands in California were greatly delayed after the passage of the Act of 1853, and as late as 1866 many townships had not been surveyed. For want of these [105] surveys, it was impossible to ascertain the precise locality, in each township, of the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections and, of course, except in a few instances such as where the whole township was embraced in a private claim under a Mexican or Spanish grant, it could not be known whether there had been any such settlement on those sections as would authorize the State to select other lands in lieu thereof.

The State was embarrassed by this delay i the public surveys, not only in the use of th sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, and, whe they were occupied by settlers, in the selection of lands in lieu of them, but also in the selec tion of lands granted by other Acts of Congres than that of March 3, 1853. By the eighth se tion of the general preemption law of Septem ber 4, 1841, 500,000 acres of land were grante to each new State subsequently admitted int the Union, and of course to California, for pu poses of internal improvement, the selection c the lands to be made from any public lan within her limits, except such as was or migl be reserved from sale by a law of Congress c the proclamation of the President, and in suc manner as her Legislature should direct, an located in parcels conformably to section divisions and subdivisions of not less than 3 acres in any one location.

In May, 1852, in advance of any surveys l the United States, the State passed an Act f the sale of these 500,000 acres. It authoriz the Governor to issue land warrants for not le than 160 acres and not more than 320 acres one warrant, to the full amount of the gra the treasurer to sell them at $2 an acre, a the purchasers and their assigns to locate the on behalf of the State on any vacant and una propriated land belonging to the United Sta subject to such location.

Under these laws selections were made agents of the State, or purchasers of warra who were authorized to locate the same. Simi legislation was had and similar proceedin were authorized with respect to other lan granted by Acts of Congress to the Sta When, however, selections thus made w brought to the attention of the Land Depa ment at Washington, they were not recogni as conferring any right to the parties claimi under them. Selections made in advance of public surveys were held to be wholly inval This ruling of the department caused great c fusion and embarrassment in the State. Ti thought to be unquestionable were found to worthless, and interests of great magnit which had grown up upon their supposed lidity were endangered. To relieve against embarrassments arising from this cause the of Congress of July 23, 1866, "to quiet l titles in California," was passed. 14 Stat L., 218. The 1st section of this Act decl that in all cases where the State of Califor had previously made selections of any por of the public domain in part satisfaction c grant made to the State by Act of Congr and had disposed of the same to purchaser good faith under her laws, the lands so sele should be and were thereby confirmed to State.

From this confirmation were excepted s tions of lands to which an adverse preemp or homestead or other right had at the dat the passage of the Act been acquired by a tler under the laws of the United States, an lands reserved for naval, military or In purposes, and of mineral land or of claimed under a valid Mexican or Spanish gr

The 2d section provided that where the s tions had been made of land which had surveyed by authority of the United State should be the duty of the authorities of [illegible] where it had not already been done, to notify the register of the United States land-office for the district in which the land was situated of such selections, and that the notice should be regarded as the date of the State's selection.

The 3d section provided that where the selections had been made of land which had not been surveyed by authority of the United States, but the selections had been surveyed by authority of and under laws of the State, and sold to purchasers in good faith, such purchases should, from the date of the passage of the Act, when marked off and designated in the field, have the same force and effect as the preemption rights of a settler on unsurveyed public land.

As thus seen, selections made pursuant to this Act, embracing lands held or claimed under a valid Mexican or Spanish grant, were excepted from confirmation. By the Act of [illegible] lands claimed under "any foreign grant or [illegible]" were excepted from preemption. 10 Stat. at L. 248, ch. 145, sec. 6. The effect of these exceptions was to exclude from settlement large tracts of land in the State, which, upon a definite ascertainment of the boundaries of the grants, would have been open to settlement. A very great portion of the lands in the State were covered by Mexican or Spanish grants. Some of the grants were by specific boundaries, and the extent of the land covered by them could be readily ascertained without an official survey. But by far the greater number were for a specific quantity of land lying within outboundaries embracing a much larger quantity. Thus, grants of one or two leagues would often describe the quantity as being within boundaries embracing double or treble that amount, the grant declaring that the quantity was to be surveyed off by officers of the vicinage and the surplus reserved for the use of the nation. The grantee in such case was of course entitled only to the specific quantity named, but what portion of the general tract should be set apart to him could only be determined by a survey under the authority of the government. Until then the grantee and the government were tenants in common of the whole tract. No one could intrude upon any portion of it, the whole being exempted from the preemption law. The practical effect of this condition in many cases was to leave the grantee, until the official survey, in the possession, use and enjoyment of a tract of land containing a much larger quantity than that granted. And before such survey could be made the validity of the grant was to be determined by the commission created to investigate private land claims in California, and the action of the commission was subject to review by the District Court of the United States, with a right of appeal from its decision to the Supreme Court. When the validity of the grant was confirmed the commissioners could not measure off the quantity for himself and thus legally segregate it from the balance of the tract. As we said in Van Reynegan v. Bolton, 95 U. S., 36 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 352]: "The right to make the segregation rested exclusively with the government and could only be exercised by its officers. Until they acted and allotted the segregation the confirmees were interested in preserving the entire tract from waste and injury, and in improving it, for until then they could not know what part might be assigned to them. Until then no third person could interfere with their right to the possession of the whole. No third person could be permitted to determine, in advance of such segregation, that any particular locality would fall within the surplus, and thereby justify his intrusion upon it and its detention from them. If one person could, in this way, appropriate a particular parcel to himself, all persons could do so, and thus the confirmees would soon be stripped of the land which was intended by the government as a donation to its grantees, whose interests they have acquired, for the benefit of parties who were never in its contemplation. If the law were otherwise than as stated, the confirmees would find their possessions limited, first in one direction and then in another, each intruder asserting that the parcel occupied by him fell within the surplus, until, in the end, they would be excluded from the entire tract. Cornwall v. Culver, 16 Cal., 429; Riley v. Heisch, 18 Id., 198; Mahoney v. Van Winkle, 21 Id., 552."

The delays before the official surveys were made, even after the confirmation of a grant, sometimes lasted for years. In some instances they were attributable to the want of sufficient appropriations by Congress to meet the expenses of the surveys. To obviate them from this cause Congress provided in the sixth section of the Act of July 1, 1864, "to Expedite the Settlement of Titles to Lands in the State of California," that it should be the duty of the Surveyor-General of California to cause all private land claims finally confirmed to be accurately surveyed and plats thereof to be made whenever requested by the claimants; provided, that each claimant requesting a survey and plat should first deposit in the District Court of the district within which the land was situated a sufficient sum of money to pay the expenses of such survey and plat, and of the publication required by the first section of the Act. 13 Stat. at L., 332, chap. 194. And in the seventh [109] section it prescribed the manner in which the surveys should be made.

But, inasmuch as the confirmee had the possession and use of the whole tract, from which his quantity was to be taken, until it was segregated, he was not in haste to have the survey made of his claim. It was for his interest to postpone it; and therefore few confirmees of grants of quantity within exterior boundaries embracing a larger amount applied for surveys under that Act. Accordingly when the Act of July 23, 1866, "to Quiet Land Titles in California" was passed, confirming selections previously made by the State, except those from lands held or claimed under a valid Mexican or Spanish grant, it provided in its 8th section as follows: "That in all cases where a claim to land by virtue of a right or title derived from the Spanish or Mexican authorities has been finally confirmed and a survey and plat thereof shall not have been requested within ten months from the passage of this Act, as provided by sections six and seven of the Act of July 1, 1864, 'to Expedite the Settlement of Titles to Lands in California,' and in all cases where a like claim shall hereafter be finally confirmed, and a survey and plat thereof shall not be requested, as provided by said sections, within ten months after the passage of this Act, or any final confirmation hereafter made, it shall be the duty of the Surveyor-General of the United States for California, as soon as practicable after the expiration of ten months after the passage of this Act, or such final confirmation hereafter made, to cause the lines of the public surveys to be extended over such land, and he shall set off, in full satisfaction of such grant, and according to the lines of the public surveys, the quantity of land confirmed in such final decree, and as nearly as can be done in accordance with such decree; and all the land not included in such grant as so set off shall be subject to the general land laws of the United States; Provided, That nothing in this Act shall be construed so as in any manner to interfere with the right of bona fide preemption claimants." 14 Stat. at L., 218, ch. 219.

After the passage of this Act neither the State nor persons desiring to settle upon the [110] public lands were obliged to wait beyond ten months for the grantee of a confirmed Mexican land claim to take action for the segregation of the specific quantity granted to him. If he delayed for that time after the passage of the Act, if his claim had been previously confirmed, or for that time after the confirmation of his claim, if it should be subsequently confirmed, to obtain a final survey, it became the duty of the Surveyor-General of the United States to proceed and extend the lines of the public surveys over the land and to set off, in satisfaction of the grant and according to the lines of such surveys, the quantity of land confirmed, and all the land not included in such grant as so set off was made "subject to the general land laws of the United States."

The grant known as the Rancho Sausal Redondo, was made to Antonio Ygnacio Abila, May 20, 1837, by Alvarado, then Governor ad interim of the Department of California. The claim of the grantee to the land was confirmed on the 10th of June, 1855, by the Board of Land Commissioners for the ascertainment and settlement of private land claims in California, and at its December Term, 1855, by the District Court of the United States. It embraced land within the limits of Los Angeles County. The decree of the District Court became final, the appeal from it to the Supreme Court having been dismissed by stipulation of the Attorney-General. In 1858 a deputy surveyor made a survey of the claim, but it was not approved by the Surveyor-General and was, in consequence, of no validity. For more than ten years afterwards no other survey was made, nor does it appear from the record that the grantee, or those owning the claim, made application for any under the Act of July 1, 1864. Accordingly, in 1868, more than ten months having elapsed after the passage of the Act of July 23, 1866, at the instance of General Rosecrans, the rancho was surveyed by a deputy United States Surveyor, George Hansen, and land was set off to the grantee in satisfaction of the grant. Over the land within the boundaries of the grant confirmed the United States Surveyor extended the section and township lines; and, on [111] April 22, 1868, the township plats were filed in the district land-office at San Francisco. Subsequently General Rosecrans, as hereafter stated, applied to the State to purchase the lands on side of the tract allotted to the grantee, part which are the subject of the present contr versy. The owners of the grant protested th notice of the survey had not been given to the and that it did not conform to the decree confirmation, and demanded a new survey. T Surveyor-General thereupon recalled the tow ship plats and ordered a new survey, whi was made in July, 1868, by deputy survey Thompson. This new survey included t lands in controversy as part of the grant.

Afterwards, however, in October, 1871, t Secretary of the Interior set aside this new su vey, ordered the township plats to be return to the land-office, and affirmed the survey ma by Hansen. Before, however, the recall the township plats, and the order for a new su vey, General Rosecrans had procured a numb of men to make applications for his benefit f the purchase of the lands in controversy, a to transfer their interests thus acquired, to hi The applications were approved by the locati agents of the State, and the lands as selectio by the State were afterwards listed to her, a patents were issued to the purchasers or th assignees.

According to the findings of the local distr court, the applications and subsequent proce ings were very loosely conducted, and great regularities are charged against the princi purchaser. But if the locating agents of t State were satisfied with the applications to pu chase, and the selections thus made were a proved by the land department of the Unit States, and the lands were listed to the State part of the grant to her, it is not perceived wh ground of complaint the loose character of t proceedings furnish to the defendants. Th title is not advanced by showing how irre larly the proceedings were conducted by part who obtained the title of the State; and to t General Government it is enough that she d not complain, but accepts the selections in s isfaction of the grant to her. The same vi was taken by the Interior Department with r erence to one of the state selections referred

It was objected that the selection was inva because not made in accordance with the p visions of the Act of the Legislature of State, of April 27, 1863. But the Secretary swered that it was not necessary to enter int consideration of the alleged defects in the plication of the purchaser; that was a quest between him and the State; that by the seve section of the Act of March 3, 1853, the St was granted indemnity if sections sixteen a thirty-six lay within private grants; that manner of selecting such indemnity was specified; that the Act of the Legislature l provided for the sale of certain lands belo ing to the State, and if purchasers failed comply with the requirements of the stat their claims may fail; that the questions to considered by the General Government were, right of the State to claim the land under grant, and was the land subject to selecti observing that these were the only question determine, as the General Government only ognized the State in the proceedings; that was no part of its duty to inquire into the tr actions between the State and her purchas neither would it go back of the record to certain whether, as between the State and her agent, he complied with the provisions of the statute relating to the sale of granted lands." The Secretary added that there was no complaint on the part of the State of any irregularity in the selection in question, but, on the contrary, she had recognized and approved of it and issued a patent to the purchaser. And further, that the Legislature of the State had passed an Act for the relief of the purchasers of state lands, approved March 27, 1872, declaring that when application had been made to purchase such lands, and full payment had been made to the treasurer of the proper county for the same, and a certificate of purchase or patent had been issued to the applicant, the title of the State was vested in him or his assignees, if no other application had been made for the purchase of the land prior to the issue of the certificate. Thus, said the Secretary, has the State in the most emphatic manner asserted her claim to the land notwithstanding the alleged irregularities on the part of her agent in selecting the same.

To this action of the State it may be added, that the General Government has, by the Act of Congress of March 1, 1877, relinquished every possible objection on its part to a recognition of the claim of the State, by confirming her title to lands certified to her as indemnity school selections in lieu of the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections lying within Mexican grants, the final survey of which had not been made; and also confirming indemnity school sections certified to the State, which were defective or invalid from any other cause.

The sole question, therefore, remaining for our determination is, whether the premises in controversy were open to selection at the time the selection was made. And of this we think there can be no reasonable doubt. The Mexican grant, under which the land was claimed, had been confirmed in December, 1856, and although, as stated above, a survey had been made by a deputy surveyor in 1858, it had not been approved by the Surveyor-General, and was therefore, of no effect. No other attempt was made to obtain a survey of the land until February, 1868, over eleven years after the confirmation of the grant, and over three years after the passage of the Act of July 1, 1864, and over eighteen months after the passage of the Act of July 23, 1866. Had a survey been asked for by the grantee, or made under the Act of 1864, it would have required the approval of the Commissioner of the General Land-Office before it could have been the basis of action by the State or by individuals. But the grantee having neglected to take any action, and ten months having elapsed after the passage of the Act of 1866, it was competent for the Surveyor-General of California, and indeed it was made his duty, to extend the lines of the public surveys over the land confirmed; and the Act declares that "he shall set off, in full satisfaction of such grant, and according to the lines of the public surveys, the quantity of land confirmed in such final decree and, as nearly as can be done, in accordance with such decree, and all the land not included in such grant as so set off shall be subject to the general land laws of the United States."

Nothing can be plainer than this language. It leaves no doubt as to its meaning. All the land not included in the grant as thus set off "shall be subject to the general land laws of the United States." The survey of the land confirmed is withdrawn, therefore, from that special supervision and control which are vested in the Commissioner of the General Land-Office over surveys of private land claims made under the Act of 1864. The laws and practice of the Land Department, with respect to surveys of the public lands generally, only apply and must govern the case. Had it been the intention of Congress to retain the special supervision of the commissioner, it is reasonable to suppose that the intention would, in some way, have been expressed. But there is nothing of the kind, and the survey is therefore to be treated as an ordinary official survey of the public lands, and, as such, is operative until changed or set aside by the Land Department. It is not necessary, as in the case of surveys of private land claims under other laws, to obtain the previous approval of such department before it becomes operative; and proceedings to acquire the title to lands outside of it may at once be taken either by the State or preemptors upon its assumed validity. Such was the view of the Interior Department with reference to the survey of the land confirmed here, after a most elaborate consideration. [114]

In illustration of the manner in which public lands, when once surveyed, can be disposed of, the Secretary refers to the Act of Congress approved May 18, 1796, providing for the sale of lands of the United States in the territory northwest of the River Ohio, and above the mouth of the Kentucky River. The Surveyor-General was authorized to prepare plats of township surveys, to keep one copy in his office for public information, and to send other copies to the places of sale and to the Secretary of the Interior. The present local land-offices, said the Secretary, are equivalent to the places of sale mentioned in the Act of 1796, and, as a matter of practice, from that day to the present time, the township plats prepared by the Surveyor-General have been filed by him with the local land officers, who thereupon have proceeded to dispose of the public lands according to the laws of the United States. There was nothing in the Act of 1796, or any subsequent Acts, which required the approval of the Commissioner of the General Land-Office before the survey became final and the plats authoritative. Such a theory, said the Secretary, is not only contrary to the letter and spirit of the various Acts providing for the survey of the public lands, but it is contrary to the uniform practice of the department. Applying this uniform practice to the case at bar, all doubt that the lands in controversy were open to selection by the State disappears. The grant was surveyed in February, 1868, and sufficient land set apart to satisfy it. In March following, a survey of the townships in which the land lay was made and approved by the United States Surveyor-General of the district, and in April the survey and township plats were filed in the land-office of the district. The state selections of lands lying outside of the survey of the grant were made before any action of the Surveyor-General was had recalling the plats and ordering a new survey. Had his action been sustained by the [115]

Land Department, and the new survey made upon his order, which included the land in controversy as part of the grant, been approved, a question would have arisen as to the validity of the selections in the face of such subsequent proceedings. It is not necessary to hold that they would have been unaffected. It may, perhaps, be that they would have had to abide the judgment of the department as to the status of the land. All that is necessary to decide here is that after the grant had been surveyed and the township plats filed, the State was at liberty to make selections from land lying outside of the survey ,and preemptors were at liberty to settle upon it, and if the survey were not ultimately set aside, their rights thus initiated would be protected.

As already said, the Interior Department held the original survey valid, directed the township plats to be returned to the land-office, and accepted the selections of the State outside of the survey and listed the land to her. The inchoate rights acquired to the lands selected were not lost by the subsequent action of the Surveyor-General in setting aside the first survey of the grant, and, after that action was vacated,could be perfected. The original survey, outside of which the selections were made, was approved by the Secretary of the Interior on the 31st of October, 1871, and the lands selected were listed to the State by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office on the 29th of May, 1872, and by the Secretary of the Interior on the 31st of the same month. The title of the State to the lands thus became as complete as though transferred by a patent of the United States. The statute declares that lists of lands granted to the State by a law of Congress, which does not convey the fee-simple title or require patents to be issued, "shall be regarded as conveying the fee simple of all the lands embraced in such lists that are of the character contemplated by such Act of Congress and intended to be granted thereby." It does not appear why the lands should have been listed by the Secretary of the Interior as well as by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, but it may have been because by the Act of July 23, 1866, selections of indemnity school lands for the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, when lost in private grants, were to be approved by that officer. Having the title, there was nothing to prevent the issue by the State of her patent to the purchaser under whom the plaintiff claims. The land was not thereafter open to settlement and preemption, and the judgment must, therefore, be affirmed.

[116]

B. F. Good, C. R. Clark, J. E. Whistler, D. Murphy et al., Plffs. in Err., v. M. J. O'Connor. No. 312.

In error to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

Daniel Hazard, W. W. Taylor, James M. Trusler, Samuel Erwin et al., Plffs. in Err., v. M. J. O'Connor. No. 313.

In error to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

Each of these cases presents similar questions to those considered and determined in Frasher et al. v. O'Connor, just decided, and on the a thority of that case the judgment in each affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

Cited—116 U. S., 334.

STEAMBOAT CHARLES MORGAN ET AL., Appts., v. MARTIN H. KOUNS ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 69-78.)

Admiralty—collision—compliance with rule amendment of libel—evidence—witnesses— peachment—contradictory declarations—pr tice.

1. Where, in cases of collision, it appears signals were exchanged as required by rule 2 of board of supervising inspectors of steam vess and the question of distance between the vessel the time of such exchange of signals is not rai in the court below, it will be presumed to have be at the proper distance, as nothing appears to t contrary.

2. Under the operation of admiralty rule 24 circuit court may, in its discretion, permit amendment of the libel, so as to include a claim damages growing out of the original cause of tion and litigated in the court below, but reject because not specified in the pleadings.

3. The finding of the board of local inspectors proceedings instituted under section 4450, R. S., the investigation of the facts connected with a c lision and the documents connected therewith, inadmissible in evidence.

4. Contradictory declarations of a witness, whe er oral or in writing, made at another time, can be used for the purpose of impeachment until witness has been examined upon the subject, and attention particularly directed to the circumstan in such a way as to give him full opportunity explanation or exculpation.

[No. 278.]

Argued Apr. 24, 1885. Decided May 4, 18

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the U ed States for the Eastern District of Lou ana.

The history and facts of the case appea the opinion of the court.

Messrs. T. D. Lincoln and R. H. Ma for appellants.

Messrs. Richard H. Browne and Cha B. Singleton, for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the o ion of the court:

This is a suit in admiralty, brought by owners of the steamboat Cotton Valley, to cover for the loss of their boat and certain ticles of personal property belonging to Ma H. Kouns alone, in a collision on the Missis pi River with the steamboat Charles Morg In the original libel, filed in the district co claim was made only for the value of the b and for an itemized account for clothes, jewe furniture, etc., of the libelant Kouns. The trict court found The Morgan in fault, and ferred the cause to a commissioner to take t mony and report the damages. The com sioner reported that the libelants were enti to recover the value of the boat, and also value of stores and supplies, $1,376.16, $500 cash in the safe of the boat, and bel [illegible] lost at the time of the collision; he [illegible] reported that Martin H. Kouns, one of the [illegible], should recover the value of a lady's [illegible] watch, $150; of a gentleman's gold watch, [illegible] and $75 cash lost. The claimant of The [illegible] excepted to the allowances for stores [illegible], and for cash in the boat's safe, on [illegible] ground that they had not been sued for. [illegible] district court sustained this exception, and [illegible] a decree only for the value of the boat and [illegible] allowances by the commissioner to Kouns. [illegible] this decree both parties appealed to the [illegible] court. When the case got into the cir[illegible] court leave was granted the libelants to file [illegible] supplemental and amended libel setting up [illegible] claim for stores, supplies and cash, proved [illegible] the commissioner in the district court, [illegible] rejected by that court because not included [illegible] the original libel.

[illegible] the hearing in the circuit court that [illegible] found, among other things, that at the [illegible] of the collision The Connon Valley, bound [illegible] Red River, was the ascending boat, and [illegible] Charles Morgan, bound for New Orleans, [illegible] descending boat; that the collision occurred [illegible] Bringier's Point, about three miles below [illegible]ville; that both boats were properly [illegible] and manned, and had proper watches [illegible] proper lights set.

[illegible] That prior to the collision The Cot[illegible] Valley was in her proper position in the [illegible] near the left bank, following up the [illegible] Point preparatory to rounding the [illegible] while The Charles Morgan was above the [illegible], perhaps in the middle of the river, but [illegible] across and near the point to a wood[illegible] light, in the bend of the river below the [illegible].

"Fourth. That when the respective boats [illegible] the positions just described, The Cotton [illegible] blew one whistle as a signal that she [illegible] pass The Charles Morgan to the right, [illegible] signal The Charles Morgan answered [illegible] one whistle, as a signal that the pilot of [illegible] understood, and would also pass [illegible] the right.

"Fifth. Both boats kept on their respective [illegible] approaching each other, when the pilot [illegible] The Morgan sounded three or four short [illegible] stopped The Morgan's engines, and [illegible] commenced backing the wheels, but not [illegible] to stop The Morgan's headway, and [illegible] in anywise changing her course to star[illegible] or port.

"Meanwhile, The Cotton Valley, rounding [illegible] at the three or four short whistles [illegible] The Morgan, understanding the signal [illegible], stopped the engines.

"[illegible] time the boats were within one hun[illegible] of each other, The Morgan, with [illegible] and the current, coming straight [illegible] changing her course, the pilot of [illegible] Valley, foreseeing an inevitable [illegible] if he remained still, started The Cot[illegible] ahead, sheering to starboard; but [illegible] of The Cotton Valley was too [illegible] immediately The Charles Mor[illegible] struck her on the port side, about [illegible] feet forward of the stern, and at an [illegible] sixty degrees, with such force as [illegible] through her guards into her hull nearly to [illegible], and cause her to sink in about ten [illegible].

"Sixth. That The Charles Morgan and her officers were in fault, as the proper position of the boat was nearer the middle of the river, and as her officers disregarded the passing signal given and answered, and made no effort to change the boat's course to the starboard, by which the boats would have been so separated that a collision would have been avoided.

"Seventh. That The Cotton Valley was not in fault, as she was in her proper place as the ascending boat, and as she gave the proper signal for passing.

"The failure of the pilot to understand the signal of three or four short whistles given by The Morgan was not, under the circumstances of the case, a fault; and if the starting of The Cotton Valley's engines and sheering to starboard when The Morgan was upon them was an error, it was an error of judgment in extremis, not putting the boat in fault."

Upon these facts a decree was rendered against The Morgan and her owners and stipulators for the value of The Cotton Valley, and for the value of the personal property belonging to Kouns, the same as in the district court, and also for the value of the stores, supplies, etc., set forth in the supplemental libel, $1,376.16. From that decree this appeal was taken. [73]

The record contains a bill of exceptions, which shows that in the progress of the trial in the circuit court the defendants offered in evidence a certified copy of "the finding of the board of local inspectors of steam vessels, New Orleans, December 18, 1878, being their decision in the case of the collision between the steamers Cotton Valley and The Charles Morgan, and signed by C. B. Johnson and J. A. Moffat, United States local inspectors." They also offered certain other documents connected with that proceeding, including an appeal to the district inspectors and their decision thereon. To the introduction of this evidence the libelants objected, and their objection was sustained. To this ruling the claimant of The Morgan excepted, and the exception was made part of the record.

It is also shown by another bill of exceptions in the record, that, after the depositions of Albert Stein, Harry W. Stein, Sylvester Doss, John B. Evelyn and Livingston McGeary had been read on behalf of the claimant of The Morgan, the libelants, for the purpose of impeaching and contradicting their evidence, offered certain depositions of the same witnesses used on the trial of certain other suits, growing out of the same collision, between one Menge and some insurance companies, to which the claimant was not a party. To the introduction of this evidence the claimant objected, on the ground that no basis for offering said purported depositions had been laid, it not having been shown or pretended that said purported depositions were ever submitted to the said witnesses, or otherwise verified as their evidence in said causes; but as, "in the cross examination of each of said witnesses in this case, the attention of the witness was called to the evidence given by him in the cases of Menge v. Insurance Companies, * * * and the witnesses were specifically examined as to the correctness of said evidence, and admitted having testified therein," and "no objection was made that the [74] evidence offered was not the evidence of said witnesses respectively, or that the same had been improperly taken or reported," the depositions were admitted for the purpose for which they were offered. The cross examination referred to is not set forth in the bill of exceptions. To the admission of this evidence the claimant excepted.

The following positions are taken by the appellants:

1. That the findings of fact are not sufficient to support the decree.

2. That leave to file the supplemental and amended libel should not have been granted, and consequently that the decree should not have included the value of the stores, supplies and money belonging to The Cotton Valley, which were lost.

3. That the record of the proceedings and findings of the board of local inspectors, and the documents connected therewith, were improperly excluded as evidence; and

4. That the depositions taken in the Menge cases were improperly admitted.

1. The objection to the sufficiency of the findings is based on Rule 2 of the board of supervising inspectors of steam vessels, which is as follows:

"Should steamers be likely to pass near each other and these signals should not be made and answered by the time such boats shall have arrived at a distance of 800 yards from each other, the engines of both boats shall be stopped; or should the signal be given and not properly understood, from any cause whatever, both boats shall be backed until their headway shall be fully checked, and the engines shall not be again started ahead until the proper signals are made, answered and understood. Doubts or fears of misunderstanding signals shall be expressed by several short sounds of the whistle in quick succession."

The particular specifications of insufficiency are:

1. That it does not appear that the signals for passing had been made and answered before the boats came within eight hundred yards of each other; and, 2, that the failure of The Cotton Valley to understand the signal of doubt or fear made by The Morgan was a fault on her part.

[75]

There is no complaint in the pleadings as to the time when The Cotton Valley made the first signal, and neither party at the hearing below seems to have considered that an important fact in the case. So long as it was made and assented to by The Morgan without any signal of misunderstanding, it will be presumed to have been at the proper distance as nothing appears to the contrary. The findings show affirmatively that it was understood and assented to by The Morgan.

As the "several short sounds of the whistle" were only to be given in case of doubt or fear of a misunderstanding of signals, it was not necessarily a fault in The Cotton Valley to misinterpret their meaning when made by The Morgan, so short a time after her assent had been given to the signal of The Cotton Valley to pass to the right.

2. Admiralty Rule 24 provides that in all informations and libels, in causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, "new counts may be filed, and amendments, in matters of substa may be made, upon motion, at any time be the final decree, upon such terms as the c shall impose." 3 How. xiv.* In The Lucill Wall., 74 [86 U.S., bk. 22, L. ed. 64], it was ded that an appeal in admiralty from the dis to the circuit court "has the effect to super and vacate the decree from which it was ta A new trial, completely and entirely new, other testimony and other pleadings, if n sary, or if asked for, is contemplated—a in which the judgment of the court belo regarded as though it had never been rend A new decree is to be made in the circuit co Clearly, under this decision, after an appe taken, and the decree of the district cour cated, a motion to amend, made while the is pending in the circuit court for a new on its merits, will be before the final de and, under the operation of the rule, we no doubt the circuit court may, in its discre permit an amendment of the libel, so as t clude a claim for damages growing out o original cause of action and litigated in court below, but rejected because not spe in the pleadings. It is true, that in the c Houseman v. The North Carolina, 15 Pet it was decided that a libel could not be ame after an appeal, so as to bring in a new for damages; but this was before the ado of the admiralty rules, the decision having made in 1841, and the rules not taking until September 1, 1845. 3 How., xix.* Act authorizing the rules was passed Augu 1842, chap. 188, § 6, 5 Stat. at L., 518, is quite possible Rule 24 was suggested b case. It has long been the practice of th cuit Courts to allow such amendments. v. Thomson, 1 Wall., Jr., 343, decided in in the third circuit; Lamb v. Parkman, 2 Rep., 589, first circuit, in 1858; The C. E ter, 1 Fed. Rep., 733, same circuit; The ing Star, 14 Fed. Rep., 866, seventh c The Oder, 21 Blatchf., 26, second circuit; [F Ins. Co. v. Steamship Co.], 22 Blatchf. same circuit. In Lamb v. Parkman, supr Justice Curtis, then holding the circuit said: "The 24th Rule, made by the su court to regulate the practice of the in courts of admiralty, applies to this as we the district court. Pursuant to it, amend in matters of substance may be made c tion, at any time before the final decree such terms as the court shall impose. amendments shall be allowed, under wh cumstances and supported by what proo must be applied for, and in what form must be incorporated into the record, a to the sound discretion of the court, to ercised in each case, or to be regulated b ten rules of practice, so far as the cou find it useful to frame such rules." I of the circuits, rules upon the subjec been adopted. The second circuit is them. In the case of Lamb v. Parkma Justice Curtis, after saying that there w written rules in his circuit, proceeded what, from the course of decisions in si analogous cases would, in his opinion, be guides to the exercise of the discretion court. If proper care is taken to av prise, and to confine amendments in th

*See Book 20, L. ed. p. 222.

[illegible] court to the original subject of controversy, [illegible] as not to allow matters outside of the general [illegible] of the pleadings below to be brought in, [illegible] difficult to see how any possible harm can [illegible] from permitting a libelant to amend his [illegible] in such a way as to give him the full benefit of his suit as it has been begun.

[illegible] The finding of the board of local inspectors and the documents connected therewith were properly excluded. The proceeding in which the finding was made was instituted under section 4450 of the Revised Statutes, for an [illegible] of the facts connected with the collision, so far as they had a bearing on the conduct of the licensed officers on board the boats, and at most it only showed the opinion of the board upon the subject from the evidence adduced before them. It was offered, to use the language of counsel, "as tending to affect the evidence offered by the libelants to show that The Cotton Valley was in her proper position in the river, and had proper watches and lights set at the time of the collision." Clearly it was not admissible for any such purpose.

4. The specific objection to the depositions in the Menge cases that were offered for the purpose of impeachment, is that they were not exhibited to the witnesses whose testimony was to be impeached upon their cross examination, or otherwise verified, as the evidence of the witnesses in the former causes. The rule is, that the contradictory declarations of a witness, whether oral or in writing, made at another time, cannot be used for the purpose of impeachment until the witness has been examined upon the subject, and his attention particularly directed to the circumstances in such a way as to give him full opportunity for explanation or [illegible], if he desires to make it. Conrad v. Griffey, 16 How., 46. If the contradictory declaration is in writing, questions as to its contents, without the production of the instrument itself, are ordinarily inadmissible, and a cross examination for the purpose of laying the foundation of its use as impeachment would not, except under special circumstances, be allowed until the paper was produced and shown to the witness while under examination. Circumstances may arise, however, which will excuse its production. All the law requires is, that the memory of the witness shall be so refreshed by the necessary inquiries as to enable him to explain, if he can and desires to do so. Whether this has been done is for the court to determine before the impeaching evidence is admitted. Here the cross examination, on which the right to use the depositions depended, has not been put into the record, but the bill of exceptions shows "that, in the cross examination of each of said witnesses, the attention of the witness was called to the evidence given by him in the cases of Menge, * * * and the said witnesses were specifically examined as to the [illegible] of said evidence, and admitted having [illegible] therein." From this, and the failure to incorporate the cross examination into the bill of exceptions, we must presume that [illegible] foundation was laid for the introduction of the evidence, unless the failure to show the [illegible] to the witnesses at the time of their [illegible] examination was necessarily and under all [illegible] fatal. The objection is not to the [illegible] as to the contents of the depositions without their production, but to the admission of the depositions after a cross examination which was, as we must presume, properly conducted in their absence. It is also stated in the bill of exceptions that, "at the offering, no objection was made that the evidence offered was not the evidence of said witnesses respectively, or that the same had been imperfectly taken and reported." This shows that the depositions must have been sufficiently identified as the evidence of the witnesses in the former cases.

In the case, as it comes to us, we find no error. The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed and interest allowed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
Plff. in Err., [2]
v.
ABRAM MYERS.
[No. 291.]

In error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
CITY OF KANSAS.
[No. 461.]

In error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
LUCIA KNUTH.
[No. 810.]

In error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Nebraska.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
FRANK HARWOOD.
[No. 980.]

In error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

TEXAS AND PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
A. F. McALISTER.

SAME v. LAURA KIRK.

SAME v. JAMES MURPHY.
[Nos. 610, 797, 824.]

In error to the Supreme Court of the State of Texas.

(See S. C., Pacific Railroad Removal Cases, Reporter's ed., 1-25.)

Removal of causes—corporations of the United States entitled to removal—separate controversy—practice.

1. Corporations of the United States created by and organized under Acts of Congress are entitled as such to remove into the Circuit Courts of the United States suits brought against them in state courts under and by virtue of the Act of March 3, 1875, on the ground that such suits are suits "arising under the laws of the United States."
2. The Union Pacific Railway Company and the Texas Pacific Railway Company are corporations of the United States although certain state and territorial corporations have been consolidated with them.
3. On proceedings for widening a street a trial before the mayor is in its nature an inquest of valuations and assessments, not having the character of a suit, and a petition for removal may be filed after appeal taken to a state court.
4. Under such proceedings there is a distinct controversy between the city and the company, although many others are made parties defendant.
5. The authority of the Kansas Pacific Railway Company to extend its road into Missouri was granted by Congress under its power "to regulate commerce among the several States."
6. An objection not raised in the court below is waived.

[Nos. 291, 461, 810, 980, 610, 797, 824.]

Argued Nov. 20, 21, 24, 1884. Decided May 4, 1885.

The history and facts of these cases fully appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. John F. Dillon, W. D. Davidge, J. P. Usher, A. J. Poppleton, John C. Brown and A. S. Williams, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. A. H. Garland, for defendants in error in Nos. 610, 797 and 824.

Mr. W. Hallett Phillips, for defendants in error.

Mr. Thos. P. Fenlon, for defendant in error in No. 291.

Mr. Geo. L. Hill, for defendant in error in No. 610.

Messrs. W. H. Munger and E. F. Gray, for defendant in error in No. 810.

[3] Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

The principal question involved in these cases is whether a suit brought in a state court against a corporation of the United States may be removed by such corporation into the Circuit Court of the United States, on the ground of its being a corporation organized under a law of the United States. The plaintiff in error in four of the cases is the Union Pacific Railway Company, and in the other three cases is the Texas and Pacific Railway Company. They contend that they have such a right of removal, either under the removal Act of July 27, 1868, 15 Stat. at L., 227, now forming section 640 of the Revised Statutes, or under the Act of March 3, 1875, entitled "An Act to determine the Jurisdiction of Circuit Courts of the United States, and to Regulate the Removal of Causes from State Courts, and for Other Purposes," 18 Stat. at L., 470, or both. Whether the corporations of the United States, organized under Acts of Congress, have or have not this right of removal is the principal question in these cases.

The suits were all brought in state courts against the said corporations severally. In the first case, Myers, a switchman at Armstrong, in Kansas, in the employ of the Union Pacific Railway Company, sued the company for an injury alleged to have been sustained by hin through the carelessness of the company or it agents, in the construction of the coupling o its cars. The company filed an answer, and a the same time a petition for the removal of th cause to the Circuit Court of the United State for the District of Kansas, and the proper bon required by the law. The petition for remova stated that the petitioner was a corporatio other than a banking corporation, and organ ized under a law of the United States, namely an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to Ai in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegrap Line from the Missouri River to the Pacifi Ocean, and to Secure to the Government th Use of the Same for Postal, Military, an Other Purposes," approved July 1, 1862; an that, in accordance with said Act and the Act amendatory and supplemental thereto, the p titioner had exercised and did exercise its co porate functions and powers.

The petition then proceeded as follows:

"That February 1, 1880, pursuant to sectio 16 of the said Act of July 1, 1862, and of th Act of July 2, 1864, the Kansas Pacific Railwa Company, a corporation created by the Ter torial Legislature of Kansas, and organize under the laws of said Territory, and the De ver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, corporation created and organized under th laws of the Territory of Colorado, both which said companies are mentioned in sa Acts of Congress and their said railroads said Acts made a part of the Union Paci Railroad system, were, by agreement, conso dated with the Union Pacific Railroad Co pany. Your petitioner and said consolidat company, by agreement, as by said Acts a thorized, assumed and adopted the name of t Union Pacific Railway Company; which co pany consolidated, assumed, took and fro thenceforth had and has, by virtue of sa agreement of consolidation, possession a ownership of all the railroads and other pro erty, real and personal, of said constitue companies, and has and does operate and ma age the same under and by authority of sa Acts of Congress and is governed and controll by said Acts, and is to all intents and purpo and in fact a corporation under the laws of United States.

"That the plaintiff, Abram Myers, has su your petitioner, the Union Pacific Railw Company, process in this suit having be served on its agents, and your petitioner appeared thereto and filed its answer; that matter and amount in this suit above entit exceeds, exclusive of costs, the sum or value $500; that your petitioner has a defense to s action arising under and by virtue of the afo said laws of the United States; that said has not been tried, nor has it been ready for stood for trial, and the present is the first te of the court at which it could have been trie

The petition concluded with the proffer the proper bond, and a prayer for an order removal, and that the court would proceed further in the cause. The bond was appro and an order of removal was made. On fil the record in the Circuit Court of the Uni States, a motion was made to remand the ca to the state court, and it was remanded acco ingly, the Circuit Judge holding that the [illegible] arising "under the Constitution [illegible] of the United States," within the [illegible] of the Act of Congress of March 3, [illegible] and that a suit cannot be removed from [illegible] to a federal court, upon the sole ground [illegible] is a suit by or against a corporation or[illegible] under the laws of the United States. [illegible] the judgment remanding the cause, the writ [illegible] was sued out in this court.

[illegible] case, Union Pacific R. Co. v. City [illegible], was a proceeding instituted by the [illegible] council of said city by ordinance [illegible] in April, 1880, for widening a street [illegible] the depot grounds of the company, [illegible] taking a portion of its said grounds [illegible] property of many other persons. A [illegible] was summoned in November, 1880, before [illegible], to inquire and find the value of the [illegible] taken for the street, and to assess the [illegible] upon surrounding property benefited [illegible] On December 12, 1880, this jury [illegible] the value of the company's property [illegible] equal to $7,305, and assessed, as bene[illegible] upon the remaining property of the com[illegible] the sum of $12,225 towards paying the [illegible] for widening the street. The verdict [illegible] was confirmed by the mayor and common [illegible], February 26, 1881. The laws of Mis[illegible] give to any party, dissatisfied with the [illegible] of the jury in such cases, an appeal to [illegible] Circuit Court of Jackson County (in which [illegible] City is situated), and the Union Pacific [illegible] Company, and some other dissatisfied [illegible] filed separate appeals, and the proceed[illegible] were certified to the said court, where the [illegible] were by the law directed to be [illegible] in all respects, and subject to the same [illegible] and the same law, as other trials had in [illegible] Circuit Court, and the same record thereof [illegible] and kept." After the case was certified [illegible] Circuit Court of Jackson County, the [illegible] in due time, April, 1881, filed a pe[illegible] for removal of the case to the Circuit [illegible] of the United States for the Western [illegible] of Missouri. The petition, as in the [illegible] of Myers, set out the incorporation of the [illegible] and the consolidation of the three [illegible] before mentioned under the Acts of [illegible] before referred to, by the name of [illegible] Union Pacific Railway Company. The [illegible] then proceeds to state as follows:

"[illegible] your petitioner, by agreement of said [illegible] companies, succeeded to, had and [illegible] all the rights and privileges and [illegible] real and personal, which was of said [illegible] companies, or either of them, and [illegible] the time of commencement of this pro[illegible] your petitioner had owned and pos[illegible], exclusive of all other rights and claims, [illegible] and described in said proceeding, as [illegible] It then describes the land of the com[illegible] taken for the street, and then states as [illegible] and that the same had been acquired [illegible] Kansas Pacific Railway Company for [illegible] and other railway purposes by authority [illegible] and that your petitioner held said land [illegible] purposes, and was occupying the same [illegible] for such purposes at the time of the [illegible] of the proceedings, and was [illegible] to appropriate the residue thereof to such [illegible] the business of your petitioner [illegible] it imperatively necessary that it should [illegible] acquired.

"Your petitioner distinctly avers that it is a corporation, not banking, organized under the laws of the United States; that it holds and possesses said property pursuant to such laws; that it has a defense in this action arising under and by virtue of the laws of the United States hereinbefore referred to; and your petitioner desires that said cause may be removed into said Circuit Court of the United States for trial pursuant to section 640 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Your petitioner further states that the matter in dispute in this cause, in which your petitioner is interested, exceeds the sum of $500, exclusive of costs; and further, that this suit has not been tried, but is now pending for trial on appeal in the Circuit Court of Jackson County, Missouri." [7]

The petition concluded with the ordinary proffer of a bond and prayer for removal of the case, etc., and an order of removal was made by the state court. Motion was then made to the Circuit Court of the United States to remand the cause, and that court, after holding the motion under consideration for some time, gave judgment to remand, which judgment is brought here by writ of error.

Before rendering judgment, the Circuit Court of the United States allowed the company to file an additional statement of facts for the purpose of showing that the cause was removable, averring its acceptance of the Acts of Congress, and the passage of an Act by the Legislature of Missouri, authorizing the company to extend its track within the limits of Missouri, and to acquire depot grounds there, which it did; and the fact that said grounds are essential to the operations of the company in carrying out the objects declared in the Acts of Congress relating thereto; that the United States loaned its bonds on said portion of the road and has a lien thereon for their payment.

The third suit, Union Pacific R. Co. v. Knuth, was an action brought by the defendant in error against the Company in the District Court of Dodge County, Nebraska, in July, 1883, to recover damages for injuries sustained by her at the Company's depot at North Bend, between Omaha and Ogden. A petition for removal of the cause to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Nebraska was filed in due time, alleging the incorporation and organization of the company under and by virtue of the Acts of Congress of 1862 and 1864, before referred to; that the matter in dispute exceeds $500 exclusive of costs; that the defendant had a defense to the action arising under and by virtue of the laws of the United States, to wit: the Act and amendatory Act of Congress above referred to, concluding with the usual proffer of bond and prayer for removal. The order of removal was granted, the circuit court remanded the cause to the state court, and a writ of error brings the case here. In this case the place of injury was on the main line of the Union Pacific Railway Company. [8]

The fourth case is that of Frank Harwood, who brought a suit against the Union Pacific Railway Company in the District Court of Davis County, Kansas, in July, 1882, to recover damages for an injury received by him at the company's depot at Junction City, Kansas, whilst loading hogs in a car. A petition for removal of the cause was filed in due time, alleging the organization of the company under the Act of Congress of July 1, 1862, and the amendments thereto, and other Acts of Congress; and that the petitioner had a defense arising under the laws of the United States, and concluding with tendering the proper bond, and a prayer for removal. The state court approved the bond offered, but denied the petition and proceeded with the cause. A verdict being found for plaintiff, the case was taken to the Supreme Court of Kansas by appeal. One of the reasons assigned on the appeal was the denial of the petition to remove the cause. The supreme court affirmed the judgment, and a writ of error to the judgment of that court brings the case here.

The three cases of the Texas and Pacific Railway Company were as follows: the first was a suit brought by A. F. McAlister against the Company in the District Court of Harrison County, Texas, in April, 1879, to recover damages for an injury to the plaintiff whilst a passenger in one of the company's trains. A petition for removal was filed in due time, alleging that the suit arose under the laws of the United States, and that the defendant was a corporation organized under and by virtue of certain Acts of Congress of the United States, to wit: "An Act Entitled an Act to Incorporate the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company, and to aid in the construction of its road, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1871, and an Act [9] suplementary thereto, approved May 2, 1872; that the petitioner had a defense to the action arising under and by virtue of a law of the United States, to wit: said Act of incorporation; that it was not a banking, but a railroad corporation authorized to construct, own and maintain a railroad to and from certain places designated in said Acts of Congress; concluding with a proffer of a bond and a prayer for removal. The court approved the bond, but refused to remove the cause. The special exceptions to the petition for removal were two: first, that it did not show what the defense was, arising under and by virtue of a law of the United States; secondly, denying the allegation that the defendant was a corporation created and existing under and by virtue of Acts of Congress of the United States. Afterwards the defendant filed a plea in abatement, stating that it had filed in the United States Circuit Court at Jefferson, Eastern District of Texas, a certified copy of the record of the pleadings and other papers in the cause, and had the same entered on the docket of said court, in the fall term, 1879, and that plaintiff appeared and moved to remand the cause to the state court, which motion was overruled, and the Circuit Court of the United States entertained jurisdiction of the cause; and the plaintiff agreed to a continuance of the cause in that court to the spring term of 1880, and at the spring term, 1880, procured the same to be continued, and at the fall term, 1880, appeared before said court and consented to a continuance, and at the spring term, 1881, again prosecuted his cause in said court, and continued the same. This plea was accepted to, and overruled by the state court. Judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff, and an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of Texas. That court overruled the error assigned on the refusal of the district court to remo the cause, on the ground that the defendant petition for removal did not set forth the d fense so as to show that it was a defense arisir under the laws of the United States. Tl court took notice also that the petition was n sworn to; but as that point was not raised b the plaintiff's counsel, they did not consider i The judgment of the district court was affirme and the case is brought here by writ of error the judgment of the supreme court.

The second case of the Texas and Paci Railway Company was a suit brought by Lau Kirk against the company in the District Cou of the Second Judicial District of Texas, March, 1881, to recover damages for the dea or her husband, caused by the company's ca running off the track. The petition for r moval was filed in this case similar in all r spects to that in the preceding case. A seco petition was filed a few days later, adding averment that the defendant had fixed domicil and principal business office at Phil delphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, and w in contemplation of law a citizen of that Stat The prayer of the petition was denied, the cau went to trial, judgment was rendered for t plaintiff, an appeal was taken, and the jud ment was affirmed by the Supreme Court Texas, upon the reasons and authority of t previous case of McAlister v. The Texas a Pacific Railway Company. The case is nc here by writ of error.

The third and last case of the Texas and P cific Railway Company was a suit brought James Murphy against the company (or, rath against one of its constituent companies, a afterwards, by amendment, against the co pany itself) in the District Court of Harris County, Texas, in 1873, to recover damages f an injury received by the plaintiff in getti upon the cars of the company at Jonesvil Texas. The pleadings were amended from ti to time on both sides, and the cause was co tinued, until finally an amended original pe tion was filed in October, 1878, followed b petion for removal filed November 1, 18 The prayer of the petition was denied. T case was afterwards tried, and a verdict a judgment rendered for the plaintiff; and May, 1883, this judgment was affirmed by t Supreme Court of Texas on appeal. On t question of removal the court followed the cision in the McAlister Case above stated. question was raised in this case on account the time at which the petition for removal w filed. The application for removal was treat by the court as made under section 640 of t Revised Statutes.

With some diversification of details, it w be perceived that all of these cases depend pr cipally on two questions:

First, whether the fact that the plaintiffs error are corporations of the United Sta created by Act of Congress makes the su against them "suits arising under the laws the United States," within the meaning of t second section of the Act of March 3, 1875, fore referred to, so as to be removable from state into the federal courts for that cause: a

Secondly, whether, if not removable on t ground, they are removable under section 64 the Revised Statutes, upon the allegation c

[illegible] in the several petitions of removal, that [illegible] defendant has a defense to the action arising [illegible] and by virtue of a law of the United [illegible], in some cases, the Act of in[illegible] as the law referred to.

[illegible] of opinion that corporations of the [illegible] States, created by and organized under [illegible] of Congress, like the plaintiffs in error in [illegible] cases, are entitled as such to remove into [illegible] circuit courts of the United States suits [illegible] against them in the state courts, under [illegible] by virtue of the Act of March 3, 1875, on [illegible] ground that such suits are suits "arising [illegible] the laws of the United States." We do [illegible] to go into a lengthy argument on [illegible] subject; we think that the question has been [illegible] decided long ago by this court. [illegible] argument of Chief Justice Marshall in the case of Osborn v. The Bank of the [illegible] States, 9 Wheat. 817–828, delivered [illegible] sixty years ago, and always acquiesced in, renders any further discussion unnecessary to show that a suit by or against a [illegible] of the United States is a suit arising [illegible] the laws of the United States. That [illegible] was the basis of the decision on the [illegible] question in that case. The pre[illegible] question, it is true, was as to the power of [illegible] to authorize the bank to sue and be [illegible] in the United States Courts. The words [illegible] charter were, that the bank should be [illegible] and capable in law to "sue and be [illegible], plead and be impleaded, answer and be [illegible], defend and be defended, in all state [illegible] having competent jurisdiction, and in [illegible] circuit court of the United States." The [illegible] to create such a jurisdiction in the fed[illegible] courts rested solely on the truth of the [illegible] that a suit by or against the bank [illegible] a suit arising under the laws of the [illegible] States; for the Constitution confined the [illegible] power of the United States to these [illegible] classes of cases, namely: first, to cases in [illegible] and equity, arising under the Constitution, [illegible] of the United States, and treaties made [illegible] their authority; secondly, to cases affecting [illegible], other public ministers and [illegible]; thirdly, to cases of admiralty and [illegible] jurisdiction; fourthly, to certain [illegible] depending on the character of the [illegible], such as controversies to which the [illegible] States was a party, those between two [illegible], or a State and citizens of another [illegible], or citizens of different States, or citizens [illegible] claiming lands under grants of [illegible] States, or a State or its citizens and [illegible] States, citizens or subjects. Now, suits [illegible] against the United States Bank could not [illegible], as such, belong to any of these classes [illegible] the first, namely: cases in law and equity [illegible] under the Constitution, laws or treaties [illegible] United States; and the Supreme Court [illegible] as the distinguished counsel who argued [illegible] Case, so understood it. Unless [illegible], a case in which the bank was a par[illegible] for that reason a case arising under the [illegible] United States, Congress would not [illegible] the power to authorize it to sue and [illegible] in the Circuit Court of the United [illegible], and to this question, to wit: whether [illegible] was a suit arising under the laws of the United States, the court directed its prin[illegible]. But as it was objected that several questions of general law might arise in a case, besides that which depended upon an Act of Congress, the court first disposed of that objection, holding that, as scarcely any case occurs every part of which depends on the Constitution, laws or treaties of the United States, it is sufficient for the purposes of federal jurisdiction if the case necessarily involves a question depending on such Constitution, laws or treaties. The Chief Justice then proceeds as follows:

"We think, then, that when a question to which the judicial power of the Union is extended by the Constitution, forms an ingredient of the original cause, it is in the power of Congress to give the circuit courts jurisdiction of that cause, although other questions of fact or law may be involved in it.

"The case of the bank is, we think, a very [13] strong case of this description. The charter of incorporation not only creates it, but gives it every faculty which it possesses. The power to acquire rights of any description, to transact business of any description, to make contracts of any description, to sue on those contracts, is given and measured by its charter, and that charter is a law of the United States. This being can acquire no right, make no contract, bring no suit which is not authorized by a law of the United States. It is not only itself the mere creature of a law, but all its actions and all its rights are dependent on the same law. Can a being, thus constituted, have a case which does not arise literally as well as substantially under the law? Take the case of a contract, which is put as the strongest against a bank.

"When the bank sues, the first question which presents itself, and which lies at the foundation of the cause, is, Has this legal entity a right to sue? Has it a right to come, not into this court particularly, but into any court? This depends upon a law of the United States. The next question is, Has this being a right to make this particular contract? If this question be decided in the negative, the cause is determined against the plaintiff; and this question, too, depends entirely on a law of the United States. These are important questions, and they exist in every possible case. * * *

"The question forms an original ingredient in every case. Whether it be in fact relied on or not, in the defense, it is still a part of the cause, and may be relied upon. The right of the plaintiff to sue cannot depend on the defense which the defendant may choose to set up. His right to sue is anterior to that defense and must depend on the state of things when the action was brought. The questions which the case involves, then, must determine its character, whether those questions be made in the cause or not." (Pp. 823, 824.)

"It is said that a clear distinction exists between the party and the cause: that the party may originate under a law with which the cause has no connection; and that Congress may, with the same propriety, give a naturalized citizen, who is the mere creature of a law, a right to sue in the courts of the United States, as give that right to the bank.

"This distinction is not denied; and if the [14] Act of Congress was a simple Act of incorporation, and contained nothing more, it might be entitled to great consideration. But the Act does not stop with incorporating the bank. It proceeds to bestow upon the being it has made all the faculties and capacities which that being possesses. Every act of the bank grows out of this law, and is tested by it. To use the language of the Constitution, every act of the bank arises out of this law." (P. 827.)

If the case of Osborn v. The Bank is to be adhered to as a sound exposition of the Constitution, there is no escape from the conclusion that these suits against the plaintiffs in error, considering the said plaintiffs as corporations created by and organized under the Acts of Congress referred to in the several petitions for removal in these cases, were and are suits arising under the laws of the United States. An examination of those Acts of Congress shows that the corporations now before us, not only derive their existence, but their powers, their functions, their duties, and a large portion of their resources from those Acts, and, by virtue thereof, sustain important relations to the Government of the United States.

A question is made in the cases coming from Kansas about the Constitution of a company owning and controlling the line of railroad running through that State. The allegations of the petition for removal in the Meyers Case (and the others are substantially the same) are: That on February 1, 1880, pursuant to section 16 of the Act of Congress of July 1, 1862, and section 16 of the Act of July 2, 1864, the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, a corporation created by the Territorial Legislature of Kansas, and organized under the laws of the said Territory, and the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, a corporation created and organized under the laws of the Territory of Colorado, both of which companies are mentioned in the said Acts of Congress, and their roads by said Acts made a part of the Pacific Railroad system, were by agreement consolidated with the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and said consolidated company assumed and adopted the name of The Union Pacific Railroad Company, which as-[15] sumed, took, and thenceforth has had, by virtue of said agreement of consolidation, possession and ownership of all the railroads and other property, real and personal, of said constituent companies, and has operated and managed the same under and by authority of said Acts of Congress, and is governed and controlled by said Acts, and is to all intents and purposes and in fact a corporation under the laws of the United States. These allegations, if true (and they must be taken so on the application for removal), show that the present corporation, the Union Pacific Railway Company, which is the corporation sued, and which appears and defends the suits, is a corporation formed and organized under an Act of Congress. Besides, the legislation of Congress in reference to all the companies so consolidated, in the Acts of 1862 and 1864, and subsequent Acts, all which is reviewed and commented on in the opinion of this court in Ames v. Kansas, 111 U. S., 449 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 482], shows that all the said companies, before the said consolidation, had received large donations of land, subsidies, powers and privileges from Congress, and had accepted and were subject to important duties to the United States Government, and were subject to a wide control of said government both in the construction and management of their roads and works; and on of said companies, to wit: the Union Pacifi Railroad Company, was originally incorporate and organized under said Acts, and was strictl a corporation of the United States, subject t the Acts of Congress, and having importa duties to perform to the government in th prosecution of its business. The facts that th last named company is one of the constituer elements of the consolidated company, and th the entire system of roads now in its possessio and under its charge and control constitut one of the most comprehensive and importa mediums of interstate commerce in the countr and that in all its transactions it is subject the supervision and control of the Governme of the United States, are sufficient, it seems us, to bring the Kansas Cases, as well as t other cases, fairly within the principle of t case of Osborn v. The Bank. The organizatio of the company under the consolidation pr ceedings makes it, at least, a corporation facto, and the legality of its Constitution as corporation will not be inquired into collat ally. It has, as we know from the case Ames v. Kansas, been called in question in regular way by an information in the nature a quo warranto, and until that, or some oth case directly assailing the validity of the co solidation, is decided, the plaintiff in err must be regarded as a corporation organiz under and by virtue of the laws of the Unit States. And the whole being, capacities, a thority and obligations of the company th consolidated are so based upon, permeated and enveloped in the Acts of Congress referr to, that it is impracticable, so far as the ope tions and transactions of the company are co cerned, to disentangle those qualities and pacities, which have their source and foun tion in these Acts, from those which are deriv from state or territorial authority.

With regard to transactions occurring Nebraska, on the original line of the Uni Pacific Railroad Company, it is not disput that the present company derives all its c porate and other powers from the Acts of C gress and is strictly and purely a United Sta corporation; and the Texas and Pacific R way Company stands in the same predicam and occupies the same position in Texas, in lation to consolidation with state organizatio as the Union Pacific does in Kansas, and same considerations apply to both. It originally incorporated by the name of the Te Pacific Railroad Company, by Act of Cong approved March 3, 1871, 16 Stat. at L., with power to construct a railroad from M shall, Texas, to San Diego on the Pacific Co and to purchase or consolidate with any road company chartered by congressio state, or territorial authority on the same ro Under this Act, and by authority of the Le lature of Texas, a consolidation was effec with the Southern Pacific Railroad Comp and the Southern Trans-Continental Rail Company, corporations of Texas, and by of Congress of May 2, 1872, 17 Stat. at L., the name of the company was changed to Texas and Pacific Railway Company. powers, privileges and advantages given to company by Congress, and the duties imp upon it, are specified in the Acts referred t was clearly within the reason and conclusion applied to the Union Pacific Railway Company.

If we are correct, therefore, in the conclusion to which we have come, that suits by and against such corporations are "suits arising under the laws of the United States," then they are, in terms, embraced in the second section of the Act of March 3, 1875, and the cases now under consideration were removable to the respective circuit courts of the United States, to which it was sought to remove them, unless any of them were obnoxious to some other objection peculiar to the individual cases.

The point suggested by the Supreme Court of Iowa in the case of Harwood, that the petition was not verified by oath, would not be available if it were raised by the defendant in error, since it was evidently waived by him at the time, having never been raised or mentioned in any way. The same may be said of the delay in filing the petition in the case of Murphy. See Ayers v. Watson, 113 U. S., 594 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1093].

In the Kansas City case, of proceedings for opening a street running through the depot grounds of the company at that place, brought here by writ of error to the Circuit Court of the United States, for the Western District of Missouri, it is contended by the City of Kansas, the defendant in error, first, that the consolidated railway company must be regarded as having the same status as if it were still the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, a corporation of the State of Kansas; secondly, that the case had already been tried once before the mayor and a jury, and an appeal had been taken to the Circuit Court of Jackson County before the petition for removal was filed, and, therefore, the application came too late: and, thirdly, that the proceeding was not a separate one against the railway company, but a joint one against the company and many other persons, and the removal of the railway company and other parties carried the whole case into the Circuit Court of Jackson County to be tried in toto; and a removal of the case by the railway company to the Circuit Court of the United States must be a removal of the whole case, and not merely the case of the railway company, which would cast upon the federal court an administrative function in a local matter, for which it was incompetent and destitute of jurisdiction.

The first of these points has already received consideration. But it may be added, as bearing on this particular case, that the original Kansas company was authorized by the 9th section of the Pacific Railroad Act of July 1, 1862, to extend its road into the State of Missouri—that is, "to construct a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River, at the mouth of the Kansas River, on the south side thereof [which is in the State of Missouri], so as to connect with the Pacific Railroad of Missouri, at the aforesaid point on the one hundred and twelfth meridian of longitude," namely: the point where the Union Pacific was to commence. The provision looked to the establishment of a continuous line of railroad from the Mississippi River at St. Louis (the eastern terminus of the Pacific Railroad of Missouri), to the Pacific Ocean. The power assumed by Congress in giving the authority to the Kansas company was undoubtedly assumed to be within the power "to regulate commerce among the several states"; and, although by an Act of the Legislature of Missouri, passed in February, 1865, the consent of that State was also given to the extension of the road into its territory, and to its connection with the Missouri road, the fact remains that the company claimed and assumed to exercise its powers under the Act of Congress, as well as by the consent of the Legislature of Missouri. So that the right of appropriating the very property in question in this case was claimed under authority of an Act of Congress. This circumstance adds strength to the claim of the plaintiff in error that the case was one "arising under the laws of the United States."

The second ground of objection, that the cause had been once tried before the mayor by a jury, and an appeal taken, before a petition for removal was filed, and therefore the application was too late, is answered by the reasoning of this court in the case of Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S., 403 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 206], which was a case very similar in this respect to the present. It was there held that the preliminary proceedings were in the nature of an inquest to ascertain the value of the property condemned, or [19] sought to be condemed by the right of eminent domain, and was "not a suit at law in the ordinary sense of those terms," consequently not "a suit" within the meaning of the Removal Acts; but that "when it was transferred to the District Court by appeal from the award of the commissioners, it took, under the statute of the State, the form of a suit at law, and was thenceforth subject to its ordinary rules and incidents." In that case, "the point in issue on the appeal was the compensation to be made to the owner of the land; in other words, the value of the property taken. No other question was open to contestation in the district court." The court, therefore, considered the case to be within the rule laid down in Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S., 20 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 528], in which it was held that a controversy between citizens of different States is involved in a suit whenever any property or claim of the parties, capable of pecuniary estimation, is the subject of litigation and is presented by the pleadings for judicial determination." And, in this view, the case of Boom Co. v. Patterson, was held to be removable to the federal court. That case, we think, governs the present, so far at least as relates to the trial before the mayor, which was in its nature an inquest of valuations and assessments, not having the character of a suit.

A more embarrassing question arises under the third objection raised by the defendant in error, to wit: that the whole case relating to the widening of the street was carried before the Circuit Court of Jackson County by the appeal, and must also be carried to the Circuit Court of the United States in the same condition if the application for a removal is sustained, whereby the latter court will be called upon to exercise administrative functions of a local character to which it is incompetent.

To understand the bearing of this objection it is necessary to inquire, first the condition of the case in the Circuit Court of Jackson County on the appeal; and, secondly, the rules which must govern the case on its removal to the federal court, if such a removal should be effected.

The condition of the case in the Circuit Court of Jackson County on the appeal depends upon the statute of Missouri under which the proceedings were had for widening the [20] street. This statute was an amendment to the city charter of the City of Kansas, passed in 1875. We have carefully examined its provisions. After giving very full directions as to the preliminary proceedings, such as the ordinance for opening or widening a street, the notices to be given, the summoning of jurors, and the duties to be performed by them, the recording of their verdict, etc., the 6th section declares: "In case the city, or any defendant to such proceedings, shall feel aggrieved by the verdict of the jury, such party so aggrieved may, within twenty days from the time the verdict of the jury is confirmed by the common council, appeal to the Circuit Court in and for the County of Jackson in this State. If the appeal is taken by either party, the same shall be taken and perfected by the filing with the clerk of the city, within the time aforesaid, such an affidavit as is required by law, in appealing from the judgment of a justice of the peace. If any appeal is so taken, the clerk of the said city shall, within six days from the taking of such appeal, file a complete transcript of the proceedings, and all papers filed and used in the trial, certified by him, with the clerk of the circuit court; and said circuit court shall thereupon become possessed of the cause, and said cause, unless dismissed, shall be tried de novo in said court, and the parties thereto shall have a speedy trial thereof; and to that end said causes shall have precedence over all other causes, and if necessary to a full determination of any question arising in the said cause, the circuit court shall have power to make and bring in other parties to such proceedings, on service of notice upon them for six days, or by publishing a notice to them for the same length of time, in any daily newspaper printed in said City of Kansas; and the parties so made by either kind of notice, and all persons claiming under them, shall be bound by such proceedings; * * * and the judge of said circuit court shall have power, and it shall be his duty to hold a sitting of his court for the speedy trial thereof, at the court-house in said city, at any time in vacation, and summon a jury before him (unless a jury is waived) for the trial of such appeals only, such trials to be had in all respects, and subject to the same rules and the same law as other trials had in the circuit [21] court and the same record thereof made and kept. The verdict of the jury, or the finding of the circuit judge sitting as a jury, as the case may be, shall conform in all respects to the requirements of section 8 of this Act for the government of the jury making the first assessment, and the verdict shall have the same force and effect as is provided in regard to said first verdict, and shall be binding on the parties; and the assessments against private property shall be paid in the same time, and until paid bear the same rate of interest as is above provided; and the amount assessed by the jury against property shall be a lien on the several parcels of property, charged from the day the ordinance for the improvement takes effect until paid. * * * On appeal under this section the jury shall consist of six men, freeholders of the city, and be chosen by the judge; and any finding or verdict in that court shall, unless set aside for good cause, be confirmed, and judgment entered thereon; that the city have and hold the property sought to be taken for the purposes specified in the ordinance providing for the improvement, and pay therefor the amount assessed against the city, and full compensation assessed therefor; and that the several lots and parcels of private property assessed to pay compensation by the verdict or finding stand charged and be bound respectively for the payment of assessments, with interest, as provided in this Act. * * * "

We have not been furnished by the counsel on either side with reference to any decision of the Missouri courts giving construction to this section. Whether the direction that the cause shall be tried de novo requires that all the valuations and assessments are to be retried, or only those affecting the appellants, is not expressly stated. The principle of valuation and assessment to be followed by the jury is laid down in the 3d section of the Act, as follows:

"Sec. 3. The jury shall first ascertain the actual damages done to each person or corporation in consequence of the taking of their property for such purposes, without reference to the proposed improvement, as the just compensation to be made therefor; and, second, to pay such compensation, assess against the city the amount of benefit to the city and public generally, inclusive of benefit to any property of the city, and against the several lots and parcels of private property deemed benefited; as determined according to the last section, by the proposed improvement, the balance of such compensation, each lot or parcel of ground to be assessed with an account bearing the same ratio to such balance as the benefit to each lot or parcel bears to the whole benefit to all the private property assessed. Parties interested may submit proof to the jury, and the latter shall examine personally the property to be taken and assessed. * * *"

From this it would seem that the balance of damages for property taken, after deducting the amount to be paid by the city, is to be divided and assessed pro rata upon those whose property is benefited, in proportion to the benefit to each. But each piece of property taken is valued by itself, "without reference to the proposed improvement," and the amount of benefit to each piece of property benefited is ascertained separately without reference to the other pieces benefited. It is only after this has been done that the aggregate amounts are ascertained and the damages are assessed pro rata against the pieces of property benefited according to the benefit to each, which is the result of a mere arithmetical calculation. In the state circuit court the jury ascertains and finds all these facts, and reports them in one general verdict.

What, then, is the relation in which the Railway Company, as an appellant, stands towards the City of Kansas, in this litigation? Clearly it has two distinct issues, or grounds of controversy: first, the value of its property taken for the street; secondly, the amount of benefit which the widening of the street will create [illegible] property, not so taken. It may [illegible] a third issue, and judging from the course [illegible] the argument, it has a third issue, still more [illegible] to it than either of the others, to [illegible] the right of the city to open a street at all [illegible] depot grounds. Now this controversy involving these three issues, is a distinct controversy between the company and the city. It may be settled in the same trial with the other appeals, and by a single jury; but the controversy is a distinct and separate one, and is capable of being tried distinctly and separately from the others. If the state circuit court had equity powers, it might direct a separate issue for the trial of this controversy by itself. It might try the other appeals without a jury (the parties waiving a jury), and try this controversy by a jury.

If this view of the subject is correct, we see no difficulty in removing the controversy between the City of Kansas and the railway company for trial in the Circuit Court of the United States. The proceedings for widening the street, pending in the state court, may have to await the decision of the case in the federal court; and the result of those proceedings may be materially affected by the decision of that case; but that consideration does not affect the separate and distinct character of the controversy between the city and the railway company, although it might raise a question of proper parties in a pure chancery proceeding as between the city and the company. This controversy is to all intents and purposes "a suit." The indirect effect upon the general proceedings for widening the street which would ensue if the federal court should determine that the City of Kansas had no right to widen the street in the company's depot grounds, or that the valuation of its property was much too small, or the assessment for benefits against it was much too large, furnishes no good reason for depriving the company of its right to remove its suit into a United States court. We think that the case was removable to that court under the Act of March 3d, 1875.

The disposal of all the cases now before us, does not make it unnecessary to inquire whether the allegations in the several petitions of removal were, or were not, sufficient to bring the case within the 640th section of the Revised Statutes, or whether this section still remains in force.

The judgments are reversed in all the cases, and the causes will be remanded, with instructions to enter judgment in accordance with this opinion.

Chief Justice Waite, dissenting:

I am unable to agree to these judgments. In my opinion Congress did not intend to give the words "arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States," in the Act of 1875, the [illegible] meaning they have when used by Chief Justice Marshall in the argument of the opinion in Osborn v. Bank. I do not doubt the power of Congress to authorize suits by or against such corporations to be brought in the courts of the United States. That was decided in Osborn's Case, and with it I have no fault to find. Neither do I doubt that Congress did, in the charters under which these corporations were created, authorize suits by or against them to be brought in the courts of the United States as well as in the courts of the States; but I cannot believe that, if the charters had given jurisdiction to the courts of the United States in only a limited class of actions, and had provided that in all others the suits must be brought in the courts of the proper State, the Act of 1875 would have extended the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to all suits by or against such corporations when the value of the matter in dispute exceeded five hundred dollars.

The Acts of incorporation made no provision for the removal to the courts of the United States of suits begun in a state court. The Act of July 27, 1868, ch. 255, sec. 2, 15 Stat. at L., 227, now sec. 640 of the Revised Statutes, did, however, give authority for that purpose in suits brought against the company in a state court "upon the petition of such defendant, verified by oath, stating that such defendant has a defense arising under or by virtue of the Constitution or of any treaty or law of the United States." If all suits by or against, and all defenses by, a federal corporation necessarily arise under the laws of the United States "because the charter of incorporation not only creates it, but gives it every faculty which it possesses," why require the corporation, when asking for a removal, to cause an oath to be filed with its petition that it has a defense in the suit which arises under the Constitution or laws? If, "because the power to acquire rights of any description, to transact business of any description, to make contracts of any description, to sue on those contracts, is given and measured by its charter, and that charter a law of the United States," every suit by or against, and every defense to such a suit by, a federal corporation must arise [25] under the laws of the United States, why require it to set forth in its petition for removal that its defense does arise under such a law? If such a corporation cannot "have a case which does not arise literally, as well as substantially, under the law," what the necessity for saying more than that it is such a corporation?

The Act of 1868 (sec. 640) related specifically to this class of corporations and this class of suits and it shows distinctly that the words "arising under the laws of the United States" were there used in a restricted sense. I see no evidence of any intention by Congress to use them in any other sense in the Act of 1875, when applied to the same kind of suits and to the same kind of corporations.

I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice Miller unites with me in this dissent.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[56]

W. H. CRUMP, Appt.,

v.

H. K. THURBER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 56-61.)

Removal of causes—citizenship—Act of 1875.

* A suit in equity brought by C., a citizen of one State, against a corporation of the same State and T., a citizen of another State, and W., to obtain a decree that C. owns shares of the stock of the corporation, standing in the name of W., but sold by him to T., and that the corporation cancel on its books the shares standing in the name of W., and issue to C. certificates therefor, cannot be removed by T. into the Circuit Court of the United States, under § 2 of the Act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470); because the corporation is an indispensable party to the suit, and is a citizen of the same State with C.

[No. 267.]

Submitted Apr. 22, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Gabriel C. Wharton and Emmet Field, for appellant.

Mr. E. More, for appellee.

[57] Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was commenced by the filing in the Louisville Chancery Court, in the City of Louisville, Kentucky, on the 26th of November, 1880, of a petition in equity, by W. H. Crump against James Wilson and the Southern Dairy Company, a Kentucky corporation. The substance of the petition was, that Crump had, under a contract with Wilson, assisted him in selling rights under a patent which he controlled; that, by the terms of the contract, Wilson was to receive $12,000 for the right for Kentucky, and $8,000 for the right for Indiana, and all received above those sums for either State was to be divided equally between Crump and Wilson; that the rights for Kentucky and Indiana were disposed of to the Southern Dairy Company, and 1,000 shares of its capital stock, of $100 each, out of 2,000 shares, were issued to Wilson, in payment for the rights, of which he had sold 100 shares for $5,000; that he had received more in value than the $20,000; that he refused to give to Crump any part of the stock or of the money; that a large amount of the stock issued to Wilson still stood on the books of the corporation in his name; and that Crump was entitled to 300 shares thereof. The petition prayed that Crump be adjudged to own 300 shares of the stock; and that the corporation be ordered to cancel on its books the stock standing in the name of Wilson, to that extent, and to issue to Crump certificates for 300 shares.

The corporation was served with process. The petition was then amended by stating that not less than 250 shares of the stock still stood in the name of Wilson; and process on that was served on the corporation. It then filed an answer, stating that 250 shares of its stock stood, when the petition was filed, in the name of Wilson, on its books, and had not since been transferred thereon; that, before the suit was brought, one H. K. Thurber bought the 250 shares from Wilson, and received from him the certificates thereof, by indorsement and delivery, and still held and owned them and he had notified the president of the corporation of that fact, and claimed the right to have the stock transferred into his own name and that it was willing to obey the judgment of the court, but ought not to be ordered to cancel or transfer the stock, unless Thurber should be brought before the court, to litigate with Crump the true ownership of the stock.

Crump replied to the answer of the corporation, and filed an amended petition, making Thurber a party to the suit, and paying the same relief as in his original petition. Wilson and Thurber were then each personally served with process in the City of New York. Thurber then came into the State Court and filed petition and a bond for the removal of the suit to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky, and the State Court made an order removing the cause, under the objection and exception of the plaintiff. The petition proceeded on the ground that Crump was a citizen of Kentucky and Thurber a citizen of New York, and that there was a controversy in the suit between them, which was wholly between citizens of different States and could be fully determined between them. Nothing was said in the petition for removal about Wilson or the corporation.

Thurber then filed an answer in the Circuit Court, setting forth that he had, on the 26th of October, 1880, purchased the 250 shares from Wilson, for value, and received from him certificates therefor, three in number, issued by the corporation to and in the name of Wilson with blank forms of assignment and power of attorney on the back, which Wilson signed and delivered to Thurber with the certificates that he was entitled to fill the blanks and render the certificates, and have the shares transferred and new certificates issued to him by the corporation; and that he purchased the shares without any knowledge or information of any claim by Crump against Wilson. The answer prayed that the shares be decreed to be the property of Thurber and not of Crump, and that the corporation be ordered to cancel the certificates issued to Wilson, and to issue to Thurber new certificates in their place. There was a replication to this answer.

Thurber also filed a cross bill in the Circuit Court, making as a defendant only the corporation, but not Crump, setting forth himself as a citizen of New York and the corporation as a citizen of Kentucky, and averring the facts as to his purchase of the stock from Wilson for value, and as to the indorsement and delivery of the certificates by Wilson to him, praying for judgment against the corporation that it receive and cancel the certificates issued to Wilson, and issue to Thurber other certificates, in their stead, for the 250 shares.

The corporation answered this cross bill, stating that it was a mere stakeholder between the parties to suit, and praying for a proper

* Head note by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

NOTE.—Removal of causes under Act of 1875—citizenship. See Del., etc., Co. v. Meyer, 100 U. S., bk. 25, 592, note.

[illegible] which should protect it. There was a replication to that answer.

Then Crump filed in the Circuit Court an amended bill, setting forth that the transaction between Wilson and Thurber was for the fraudulent purpose of protecting the stock for Wilson, and that the certificates were held in secret trust by Thurber for Wilson. Thurber answered that amended bill, denying its allegations. To that answer there was a replication.

Proofs were taken, and, on a hearing, a decree was made dismissing the bill of Crump, and adjudging that Thurber was the true owner of the 250 shares, and was entitled to have the certificates issued to Wilson therefor canceled, and other certificates issued in lieu thereof, on his application; and it was ordered that the corporation cancel the certificates, and issue or deliver to Thurber, or his order, such new certificates, and that Thurber and the corporation recover of Crump their costs. Wilson had never appeared or answered. Crump has appealed to this court.

It is assigned for error, that the Circuit Court did not have jurisdiction of this cause, under § 2 of the Act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. at L., 470), and ought to have remanded it to the state court. This objection is well taken. It is true that there is, in the suit, a controversy between Crump and Thurber, but it is a controversy to which the corporation is an indispensable party. Crump brought the controversy into court as one between himself on one side, and Wilson and the corporation on the other side; and throughout Crump maintained that Thurber had no right to take the place of Wilson, because the transactions between Wilson and Thurber gave Thurber no greater right than Wilson had. The controversy which Crump asked to have adjudicated was one in which he could be declared to be the owner of the shares, and in which, to give him the fruition of such decree, and enable him to stand as the true owner of the shares and be recognized as such on the books of the corporation, there should be a decree ordering the corporation to insert on its books the evidence of the ownership by Wilson, and to issue to Crump certificates for the shares. The jurisdiction of the Circuit Court must be determined, for the purposes of this case, by the status of the parties, and the nature of the relief which had been asked by the plaintiff at the time of the application for removal. If the decree of the Circuit Court had been in favor of Crump, it would have adjudged a right in favor of a citizen of Kentucky against a corporation of Kentucky. That corporation could not have removed the suit, by showing that a citizen of New York was the other claimant of the stock. The event of the suit, a decree in favor of Thurber, on the merits, against Crump and the corporation, is not a proper test of the jurisdiction. If Thurber had brought the suit originally in the state court, against Crump and the corporation, it could have been removed; or he might have brought it originally against them in the Circuit Court. But, in the present decree, Crump's bill is dismissed on the merits, and of course he is adjudged to have no rights against the corporation, and costs are decreed against him in favor of the corporation.

This case falls distinctly within a series of rulings made by this court. Blake v. McKim, 103 U.S., 336 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 563]; Hyde v. Ruble, 104 Id., 407 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 823]; Winchester v. Loud, 108 Id., 130 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 677]; Shainwald v. Lewis, Id., 158 [Bk. 28, L. ed, 691]; Ayres v. Wiswall, 112 Id., 187 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 693]; Hancock v. Holbrook, Id., 229 [Bk. 28 L. ed. 714]; Thayer v. Life Association, Id., 717 [61]
Bk. 28, L. ed 864]; R. R. Co. v. Mills, 113 Id., 249 [Bk 28, L. ed. 949]; Sully v. Drennan, Id., 287 [Ba. 28, L. ed. 1007]; R. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 Id., 52 [ante, 63]; R. R. Co. v. Wilson, Id., 60 [ante, 66]; Putnam v. Ingraham, Id., 57; [ante, 65]; Pirie v. Tvedt [post, 331].

The decree of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the case is remanded to that court, with a direction to remand it to the State Court, for want of jurisdiction, with costs to Crump against Thurber, in the Circuit Court.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

ANDREW STEWART ET AL., Partners as STEWART BROTHERS & Co., Appts., [61]

v.

JAMES H. DUNHAM ET AL., Partners as DUNHAM, BUCKLEY & CO.; EDWIN BATES ET AL., Partners as EDWIN BATES & CO. ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 61-67.)

Removal of causes—introduction of new parties subsequent to removal—fraud—transfer to defraud creditors.

1. After a cause has been properly removed, the introduction of new parties as co-complainants cannot oust the jurisdiction of the court, already lawfully acquired.

2. Where a bill has been filed on behalf of the complainants and all other creditors who may come in, the court, in exercising jurisdiction between the parties, may incidentally decree in favor of all other creditors who come in under the bill.

3. An appeal from a decree adjudging separate sums to various appellees will be dismissed as to any appellee in whose favor the decree is for less than $5,000.

3. The conveyance by a debtor in failing circumstances, of his property, in trust, to secure certain of his creditors, though void, does not affect the validity of a subsequent sale to such creditors, made in good faith to pay an actual debt.

4. The sale by a debtor in failing circumstances, of his property to certain of his creditors sustained, the evidence of fraud being held insufficient by this court.

[No. 1240.]

Dismissed Dec. 8, 1884; Motion to rescind dismissal argued Jan. 29, 1885; Rescinded Feb. 2, 1885; Submitted Apr. 20, 1885. Decided May, 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Mississippi.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

On December 8, 1884, this appeal was dismissed, the appellants having failed to perfect their appeal by filing a bond or making a deposit to cover costs in this court. A motion to rescind the order of dismissal was granted February 2, 1885.

Mr. T. C. Catchings, for appellants.

Messrs. John F. Hanna and James M. Johnson, for appellees.

[62] Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellees, who composed the firms of Dunham, Buckley & Co., who were citizens of New York, and of Edwin Bates & Co., who were cititizens of New York and South Carolina, filed their bill in equity, on July 14, 1881, in the Chancery Court of Jefferson County, Mississippi, against John W. Broughton, and Andrew Stewart, Andrew D. Gwynne, and P. H. Haley, composing the firm of Stewart Bros. & Co., and others, all of whom were citizens either of Mississippi or of Louisiana.

On September 16, 1881, the complainants filed a petition for the removal of the cause from the state court to the Circuit Court of the United States for that district, on the ground of citizenship, the amount in controversy being in excess of five hundred dollars in value, and presented a bond in conformity with the provisions of law. This was denied, notwithstanding which a certified transcript of the proceedings in the cause was filed in the Circuit Court on November 3, 1881, and that court proceeded thereon to final decree.

The complainants in the bill were creditors severally of Broughton, and its object and prayer were to set aside a conveyance of a stock of merchandise, made by him to the defendants Stewart Bros. & Co., alleged to be fraudulent as against his creditors, and was filed on behalf of the complainants and all other creditors who might come in and share the costs of the litigation.

After the cause was removed into the Circuit Court, the bill was amended by permitting Sigmond Katz, Jacob Katz, Nathaniel Barnett, and Selvia Barnett, partners as Katz & Barnett, and John I. Adams and W. H. Renaud, composing the firm of John I. Adams & Co., creditors respectively of Broughton, to become co-complainants. The members of the firm of Katz & Barnett are described as "resident citizens of and doing business in the City of New Orleans, State of Louisiana, and in the City of New [63] York, State of New York." The citizenship of those who constitute the firm of John I. Adams & Co. does not appear.

On final hearing, on November 25, 1882, a decree was rendered in favor of the complainants; finding that the transfer and conveyance of his property by Broughton to Stewart Bros. & Co., described in the pleadings, was made with the intent to hinder, delay and defraud the complainants and other creditors of Broughton with the knowledge and connivance of Stewart Bros. & Co., and the same was thereby canceled, set aside, and declared to be null and void. The decree proceeds as follows: "It appears to the court that the complainants, at and before making of said pretended transfer and conveyance, were, and still are, creditors of the said John W. Broughton, and that the amount due each of them respectively, including interest to to this date, is as follows: Dunham, Buckley & Co., ten thousand two hundred and twenty-two $\frac{50}{100}$ dollars ($10,222.50); Edwin Bates & Co., four thousand three hundred and ninety-one $\frac{08}{100}$ dollars ($4,391.08), John I. Adams & Co., seven hundred and six $\frac{87}{100}$ dollars ($706.87); and Katz & Barnett, nine hundred and thirty $\frac{82}{100}$ dollars ($930.82). Total, sixteen thousand two hundred and fifty $\frac{77}{100}$ dollars ($16,250.77). It appears to the court that the defendant John W. Broughton is insolvent, and without property or means, and that the defendants Stewart Bros. & Co., had in their hands and possession, at the time of filing the bill of complaint in this cause, and still have, property, assets, and money, being the same fraudulently transferred and conveyed to them by the defendant John W. Broughton, as aforesaid, and the proceeds of the same, amounting to a sum largely in excess of the said sum of $16,250.77, due complainants as aforesaid. It is, therefore, ordered, adjudged and decreed, that the defendants John W. Broughton and Andrew Stewart, Andrew D. Gwynne, and P. H. Haley, composing the firm of Stewart Bros. & Co., do pay to the complainants the above-mentioned sums respectively due them, with interest thereon at the rate of six (6) per cent per annum from this date until paid, that is to say: To Dunham, Buckley & Co., ten thousand two hundred and twenty-two $\frac{50}{100}$ dollars ($10,222.50); to Edwin Bates & Co., four thousand three hundred and ninety-one $\frac{08}{100}$ dollars ($4,391.08); to Katz & Barnett, nine hundred and thirty $\frac{82}{100}$ dollars ($930.82); and to John I. Adams & Co., seven hundred and six $\frac{87}{100}$ dollars ($706.87); for which amounts and costs executions in favor of said creditors respectively may issue as at law." The appeal is from this decree.

The appellants assign as error, that the court proceeded to decree, after admitting Katz & Barnett and John I. Adams & Co. as co-complainants, alleging that, as the case then stood, it was without jurisdiction, as the controversy did not appear to be wholly between citizens of different States. This, of course, could have furnished no objection to the removal of the cause from the state court, because at that time these parties had not been admitted to the cause and their introduction afterwards as co-complainants did not oust the jurisdiction of the court, already lawfully acquired, as between the original parties. The right of the court to proceed to decree between the appellants and the new parties did not depend upon difference of citizenship; because, the bill having been filed by the original complainants on behalf of themselves and all other creditors choosing to come in and share the expenses of the litigation, the court, in exercising jurisdiction between the parties, could incidentally decree in favor of all other creditors coming in under the bill. Such a proceeding would be ancillary to the jurisdiction acquired between the original parties, and it would be merely matter of form whether the new parties should come in as co-complainants, or before a master, under a decree ordering a reference to prove the claims of all persons entitled to the benefit of the decree. If the latter course had been adopted no question of jurisdiction could have arisen. The adoption of the alternative is, in substance the same thing.

It is, however, objected by the appellees Edwin Bates & Co., Katz & Barnett, and John I. Adams & Co., that, as to them respectively, this court has no jurisdiction of the appeal, for the reason that the decrees in their favor are several, and that the amounts adjudged to be paid to them respectively do not exceed the sum or value of five thousand dollars.

On the authority of Seaver v. Bigelow, 5 Wall. 208 [72 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 595]; Schood v. [illegible], 106 U. S., 188 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 156]; [illegible] & T. Co. v. Waterman, 106 U. S., 265 [Bk. [illegible] L. ed. 115]; Adams v. Crittenden, 106 U. S., [illegible] Bk. 27, L. ed. 99]; Hawley v. Fairbanks, [illegible] U. S., 543 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 820]; and Nat. Bk. v. Shed, 113 U. S. 684 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1152] the motion to dismiss the appeal as to all the creditors, except Dunham, Buckley & Co., must be granted.

As to the remaining appellees, the cause must be disposed of on the merits. An outline of the transactions involved in the controversy is as follows: Broughton carried on business as a merchant in Rodney, Mississippi, and became indebted, by reason of advances made on account of cotton purchases, to the appellants, Stewart Bros. & Co., merchants in New Orleans in about the sum of $34,000. Being pressed for payment, on May 26, 1881, he gave his two promissory notes therefor, payable one in six, the other in eight months after date, with interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum; and, to secure the payment of the same, a written instrument of that date was executed, by which Broughton conveyed to C. J. Pintard all his stock of merchandise and assets and property, in trust, in case he should make default in the payment of the principal or interest of the notes, to sell the property conveyed, at public auction, for cash, to the highest bidder, at the request of the holder of the notes, on twenty days' notice. The instrument also contained the following provision: "It is understood and agreed between the parties hereto, that the said party of the first part shall have the right to carry on the business as heretofore, for the purpose of selling off the stock of goods and collecting in the notes and accounts due and to become due, and, in order to enable said party of the first part to carry on said business, the said parties of the third part hereby agree to advance to him the further sum of one thousand dollars, which last amount is to be understood and agreed to be included in and covered by this deed in trust, and to be due and payable six months after this date, the maturity of the first note." This paper, executed by all the parties, was recorded on May [illegible], 1881.

On June 13, 1881, having been advised that the conveyance was probably ineffectual as to other creditors, by reason of its form and contents, Broughton and Pintard, the latter, united in a conveyance of the same property unconditionally to Stewart Bros. & Co., in satisfaction of the debt represented by the notes, and the latter took possession of the property conveyed; and on the same day Broughton executed also a bill of sale, for the same property, upon the same consideration, to Stewart Bros. & Co.

It is contended by the appellees that these conveyances, the last as well as the first, are void as against creditors, per se, and void on their face, and such was the ground of the decree appealed from, as stated in the opinion of the court. To this we cannot accede. Assuming that the conveyance to Pintard, in trust, was of that character, according to the law of Mississippi, it does not follow that the subsequent sale and transfer, followed by delivery of possession, is tainted by the vice of the original transaction. The objection we are considering assumes that the whole transaction, from the beginning, was free from actual and intended fraud, and was meant to be a mode of securing and paying an actual debt, in good faith, without any design injurious to other creditors, beyond that implied in obtaining a preference, which is not forbidden by law. In this view, the admission that the conveyance to Pintard was illegal does not affect the subsequent sale, which, on the contrary, being free from objection, on account of its own nature and form, served to remedy the defects in the original security. It was quite competent for the parties to rescind and cancel the first conveyance, and unite in the execution of another, free from objection. This is all they did.

It is further urged, however, that the sale to Stewart Bros. & Co., however formally correct, and technically legal on its face, was made in pursuance of a design, participated in by both parties, actually to hinder, delay and defraud the creditors of Broughton. On this point we have examined and weighed the evidence, with attention and care, and are of opinion that it does not sufficiently establish the case of the appellees. It would not be profitable to rehearse the testimony, and point out the facts and circumstances relied on, on the one hand, to establish the fraud charged, and those, on the other, adduced to rebut the suspicions of dishonest and unlawful combination to defeat the claims of honest creditors. [67]
It is sufficient, we think, to say, that the proof falls short of that which the law requires to establish so grave a charge.

It follows that the decree in favor of James H. Dunham, William T. Buckley and Charles H. Webb, partners as Dunham, Buckley & Co., must be reversed and the cause remanded, with directions to dismiss the bill as to them; and it is so ordered. As to all the other appellees, the appeal is dismissed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JOHN S. PIRIE ET AL., Partners as CARSON, PIRIE, SCOTT & CO., Plffs. in Errr., [41]
v.
EVAN J. TVEDT ET AL., Partners as TVEDT BROTHERS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 41-45.)

Removal of causes—joint action in tort, not severable into separate parts.

1. In a suit for malicious prosecution (brought by citizens of one State against citizens of the same State and citizens of another State), there is no such separate controversy as entitles the citizens of the other State to remove the cause, even though they answered separately, from their co-defendants setting up a separate defense.
2. Where the cause of action is several as well as joint, the plaintiff may elect to sue each defendant separately, or all jointly, and the defendants are not permitted to object.
3. The fact that judgment may be rendered against a part of the defendants only, does not divide a joint action in tort into separate parts any more than it does a joint action on contract.

[No. 287.]

Submitted Apr. 24, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Gordon E. Cole, for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel appeared for the defendants in error.

[41] Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error brought under section 5 of the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, 18 Stat. at L., 470, for the review of an order of the Circuit Court remanding a cause which had been removed from a state court. The suit was brought by Tvedt Brothers, citizens of Minnesota, against Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., citizens of Illinois, and Owen J. Wood and Theodore S. Stiles, citizens of Minnesota, to recover damages for a malicious prosecution, it being averred in the complaint that "the said defendants, confederating together, and with a malicious and unlawful design and intent had and entertained by them, and each of them, to injure, oppress, and harass these plaintiffs and to break them up in business, wrongfully, ma-[42] liciously, unlawfully, and without any reason or provocation, or probable cause, caused a certain action to be commenced against these plaintiffs, in which said Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. were plaintiffs, for the pretended recovery of money, * * * and then and there wrongfully, unlawfully and maliciously, and with the aforesaid intent so had and entertained by each and all of said defendants wickedly and maliciously conspired together, and without probable cause, caused to be issued * * * a writ of attachment upon the stock of goods, wares and merchandise of these plaintiffs; * * * that, under said writ of attachment, and by direct instruction of the defendants, the sheriff of said county levied the same upon the stock of goods and closed up the store, and stopped and broke up the business of these plaintiffs." The defendants, Wood & Stiles, answered separately from their codefendants, denying all malice and conspiracy, and saying that they, as attorneys at law, and acting for and under the instructions of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., brought the action and sued out the attachment in good faith, and not otherwise. The other defendants also filed a separate answer, admitting that they caused the action to be brought and the attachment to be issued, and that the attachment had been vacated, though the action itself was still pending and undisposed of.

Upon these pleadings Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. filed a petition under the second clause of section 2 of the Act of 1875, for the removal of the cause to the Circuit Court of the United States, on the ground that as the action was in tort and therefore in its nature severable, there was in it "a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different States, to wit: between the plaintiffs and Pirie, Scott & M'Leish, * * * and that said controversy can be fully determined as between them."

After the case got into the Circuit Court on this petition, it was remanded because there was but one controversy in the suit, and that between the plaintiffs, citizens of Minnesota, on one side, and all the defendants, citizens of Minnesota and Illinois, on the other. This ruling is the only error assigned.

It has been decided at this term in R. R. Co. v. Ide [ante, 63], that in a suit on a contra brought by a citizen of one State against citizen of the same State and a citizen another State, there was no such separate co troversy as would entitle the citizen of the oth State to remove the cause, even though he a swered separately from his codefendant se ting up a separate defense, and the statut regulating the practice, pleadings and form and modes of proceeding in the State where th suit was brought, allowed judgments to b given in actions ex contra tu for one or mo plaintiffs and for one or more defendants. I that case it was said: "A defendant has no rig to say that an action shall be several which plaintiff elects to make joint. Smith v. Rine 2 Sumn., 358. A separate defense may defe a joint recovery, but it cannot deprive a plai tiff of his right to prosecute his own suit to final determination in his own way. The cau of action is the subject-matter of the contr versy, and that is for all the purposes of th suit, whatever the plaintiff declares it to be his pleadings. Here it is certain joint co tracts entered into by all the defendants f the transportation of property. On the one si of the controversy upon that cause of action the plaintiffs, and on the other all the defen ants."

We are unable to distinguish this case principle from that. There is here, accordi to the complaint, but a single cause of actio and that is the alleged malicious prosecution the plaintiffs by all the defendants acting concert. The cause of action is several as w as joint, and the plaintiffs might have sued ea defendant separately, or all jointly. It was f the plaintiffs to elect which course to pursu They did elect to proceed against all jointl and to this the defendants are not permitted object. The fact that a judgment in the a tion may be rendered against a part of the d fendants only, does not divide a joint action tort into separate parts any more than it do a joint action on contract.

The order remanding the case is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

Mr. Justice Woods and myself dissent fro the opinion and judgment in this case. A though the action is, in form, against all of t defendants jointly, it is practically, a separa one against each defendant; for it is conced that, by the laws of Minnesota, it would not wholly defeated if the plaintiffs failed to esta lish a cause of action against all of the defen ants. They would be entitled to judgme against the defendant or defendants agai whom a case was made. Had the suit be only against the defendants who are citize of Illinois, as it might have been, the right the latter to remove it into the Circuit Court the United States would not be questione But it seems, by the present decision, that th right of removal has been defeated by the of the plaintiffs in uniting with them as defe ants, citizens of Minnesota, against whom,

[illegible] it was not necessary to introduce any evidence whatever in order to entitle the plaintiffs to a judgment against the other defendants. As in most, if not in all the States the local statutes dispense with the verification of pleadings in actions of tort, this convenient [illegible] will be often employed. When, for instance, a citizen of New York has a cause of action, sounding in damages, against a citizen of New Jersey, who happens to go within the jurisdiction of the former State, the plaintiff can join a citizen of New York as a codefendant, charging them jointly with liability to him for the damages claimed. And when the citizen of New Jersey asks a removal of the suit to the federal court, he is met with the suggestion that it is for the plaintiff, in his discretion, to sue him separately, or jointly with others. Upon his application to remove the cause the state court may not institute a preliminary inquiry as to whether the plaintiff had, in fact, a cause of action against the defendant citizen of New York. It is not for that court, in advance, to determine the good faith of the plaintiff in making a citizen of New York a codefendant with the citizen of New Jersey. The removal statutes make no provision for such an inquiry, and the state court, by the decision just rendered, must look alone to the cause of action as set out in the petition or complaint. When, in the case supposed, the evidence is concluded, and it appears that there is, in fact, no cause of action against the defendant citizen of New York, it is too late for the removal to occur; for, it must be had, if at all, before the suit could be tried in the state court. It seems to us that where the plaintiff is a suit against several defendants in tort, is not required to prove a joint cause of action against all of them, but may have judgment as to those against whom he makes a case, there is, within the meaning of the Act of Congress, a controversy in the suit, which is wholly between the plaintiff and each defendant, and finally determinable as between them without the presence of the other defendants as parties in the cause. The suit, therefore, belongs to the class which, under the Act of [illegible] may be removed into the federal court. The decision in this case, it seems to us, restricts the right of removal, under the Act of [illegible], by citizens of States other than that in which the suit if brought, within much narrower limits than those established by previous legislation; and this, notwithstanding it was intended by that Act to enlarge the right of removal, especially in respect of controversies between citizens of different States.

Trans-copy. Test:

[illegible] H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] U. S., [illegible], [illegible], [illegible].

[illegible] HADDEN ET AL., Surviving Partners, Plfs. in Err.,

v.

[illegible] A. MERRITT, Collector of the PORT OF NEW YORK.

([illegible] C., Reporter's ed., 25-28.)

[illegible] of foreign coins—official estimate of—how [illegible]—correction of errors.

1. The value of foreign coins, as ascertained by the estimate of the director of the mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury, is conclusive upon custom-house officers and importers.

2. Alleged errors in the estimate cannot be shown in judicial proceedings to affect the rights of the government or individuals.

3. As the duty of ascertaining and declaring the value of such coins is an executive function, which requires skill and the exercise of judgment and discretion, errors can only be corrected by an appeal to the department itself.

4. Sections 2838 and 3564 R. S., construed. The case of Cramer v. Arthur, bk. 26, 259, affirmed.

[No. 269.]

Argued Apr. 23, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Mason W. Tyler, Henry E. Tremain and Wm. B. Coughtry, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. S. F. Phillips, Solicitor-Gen., for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action brought by plaintiffs in error against the Collector of the Port of New York, to recover an excess of duties, alleged to have been illegally exacted and paid under protest. A verdict was returned for the defendant under instructions to that effect by the court, and judgment rendered accordingly. To this ruling of the court exceptions were duly taken, and it is now assigned for error. [26]

The plaintiffs' case was this: In the year 1879 they imported from China several invoices of merchandise, subject to an ad valorem duty, the value of which was stated in the invoices in Mexican silver dollars, the currency of the country whence the goods were exported. In converting the value of the invoices, as expressed therein, from Mexican silver dollars into the value by which the actual ad valorem duty upon them was to be ascertained, the dutiable value was arrived at in each case by estimating the value of the Mexican dollar in accordance with the value of such coin as estimated by the director of the mint, and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury on the 1st day of January of the year during which the importations were made; and the value of the Mexican dollar so ascertained, estimated and proclaimed was $1.01\frac{5}{10}$, and duties were assessed upon the importations accordingly.

The plaintiff offered to prove that this valuation of the Mexican dollar, as estimated and proclaimed, was erroneous in this, to wit: that it was based on the value of the Mexican dollar as compared with the silver dollar of the United States, whereas it ought by law to have been estimated and proclaimed by relation to the value of the gold dollar of the United States, and that this would have diminished the dutiable value of the goods imported, by the difference between from $84\frac{8}{10}$ cents to $86\frac{7}{10}$ cents, and $101\frac{5}{10}$ cents, as the value of the Mexican dollar, varying, according to the dates of the several importations, with the commercial difference in value between gold and silver. The evidence offered on this point was rejected, and the ruling of the court, in its instruction to the jury to return a verdict for the defendant, was based on the proposition that, in assessing the duties collected on the value of the invoices, reduced from the Mexican silver dollars to the money of account of the United States, the collector and importer were concluded by the estimate of the director of the mint, proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and then in force.

[27]

In opposition to that, it is contended that such estimate is not conclusive, in a case where it can be shown that it is based on the value of the foreign silver coin computed in terms of the silver dollar, instead of the gold dollar, of the coinage of the United States, in violation, it is argued, of the statutory rule prescribed for making such estimate, which requires that the value of the foreign coin, so estimated, shall be expressed in the money of account of the United States, the standard unit of value of which is assumed to be the gold dollar and not the silver dollar.

Section 2838 R. S. requires all invoices of merchandise, subject to a duty ad valorem, to be made out in the currency of the place or country from whence the importation shall be made, and that they shall contain a true statement of the actual cost of such merchandise in such foreign currency or currencies, without any respect to the value of the coins of the United States, or of foreign coins, by law made current within the United States, in such foreign place or country.

Section 3564 R. S. is as follows: "The value of foreign coin, as expressed in the money of account of the United States, shall be that of the pure metal of such coin of standard value; and the values of the standard coins in circulation of the various nations of the world shall be estimated annually by the director of the mint and be proclaimed on the first day of January by the Secretary of the Treasury."

The value of foreign coins, as ascertained by the estimate of the director of the mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury, is conclusive upon custom-house officers and importers. No errors alleged to exist in the estimate, resulting from any cause, can be shown in a judicial proceeding to affect the rights of the government or individuals. There is no value, and can be none, in such coins, except as thus ascertained; and the duty of ascertaining and declaring their value, cast upon the Treasury Department, is the performance of an executive function requiring skill and the exercise of judgment and discretion, which precludes judicial inquiry into the correctness of the decision. If any error, in adopting a wrong standard, rule or mode of computation, or in any other way, is alleged to have been committed, there is but one method of correction; that is, to appeal to the department itself. To permit judicial inquiry in any case is to open a matter for repeated decision, which the statute evidently intended should be annually settled by public authority; and there is not, as is assumed in the argument of the plaintiff in error, any such positive and peremptory rule of valuation prescribed in the statute, as serves to limit the discretion of the Treasury Department in making its published estimate, or would enable a court to correct an alleged mistake or miscalculation. The whole subject is confided by the law exclusively to the jurisdiction of the executive officers charged with the duty; a their action cannot be otherwise questioned.

[28]

Such was the principle announced in the ca of Cramer v. Arthur, 102 U. S., 612 [Bk. 26, ed. 259]. It was there said, p. 616 [261]: "Th valuation, so long as it remained unchange was binding on the collector and on importe —just as binding as if it had been in a perm nent statute, like the statute of 1846, for e ample. Parties cannot be permitted to go b hind the proclamation, any more than th would have been permitted to go behind t statute, for the purpose of proving, by parol by financial quotations in gazettes, that its v uations are inaccurate. The government g at the truth as near as it can, and proclaims Importers and collectors must abide by the r as proclaimed. It would be a constant sou of confusion and uncertainty if every impor could on every invoice, raise the question the value of foreign moneys and coins. * * P. 619 [262]: If existing regulations are fou to be insufficient, if they lead to inaccurate sults, the only remedy is to apply to the Pr dent, through the Treasury Department, change the regulations."

There was no error in the ruling of the C cuit Court, and the judgment is affirmed.

True copy. Test:

J. H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U

JOHN S. MAYFIELD, Plf. in Err.,

v.

MARY E. RICHARDS ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 137-142.)

Limitation of actions—Act of Congress of J 11, 1864—application of, to proceeding State Courts—administration of estates.

1. The Act of Congress of June 11, 1864, con ing the limitation of actions, applies to cause proceedings in the courts of the States as well those in the courts of the United States.

2. Where the payees of certain notes were d ciled in New Orleans after the authority of United States was re-established, the executri the succession of the maker being domiciled w the confederate lines, an action on said not within the Act.

3. Stewart v. Kahn, Bk. 20, 176, affirmed.

[No. 2647.]

Submitted April 22, 1885. Decided May 4, 1

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the S of Louisiana.

The history and facts of the case appe the Statement by Mr. Justice Woods:

The facts shown by the record were as lows: On March 30, 1860, Walter O. Win the Parish of Rapides, in the State of Louisi made and delivered to the firm of Rotchf Brown & Co., of the City of New Orleans nine promissory notes, each for the payme their order of $5,000, four of which we become due and payable on Novembe 1860, and five on December 10, 1860. W died in 1861, leaving a last will, which afterwards duly proven, by which he mad with Mary E. Winn, his universal heir and legatee and executrix. As such she took possession of the estate. The nine notes payable to order of Rotchford, Brown & Co. were presented to Mrs. Winn, as executrix, for her acknowledgment thereof as a debt against the succession of Winn, and she indorsed on each of them such acknowledgment, with a promise to pay the same in due course of administration. These indorsements all bore date November 1, 1865. Mrs. Winn continued in the office of executrix until September 30, 1873, when, by the order of the District Court for the Parish of Rapides, she was "destituted"—that is to say, removed—"from said executorship of the estate of Winn," and J. M. Wells, was appointed dative testamentary executor of said succession.

NOTE.—Statute of Limitations—Suspension of ing war. See Hanger v. Abbott, 73 U. S. bk. 2 note.

On July 5, 1880, Wells, as such executor, filed a provisional account of his administration in the District Court for the Parish of Rapides, which had probate jurisdiction. In his account he recognized the nine notes above mentioned payable to the order for Rotchford, Brown & Co., which, in January, 1866, had been transferred by the payees to the appellant, John S. Mayfield, as valid claims against the succession, and proposed to apply the assets in his hands to their payment.

Mrs. Winn, under the name of Mary E. Richards, she having intermarried with A. Lane Richards, filed, with the authorization of her said husband, on January 11, 1881, her opposition to the allowance and payment of the notes, and stated her ground of opposition as follows: "The notes are prescribed and were prescribed at the date they were accepted by the executrix, the date of acceptance being written on the back of the notes long before they were accepted by the executrix, and accepted in error."

One John D. DuBose, a creditor of the succession, also opposed the recognition and payment of the notes, because "said nine notes were prescribed long before they were pretended to be acknowledged by the executrix, Mrs. Mary E. Winn, and the acknowledgment was made by her in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, in January or February, 1866, and not on the 1st day of November, 1865, as it appears."

There was no charge, and no attempt to prove that the antedating of the acknowledgment of the executrix had been fraudulently procured, and, if the notes were not prescribed at any time after January, 1866, as contended by Mayfield, there was no motive to antedate the acknowledgment, and nothing to be gained by it.

The contention that these notes were prescribed was based on Article 3540 of the Civil Code of Louisiana, which declares that "notes payable to order or bearer * * * are prescribed by five years' reckoning from the day when the payments were payable." Mayfield contended that the notes had been admitted as valid claims against the succession of Winn by the executrix, on November 1, 1865, as appears by her indorsement thereon, and, as such indorsement was made before the expiration of five years after the maturity of the notes, it was effectual to suspend prescription, and the notes were, therefore, not prescribed.

Upon the opposition of Mrs. Winn and DuBose the question whether the nine notes were prescribed was tried by the judge of the District Court in which the opposition was filed. He admitted evidence to show, and upon it decided, that the acknowledgment of Mrs. Winn, as executrix, indorsed upon the notes, and purporting to be dated November 1, 1865, was not in fact made on that day, but some time between the first and tenth days of January, 1866. As this was more than five years after the maturity of the notes, it was not competent for the executrix to acknowledge them, and they were apparently barred by the prescription of five years provided by the law of the State.

But the appellant, Mayfield, contended that the notes were saved from the prescription of five years, by (the Act of Congress of June 11, 1864, 13 Stat. at L., 123), entitled "An Act in Relation to the Limitations of Actions in certain cases," which provided that "whenever during the existence of the present rebellion any action, civil or criminal, shall accrue against any person who, by reason of resistance to the execution of the laws of the United States or the interruption of the ordinary course of judical proceedings, cannot be served with process, * * * the time during which such person shall so be beyond the reach of legal process shall not be deemed or taken as any part of the time limited by law for the commencement of such action."

To bring the notes in controversy within the terms of this statute, Mayfield offered to the District Court evidence tending to show that Rotchford, Brown & Co., the payees, were domiciled in the City of New Orleans, and were doing business there when the city was taken by the Federal forces in 1862, and that Shepherd Brown, one of the members of the firm, was in the city in 1864, and that Mayfield, the appellant, was also a resident of New Orleans.

He also introduced testimony tending to show that the United States had no jurisdiction over the Parish of Rapides during the war, except a military one, and that such military jurisdiction lasted for but a short time; that the Federal troops came to Alexandria, the county seat of Rapides Parish, about March 17, 1864, and remained in possession thereof until about May 15th, when they departed; that before leaving they burned the Town of Alexandria, including the court house, after which there was a state of disorganization; there was no court and there were no officers in the parish until after July 9, 1865; that Mrs. Winn, the executrix, had gone as a refugee to Texas, and no service could have been made on her from the time the court house was burned until she returned to Rapides Parish, in December, 1865. This testimony was uncontradicted. [140]

Upon this evidence the District Court decided that, conceding that the acknowledgment of Mrs. Winn as executrix was not indorsed on the nine notes until some day between the first and tenth of January, 1866, yet the prescription of the notes were suspended by the Act of Congress above recited for a period sufficient to save them from the bar of Article 3540 of the Code of Louisiana, and thereupon rendered judgment that the claim of Mayfield was a valid and legal debt due from the succession of Winn, and was properly placed in the provisional account as an ordinary claim.

Mrs. Winn and DuBose carried this judgment to the Supreme Court of Louisiana for review. That court, assuming that the facts which the evidence introduced in the District Court tended to prove were established, reversed the judgment of the district court on the ground that the Act of Congress on which Mayfield relied to suspend prescription applied only to causes and proceedings in the courts of the United States, and not to causes and proceedings in the courts of the States, and that the claim of Mayfield was therefore prescribed when Mrs. Winn, the executrix, undertook to acknowledge it in January, 1866.

The present writ of error, sued out by Mayfield brings the judgment of the Supreme Court of Louisiana under review.

Messrs. E. T. Merrick and R. M. Hunter, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Gus A. Breaux, for defendants in error.

[141] Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

It is well settled in Louisiana that when a claim against a succession has been formally acknowledged by the executor or administrator, no suit should be brought upon it, and no suit or other proceeding is necessary to prevent prescription as long as the property of the succession remains in the hands of the executor or administrator under administration. Renshaw v. Stafford, 30 La. Ann., 853; Maraist v. Guilbeau, 31 La. Ann., 713; Heirs v. Hornsby, 32 La. Ann., 337; Cloutier v. Lemée, 33 La. Ann., 905; Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S., 640 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 547]. If, therefore, the acknowledgment of Mrs. Winn, execurix, made in January, 1866, were made before the notes were prescribed, prescription has been suspended ever since, for the succession of Winn is still under administration. The notes were all barred in November and December, 1865, by the prescription of five years established by Article 3,540 of the Civil Code of Louisiana, unless prescription was suspended by the Act of Congress above recited. The case, therefore, turned in the Supreme Court of Louisiana upon the question whether the Act of Congress was applicable. That court decided that it was not, and denied to the appellant the right set up and claimed by him under that statute. If the decision of the Supreme Court of Louisiana was wrong upon this point, this court has jurisdiction to review and reverse its judgment. U. S. Revised Statutes, § 709.

The facts of the case, as shown by the record, bring it within the terms of the Act of Congress. The parish of Rapides was within the Confederate lines during the entire period of the civil war, except for a few weeks, when it was occupied by the Federal troops. The authority of the United States was re-established over the City of New Orleans on May 1, 1862. The payees of the notes were shown to have been domiciled in the city at that time, and as there is no evidence that they afterwards changed their domicil, the presumption is that it continued unchanged. Desmare v. U. S., 93 U. S., 605 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 959]. Mayfield is shown to have been a resident in New Orleans. It appear therefore, that the executrix of the successi of Winn was within the Confederate lines, a the payees and the endorsee of the notes with the Federal lines. Under these circumstanc they could not lawfully institute proceedin against the succession of Winn, in the pari of Rapides, to enforce the payment of the not for intercourse across the military lines w forbidden by law. Moreover, while the p scription of five years was running, the cou of the parish, which alone had jurisdiction the succession of Winn, were closed for m than a year, a period well described by L Coke: "So, when by invasion, insurrection, bellion, or such like, the peaceable course justice is disturbed and stopped, so as the cou of justice be, as it were, shut up et silent l inter arma, then it is said to be time of wa Co. Lit., 249 b.

The case, therefore, falls within the letter of the Act of Congress; and if that app to and governs cases in the courts of the Sta the judgment of the Supreme Court of Lou ana was erroneous.

The question thus raised was expressly cided by this court in the case of Stewart Kahn, 11 Wall., 493 [78 U. S., bk. 20, L. 176], where it was held that the Act applie cases in the courts of the States as well a the United States, and that thus construed Act was constitutional. We are satisfied the judgment of the court in that case, and unwilling to question or re-examine it. decision in Stewart v. Kahn was followed the Supreme Court of Louisiana in Aby v. ham, 28 La. Ann., 840.

These cases are conclusive of the present troversy, and, adhering to the ruling ma them, we are of opinion that the notes hel Mayfield were not prescribed, and that the ment of the Supreme Court of Louisiana sh therefore, be reversed, and the cause remand that court, with directions to enter judgment the claim of Mayfield, based on the nine no Walter O. Winn, is a legal and valid deb from his succession, and that it was pro placed in the provisional account of the testamentary executor as an ordinary claim; it is so ordered.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court.

JAMES S. PHILIPPI, Appt.,
v.
ANTONIO PHILIPPE ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 151-160.)

Statute of Limitations—application trusts—law of Alabama.

1. When a trust is repudiated by clear equivocal words and acts of the trustee, who the property as his own, and such repudiatio claim are brought to the notice of the bene

NOTE.—Limitation of actions in equity; tion of statute to trusts.

As to when lapse of time will bar actions in see Pratt v. Carroll, 12 U. S. (8 Cranch), 471, bk note; Thomas v. Brockenbrough, 23 U. S. (10 W 146, bk. 6,287, note; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 23 U Wheat.), 152, bk. 6, 287, note.

As a general rule, the Statute of Limitations run against express trusts. Prevost v. Gratz

in such a manner that he is called upon to assert his equitable rights, the general rule that the Statute of Limitations does not run against an express trust does not apply, and the statute begins to run from the time of such notice to the beneficary.

2. The general rule that, in the absence of a statute of limitations, if twenty years are allowed to elapse without the commencement of proceedings or the recognition or admission of the trust, a presumption of settlement arises, is sustained by the decisions of the Supreme Court of Alabama.

3. A promise to render an account of partnership and trust affairs and make a final settlement of the same, is not an acknowledgment that anything is due. A bill for such settlement, which contains no averment that anything is due the complainant, is insufficient.

[No. 268.]

Appeal Apr. 22, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Alabama.

The history and facts of the case appear in the Statement by Mr. Justice Woods:

The appellant was the plaintiff in the Circuit Court. The original bill was filed October 20, 1876. It was demurred to and the demurrer sustained. The plaintiff having obtained leave to amend, filed an amended bill, in which he stated his case substantially as follows:

The plaintiff is the son of Angelo M. Philippi, deceased. Some time previous to the year 1845 the said Angelo M. Philippi and Antonio Philippe, his brother, one of the defendants, were equal partners in carrying on in the City of Mobile, in the State of Alabama, a boarding-house and saloon, in which business they prospered. In 1845 Angelo decided to revisit his native country, the Island of Corsica. Before leaving Mobile he placed all his affairs, business, money and property in the keeping of his brother Antonio to manage for him, and the latter having accepted the trust, Angelo left the United States and went to Corsica. Antonio, after the departure of his brother, continued the partnership business for the joint benefit of both. He managed his brother's affairs and property and the partnership business with such skill and success that in May, 1847, he had in his possession the sum of $10,000 belonging to Angelo, upon which he agreed to pay interest. For the year ending November, 1847, the profits of the joint business were $8,000, and the joint income from their slaves for the same period was $4,500. For a time Antonio kept true accounts of these profits and incomes, fixing Angelo's share therein. He invested these accumulated gains of himself and his brother, Angelo, in real estate, taking, however, the titles in his own name.

In the year 1848 Antonio held, as the joint property of himself and Angelo, six houses and lots in the City of Mobile, valued at $26,000; subsequently to 1848 he bought a large amount of real estate, which he paid for out of the profit and incomes derived from the trust funds and from the slaves, and business jointly owned by himself and his brother.

During their long separation the relations of the brothers continued harmonious, and a correspondence was kept up between them.

By letters dated, respectively, May 5, 1847, and March 7, 1848, written in the Italian language, addressed by Antonio to Angelo, translations of which, marked Exhibits D and E, are attached to the bill, the former acknowledged the trust.

Angelo returned from Europe in December, 1856. Antonio did not deny the admissions made in the letters of May 5, 1847, and March 7, 1848, or repudiate the trusts therein acknowledged, but promised to render a true and just account of the partnership and trust affairs to Angelo, and to make a final settlement of the same; but he delayed doing so, from time to time, and never made said statement of account or final settlement. Subsequently, by papers marked Exhibits F and G, attached to the bill as parts thereof, Antonio expressly acknowledged the trust. [153]

Angelo being of foreign birth, and imperfectly acquainted with the English language, and being also a man of few associates, and those few foreigners, ignorant as he himself was, of the English language, never became fully informed of his rights and remedies under the laws of this country against his brother Antonio, and was averse to litigating with his brother, and repeatedly declared that the thought of a law suit with his brother was re-

---

L. (9 Wheat.), 481, bk. 5, 311, note; Boone v. Chiles, 35 U. S. (10 Pet.), 177, bk. 9, 398; Oliver v. Piatt, 44 U. S. (3 How.), 333, bk. 11, 623; Zeller v. Eckert, 45 U. S. (4 How.), 289, bk. 11, 979; Seymour v. Freer, 75 U. S., 22 wal. 8, 248; Antice v. Brown, 6 Paige, 448; Kimball v. Jones, 17 Vt., 430; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. 90; Murray v. Coster, 20 Johns., 576; Glass v. Hulbert, 102 Pa. St., 290; McCandless' Estate, 61 Pa. St., 436; Farmer v. Leiman, 52 Md., 710; Manion v. Titsworth, 9 B. Mon., 592; Farnam v. Brooks, 9 Pick., 212; Sparrow v. Heard, 31 Miss., 426; Fisk v. Wilson, 3 Sc. Ga., 68; Norton v. Ladd, 22 Conn., 203; Simms v. Jones, 71 Ga., 196; Wilmarding v. McKesson, 28 Cal., 632; People v. White, 38 Hun, 239; Neilly v. Duffy, 25 Hun, 603; Mathes v. Bennett, 21 N. H., 54; Pickston v. Brewster, 14 Ala., 315; Albretch v. Sussmann, 2 W. & S., 100; Carpenter v. Cushman, 105 Mass., 92; Woolhouse v. Woodhouse, L. R. 8 Eq., 514; Smith v. Garrick, L. R. 5 Ch. App., 233; Chalmer v. Bradley, 1 J. & W., 51; Shields v. Atkins, 3 Atk., 234; Hall v. Arthur, 26 Beav., 210; Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves., 97; Beaumont v. Boultbee, 5 Ves., 485. The statutes not apply where the trust is repudiated by clear and unequivocal words and acts of the trustee who claims the trust estate as his own, and such repudiation and claim are brought to the knowledge of the cestui que trust in such a manner that he is called upon to assert his equitable rights. In addition to the above cases of Philippi v. Philippe and authorities cited in the opinion, see Halsey v. Tate, 52 Pa. St., 311; Neel v. McElhenney, 69 Pa. St., 300; Baker v. Whiting, 3 Sumn., 486; Hunter v. Hubbard, 26 Tex., 537; Hubbell v. Medbury, 53 N. Y., 98; Mabie v. Bailey, 16 Week. Dig., 557; Davis v. Coburn, 128 Mass., 377.

To the effect that twenty years will bar an action under such circumstances, see the authorities last above cited.

There must be no doubt of the adverse holding or that knowledge of it was brought home to the cestui que trust. In addition to the authorities last above cited, see Zeller v. Eckert, 45 U. S. (4 How.), 289, bk. 11, 979; Cunningham v. McKindley, 22 Ind., 149; Lewis v. Castleman, 27 Tex., 407; Scott v. Haddock, 11 Ga., 258; Moffatt v. Buchanan, 11 Humph., 369; Lister v. Pickford, 34 L. J. Ch., 582; Whitehead v. Lord, 11 Eng. L. & Eq., 587.

The statute runs against constructive trusts. Prevost v. Gratz, 19 U. S. (6 Wheat.), 481, bk. 5, 311; McClane v. Shepherd, 21 N. J. Eq., 76; Howell v. Howell, 15 Wis., 55; Strimpfler v. Roberts, 18 Pa. St., 300; Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md., 710; Ashhurst's Appeal, 60 Pa. St., 290; Portlock v. Gardner, 1 Hare, 594; Atty-Gen. v. Fishmongers' Co., 5 Mylne & C., 16. See also Board of Supervisors v. Herrington, 50 Ill., 232; German-Am. Sem. v. Kiefer, 43 Mich., 105.

See, generally, Perry, Trusts, §§ 863-867, and authorities cited; Story, Eq. Jur., §§ 1520a-1520c.

pulsive to him, and chose rather to hope that his brother would ultimately fulfill his promise to account to him and render to him what was his due.

Upon his return from Europe in December, 1856, Angelo was possessed of but scanty immediate means, whilst the defendant, Antonio, had at his disposal much wealth. Angelo remained in Mobile after his said return until his death, which occurred May 1, 1874, and was in a condition of poverty, and at times almost of distress, and died leaving his family in want.

The translation of the letter of May 5, 1847, (Exhibit D,) written by Antonio to Angelo, contained the following passage: "2. Further, the certificate made by the hand of a notary as (that) I hold $10,000 of thine in my hands, which I pay thee interest." This is the only part of the letter pertinent to the case. The translation of the letter of March 7, 1848 (Exhibit E), contains the following passage, which is the only one referring to the present controversy:

"Now let us speak a little of our affairs. I will tell thee that I have arranged the accounts the first of November, on which the profit of the affairs which we hold together are $8,000; $4,000 I have marked them for thee to thy credit, which I wish that thou make me know what I must do with it. If thou wishest that I send them to thee, or wishest that I should do business with them for thy account. Since thou hast left I have made purchases; the house in which I am, $18,000. I have had a very beautiful one built on Dauphin street, cost $7,000; bought one in the same street, which thou knowest, where Colobo keeps his barroom, cost $6,000, thus counts 6 houses which we hold. The negroes give me of interest the sum of $4,500 a year without our trade. Thus, dear brother, [154] thou knowest well what is mine has been and always will be thine, and thou I am persuaded thy sentiments are the same. For this I wish to tell thee thou hast no need that the interest should keep thee melancholy."

Exhibit F, appended to the bill, is a copy of a petition filed by Antonio, in a suit brought against him in the Chancery Court of Mobile County by the administrator and heirs of Angelo, to enforce the same trust set up in this case. Antonio in this petition, which was under oath, after denying that he was indebted to his brother Angelo at the time of his death, in any amount whatever, stated that the bill filed against him required him to admit or deny the making of a writing under his hand acknowledging the trust set up in the bill; and as the writing was alleged to have been made more than thirty years before, he could not answer the averment of his having executed a writing of the effect charged without seeing it and prayed that the plaintiffs in that case might be required to submit the same to his inspection.

Exhibit F, attached to the amended bill, was an affidavit made and filed in the present cause by Antonio, in which he stated that it was wholly untrue that he was in any manner in indebted to the heirs of Angelo, as charged in the bill; that Angelo returned from Europe to Mobile in the year 1853, a fact not mentioned in the bill, and that while so in Mobile, and before he left again, a full settlement was made between him and the affiant of all matters of account, and that in such settlement a balance over $900 was found to be due the affiant from Angelo, which he had never paid. The affidavit further stated that about the year 187 Angelo had a claim upon an insurance compan for property destroyed by fire, which became subject of litigation; that, being destitute means, Angelo applied to affiant to lend hi money to support his family until he could recover the insurance money, and affiant le him $800 on his agreement to repay the loa out of the insurance money when collected that Angelo compromised his demand agains the insurance company for $3,000, and h creditors set up their claims against the fun in the chancery court, and that in that pr ceeding Angelo filed the following affidavit:

"That he is entirely destitute of property, e cept the money and proceeds coming to hi from the said policy of insurance. That it co stituted all the property he had in the worl except a few articles of household furnitu and wearing apparel for his family, which h is advised by law is exempt from execution an levy. And this affiant," Angelo, "now show to the court that he is advised by counsel th he is entitled to $1,000 as exempt from attac ment, levy or garnishment, and he claims th amount shall be left to him unaffected by cre itors or any of their proceedings in this cause, etc.

The affidavit of Antonio (Exhibit F) furth stated that he received out of said insuran money, on his claim for the money lent to Ang lo, the sum of $829.27, and the other credito got a like pro rata share out of the same fun

Antonio Philippe, Angela F. Philippi, i dividually and as administratrix of the esta of Angelo M. Philippi, and the brothers an sisters of the plaintiff, children and heirs Angelo M. Philippi, were made defendants the bill. The prayer was for a settlement the partnership, and an account of its propert profits and gains, and for a settlement of t trust, and that Antonio Philippe might be d creed to pay over to Angela F. Philippi, th administratrix, the one half of all the gains an profits of the partnership, with interest, and deliver to the plaintiff and to the defendant heirs at law of Angelo M. Philippi, all the re estate purchased by him in his own name, wi the trust funds belonging to Angelo, or wit his share of the profits of the partnership, an for a partition between Antonio Philippe an the heirs of Angelo M. Philippi of all lan held by the former in his own name, purchas with the joint funds of himself and Angelo M Philippi, and for other relief.

The defendant, Antonio Philippe, demurre to the bill, and for grounds of demurrer, b sides others, alleged that the cause of actio set out in the bill was stale and barred by t Statute of Limitations of Alabama, and th the plaintiff, being merely one of the heirs law of said Angelo M. Philippi, was not en tled to the relief prayed in the bill. The Ci cuit Court sustained the demurrer and di missed the bill, and the plaintiff appealed.

Messrs. Frederick C. Bromberg, Luth R. Smith and W. Hallett Phillips, for app lant:

The trusts charged in the bill were created before January 1?, 1853, the date when the Code went into effect in Alabama.

Power v. Bice, 28 Ala., 431.

Parols to said date trusts in lands could be proved by parol in Alabama.

Pickens v. Buckler, 62 Ala., 579.

Besides, it was unnecessary to set out the writings evidencing a trust. They are evidence.

Bishop v. Bishop, 128 Ala., 475; 1 Perry, Trusts (8 ed., sec. 84.

The letters written by the appellee are sufficient evidences of trusts charged in the bill.

1 Perry, Trusts (3 ed.), sec. 82; Browne, Stat. of Frauds (3 ed.), secs. 98, 99; 4 Kent, Com. (11 ed. 305, 1 Washb. R. P. (3 ed.), 468; Barrel v. Joy, 16 Mass., 221.

Limitations are purely creatures of statute.

Ott v. Thompson, 98 U., 489 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 95.)

There is no statute, and there never has been in Alabama a Statute of Limitations applicable to an express trust.

Grumlow v. Grumlow, 62 Ala., 330; Coyle v. Wilson, 57 Ala., 108.

Such trust can only be barred by the open and notorious holding of the trustee, adversely to the cestui que trust, long enough to raise the presumption of settlement.

1 Perry, Trusts (3 ed.), secs. 863, 866, 871; Lewis v. Bowman's Ex., 18 Wall., 509 (85 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 906); Alexander v. McMurry, 1 Wall., 189; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 4 Myl. & Cr., 32.

If he has been running adversely to Angelo, it could not have commenced to do so earlier than December, 1856. From December, 1856, to October 20, 1879, the date of filing of the bill, the period of the war must be deducted, from April 19, 1861, to April 2, 1866:

Hodges v. Abbott, 6 Wall., 582 (73 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 909); Semmes v. Hartford Ins. 2 Wall., 158 (50 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 490); Hornung v. Charleston, 96 U. S., 432 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 700); Williams v. Bruffy, 96 U. S., 176 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 716); Ross v. Jones, 22 Wall., 576 (89 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 733); Brown v. Allen, 25 Wall., 177 (82 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 9 The Protector, 12 Wall., 700 (79 U.S., bk. 20, L. ed. 469); S. C. 9 Wall., 687 (76U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. 822); Bird v. Louisiana State Bk., 98 U. S. (Bk. 25, L. ed. 818).

Twenty years are required in Alabama to raise the bar of a presumption of a settlement of a implied trust.

Ingram v. Wilkins, 57 Ala., 108; Harrison v. Sterne, 16 Ala., 539; McArthur v. Carrie, 82 Ala., 2.

And moreover, in that State, courts of equity follow the Statute of Limitations at law.

Ryan v. Barker, 61 Ala., 530; Bizzell v. Nix, 61 Ala., 326.

And courts of equity generally do not follow the law even as to limitations, when manifest wrong and injustice would be wrought by so doing.

Ayer v. R. R. Co., 17 Fed. Rep., 873.

Nor do federal courts follow the state courts in matters of limitation in equity.

Bowman v. Campbell, 3 Wheat., 212; Payne v. Hook, 7 Wall., 429 (74 U. S., bk. 19, L. ed. Hawkins v. Rice, 1 McCrary, 162.

An account will be opened for fraud after a settlement, even after a lapse of twenty-three years."

1 Dan. Ch. Pr. (4 Am. ed.), 667; Michoud v. Girod, 4 How., 561; Marks v. Pell, 1 Johns. Ch., 594.

Messrs. John A. Campbell and H. Pillans, for appellees:

The causes of demurrer assigned are the Statutes of Limitations of the State of Alabama. By the Code of Alabama the statutes are the same in chancery as at law, and actions for accounts and bills for account are subject to the same limitation.

Code of Alabama, secs. 3224, 3274, 3758; Nettles v. Nettles, 67 Ala., 599; Goodwyn v. Baldwin, 59 Ala., 127; Askew v. Hooper, 28 Ala., 636; Philippi v. Philippi, 61 Ala., 41; Wagner v. Baird, 7 How., 234; 2 Story, Eq., secs. 1884, 1520; Noyes v. Crawley, L. R. 10 Ch. D., 31; Caudrey v. Gilliam, 60 Mo., 86.

The plaintiff is bound by the lapse of time * * * laches * * * the absence of valid evidence of title or of a trust.

Philippi v. Philippi, supra.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court: [156]

We think that, upon the face of the amended bill, it is apparent that the plaintiff is not entitled to relief.

It appears from Exhibit G that Antonio Philippe contended that in the year 1853 he made a full settlement with Angelo, his brother, and that in such settlement there was a balance due to him from Angelo of over $900, which the latter had never paid. There is no averment in the bill that after 1853 there was anything due to Angelo, from Antonio Philippe on account of the trust property or partnership business. It is true the bill alleges that in 1856, when Angelo returned to Mobile from Corsica, Antonio promised to render an account of the partnership and trust affairs, and make a final settlement of the same, but this falls short of an acknowledgment that there was anything due to Angelo, either on account of the trust or partnership property. The bill is bare of any averment that on a settlement of the trust and the partnership there would have been anything due to Angelo. The complaint of the bill is simply that, upon the return of Angelo M. Philippi to Mobile in 1856, Antonio promised to render an account and make a final settlement of their joint affairs, but had never done so.

But aside from this defect in the bill, we think it sufficiently appears on its face that, if any ground for relief is therein set forth, it is stale and prescribed by lapse of time, and therefore not entitled to the favor of a court of equity.

Conceding what is contended for by the counsel for plaintiff that the Statute of Limitations does not run against an express trust, it must be borne in mind that this rule is subject to the qualification that when the trust is repudiated by clear and unequivocal words and acts [157] of the trustee who claims to hold the trust property as his own, and such repudiation and claim are brought to the notice of the beneficiary in such manner that he is called upon to assert his equitable rights, the Statute of Limitations will begin to run from the time such repudiation and claim came to the knowledge of the beneficiary. Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat., 481; Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How., 333; Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall., 87 [69 U.S., bk. 17, L. ed. 836]; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch., 90; Bright v. Legerton, 2 De G. F. & J., 606; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 4 M. & Cr., 52; Merriam v. Hassam, 14 Allen, 522; Atty-Gen. v. Federal Street Meeting House, 3 Gray, 1; Williams v. First Presby. Soc., 1 Ohio St., 478; Turner v. Smith, 11 Tex., 620.

The rule applicable to cases of this kind has been declared by the Supreme Court of Alabama in the case of Nettles v. Nettles, 57 Ala., 599, to be as follows: "It is true, as a general rule, that when the relation of trustee and cestui que trust is uniformly admitted to exist, and there is no assertion of adverse claim or ownership by the trustee, lapse of time can constitute no bar to relief. But when the trust relation is repudiated, or time and long acquiescence have obscured the nature and character of the trust, or the acts of the parties or other circumstances give rise to presumptions unfavorable to its continuance, in all such cases a court of equity will refuse relief on the ground of lapse of time, and its inability to do complete justice." See also, Goodwyn v. Baldwin, 59 Ala., 127; Philippi v. Philippi, 61 Ala., 41; Maury v. Mason, 8 Port., 211; Landsdale v. Smith, 106 U. S., 391 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 219].

It is plain upon the face of the bill that Antonio Philippe, from and even prior to the year 1856, claimed as his own all the property which the bill alleged had been originally bought with trust or partnership funds, and that the knowledge of this claim was brought home to Angelo M. Philippi. When the latter returned to Mobile in 1856 he found Antonio Philippe in the possession and enjoyment, and holding by title in his own name, all the property charged to be trust and partnership property. And, although, [158] according to the averments of the bill, he promised to render an account of the parnership and trust affairs and make a final settlement thereof, he never did so; but from the year 1856, down to the death of Angelo M. Philippi, a period of eighteen years, and down to the commencement of this suit, a period of over twenty-three years, he maintained his possession and used and enjoyed as his own the property and its issues and profits. During all the period between 1856 and his death, Angelo M. Philippi lived in the same city with Antonio Philippe, in poverty, and some of the time in distress for want of means; but, so far as appears by the averments of the bill, the latter never paid him any part of the proceeds of the large property which the bill avers he was holding in trust. There could be no clearer line of conduct on the part of Antonio Philippe to show his repudiation of the alleged trust and his claim of title to the alleged trust property; and all was of necessity known by Angelo.

This claim of title was acquiesced in by Angelo, for, notwithstanding his poverty and distress for want of means, so far as appears by the bill, he never after the year 1856 requested of Antonio a settlement of the trust or demanded from him any part of the trust or partnership property, or the proceeds of either, but applied for and accepted money from him as a loan, and repaid it as far as his means would allow.

It is not averred that he was ignorant of any of the facts on which his rights rested, or that they were fraudulently concealed from him but merely that he was not fully informed of his rights and remedies under the law, and the bill plainly intimates that he declined to sue his brother, not because he was not informed of the facts of his case, but because a suit with a near a relative was repulsive to him and because he trusted in his brother to do him justice.

It appears from the bill that the present suit was not brought for more than twenty-three years after the claim of title to the alleged trust and partnership property was thus set up by the acts of Antonio, and after an acquiescence therein of Angelo during the residue of his life, a period of eighteen years.

The longest period prescribed by the law of Alabama within which actions may be brought is twenty years. Code of Alabama of 187[illegible] sections 3223 to 3231, inclusive. And by the provision of section 3758, the same limitation apply to suits commenced by bill in equity.

It is well settled by the decisions of the Supreme Court of Alabama, that, even in the absence of a statute of limitations, if twenty years are allowed to elapse from the time which proceedings could have been instituted for the settlement of a trust without the commencement of such proceedings, and there has been no recognition or admission within the period of the trust as continuing and undischarged, a presumption of settlement would arise operating as a positive bar. Rhodes v. Turner, 21 Ala., 210; Blackwell v. Blackwell, 33 Ala., 57; Worley v. High, 40 Ala., 171; Rolland v. Morton, 41 Ala., 344; Harrison v. Hallin, 54 Ala., 552; Greenlees v. Greenlees, 62 Ala., 330; McCarty v. McCarty, 74 Ala., 546.

The same general rule has been laid down by this and other courts as the settled law of equity jurisprudence. Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat., 152; Bowman v. Wathen, 1 How., 189; Wagner v. Baird, 7 How., 234; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch., 90; Hovenden v. Lord Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef., 636; Marquis Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & Walk., 1[illegible] These authorities are pertinent and conclusive of the present case.

We have been referred by counsel for appellant to section 2 of ordinance No. 5, adopted on September 27, 1865, by the Alabama Constitutional Convention, then assembled, which provided that, "in computing the time necessary to create the bar of the Statutes of Limitation and non-claim, the time elapsing between the 11th of January, 1861, and the passage of this ordinance shall not be estimated"; and it is insisted that, after deducting the period mentioned, the defense of the staleness of the plaintiff's claim is not sustained. The authorities already cited are an answer to this contention. But it has been expressly held by the Supreme Court of Alabama that the time during which the Statutes of Limitation were suspended by the ordinance above mentioned is not to be deducted from the period of twenty years, the lapse of which raises the presumption of payment and satisfaction, and creates a positive bar, unless within that period there has been some recognition of the liability which is

[illegible] to enforce. Harrison v. Heflin, McCarty v. McCarty, ubi supra. No such recognition is [illegible]

The plaintiff's case appears, therefore, upon the face of his bill, to be stale and unworthy the [illegible] of a court of equity.

Decree affirmed.

[illegible] Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

E. S. WHEELER & CO., Plffs. in Errr.

v.

NEW BRUNSWICK AND CANADA RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 29-40.)

Contracts—construction of—how annulled or set aside—option as to quantity.

[illegible] or modify a contract, fairly made, [illegible] the consent of both parties; the same meeting of minds that was necessary to make it.

[illegible] in an action upon a contract for the sale of a [illegible] quantity of old rails by a railroad company, [illegible] upon a review of the evidence, that a contract [illegible] between the parties; that it had not been [illegible] or set aside; that the company was not [illegible] from setting it up; and that it had the [illegible] to insist upon its own construction and refer [illegible] performance to the courts if necessary.

[illegible] agreement to accept from two to six hundred tons, is an agreement to accept any number [illegible] the expressed limits, the option being with [illegible]

[No. 279.]

[illegible] Apr. 16, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

[illegible] ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut.

[illegible] history and facts of the case fully appear in the opinion of the court.

[illegible] E. J. Phelps, J. K. Beach and J. [illegible], for plaintiffs in error.

[illegible] was an actual misunderstanding between the plaintiffs in error and the agent of [illegible] in error at the time the written [illegible] was made, in reference to the kind [illegible] intended by its language, the one understanding the word to mean gross tons, and [illegible] understanding it to mean net tons, [illegible] contract resulted.

[illegible] Co v. Carrington, 3 Conn., 357; R. R. v. Joslin, 34 Conn., 516; Eliason v. Henshaw, 4 Wheat., 225; Usley v. Donaldson, 94 U. S. (Bk. 24, L. ed. 56); Pollock, Cont. 418.

[illegible] statements in the vote and in the letter [illegible] defendant in error are to be taken as [illegible] and as intended to deceive the plaintiffs [illegible] as the Circuit Court has found them [illegible] been, then the defendant in error is estopped from denying their truth, after they have been acted on by the plaintiffs in error to [illegible] instrument. One is estopped from setting [illegible] a contract that can only be established by [illegible] of the untruth and fraudulent purpose of [illegible]

[illegible] v. Ely, 25 Conn., 259; Winton v. [illegible] Conn., 20; Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. (Bk. 25, L. ed. 618); Baker v. Humphrey, [illegible] U. S. 494 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 1065).

[illegible] of the plaintiffs in error fairly [illegible] for a reply. And failing to receive it [illegible] and a right to understand, as they did, [illegible] agreement was reached.

Louisiana v. Mayor of N. O., 109 U. S., 288 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 937).

Messrs. C. R. Ingersoll and John W. Alling, for defendant in error:

"It is notorious that the transaction of the ordinary business of railways, banks and similar corporations in this country, is without any formal meetings or votes of the board of directors.

Hence there follows a necessity of giving effect to the acts of such corporations, according to the mode in which they choose to allow them to be transacted."

Bk. of Middlebury v. R. R. Co., 30 Vt., 159; R. Co. v. Bastian, 15 Md., 494; Angell, Corp., §§ 281-284-291; Pierce, Railroads, 373 (1st ed.); Martin v. Webb, 110 U. S., 7 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 49); Mining Co. v. Bank, 104 U. S., 192 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 707).

The act of Murchie, in making "an absolute and final unconditional sale," shows that he regarded himself, then, as having power to bind the company.

Melledge v. Iron Co., 5 Cush., 179.

A mere misunderstanding, as to the construction of the terms of the contract, the same being fairly made, and the misunderstanding being unknown at the time, is no sufficient reason for annulling the contract.

Miller v. Lord, 11 Pick., 11.

The statutory definition of the "ton" is conclusive, and all the parol evidence to show a different meaning was inadmissible.

Evans v. Myers, 25 Pa. St., 114; Weaver v. Fegely, 29 Pa. St., 27; 2 Taylor, Ev., § 1064.

A treaty and negotiation for a variation of an agreement will not amount to a waiver of it, unless the circumstances show an intention of the party that there should be an absolute abandonment and dissolution of the contract.

Murray v. Harway, 56 N. Y., 347; Schuchardt v. Allens, 1 Wall., 359 (68 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 642); Allcott v. Mill Co., 9 Cush., 17; Ulley v. Donaldson, 95 U. S., 29 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 54); Holton v. McPike, 27 Kan., 286; Robinson v. Page, 3 Russell, 114.

An act by one party to a contract, which is to be regarded as an act of repudiation, must be of a clear and positive character. It must carry with it the distinct idea that the party will not perform the contract on his part.

Hochster v. De La Tour, 2 E. & B., 689; Smoot's Case, 15 Wall., 36 (82 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 107); Avery v. Bowden, 5 E. & B., 714; Reid v. Hoskins, 5 E. & B., 729; Barrick v. Buba, 2 C. B. (N. S.), 563; Price v. Dyer, 17 Ves., 356; Joyce v. Swann, 17 C. B. (N. S.), 84.

And this intention to repudiate is a question of evidence and not of law.

Mersey Steel & Iron Co v. Naylor, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div., 648; Freeth v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P., 208.

[30]

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

The case was submitted to the court without a jury, and the question to be decided here is, whether on the finding of facts the judgment for plaintiff below is right.

The action was brought by the Railroad Company on the following agreement:

"New Haven, Jan'y 31, 1880.

James Murchie, Esq.,

V. Pres't N. Brunswick & Canada R. R.

[illegible]

"[illegible]

E. S. Wheeler & Co."

"New Haven, [illegible]

E. S. Wheeler & Co., New Haven.

We [illegible] your letter of the date and will [illegible] as [illegible]

[illegible]

New Brunswick & Canada R. R. Co.

James Murchie, V. Pres't."

There was a tender of the rails by the railroad company and a refusal to receive or pay for them by Wheeler & Co.

The court finds as a matter of fact that the contract was a valid contract and that Murchie had authority to make it in behalf of the company. The authority in the case grows out of the following correspondence [illegible] the making of the contract by the execution and delivery of the foregoing papers:

"St. Stephen, Feb. 11th, 1880.

Mess. E. S. Wheeler & Co., New Haven.

Dear Sirs: I herewith enclose a copy of resolution passed at our meeting of directors yesterday.

[31] This confirmed the sale 'made by me to you' by the company, which was done on my arrival home.

The car wheels and chains that we had on hand were sold before I came home. We will have a large quantity by the time we ship our rails.

Please acknowledge the above.

Yours truly,

James Murchie.

New Brunswick & Canada Railroad Company.

Minute of a resolution passed at a directors' meeting February 16, 1880.

Resolved, That the following sale of old rails, made by Mr. James Murchie to Messrs. E. S. Wheeler & Co., New Haven, Conn., be confirmed: Sold Messrs. E. S. Wheeler & Co. one thousand tons of old rails, for delivery in New York or New Haven, at their option, before August the 1st next, at thirty dollars ($30) per per ton of 2,000 lbs., the duty to be paid by Wheeler & Co., and also two hundred to six hundred tons, for delivery in New York or New Haven between August 1st and October 1st, at twenty-eight ($28) per ton of 2,000 lbs., the duty to be paid by Wheeler & Co. In each case cash against invoice bill of lading. Insurance policy in satisfactory company.

True copy: F. H. Todd, Pres."

"New Haven, Feb. 28, 1880.

James Murchie, Esq., Vice-Pres't

New Brunswick & Canada R. R. Co.

St. Stephens, Canada.

Dear Sir: We received duly your favor of the 17th inst., enclosing what purports to be a certified copy of a resolution adopted by the directors of the N. B. & C. R. R. Co., in reference to the sale of old rails, made by you in behalf of that company to us on the 31st ult. We assume that this resolution was passed merely as a matter of form, and [illegible] has been sent to us for our information [illegible] as no mention was made at the time of the negotiations that you acted subject to any approval by your company. We understood then, and understand now, that the sale made at that time on behalf of your company was an absolute and final, unconditional sale. We do not understand, further, that the resolution was forwarded to us with the view of in any way modifying that sale in any of its terms.

Furthermore, we understood at the time, and now understand, that the number of pounds in each ton of this contract, there being no contrary specification when the contract was made, was not 2,000 but 2,240. Old rails, like other scrap and like pig iron, are bought and sold by the gross ton, not only in this market but in every foreign market. The custom of the trade fixing 2,240 as the standard number of pounds in a ton of old rails is universal, and can be excluded from operating on contracts only by distinct conditions fixing some other quantity. No such conditions were mentioned in the contract of your company with us, and we look, therefore, for the delivery of the rails within the dates named in the contract of your company, and in 'gross' not 'net' tons. We make no doubt but that your understanding of that contract is in accord with our, and that in so far as this resolution fixes a different number of pounds for each ton, that it so fixes them by an oversight on the part of the directors. We hope to hear from you at your early convenience.

Very truly yours,

E. S. Wheeler."

No answer was made to this letter, nor was any further correspondence had until June 14th, when the railroad company notified Wheeler & Co. by letter that they had the 1,000 tons of old rails ready for delivery and added—

"In your letter to James Murchie, as vice-president of our company, of February 28 last, you construe the contract as meaning the ton of rails specified in that contract 2,240 lbs., or the gross ton; now, without waiving any of our rights under that contract, but to avoid dispute, we tender you the delivery of the thousand tons, at gross weight of 2,240 lbs. to the ton, and ask your determination whether the delivery shall be made at New Haven or New York.

New Brunswick & Canada Railroad Co.

By F. A. Pike,

Special Agent."

To which reply was made by the plaintiff in error as follows:

"New Haven, June 15th, 1880.

New Brunswick & Canada Railroad Co.

Gentlemen: Your letter of yesterday, advising us that you are ready to deliver to us 1,000 tons of old rails, and asking us to designate a port of delivery, is received.

As we do not recognize the existence of any such contract of sale as your letter contem-

[illegible], we have no instructions to offer upon the subject.

It is true that we tried last winter to buy [illegible] 1,000 gross tons of old rails at a price which would have netted us a large profit; but [illegible] we had to lose, as your company insisted that they were selling net tons, and no contract [illegible] upon which we could base our [illegible]. Very truly yours,

E. S. Wheeler & Co."

A similar correspondence took place between the parties in August, in reference to the six hundred tons tendered by the Railroad Company under the clause of the contract for [illegible] six hundred tons to be delivered in [illegible] month.

The court finds as a fact that each of the parties at the time the contract was made, understood that the word "tons" meant tons of 2,240 pounds and there was no misunderstanding between said persons (Wheeler and Murchie) as to the true intent and meaning of the contract. The court also finds that Murchie was duly authorized to make the contract on behalf of his company, and it rendered judgment for the plaintiff.

1. It is assigned for error that no legal contract between the parties to the action was established.

2. That, if any contract existed at any time, the defendant in error was estopped from setting it up as against the plaintiffs in error by the pleadings and by the facts proved.

3. If such contract existed, it was repudiated and terminated by the defendant in error in such manner as to discharge the plaintiffs in error from further obligation.

4. Damages were more than plaintiff was entitled to recover.

As regards the first of these propositions, it is sufficient to say that the circuit court finds as a fact that there was a contract made. It also finds other facts which establish that proposition beyond controversy, namely: that Murchie and Wheeler, who signed and delivered the papers which constituted the written agreement had authority to do so and to bind the parties to their action. The agreement, on its face, makes a contract. The court finds that there was no mistake or misunderstanding between Wheeler and Murchie as to the number of pounds which the ton should contain.

It is, therefore, to be taken as the foundation in this case, that when these papers were signed and delivered at New Haven, January [illegible], a valid and completed contract, the one on which this suit was brought, existed between the parties to the suit.

The second and third grounds of error may be considered together. What was done by the railroad company which repudiated and terminated the contract and discharged Wheeler & Co. from its obligation, or estopped the railroad company from setting it up against them?

It is to be observed that to annul or set aside the contract, fairly made, requires the assent of both parties to it, as it did to make it. There must have been the same meeting of minds, the same agreement to modify or abandon it, that was necessary to make it. All that was said or done, on which reliance is placed, for that purpose, is in the two letters, one written several days after the contract was completed and the other twenty-eight days afterwards.

The first of these, that of Murchie to Wheeler & Co., inclosing the resolutions of the directors of the railroad company, so far from repudiating the contract or denying its force and validity, by this resolution, in express terms, affirms it. Though the contract needed no ratification to make it binding, the company here ratifies what its vice president had done. In doing this, it thought proper to place its own construction on the word "ton," as used in the contract; but neither in the resolution of the directors nor in the letter of Mr. Murchie is there the slightest intimation that a difference of opinion on this matter would be relied on as [35] impairing the obligation of the contract. If they believed that their construction was the right one, it was the simplest piece of justice and precaution to suggest it, leaving the question, as by law it must be left, to a court to construe, if the difference was insisted on by either party. Finding that Wheeler & Co. did not concur in this construction, the railroad company waived their view of it, and tendered performance in accordance with the view of the other party.

Looking now to what was said by Wheeler & Co. in reply to this, it is still clearer that they did not entertain for a moment the idea of an abandonment or rescission of the contract; but, on the contrary, that they insisted on its continued existence and on performance of it according to their understanding of its meaning. After stating that they did not understand that the contract needed the ratification of the company to make it valid, they say: "We understood then, and understand now, that the sale made at that time on behalf of your company was an absolute and final, unconditional sale. We do not understand, further, that this resolution was forwarded to us with the view of in any way modifying that sale in any of its terms." Certainly this was a fair construction of the resolution. Then, after commenting on the commercial meaning of the word "tons," which could only be varied by express conditions in the contract, they say: "No such conditions were mentioned in the contract of your company with us, and we look, therefore, for the delivery of the rails within the dates named in the contract of your company, and in 'gross' not 'net' tons."

They then add their belief that Murchie, to whom the letter was addressed, understood the contract as Wheeler did as to the number of pounds to the ton.

The correspondence ceased here until the time for delivery of the rails arrived. Nothing more was said or done by either party during this time. The last word from each to the other was a clear assertion of the existence of a valid contract, and the very last words of the correspondence was the assertion of Wheeler & Co. that "we look for the delivery of the rails [36] within the dates named in the contract." When, therefore, on the 14th of June, the Railroad Company notified Wheeler & Co. that it was ready to comply with the contract by delivering tons of 2,240 pounds, and requested to know whether it should be made at New York or New Haven, they must have been surprised by the letter of Wheeler & Co., denying the existence of the contract, and treating the matter as a negotiation from which no contract resulted. The contrast between this and their last letter of February 28th is indeed remarkable.

By this letter of June 14th Wheeler & Co. do not place their refusal to receive on the ground now set up by counsel, namely: that though a contract was made, it had been waived or abandoned by the parties, or by the railroad company, or that the company was estopped from enforcing it; but on the broad ground that the negotiations for the sale and purchase of the iron had failed, and had never become a contract because of the disagreement as to the difference between net and gross tons.

As there was a contract, as neither party had abandoned it, or expressed any purpose to do so, Wheeler & Co. were bound to accept and pay for the rails when tendered, unless they have some other good reason for not doing so.

It is said such reason is to be found in the silence of the railroad company after the receipt of the letter of Wheeler & Co. to Murchie of the 28th February, by which the railroad company is estopped from enforcing the contract. It would be difficult to make out such an estoppel from mere silence, since nothing remained to be done by either party until the time for performance came. If the letter of Wheeler & Co. had expressed any doubt of the binding force of the contract, or had made any proposal for its modification, or had suggested a willingness to reconsider the question of weight of the tons, there might be some reason why the railroad company should have responded, and why a failure to respond might be some small evidence of want of good faith.

But these letters show a determination on both sides to insist on their rights under the contract, and Wheeler & Co.'s letter left no answer to be made unless the other party should [37] yield its construction of the contract. It was not bound to do this. It had a right to insist on the contract, and to refer its performance of it to the courts in case it became necessary. The railroad company could, when the time for delivery of the rails came, deliver the one thousand tons by either standard. If the other party accepted there was an end of the matter. If it did not, it could accept pro tanto, and sue for the balance, or it could refuse to accept at all. But in all this the contract would remain, and would be the measure of the rights of the parties in court or out of it.

There was, therefore, no necessity for the Railroad Company to reply to the letter of Wheeler & Co. It was not bound to say any more than it had said as to the true meaning of the contract. There was no demand in the letter of Wheeler & Co. that the railroad company should accept its construction. There was no intimation that if this was not done the contract was at an end, or would be abandoned.

Let us suppose that the price of iron had risen instead of declining during this three or four months, and the railroad company had failed to deliver, would Wheeler & Co. have lost their right of action by anything in their letters, or by the cessation of the correspondence? Clearly not. And yet, if that correspondence released one party, it must have released both. There remained no obligation, unless it was mutual. The right to deliver and require payment, and the right to require delivery, were correlativ rights, one of which could not exist without th other.

The judgment of the court that plaintiff wa entitled to recover is right.

The objection to the amount of the recover rests upon the contention of defendants, th they were only bound by the contract for th October delivery to accept two hundred ton while the court held them bound for the diffe ence in price for six hundred tons.

We concur with the circuit court in holdin that when Wheeler & Co. say we have bougl of you (the railroad company) "from two (2) t six hundred tons for delivery in New York c New Haven between August 1st and Octob 1st" that they agreed to accept any amount c old rails between those limits. The Compan was selling old rails. It knew that by Augu it would have a thousand tons. It did not kno how much more they would have by Octob 1st. It intended to secure the sale of what might have, between two hundred and six hu dred tons.

Besides, as it was bound to do the first act performance of the contract by delivering t iron, the option, if there was one, wac with t railroad company. The defendants were nev in condition to exercise this option, if one e isted. Townsend v. Wells, 3 Day, 327; Patch v. Swift, 21 Vt., 292; M'Nitt v. Clark, 7 John 465.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirme

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.

Mr. Justice Blatchford, dissenting:

Justices Field, Harlam, Matthews and m self are unable to concur in the judgment the court in this case. When the directors the Railroad Company came to consider, a Board, the transaction between Murchie a Wheeler & Co., they took it up, as their re lution states, as a sale by Murchie to Wheel & Co., and confirmed it on behalf of the Ra road Company, as a sale of tons of 2,000 l When Wheeler & Co. received Murchie's l ter inclosing a copy of the resolution of t board, their letter of reply of February 28, 188 states their understanding to be, that the s was not made subject to approval by the Ra road Company, and that the ton was 2,240 lb and that they look for the delivery of the ra in gross and not net tons. But the resoluti of the board expressed the contrary view, as the ton, and so the letter proceeds to say, t Wheeler & Co. make no doubt that Murchi understanding of the contract, as he had ma it, is in accord with that of Wheeler & Co., a that, in so far as the resolution of the Bos fixed 2,000 pounds for each ton, it did so by oversight on the part of the directors. T was a plain appeal to Murchie, to bring his u derstanding of the contract to bear on t directors, to induce them to change their vi and their statement of the contract, in resp of the tons: and it was followed up by the cl ing words of the letter: "We hope to hear fr you at your earliest convenience." The wh tenor of this letter was to throw the matter i the field of negotiation and arrangement, wh the Railroad Company asked to have it p That Company plainly said to Wheeler & C

"If you regard the ton in this contract as a gross ton, we do not; and, if you do, we do not think there is any contract." Wheeler & Co. replied: "We do, and we think such was Mr. Murchie's view at the time, and that your minutes have committed an oversight in their resolution which 'fixes' the ton at 2,000 pounds, but, in view of all this, we ask to hear from you at your early convenience about it." At that date old rails were $33.50 to $34 a ton of 2,240 pounds, without duty. The contract price was $30 and $28, without duty. The contract was a good one for Wheeler & Co., if they could then sell the rails, for future delivery, at the market rate of that date, and if the ton of the contract were 2,240 pounds. So, it was important for them to know whether the Railroad Company would adhere to the view stated in the resolution or would recede from it, and they sought to learn. But they received no reply from Murchie or his Company. They had a right to take the Company at its word and to act on its solemnly announced understanding of the contract. They did so and refrained from turning the contract to any benefit by a resale of the rails. They were dealers in rails and bought only to resell. They did not buy to use otherwise. This the Railroad Company and Murchie knew.

Now, what is the finding of the Circuit Court? It is, that Murchie in fact understood that the ton of the contract were 2,240 pounds, as did Wheeler & Co.; that the Company, while not misunderstanding, intended to induce Wheeler & Co. to think it misunderstood, for the purpose of having Wheeler & Co. agree that the tons should be 2,000 pounds; that this conduct was "disingenuous"; and that the natural effect of a failure to reply to Wheeler & Co.'s letter was to create "great uncertainty" on the part of Wheeler & Co., and to cause "insurance and pecuniary loss" to them. On these facts, it is held, that, when the market price of the rails has fallen to one half of the contract price, the Company can insist on compelling Wheeler & Co. to take the rails at the contract price, because the Company then has to turn around and say: "The ton was not a 2,000 pounds. We were wrong all the time, and you were right; and we now reply to your letter, by saying that we did commit an oversight in our resolution, as you suggested."

We can sanction no such view of the rights of the parties to a commercial transaction. The Company made statements, in its resolution and letter which the Circuit Court finds were not in accord with its understanding regarding the ton; statements which that court finds it knew were not true and which that court finds it intended should be regarded by Wheeler & Co. as honestly made; and which it is clear it intended Wheeler & Co. should act upon; and which they did act upon, to their injury. The actual ground of recovery by the Company in this case is based on proof of the untruth of the assertions made by the Company, followed by proposition that Wheeler & Co. had no right to believe and rely on those assertions. Every element exists to estop the Company from denying the truth of those assertions, and from claiming that Wheeler & Co. should not have relied on them. There is not a suggestion impeaching the good faith and fair dealing of Wheeler & Co. They were not guilty of any deceit or misrepresentation; they held out no false lights; they did not attempt to procure an advantage by an untrue statement of their understanding of the contract; they did not mislead the other party to his injury. Their letter to Murchie of February 28th was a model of mercantile candor and fair dealing. It demanded a reply. The absence of a reply was no ground for supposing that the Company had abandoned the position it took in the resolution, for Wheeler & Co. did not then know, what they learned afterwards—that the resolution was a sham and a false pretense.

The conclusion seems to us to follow inevitably, under the findings of the Circuit Court, that the Company had lost its right to recover on the contract; and we, therefore, dissent from the judgment of affirmance.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—117 U. S., 501.

MORRIS RICHTER, Appt.,
v.
GEORGE JEROME ET AL. [55]

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., "Richter v. Union Trust Co.," 55, 56.)

A motion for a commission to take depositions de bene esse, pending an appeal, is denied, there being a remedy under § 866, R. S.

[No. 839.]

Argued Apr. 20, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan.

On motion for a commission to take testimony de bene esse.

The appellant files his motion, supported by his affidavit for the issue of a commission out of this court, to take the testimony of four witnesses alleged to be aged and infirm, said testimony, when taken, not to be used in this court but in the court below, provided the decree dismissing the bill is reversed.

Messrs. J. P. Whittemore and Wm. P. Wells, for appellant.

Mr. H. H. Wells, for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court: [56]

This motion is denied. Equity Rule 70 has no application to this case, and the affidavits presented do not show such facts as render it necessary for this court to make any special order in the premises. Under section 866 of the Revised Statutes "any circuit court, upon application to it as a court of equity, may, according to the usages of chancery, direct depositions to be taken in perpetuam rei memoriam, if they relate to any matter that may be cognizable in any court of the United States." There is nothing in the motion papers to indicate that the appellant may not proceed, under this statute, to take and perpetuate his testimony, if he has reason to fear that it will otherwise be lost.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[67] HENRY EHRHARDT, Plff. in Errr.,

v.

MANERVA HOGABOOM.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 67–69.)

Public lands—ejectment—evidence—decisions of Land Department—how far conclusive.

*1. In an action of ejectment for lands in California, where the plaintiff traces title to the lands from a patent of the United States issued to a settler under the preemption laws, oral evidence is inadmissible on the part of the defendant to show that the lands were not open to settlement under those laws, but were swamp and overflowed lands, which passed to the State under the Act of September 28, 1850.

2. It is the duty of the Land Department, of which the Secretary of the Interior is the head, to determine whether land patented to a settler is of the class subject to settlement under the preemption laws, and his judgment as to this fact is not open to contestation, in an action at law, by a mere intruder without title.

[No. 265.]

Submitted Apr. 22, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. J. H. McKune, for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for the defendant in error.

[67] Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for the possession of a tract of land in Sacramento County, California, designated as the northeast quarter of section six [68] of a certain township, which is described. The plaintiff below, the defendant in error here, deraigns her title, through a patent of the United States embracing the demanded premises, bearing date June 10, 1875, issued to one Elkanah Baldwin, a settler under the preemption laws, and his conveyance to her of the land patented to him. On the trial, the patent and the conveyance to the plaintiff were produced and given in evidence. The defendant thereupon admitted that he was in possession of twenty acres of the tract covered by the patent, lying south of a certain fence, but contended that these twenty acres were swamp and overflowed lands, which passed to the State of California under the Act of Congress of September 28, 1850. This character of the land as swamp and overflowed he offered to prove by parol, but the offer was rejected, and, we think, correctly. He did not connect himself in any way with the title to the twenty acres. The certificate of purchase from the register of the State land-office, which he produced, related to different land—to what constituted a portion of the southeast quarter of section six, whereas the land in controversy is part of the northeast quarter of that section. He was, as to the twenty acres, a simple intruder, without claim or color of title. He was, therefore, in no position to call in question the validity of the patent of the United States for those acres, and require the plaintiff to vindicate the action of the officers of the Land Department in issuing it. It does not appear that the twenty acres formed a part of any land selected by the State or claimed by her as swamp and overflowed land. A patent of the United States, regular on its face, cannot, in an action at law, be held inoperative as to any lands covered by it, upon parol testimony that they were swamp and overflowed, and therefore unfit for cultivation, and hence passed to the State under the grant of such land on her admission into the Union. In French v. Fyan, 93 U. S. 169 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 812], this court decided that by the 2d section of the Swamp Land Act the power and the duty devolved upon the Secretary of the Interior, as the head of the department which administered the affairs of the public lands, of determining what lands were of the description granted by that Act, and made his office the tribunal whose decision on that subject was to be controlling. And he was to transmit a list of such lands to the Governor of the State, and at the latter's request issue a patent therefor to the State. In that case, parol evidence to show that the land covered by a patent to Missouri under the Act was not swamp and overflowed land, was held to be inadmissible. On the same principle parol testimony to show that the land covered by a patent of the United States to a settler under the preemption laws was such swamp and overflowed land must be held to be inadmissible to defeat the patent. It is the duty of the Land Department, of which the Secretary is the head, to determine whether land patented to a settler is of the class subject to settlement under the preemption laws, and his judgment as to this fact is not open to contestation, in an action at law, by a mere intruder without title. As was said in the case cited of the patent to the State, it may be said in this case of the patent to the preemptioner, it would be a departure from sound principle and contrary to well considered judgments of this court to permit, in such action, the validity of the patent to be subjected to the test of the verdict of a jury on oral testimony. "It would be," to quote the language used, "substituting the jury or the court sitting as a jury, for the tribunal which Congress had provided to determine the question, and would be making a patent of the United States a cheap and unstable reliance as a title for lands which it purported to convey."

The judgment is therefore affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JAMES GRANT, Appt.,

v.

GEORGE H. PARKER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 51–55.)

Mining corporations—"syndicate" to purchase controlling interest in stock—bill to enforce previous agreement concerning management.

1. An agreement between the members of a "syndicate" formed to purchase the controlling interest in the stock of a mining corporation, that one of them should "control the management of the mine," is necessarily subject to such reasonable rules and regulations as the stockholders or directors may adopt for the government of the office of the company.

2. A bill in equity, to restrain a member of the "syndicate" from acting as a stockholder and d

*Head notes by Mr. Justice FIELD.

[illegible] in the company in enforcing such regulations does not lie.

[No. 273.]

Submitted Apr. 24, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of California.

Appeal from the decree of the court below, dismissing the complainant's bill.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. Whitaker Grant and James Grant, for appellant.

Mr. John Johns, John N. Rogers and W. Penn Clarke, for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity filed by a stockholder and director of the Fresno Enterprise Company, a California corporation owning the Enterprise mine, against another stockholder and director, to restrain him "from attending any meeting of the board of directors to enforce" certain resolutions passed at a previous meeting, "which give the vice-president authority to sign checks or certificates of stock," when the complainant, the president of the company, is "not in the City of San Francisco, or which authorize the superintendent to draw drafts on the company when" the complainant is "not at the mine," and also restraining the defendant "from voting on * * * five thousand six hundred and sixty shares of stock issued to him under the contract of 3d May, 1881, or any other shares of stock owned by him, at any meeting of the stockholders for electing directors or amending the by-laws"; and "that on the final hearing" the complainant "be decreed to have a continuing proxy for said five thousand six hundred and sixty shares."

The general ground on which complainant asks his relief is this:

In May, 1881, an association of capitalists, called in the bill a "syndicate," to which both the complainant and defendant belonged, bought 51,660 of the 100,000 shares of the capital stock of the company, and in the contract under which the syndicate was formed it was agreed that the complainant was "to control the management of the mine." In the purchase the complainant became the owner of 17,000 shares, and the defendant of 5,660. Other persons divided the remaining 28,340 shares between them. The 49,000 shares not purchased were held by persons outside of the syndicate. At a meeting of stockholders, held a few days after the purchase, for the election of directors, the complainant and the defendant, with one other member of the syndicate, were elected directors, as the representatives of the purchasers, and two others not in the syndicate as representatives of the minority stockholders. The complainant was elected president of the board of directors and general manager of the mine. The defendant and the directors who were elected in the interest of the minority stockholders seem to have been of opinion that some additional rules for the government of the affairs of the company were necessary, and so, as is alleged, on their representations, the defendant, in December 1881, induced some of the members of the syndicate to agree to the adoption of the following resolutions by the directors:

"Resolved, That the Bank of California, the treasurer of this company, be, and is hereby, instructed to pay only such checks as are signed by the president or vice-president and countersigned by the secretary.

"Resolved, That all orders for supplies and materials from San Francisco for the company shall be made through the head office in San Francisco, and payment for the same shall be made by checks signed by the president or vice-president and countersigned by the secretary, at the office in San Francisco.

"Resolved, That in the absence of the president from the office of the company in San Francisco, the vice-president, in accordance with the by-laws, be, and is hereby, authorized to sign all certificates of stock that are legally issued by the secretary, as well as all papers requiring the signature of the president, if he were present at the office.

"Resolved, That in the absence of the president from the mine, the superintendent at the mine be, and is hereby, instructed to draw drafts on the company at San Francisco for all indebtedness accruing at the mine."

These resolutions were adopted by the board on the 4th of January, 1882, at a regular meeting held that day, of which the complainant had knowledge, but which he did not attend. A quorum of directors was present at the meeting and the defendant voted for the resolutions. [54] It was to restrain the defendant from aiding the directors in the enforcement of these resolutions, and from voting his shares acquired under the syndicate contract, except in accordance with the will of the complainant, that this bill was brought.

We are unable to discover any ground for equitable relief in the case made by the bill. It is undoubtedly true that the defendant was anxious to have the complainant interested in the mine, and was willing to become one of a number of persons, of whom the complainant should be one, to purchase enough of the stock to make the aggregate of their holdings a majority of the entire capital of the company. It is also true that the defendant, and all the other members of the syndicate, yielded to the condition insisted on by the complainant—that "he should have the control of the management of the mine" if the purchase of the majority of the stock was made; but this was necessarily subject to such reasonable rules and regulations as should be adopted in a proper way, either by the stockholders or the directors, for the government of the conduct of the officers of the company. No attempt has been made to remove the complainant from his office of general manager. He still "controls the management of the mine," so far as anything appears in the bill. All that the directors have done by their resolutions, of which complaint is made, is to prohibit the Bank of California, the treasurer of the company, from paying any checks of the company except such as are signed by the president or vice-president and countersigned by the secretary; to direct that all orders for supplies and materials from San Francisco should be made through the head office in San Francisco, and paid for in checks signed and countersigned as above; to authorize the vice-president to sign certificates of stock and all other papers requiring the signature of the president, when the president was away from the office, and authorizing the superintendent at the mine, in the absence of the president, to draw drafts on the company at San Francisco for debts incurred there. We see nothing in this inconsistent with the control of the mine itself by the complainant "as if he owned it."

[55] Without, therefore, deciding whether, if the members of the syndicate should undertake to remove the complainant from the control of the management of the mine without just cause, he could have preventive relief in equity, we affirm the decree.

Affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[45]

GWILLIM R. GWILLIM, Plff. in Errr., v. JOHN F. DONNELLAN ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 45-51.)

Mining law—adverse claims—location—how defeated.

1. The locator of a mining claim who does not interpose an adverse claim, in proceedings instituted by another to obtain a patent for a claim, including part of his claim, thereby waives his rights and loses the benefit of his location. All lands embraced in his location not covered by the patent are thrown open to exploration and subject to claim for new discoveries.

2. In proceedings to obtain a patent for a mining claim, where an adverse claim is not interposed, the United States may assume that no such claim exists, and the holder thereof is barred, he being in law a party to the proceedings.

[No. 222.]

Submitted Apr. 1, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. E. T. Wells and Amos Steck, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Enoch Totten, Charles H. Toll and Edward O. Wolcott, for defendants in error.

[46]

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit begun July 7, 1881, under section 2326 of the Revised Statutes, to determine the rights of adverse claimants to certain mining locations. Donnellan and Everett, the defendants in error here, and also the defendants below, were the owners of the Mendota claim, or location, and Gwillim, the plaintiff in error here and the plaintiff below, the owner of the Cambrian. The two claims conflicted. The defendants applied, under section 2325 Rev. Stat., for a patent of the land covered by their location, and the plaintiff filed in due time and in proper form his adverse claim. To sustain this adverse claim the present suit was brought, which is in form an action to establish the right of the plaintiff to the premises in dispute, and to the possession thereof as against the defendants, on account of a "prior location thereof as a mining claim in the public domain of the United States."

The question in the case arises on this state of facts:

Upon the trial the plaintiff gave evidence tending to show that Isaac Thomas, on the 16t of May, 1878, discovered in the public domai and within the premises described in the com plaint, a vein of rock in place, bearing gold an silver, and sunk a shaft to the depth of ten fe or more, to a well defined crevice, and locate the premises under the name of the Cambria Lode and performed all the acts required b law for a valid location. The plaintiff got h title from Thomas. In the answer of the d fendants they set up title under the Mendo claim, located, as they allege, November 1 1878. The plaintiff, in presenting his case the jury, stated in effect that, after the locatio of the claim by Thomas and before his conve ance to the plaintiff, one Fallon instituted pr ceedings to obtain a patent from the Unite States for another claim, including that part Thomas' claim wherein was situated the di covery shaft sunk by him; that no adverse clai was interposed, and Fallon accordingly entere his claim and obtained a patent therefor; an before any new workings or developments do or made by Thomas upon any part of his clai not included in this patent, the defendants e tered therein and located the same as a minin claim in the public domain. Upon this stat ment the court "ruled that, inasmuch as th part of the claim of said Thomas, wherein w situated his discovery shaft, had been patent to a third person, the plaintiff was not entitl to recover any part of the premises, and instruc ed the jury to find for the defendants." Th instruction is assigned for error.

Thomas made his location as the discover of a vein or lode within the lines of his clain He made but one location, and that for fiftee hundred feet in length along the discover vein. All his labor was done at the discove shaft. There was no claim of a second discove at any other place than where the shaft w sunk.

Section 2320 of the Revised Statutes provid that "A mining claim located after the 10th May, 1872, * * * shall not exceed one thousan five hundred feet in length along the vein lode; but no location of a mining claim sha be made until the discovery of the vein or lod within the limits of the claim located." Sectio 2322 gives "the locators of all mining location * * * so long as they comply with the laws of th United States, and with the state, territorial an local regulations not in conflict with the law of the United States governing their possessor title, * * * the exclusive right of possessio and enjoyment of all the surface included wit in the lines of their locations, and of all vein lodes and ledges throughout their entire deptl the top or apex of which lies inside of such su face lines extended downward vertically, a though such veins, lodes or ledges may so f depart from a perpendicular in their cour downward as to extend outside the vertical sid lines of such surface location." The location made on the surface, and the discovery must b of a vein or lode, the top or apex of which within the limits of the surface lines of suc location. A patent for the land located co veys the legal title to the surface, and that ca ries with it the right to follow a discovered vei apex of which is within the limits of the [illegible] inwards even though it may pass out[illegible] the vertical side lines of the location. The [illegible] to the vein depends on the right to the occupancy or the ownership of its apex within the [illegible] of the right to the occupation of the surface. This right may be acquired by a valid [illegible] and continued maintenance of a mining [illegible] or by a patent from the United States for the land.

To keep up and maintain a valid location [illegible] work of labor must be done, or improvements made, during each year until a patent has been issued therefor. Sec. 2324.

By section 2325 it is provided that a patent may be obtained for land located or claimed for valuable deposits. To accomplish this a locator, who has complied with all the statutory requirements on that subject, may file in the proper land-office an application for a patent under oath, showing such compliance, together with a plat and field notes of his claim, made by or under the direction of the Surveyor-General of the United States, showing accurately the boundaries of the claim, which must be distinctly marked by monuments on the ground. He must also post a copy of his plat, together with a notice of such application for a patent, in a conspicuous place on the land embraced in such plat, previous to filing his application for a patent, and he must also file an affidavit of at least two persons that such notice has been duly posted. A copy of the notice must be filed in the land office.

Upon the filing of such papers, the register of the land-office is required to publish a notice that the application has been made, for the period of sixty days in some newspaper to be by him designated as published nearest to the claim, and he must also post a similar notice for the same time in his own office.

If no adverse claim shall have been filed with the register and receiver of the proper land-office at the expiration of the sixty days of publication, it shall be assumed that the applicant is entitled to a patent, and that no adverse claim exists; and thereafter no objection from such parties to the issue of the patent shall be heard, except to show that the applicant has failed to comply with the law. Where an adverse claim is filed within the time, all proceedings upon the application in the land-office, except in reference to the publication and proof of notice, are to be stayed until the controversy shall have been settled or decided by a court of competent jurisdiction, or the adverse claim waived. It is then made the duty of the adverse claimant to commence proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction to determine the question of the right of possession, and prosecute the same to final judgment. After such judgment shall have been rendered, the party entitled to the possession of the claim may, without further notice, file a certified copy of the judgment roll with the register of the land-office, together with the certificate of the Surveyor-General that the requisite amount of labor has been expended, or improvements made thereon, and the description required as in other cases. When this has been done and the proper fees paid, the whole proceedings and the judgment roll must be certified to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and a patent shall issue for the claim, or such portion thereof as the applicant shall appear, from the decision of the court, to rightly possess. If it appears from the decision that several parties are entitled to separate and distinct portions of the claim, each party may pay for his portion of the claim, together with the proper fees, and file the certificate and description by the Surveyor-General, and then the register must certify the proceedings and judgment roll to the commissioner as in the preceding case, and patents shall issue to the several parties according to their respective rights. Sec. 2326.

A valid and subsisting location of mineral lands, made and kept up in accordance with the provisions of the statutes of the United States, has the effect of a grant by the United States of the right of present and exclusive possession of the lands located. If, when one enters on land to make a location, there is another location in full force, which entitles its owner to the exclusive possession of the land, the first location operates as bar to the second. Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S., 284 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 737].

To entitle the plaintiff to recover in this suit, [50]
therefore, it was incumbent on him to show that he was the owner of a valid and subsisting location of the lands in dispute, superior in right to that of the defendants. His location must be one which entitles him to possession against the United States, as well as against another claimant. If it is not valid as against the one, it is not as against the other. The location is the plaintiff's title. If good, he can recover; if bad, he must be defeated.

A location on account of the discovery of a vein or lode can only be made by a discoverer, or one who claims under him. The discovered lode must lie within the limits of the location which is made by reason of it. If the title to the discovery fails, so must the location which rests upon it. If a discoverer has himself perfected a valid location on account of his discovery, no one else can have the benefit of his discovery for the purposes of location adverse to him, except as a relocator after he has lost or abandoned his prior right. Belk v. Meagher, supra.

In this action the plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title, not on the weakness of that of his adversary. The question to be settled by judicial determination, so far as he is concerned, is as to his own right of possession. He must establish a possessory title in himself, good as against everybody. If there had not been a patent to Fallon, it would have been competent for the defendants to prove on the trial, that when Thomas entered Fallon held and owned a valid and subsisting location of the same property, and was the first discoverer of the lode the apex of which was within the surface lines of Thomas' claim. Had this been done, the location of Thomas would have been adjudged invalid, because the land on which his alleged discovery was made was not open to exploration, it having been lawfully located and claimed by Fallon. The admission made by the plaintiff at the trial, and on which the court acted in instructing the jury to find for the defendants, is the equivalent of such proof. It showed that after May 16, 1878, and before November, 19, 1878, Fallon had applied for a patent of the land on which Thomas' alleged discovery was made, and where he had sunk [51] his discovery shaft; that Thomas set up no adverse claim, and that in due time Fallon got his patent, and this because under the law the United States had the right to assume that no adverse claim existed. Having failed to assert his claim, he lost his title as against the United States, the common source of title to all. The issue of the patent to Fallon was equivalent to a determination by the United States, in an adversary proceeding to which Thomas was in law a party, that Fallon had title to the discovery superior to that of Thomas, and that consequently Thomas' location was invalid. This barred the right of Thomas to apply to the United States for a patent, and of course defeated his location. From that time all lands embraced in his location not patented to Fallon were open to exploration and subject to claim for new discoveries. The loss of the discovery was a loss of the location. It follows that the court did not err in its instructions to the jury, and the judgment is consequently affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[96]

JOHN F. WOLLENSAK, Appt.,

v.

FRANK A. REIHER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 96-102.)

Patent law—reissues—delay—whether reasonable—decision of patent office not conclusive.

1. A patentee, who has claimed less than that to which he was entitled, is bound to discover the defect within a reasonable time or he loses his right to a reissue; and the court may declare a reissue subsequently granted to correct such supposed mistake, pro tanto void, in any suit founded upon it.
2. Where it appears from the bill that the sole object of the reissue was to enlarge and expand the claims of the original patent, and that a delay of two or more years has taken place in applying for the reissue, not explained by special circumstances showing it to be reasonable, a general demurrer lies to the bill, for want of equity.
3. The decision of the Patent Office as to the reasonableness of the delay is not conclusive.
4. The delay being prima facie unlawful, it is incumbent on the party seeking to establish the jurisdiction of the Patent Office to grant the reissue, to show the facts on which it rests.

[No. 1242.]

Argued Apr. 14, 15, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. L. L. Bond, Ephraim Banning and Thomas A. Banning, for appellant.

Messrs. Wm. A. McKenney and Charles T. Brown, for appellee.

[96] Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity to restrain by injunction the alleged infringement by the defendant below of reissued letters patent No. 10264, issued to the complainant December 26, 1883, upon the surrender of original letters patent No. 148538, dated March 10 1874, granted to the complainant for a new and useful improvemen

in transom lifters. There was exhibited wit
the bill, as parts thereof, copies of the origina and reissued letters patent. The defendant de murred to the bill for want of equity; the de murrer was sustained, and the bill dismissed
From that decree this appeal was taken.

The original patent was confined to tw claims, which are also the first two in the r issued patent. The latter, which in its specif cation and drawings is substantially the sam
with the original, adds seven additional claim making nine in all. Of these, the bill alleges i fringement as to the third, fourth, fifth, sixt
and ninth.

The bill, after averring the issue of the ori
inal patent, and referring to the copy set out
an exhibit, contains the following averments

"That said letters patent, being afterwar
found to be inoperative or invalid by reason
an insufficient or defective specification, whic
insufficiency or defect had arisen through ina vertence, accident or mistake, and without a fraudulent or deceptive intention on the part
your orator, were afterwards surrendered a duly canceled by the Commissioner of Paten
that thereupon, and upon due application the
for, reissued letters patent of the United Stat
No. 10264, were issued to your orator, dated t 26th day of December, 1882, granting to hi
his heirs or assigns, for the term of sevente
years from the said 10th day of March, 18
the full and exclusive right of making, usi
and vending to others to be used, the said
vention, as by reference to said reissued lett patents here in court to be produced, and
copy of the specification and drawings of whi
is hereto attached, will more fully appear; t
said reissued letters patent were applied for good faith and not for any fraudulent or i proper purpose; that, as your orator verily
lieves, no other person, firm or corporation,
acting under his authority, ever began the m
ufacture, sale or use of transom lifters conta
ing or embodying said inventions or impro
ments until long after your orator had cons
ed counsel and taken steps toward applyi
for said reissue, and until long after y orator had applied for and obtained a issue of his previous patent on trans
lifters, having broader claims than any n
contained in said reissue No 10264; th in making said application for said last m tioned reissue, your orator presented to the tent Office a full, sworn statement of facts circumstances connected with his applying
and obtaining said original patent No. 1485
and with his delay in applying for said reiss
that at the first said reissue application was jected, on the ground that such statement did
show or furnish any sufficient explanation
excuse for said delay, and that your orator
lost his rights to such a reissue by reason th
of, the examiner citing Miller v. Brass Co., U. S., 350 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 783], and other ca
that, on appeal, said decision or rejection reversed by the examiners in chief constitut
the Patent Office Board of Appeal; that, i long and full opinion, said examiners in c
expressly held that your orator had s
ciently and satisfactorily explained said d
and was still entitled to such a reissue, and
a part of said opinion, referring to claims app

[illegible] is said reissue, and now in controversy, was as follows:

"All the above claims, moreover, have been rejected upon a supposed legal bar to enlargement of claim, found in certain recent decisions of the courts, mainly of the Supreme Court of the United States, on which the other decisions cited are based. * * * We find upon review that there was a grave defect in applicant's patent and claims, whereby it was inoperative to protect the invention disclosed by him, to the full extent to which he was entitled. * * * We do not find any evidence of such laches or delay, after ascertaining the defects of his patent, as to debar or estop him from the benefits of the statute. We do not find in his renewed application any attempt to enlarge the scope of his invention beyond what was originally disclosed, but, on the contrary, an attempt to secure protection for the invention contained in the patent.'"

For the purpose of deciding the question of law arising on the demurrer to the bill, it is not necessary to set out the several claims in the original and reissued patents, with a view to a comparison. It is sufficient to say, that it is not claimed that the defendant is guilty of an infringement of either of the claims in the original patent as repeated in the reissue; and it is admitted that the claims in the reissued patent, infringement of which is averred, are expansions of the original claims, not covered by them, but alleged, nevertheless, to be embraced within the invention as described in the original patent. This is to say, that if, as a matter of fact, the patentee was the first and original inventor of the parts and combinations covered by these claims, the language of the specification to the original patent would sufficiently embrace them.

It follows from this, that if, at the date of the issue of the original patent, the patentee had been conscious of the nature and extent of his invention, an inspection of the patent, when issued, and an examination of its terms, made with that reasonable degree of care which is habitual to and expected of men, in the management of their own interests, in the ordinary affairs of life, would have immediately informed him that the patent had failed fully to cover the area of his invention. And this must be deemed to be notice to him of the fact, for the law imputes knowledge when opportunity and interest, combined with reasonable care, would necessarily impart it.

Not to improve such opportunity, under the circumstances of self-interest, with reasonable diligence, constitutes laches which in equity disclose the party who seeks to revive a right which he has allowed to lie unclaimed, from enforcing it, to the detriment of those who have, in consequence, been led to act as though it were abandoned.

This general doctrine of equity was applied with great distinctness to the correction of alleged mistakes in patents, by reissues, in the case of Miller v. Brass Co. [supra]. It was there declared, that where the mistake suggested was merely that the claim was not as broad as it might have been, it was apparent upon the first inspection of the patent, and, if any correction was desired, it should have been applied for immediately; that the granting of a reissue for such a purpose, after an unreasonable delay, is clearly an abuse of the power to grant reissues, and may justly be declared illegal and void; that, in reference to reissues made for the purpose of enlarging the scope of the patent, the rule of laches should be strictly applied, and no one should be relieved who has slept upon his rights, and has thus led the public to rely on the implied disclaimer involved in the terms of the original patent; and that when this is a matter apparent on the face of the instrument, upon a mere comparison of the original patent with the reissue, it is competent for the courts to decide whether the delay was unreasonable and whether the reissue was, therefore, contrary to law, and void. [100]

This doctrine has been reiterated in many cases since, and at the present term has been reconsidered and emphatically repeated as the settled law, in the case of Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U. S. 354 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 665], where it is said, by Mr. Justice Bradley, delivering the opinion of the court: "We repeat, then, if a patentee has not claimed as much as he is entitled to claim, he is bound to discover the defect in a reasonable time, or he loses all right to a reissue; and if the Commissioner of Patents, after the lapse of such reasonable time, undertakes to grant a reissue for the purpose of correcting the supposed mistake, he exceeds his power and acts under a mistaken view of the law; and the court, seeing this, has a right and it is its duty to declare the reissue pro tanto void, in any suit founded upon it." It was also there said that, while no invariable rule can be laid down as to what is reasonable time within which the patentee should seek for the correction of a claim which he considers too narrow, a delay of two years, by analogy to the law of public use before an application for a patent, should be construed equally favorable to the public, and that excuse for any longer delay than that should be made manifest by the special circumstances of the case.

In the present case the delay in applying for the reissue was more than five years. No special circumstances to account for or excuse the delay are set out in the bill. In lieu of such a statement, the complainant avers that he presented to the Patent Office a full, sworn statement of facts and circumstances connected with his applying for and obtaining his original patent, and with his delay in applying for the reissue, and that the examiners in chief decided that he had sufficiently and satisfactorily explained the delay, and was entitled to the reissue. But this does not satisfy the law. The question as to whether the delay had been reasonable or unreasonable is for the court to determine, upon the special circumstances brought to its attention; and it cannot substitute the decision of the Patent Office upon that question for its own. The very question is, whether the Patent Office has decided rightly; and, as it is a question of power and jurisdiction, in which the delay shown is prima facie unlawful, it is incumbent on the party seeking to establish the jurisdiction of the Patent Office to grant the reissue, to show the facts on which it rests. In every case of a reissue, that office either expressly or implicitly decides the question of diligence on the part of the patentee; and the grant of a reissue is a decision that the delay [101]

has not been unreasonable. That, therefore, is the very question for judicial review, in every suit to enforce a reissued patent in which the question is made; and, as we have seen, the settled rule of decision is, that if it appears in cases where the claim is merely expanded, that the delay has been for two years or more, it is adjudged to invalidate the reissue, unless the delay is accounted for and excused by special circumstances, which show it to have been not unreasonable.

When, therefore, the injunction bill sets out or exhibits both the original and the reissued patent, and it appears from inspection that the sole object of the reissue was to enlarge and expand the claims of the original, and that a delay of two or more years has taken place in applying for the reissue, not explained by special circumstances showing it to be reasonable, the question of laches is a question of law arising on the face of the bill, which avails as a defense, upon a general demurrer for want of equity.

This rule of equity pleading applies in analogous cases; as where, it otherwise appearing on the face of the bill that the claim is stale, or is barred by lapse of time, and it is sought to avoid the effect of such a bar on the ground that the fraud complained of was concealed and has been only recently discovered, it is necessary that "the particular acts of fraud or concealment should have been set forth by distinct [102] averments, as well as the time when discovered, so that the court may see whether, by the exercise of ordinary diligence, the discovery might not have been before made." Beaubien v. Beaubien, 23 How., 190 [64 U. S., bk. 16, L. ed. 484]; Stearns v. Page, 7 How., 819 [48 U. S., bk. 12, L. ed. 928]; Moore v. Greene, 19 How., 69 [60 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 533]; Marsh v. Whitmore, 21 Wall., 178, 185 [88 U. S., bk. 22, L. ed. 482, 485]; Godden v. Kimmell, 99 U. S., 201 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 431]; Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall., 87, 95 [69 U. S., bk. 17, L. ed. 836, 838]; Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S., 135 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 807]; Lansdale v. Smith, 106 U. S., 391 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 219].

The decree of the Circuit Court dismissing the bill for want of equity was correct and is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[79]

JAMES B. CLARK, Appt.,
v.
BEECHER MANUFACTURING COMPANY ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 79-87.)

Patent law—infringement.

*1. Letters patent No. 66130, granted to James B. Clark, June 25, 1867, for an "improvement in the manufacture of blanks for carriage thill shackles," are not infringed by the manufacture of blanks for shackles in accordance with letters patent No. 106225, granted to Willis B. Smith, August 9, 1870.

2. The features of the Clark patent are: that, by dies, the arms of the blank are bent into an oblique direction and the body into a curved form, so that the parts where the arms join the body are rounded on the outside as well as the inside; and that when subsequently the curved body is straightened, there will be in it sufficient metal to form sharp outside corners, by being pushed out into them.

3. The arms of the Smith blank are not bent in an oblique direction, its body is not curved, the parts where the arms join the body are not rounded either on the inside or on the outside, and, in afterwards straightening the back, surplus metal is not pushed towards or into the corners, to form them, but the existing corners, already formed, are forced further apart, by driving surplus metal into the back, between the corners.

4. In view of the state of the art, and the terms of the Clark patent, it must be confined at least to a shape which, for practical use, in subsequent manipulation, has a disposition of metal which causes a sharp corner to be formed in substantially the same way as by the use of his blank.

[No. 259.]

Argued Apr. 17, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut.

The history and facts of the case fully appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Wm. Edgar Simonds, for appellant.
Mr. O. H. Platt, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut, by James B. Clark against The Beecher Manufacturing Company, a Connecticut corporation, and D. F. Southwick, for the infringement of letters patent No. 66130, granted to the plaintiff, June 25, 1867, for an "improvement in the manufacture of blanks for carriage thill shackles." The main defense in the suit is non-infringement. The Circuit Court, after a hearing and two rehearings, dismissed the bill, holding that infringement had not been proved. 7 Fed. Rep., 816. The plaintiff has appealed.

A history of the state of the art, and of the progress of invention in making shackle blanks will conduce to a determination of the questions involved. A carriage thill shackle is a device by which the thills of a carriage are hinged to the axle. The finished shackle is a horizonal plate, with a pair of vertical ears rising therefrom, one at each end of the back. The cockeye on the end of the thill is received between the ears, and a bolt passing through the ears and the cockeye secures the parts. The flat back or body part of the article is formed with a projection at each side, forming what is commonly called the "clip," by which the article is secured to the axle. In forming the shackle it is necessary that the outside corners, where the ears join the back, should be sharp, full and square, to obtain a good bearing on the axle, or the article will not be salable. The old style of shackle was of this shape:

It was formed by bending up the two ears from a piece of metal of equal thickness, so the outer corners became round, and the bearing on the axle was not firm and true. It was desirable to obtain in some way a reservoir for surplus of metal, which could be utilized, by the bending, by being thrown out into or remaining in the corners, to make them full and square on the outside. To attain this result,

*Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

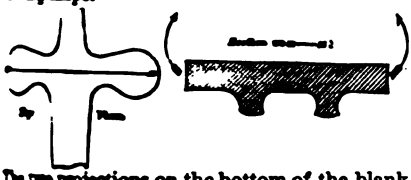
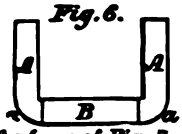
James P. Thorp made an invention for which he obtained letters patent No. 28114, granted May 1, 1860, which were reissued to his assignees H. D. Smith and others, as No. 2362, September 18, 1866. Thorp's blank was of the following shape:



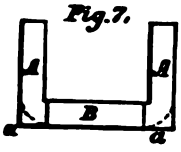
The two projections on the bottom of the blank were intended to furnish sufficient metal to make the outer corners of the shackle square and sharp, when the ears were bent in the direction indicated by the arrows. The projections were at the places where the arms joined the body. Thorp's patent showed a die for making the blank, constructed with recesses or [illegible] to form the projections, and stated that, after the arms were bent up, the blank, instead of being of the old form, Fig. 6, with rounded corners, a, a, thus:

Fig. 6.



would be of the form of Fig. 7, with square or right-angled corners, a, a, thus:

Fig. 7.



the blank being stronger at the junction of the arms and body, and the expansion of the metal, in making the arm, being compensated for by a natural contraction of the metal, which operated to prevent the destruction of the cohesion of the particles of the metal, and the consequent weakening of the blank at the parts where it was bent.

The next step is shown in letters patent No. [illegible], granted June 11, 1867, to Leander Burns and Joseph Wilcox, on the invention of Burns. This patent shows, in Fig. 7, an upper die M and a lower die N, and the blank made between them, with square corners, L, L, thus:

Fig. 7.

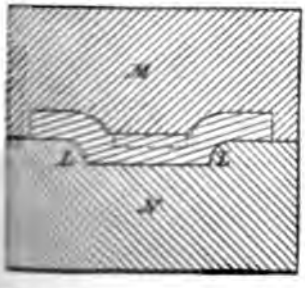


Fig. 7 is a transverse vertical section taken in the plane of the line y y, in Fig. 6. Fig. 6 is a face view of the lower die N, and shows also the blank after it is acted on by the dies. The specification states that if the arms of the blank are bent up at right angles, in a direction towards each other, perfect square corners will be left at L, L, with the metal through those corners and the other parts of a uniform thickness.

Fig. 6.

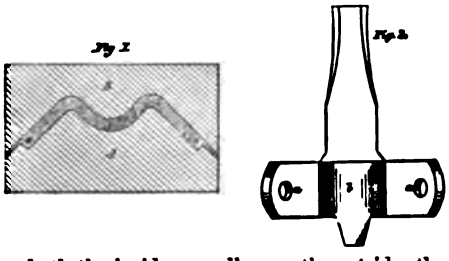
Then followed the patent to the plaintiff, the [83]
specification and drawings of which are as follows:

"This invention relates to the construction of carriage shaft shackles from solid blanks, and to the shape of the dies for forming the same, so that, with the least amount of labor and power, the said shackle may be gradually formed into the required shape. In the annexed drawings this invention is illustrated. Figure 1 is a vertical sectional view of a shackle blank, showing it between the dies. Figure 2 is a top or plan view of a shackle blank, as the same is formed by the dies. Similar letters of reference indicate like parts. The blank, which is made in the shape of a cross, in the usual manner, is placed upon the lower die A, and the upper die B is then forced down upon it, whereby the arms, a, a, of the blank are bent into an oblique direction, and the body, b, is curved, as shown in the figure. The portion of the blank where the arms join the body is rounded, as shown, [84]



on both the inside as well as on the outside, the straightening of the body of the shackle pushing out sufficient material for forming the sharp corners, without having any hindersome and impracticable projections. The dies are formed so as to give the blank the required shape. This process of forming shackle blanks has proved, by practice, to be the most expeditious and simple yet performed, as it requires the least amount of machinery, and forms each part of the shackle with just the required amount and thickness of metal for completing the article."

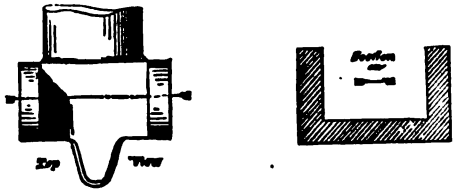
The claims, two in number, are these: "1. The carriage shaft shackle blank, so formed between dies that the body b of the blank is curved, substantially as herein shown and described. 2. The dies A and B, for making the said blank, when so constructed and arranged as to form the rounded corners and the curved body of the said blank, substantially as herein shown and described."

The plaintiff, according to his description, takes a blank in the form of a cross and, by dies of proper shape, bends the arms of the blank into an oblique direction, and the body into a curved form, the result being that the parts where the arms join the body are rounded on the outside as well as the inside; and when subsequently the curved body is straightened, there will be in it sufficient metal to form sharp outside corners, by being pushed out into them. The plaintiff's patent stops with the curved blank shown in Fig. 1 of his drawings. That blank is, in practice, afterwards formed, by other dies, into the following shape: Putting



[85] the blank into that shape is what the specification refers to when it speaks of "the straightening of the body," and "forming the sharp corners."

The defendants make shackle blanks by dies, under letters patent No. 106225, granted to Willis B. Smith, August 9, 1870. Fig. 3 of that patent is a plan view of the blank which the dies forge, and Fig. 4 is an end view of the blank. In these figures, b, b, are the ears; d is the clip; f is the shaft; g is the body of the blank; h, h, are the corners at the junction of the ears and the body; H is the whole blank. The corners h, h, are formed at right angles to each other. The specification says, that the blank H is then placed in a trimming die, and the surplus metal which projects from its edges is removed; and that the blank is then heated, and the oblique portions of the body, g, are

[86] bent, so as to throw the ears, b, b, upward, in the form shown in Fig. 5, in which operation the corners, h, h, previously formed at right angles, remain unmolested, and are square and full. The specification says: "I am aware that dies for the same purpose have been previ ously used, as shown in the patents to L. Burns June 11, 1867, and J. B. Clark, June 25, 1867 In Burns' dies, the body of the shackle is forme straight, while the ears are curved, the curv commencing at the plane where the ears are t be bent to form the corners, and therefore sai corners are not right angled, neither is it possi ble for curved ears to be both on one and th same line. In Clark's dies, the ears are forme straight, but were arranged on different line so that the edge of the blank at the side of eac ear was drawn out of a vertical line, whic seriously interferes with trimming off the su plus metal. I make no claim to either of th above or similar dies." Smith's patent claim the blank so constructed and formed, and als the dies for forging it.

The Circuit Court was of the opinion that i straightening the angularly bent back of tl defendants' blank, to get it into the shape Fig. 5 of the Smith patent, surplus metal w not pushed towards or into the corners to for them, but the existing corners were forc further apart, to the extent of one fourth of inch, by driving surplus metal into the bac between the corners.

We are of opinion that this view is corre Besides this, the arms of the defendants' blar are not bent in an oblique direction, its body not curved, and the parts where the arms jo the body are not rounded, either on the insi or on the outside. The defendants' blank, in Fig. 4 of the Smith patent, has abundan of material near the corners h, h, which are be sharp and square and are already forme while the plaintiff's blank, by reason of rounded corners, has a deficiency of materi near the points where the square corners to formed are to be.

In the efforts to make, by dies, a shack blank, which should ultimately have sharp o side corners, the inventors, in succession, h the idea of a reservoir or surplus of met Thorp had it in the downward projectio Burns had it in his sharp lower corners w curved arms. The plaintiff had it in his curv body and rounded corners. Smith has it in shape. But, in view of the state of the art, a the terms of his patent, the plaintiff must confined to a curved body, rounded corners a oblique arms, or, at least, to a shape which, practical use, in subsequent manipulation, a disposition of metal which causes a sh corner to be formed in substantially the sa way as by the use of his blank. The defe ants' blank does not have such a shape.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U

JOHN F. WOLLENSAK, Appt.,

v.

FRANK A. REIHER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 87-96.)

Patent law—construction—state of art.

In the construction of letters patent reference [illegible] to the existing state of the art at the time of the invention.

[illegible] letters patent No. 9307, original patent No. [illegible], limited to the combination claimed.

[No. 249.]

Argued Apr. 14, 15, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mssrs. L. L. Bond, Ephraim Banning and Thomas A. Banning, for appellant.

Mssrs. Wm. A. McKenney and Charles T. Brown, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

The bill in equity was filed by the appellant to restrain the alleged infringement by the defendant, of reissued letters patent No. 9307, dated July 20, 1880; the original patent, No. [illegible], dated March 11, 1878, having been issued to John F. Wollensak, the appellant, for an alleged new and useful improvement in transom lifters. This appeal is from a decree dismissing the bill for want of equity.

The specification and drawings of the patent are as follows:

"Figure 1 is a perspective view, showing one means for carrying my invention into operation. Fig. 2 is a side elevation of the same, and Fig. 3 is a detached sectional view.

"Similar letters of reference in the several figures denote the same parts.

Fig. 1.

Fig. 2

Fig. 3.

"Transom lifters have heretofore been constructed with a long upright rod or handle jointed at its upper end to a lifting arm which extends to and is connected with the side or edge of the transom sash, the sash being opened or closed by a vertical movement of the long rod. When thus constructed the upright rod is liable to be bent by the weight of the transom, owing to the want of support at or near [89] the point of junction between the long rod and the lifting arm.

"The object of my invention is to remedy this difficulty; and to such end it consists in providing the proper support, or support and guide, for the upper end of the lifting rod during its vertical movements and while at rest.

"This may be accomplished in a variety of ways, one of which I will now proceed to describe in detail, although I wish it clearly understood that I do not limit my invention to this construction, but regard it as covering broadly any construction, combination or arrangement of parts which shall support the long or operating rod and prevent it from being bent or displaced by the weight of the transom.

"In the drawings, D is the door; T, the transom sash, pivoted at top, bottom or middle, as preferred; A, the lifting arm that connects the sash to the upright rod; U, the upright rod, passing through two guides, G G′, one above and one below the point of junction with the lifting arm; R, a friction roller, secured to the lifting rod so as to bear against the wall and support said rod at its point of junction with the lifting arm; n, n, notches, cut in the upright rod to receive the end of the set screw; and s, a set screw arranged, in connection with the lower guide and the rod U, so as to be convenient of operation for the purpose of fixing the transom at any required angle. The upright rod is thus supported at three points, to wit: above, below and at the joint where it sustains the weight of the transom. It can also be adjusted and securely fastened so as to open the sash as much or as little as may be desired, and to lock it in that position.

"Having thus described my invention, what I claim as new is:

"1. The combination, with a transom, its lifting arm and operating rod, of a guide for the upper end of the operating rod, to prevent it from being bent or displaced by the weight of the transom.

"2. The roller R, arranged at the junction of the lifting arm A and upright rod U, in a transom lifter, substantially as and for the purpose described.

"The guide G′, arranged above the junction [90] of the lifting arm and upright rod, in combination with the prolonged rod U, the guide G, and arm A, substantially as and for the purpose specified."

The defenses relied on were, that the alleged invention was not patentable; that it had been anticipated by Bayley and McCluskey, to whom a patent had been granted, dated July 7, 1868, No. 79541, for an improvement in railroad car ventilators; and that the defendant's device, secured to him by a patent dated April 6, 1880, No. 226353, did not infringe that of the appellant.

The specification and drawings of the appellee's patent are as follows: [91]

"My object is to construct a lifter which will always be ready for use and answer equally well for all kinds of transoms, no matter how the same may be hinged, without exchanging or altering any of the parts, in a simple and durable manner.

In the drawings forming part of this specification, Figures 1 and 2 show a front view and side elevation of my lifter attached to a transom hinged below. Figs. 3 and 4 show the lifter for transoms hinged above. Fig. 5 shows a front view of the lifter attached to a ventilating opening hanging obliquely. Fig. 6 shows the lifter attached to a transom hinged sidewise. Fig. 7 shows the lifter attached to a skylight. Fig. 8 shows a front view, Fig. 9 a vertical longitudinal section, and Fig. 10 an inverted [92] plan, of the casing. Figs. 11 and 12 show the top of lifting rod with adjusting block. Fig. 13 shows the lower part of the lifting rod with handle attachment.

Like letters of reference indicate like parts.

The casing A, which is screwed to the door frame, is provided on the front plate with a long slot, a. Sliding loosely up and down in this casing, A, is the adjusting block B, which protrudes by the ear b, forming part of this block, through slot a. Affixed to block B is the lifting rod C, in such a manner as to allow the rod to turn in said block. For this purpose the block is provided with a wide slot, as shown in Figs. 9 and 12, into which fits loosely the pin d, which penetrates the rod C

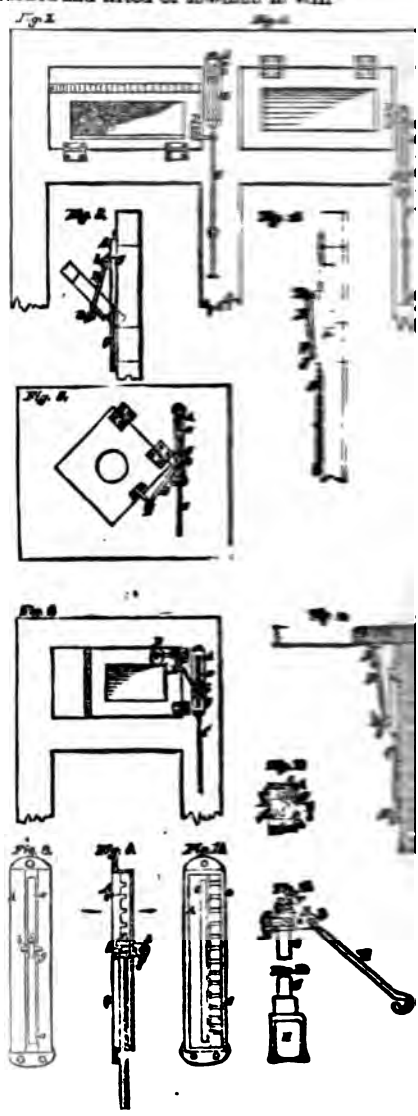
Attached to the transom in a position which is regulated by and depends upon the manner of hinging the same, at about midway between the outer swinging point and the center of hinge, is the bracket or loop D. Attached to this loop is the connecting link or arm E, which connects at its other end to the ear b of the adjusting block.

A look at the drawings will show that the upward or downward movement of the adjusting block, caused by the respective movement of the lifting rod, will be followed by a swinging movement of the transom on its hinges, through the agency of the universal link or arm E.

The inner face of the casing A (shown in Fig. 9) is provided with a series of notches, e. The upper end of the rod C is provided with a spiral spring, F, which, resting at one end in the hole f of the adjusting block B, is affixed at its other end in a groove, f', at the top of rod C. This spring F has the tendency to hold the rod C, which turns loosely in the block B, in such a position as to cause the pin d, which projects on both sides of the block B, to fall into one of the notches e provided in the casing. Thus the rod, with block B and universal link E, is held in place by the action of spring F and pin d, and can be moved only by turning the rod C slightly on its axes, so as to disengage the pin d from the notch e.

It will be seen that, whenever the hand of the operator should happen to loose its hold [93] upon the rod, the spring F will cause the pin d to fall into the next notch and arrest the further movement of the block B, and thereby the movement of the transom. The transom may thus be locked at any desired position.

The rod C is provided at its lower end with handle H, arranged with an opening for the finger, so that the rod may be with convenience turned and lifted or lowered at will.



For transoms hinged at the lower edge of frame (shown in Figs. 1 and 2) the transom w loop D hangs in the universal link E. casing A with adjusting block is fixed abo When operating the same, the block bears w its shoulders h upon the inner face of casing

For transoms hinged at the upper frame, shown in Figs. 3 and 4, the casing is faste below, so that the adjusting block may be l by the lowest notch e. While the transom closed, the universal link hangs downward f the loop D. In this case, when operated, bearing between block and casing is rever and is taken up by a pin g, penetrating thro the ear of the block and resting upon the o face of the casing A.

For oblique transoms the lifter is affixed as shown in Fig. 5. Fig. 6 shows a transom hinged at the side. The casing or lifter is affixed vertically at the hinged side, the adjusting block being in the highest notch when the transom is closed.

For transoms hinged in the middle, the lifter may be affixed either above or below the hinged center. For skylights, the lifter is affixed as shown in Fig. 7.

It will be seen that the universal link E, with its two swiveling loop ends, will always be ready to form a connection between the transom long D and the ear b of the adjusting block, no matter which way the transom may be hinged.

What I claim as my invention, and desire to secure by letters patent, is:

1. The casing A, with slot a, containing the adjusting block B, with upright rod C, in combination with chain link E and loop D, all arranged and constructed in the manner as shown, and for the purpose specified.

2. The adjusting block B, rod C, pin d, and spring F, in combination with casing A, provided with slot a and notches e, e, for the purpose set forth."

The specification of the complainant's patent undertakes broadly to describe the invention, intended to embrace in it, as "any construction, combination or arrangement of parts which shall support the long or operating rod and prevent it from being bent or displaced by the weight of the transom." But, having reference to the state of the art at the date of the alleged invention, and the claims of the patent, the patentee must be limited to the combination, with a transom, its lifting arm and operating rod, of a guide for the upper end of the operating rod, arranged beyond the junction with the lifting arm, so as to prevent the operating rod from being bent or displaced by the weight of the transom.

Putting by the question whether this is a patentable invention, in view of the existing state of the art, the claim must be regarded as a narrow one and limited to the particular combination described. In that view, the defendant's arrangement is no infringement. The difference between the two devices is pointed out, and, as we think, satisfactorily, by Mr. Dayton, an expert witness on behalf of the defendant. He says: "When the sash is opened in the Reiher transom not an ounce of its weight falls upon, either laterally or obliquely, the upright rod. The Reiher transom is provided at its lower end with a block which runs in a guide, and which is constructed, with inner flanges and an external pin, arranged to bear respectively upon the inner and outer faces of the slotted guide which he employs, and which is fixed on the frame, so as to receive all the pressure resulting from the weight of the transom. The handle of the long upright rod in the said Reiher transom is designed and serves wholly as a means of raising the foot of the lifting arm and pushing it upward or drawing it downward. As I before stated, not a particle of inward or lateral pressure falls upon the end of this rod by reason of the weight of the transom. In my judgment such upright rod may, for this purpose, be left as shown at present. I stated that the sole purpose of the long upright rod was to reach and lift the foot of the block with the end of the lifting rod. To be accurate, I also state that it serves, additionally, to operate a [95] novel locking device with which said foot piece of the lifting arm is provided.

So far, then, as the function of the guide G′ in the Wollensak patent, or the upper guide in the numbers 1 and 8 of the Wollensak transom model, is concerned, I find that the Reiher transom presents a totally different structure, operating on a totally different principle, from that exhibited in the Wollensak transom model.

In my judgment the improvements of Mr. Reiher, as exemplified in the Reiher transom exhibit, are based upon and proceed from a totally different point in the state of the art of transom lifters, from that admitted to be old in the passage quoted from Wollensak's patent specifications, and upon which Wollensak's improvements are based. It is a matter of common knowledge, I believe, and it is certainly within my personal knowledge, that transoms or flap windows were, long prior to the date of Wollensak's original patent, provided with a pivoted brace, the foot of which was movable against the frame of such window or door. This is precisely the point in the art to which Mr. Reiher in his transom lifter has applied his improvements. His improvements do not involve the removal of the weight of the transom from a direct bearing against the frame at the foot of the lifting arm, and have not that object. Mr. Reiher sought, evidently, only to provide a ready locking device by which the foot of the lifting arm may be secured at any point quickly, and by which he may at once reach the locking device and lift the transoms through the medium of the long upright rod. Said long upright rod in his case is not, therefore, made stronger or weaker with a view to prevent its bending, and is only strong enough in any case to enable him to push up the foot of the lifting arm, and, by rotating the rod, to unlock his novel fastening device. There was no fault in the old structure upon which Mr. Reiher has made his improvements like that assigned to the old device upon which Wollensak has improved, namely: the bending of the vertical rod having a lifting rod connected therewith, because said lifting arm did not, in the old device attacked by Reiher, have any vertical rod at all, and because the lifting arm dis- [96] tinctly bore against the frame instead of against the rod."

It follows that the decree of the Circuit Court, dismissing the bill for want of equity, was correct. It is accordingly affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

BEN. H. SMITH AND L. H. SPRINGER, as Admr. of WILLIAM H. TODD, Deceased, Appts., [143]

v.

JOSEPH H. WOOLFOLK.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 143-150.)

Practice—final decree—subsequent proceedings—service of process—Statute of Limitations.

1. After a final decree the parties are not bound to take notice of subsequent proceedings, unless they are served with process or enter their voluntary appearance.

2. Where a petition, filed subsequent to a decree, instituted a new litigation on new and distinct issues not raised by the original pleadings, and which could not have been properly raised by amendment, and between parties who were complainants in the original cause, service of process on the parties against whom relief is sought is necessary.

3. The statutes of Arkansas do not authorize service of process by letter or on the attorney of a party.

4. A complainant can have a decree against another complainant upon a supplemental or amended bill only upon notice to the latter, if at all.

5. A decree against a party who has not been heard, and has had no chance to be heard, is not a judicial determination of his rights, and is not entitled to respect in any other court.

6. Under the decisions of the Supreme Court of Arkansas, to bar a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage there must not only be an adverse possession for such a length of time as would bar an action of ejectment, but there must be an open and notorious denial of the mortgagee's title.

[No. 241.]

Argued and submitted Apr. 9, 1885. Decided May 4, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas.

The history and facts of the case appear in the Statement by Mr. Justice Woods:

[143] The bill in this case was filed by Joseph S. Woolfolk to foreclose a mortgage executed to him by William H. Todd, the intestate of L. H. Springer, one of the appellants, upon the Belleview plantation, situate in Chicot County, Arkansas.

The record discloses the following facts. Junius W. Craig, a citizen of Arkansas, and the owner of the Belleview plantation, had, on December 5, 1856, mortgaged it to Mrs. Lucy D. Craig, the widow of his brother, to secure $41,666 owing by him to her. Some time after the date of the mortgage, Mrs. Craig intermarried with Joseph H. Woolfolk, the appellee. Junius W. Craig died on September 17, 1858. On March 16, 1866, Joseph H. Woolfolk and Lucy D., his wife, William H. Frazier, assignee of A. D. Kelly & Co., William H. Todd and others, in [144] behalf of themselves and all other creditors of the estate of Junius W. Craig, filed their bill in equity in the Circuit Court of Chicot County, Arkansas, against Emma J. Wright, executrix of the last will of Junius W. Craig, and others, for the settlement of his estate. The case is styled in the record, "The Creditors of Junius W. Craig v. Emma J. Wright, Executrix, and others." The bill alleged that many debts had been proven against the estate, amounting in all to the sum of $236,289.34, among which was the debt above mentioned due to Mrs. Lucy D. Woolfolk, a debt due to Frazier, assignee of A. D. Kelly & Co., for $45,607.76, and a debt due to Todd for $47,181.60. The prayer of the bill was that the lands of the estate might be sold and the proceeds distributed among the creditors.

On August 30, 1867, the plaintiffs in the original bill, including William H. Tood and Joseph S. Woolfolk and Lucy D., his wife, filed a supplemental bill of revivor, in which, among other things, they averred the pendency of an intervention filed by Woolfolk and wife in the Chancery Court of Jefferson County, in the State of Kentucky, praying to have the debt due them satisfied out of the property of the estate of Craig in Kentucky. The supplemental bill prayed the same relief as the original bill. The lands of the estate were brought to sale in accordance with the prayer of the bill, and most of them, including the Belleview plantation, were purchased by Todd. Upon a report of the sale, the share of Mrs. Woolfolk in the proceeds was found by the court to be $9,831, and Todd, having paid a small part of this sum, Woolfolk, for the residue, took the two notes of Todd, payable to himself, for $4,243.20 each, to secure which Todd executed to him a mortgage on the Belleview plantation. The court having distributed the proceeds of the sales of the lands, directed the receiver to collect the available assets of the estate and report to the next term of the court. By his reports subsequently made it appeared that the receiver had been able to collect only the sum of $157, which the court allowed him to retain as his compensation, so that nothing remained of the original cause in which Woolfolk and his wife were in any way concerned.

Afterwards, on April 12, 1869, during a vacation of the court, Todd, who had become by assignment the owner of the claim of A. D Kelly & Co., filed a petition in the case of The Creditors of Craig v. Emma J. Wright, Executrix, and others, in which he alleged, among other things, that Woolfolk and wife had brought suit in the Chancery Court of Louisville, Kentucky, against Todd and the heirs o Craig, to subject to the payment of the balanc due Mr. Woolfolk from the estate of Craig, cer tain real estate in the City of Louisville. Th petition averred that the proceeds of the Louis ville real estate should be first applied to th satisfaction of the claim of A. D. Kelly & Co. which had been classed as a preferred debt b the Probate Court in Arkansas, and prayed tha Woolfolk and wife might be required to ac count for any proceeds of the Louisville real e tate received by them, according to the right of creditors as declared by the Arkansas Pr bate Court; the purpose of the petition being t subject the money arising from the sale of th Louisville property to the payment first of th claim of A. D. Kelley & Co., owned by Todd

Upon this petition the Chicot Circuit Cou made an order that Woolfolk and wife answ the same on or before the third day of the ne term, and that in default thereof the petitio should be taken as confessed, and that servi of the order, "by letter or on attorneys of sa parties, be sufficient service thereof."

The statutes of Arkansas do not authori service of process in either of the methods d rected by the order. Nevertheless, the sheri returned that he had served the order by ma ing a copy thereof to Woolfolk and wife, d rected to their address, without naming it. H. Carlton, upon whom, as attorney of Wo folk and wife, it appeared that a copy of t order had been served, filed a writing in t case, in which he said he was not their att ney, but the attorney of Todd, the petition and disclaimed any interest in the cause on b half of Woolfolk. Upon these facts the co decided that there had been sufficient service the order.

Todd having died, the Chicot County Circ Court, on January 23, 1890, by its order ente in the case of The Creditors of Craig v. Emma

Wright, executrix, and others, made L. H. Springer, his administrator, plaintiff in his stead, and upon the same day decreed, among other things, that said L. H. Springer, as administrator of Todd, "have and recover of and from Lucy D. Woolfolk and Joseph H. Woolfolk the sum of $37,995.65 out of the said funds and assets in their hands" of the estate of Junius W. Craig, "and that payment thereof be enforced by execution as upon executions at law."

This decree was based upon the report of a master who returned into court none of the evidence, if there was any, upon which it was based.

Before the decree just recited was made, Todd, on October 27, 1879, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas the present suit, to enforce, by the foreclosure of the mortgage made to secure them, payment of one of the two notes for $4,262.20 (the other having been paid), given by Todd to him for the share of Mrs. Woolfolk in the proceeds of the sale of the Belle-view plantation. L. H. Springer, the administrator of Todd's estate, and Ben. H. Smith, who before the death of Todd had acquired all his title to the mortgaged premises, were made defendants.

Smith in his answer insisted upon his right to set off the decree rendered against Woolfolk and wife, in favor of the administrator of Todd's estate, by the Circuit Court of Chicot County, on January 28, 1880, and set up the seven years' statute of Limitations of the State of Arkansas as a bar of the suit.

Springer, the administrator, adopted the answer of Smith, and offered to set off so much of the decree in favor of Todd mentioned in the answer of Smith, as would satisfy the demand of the plaintiff.

Woolfolk, whose deposition was taken, testified that since October, 1868, Carlton, on whom the order of the court above mentioned was served, had not been his attorney, and that he himself had never heard of the petition of Todd and that the final decree had been rendered against him, and that his wife, Lucy D. Woolfolk, died in 1876, four years before the entry of the decree; that from the year 1856 until her death she had resided in Kentucky, and that he had resided there all his life.

The deed of the receiver to Todd for the Belleview plantation was executed on October 9, 1868. It appeared from the evidence that Todd and the appellant Smith, who claimed under him, had been in possession of the mortgaged premises ever since that date.

Upon final hearing, the Circuit Court, on November 1, 1881, rendered a decree in favor of the plaintiff for $9,743, to bear interest from the date of the decree, and in default of payment a sale of the mortgaged premises to satisfy the same. From this decree the defendants, Benjamin H. Smith and Springer, administrator of Todd, have appealed.

Messrs. P. W. Compton and A. H. Garland, for appellants.

Mr. R. H. Rose, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court.

The decree of the Circuit Court was justified by the facts appearing of record, unless one or both of the defenses set up in the answers of Smith were maintained.

We shall consider first the defense of set-off based upon the record of the proceedings and decree of the Circuit Court of Chicot County.

We are of opinion that the decree of the Chicot Circuit Court, made on the 28th day of October, 1868, was, so far as it concerned Joseph H. Woolfolk and Lucy D., his wife, a final decree in the cause, and they were bound to take no notice of the subsequent proceedings, unless they were served with process or entered their voluntary appearance. By that decree the rights of the parties then before the court, as stated in the original bill, and all the assets of the estate of Craig actually or constructively within the jurisdiction of the court, were disposed of. It is true the receiver was directed by the decree to proceed to collect the available assets of the estate. But, as has been stated, only a small sum barely sufficient to pay the receiver's compensation, was collected by him, and this he was allowed to retain by the decree of the court. The petition filed by Todd, and the proceedings thereon subsequent to the decree of October 28, 1868, had no reference to any additional assets collected by the receiver after that date. [148]

If the matter set up in the petition of Todd had been offered as an amendment to the original bill when the latter was on final hearing and Woolfolk and wife were before the court, there is no rule of equity pleading and practice or of the jurisprudence of Arkansas by which such an amendment could have been allowed and have become the basis of a decree. Shields v. Barrow, 17 How., 130 [58 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 158]; Hardin v. Boyd, 113 U. S., 756 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1141]; Walker v. Byers, 14 Ark., 246. As was said by this court in Shields v. Barrow, ubi supra, "it is far better to require the complainant to begin anew. To insert a wholly different case is not properly an amendment and should not be considered within the rules on that subject." So that even if the decree made on the original bill was not final, the petition filed by Todd was so radical a departure from the case made and relief prayed by the original bill as to be a new suit and require service of process on the parties made defendant thereto. It instituted a new litigation on new and distinct issues not raised by the original pleadings, and between parties who were complainants in the original cause.

It is settled that one defendant cannot have a decree against a codefendant without a cross bill, with proper prayer, and process or answer, as in an original suit. Walker v. Byers [supra]; Gantt's Dig., § 4559; Cullum v. Erwin, 4 Ala., 452; Cummings v. Gill, 6 Ala., 562; Shelby v. Smith, 2 A. K. Marsh, 504. It follows, from the reason of this rule, that if one complainant can, under any circumstances, have a decree against another upon a supplemental or amended bill, it must be upon notice to the latter. After a decree disposing of the issues and in accordance with the prayer of a bill had been made, it is not competent for one of the parties, without a service of new process or appearance, to institute further proceedings on new issues and for new objects, although connected with the subject-matter of the original litigation by merely giving the new proceedings the title of the original cause. If his bill begins a new litigation, the parties against whom he seeks [149] relief are entitled to notice thereof, and without it they will not be bound. For the decree of a court rendered against a party who has not been heard, and has had no chance to be heard, is not a judicial determination of his rights, and is not entitled to respect in any other court. Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S., 274 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 914].

Upon the original bill, filed in the Chicot Circuit Court by Todd, it was not possible, therefore, for Todd to get a valid money decree against Woolfolk and his wife without new and adversary pleadings and service of process on Woolfolk and giving him his day in court. Woolfolk and wife had the right to reply on these principles of law, and were not bound to take notice of the petition of Todd and the proceedings thereunder.

Todd and his counsel appear to have seen the necessity of notice to Woolfolk and his wife, and made an attempt to give them notice of the petition filed by Todd. But the record shows that no lawful notice was served on them. It fails to show notice of any kind.

The only service which the defendants assert to have been made on Woolfolk and wife was the service on Carlton as their attorney, who was not their attorney, but, as he averred, the attorney of Todd, the petitioner, and the mailing to their address, by the sheriff, of the copy of the order. Conceding that these kinds of service, if executed according to law, were good under the Statute of Arkansas, which they are not, they would have been but substituted service, and could not support a personal decree against Woolfolk and wife. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S., 714 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 565]; Harkness v. Hyde, 98 U. S., 476 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 237]; Brooklyn v. Ins. Co., 99 U. S., 362 [Bk. 25 L. ed. 416]; Empire v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 87 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 878].

It follows that the record of the proceedings and decree of the Circuit Court of Chicot County, subsequent to the decree made in the case of Craig v. Wright, executrix, and others, on October 28, 1868, was not binding upon Woolfolk and wife, and could not be received in evidence against them. As this record contained the only proof offered by the appellants, of any set-off in behalf of any one whatever against the mortgage debt due from Todd to [150] Woolfolk which the present suit was brought to enforce, it follows that the defense of set-off pleaded in the answers of the appellants failed for want of proof, even conceding that they were entitled to make the set-off.

It remains to consider the plea of the Statute of Limitations. The note secured by mortgage, which is the basis of this suit, fell due October 30, 1870, and the suit was brought October 27, 1879. It is insisted that the suit to foreclose the mortgage was, under the law of Arkansas, barred in seven years from the maturity of the note. In the case of Birnie v. Main, 29 Ark., 591, it was declared by the Supreme Court of Arkansas, that, "to bar a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage, there must not only be an adverse possession for such length of time as would bar an action of ejectment, but there must be an open and notorious denial of the mortgagee's title; otherwise the possession of the mortgagor was the possession of the mo gagee." And in Coldcleugh v. Johnson, 34 Ar 312, it was said by the same court, that "t possession of a mortgagor is not to be deem adverse until he makes some claim or does so open and notorious act adverse to the rights the mortgagee." See also Hardin v. Boyd [pra]. The only evidence in the record of a such act, by either Smith or Todd, was the nial by Todd, in his answer filed on Ap 18, 1876, in a suit brought by Woolf against him in the Circuit Court of Ow County, Kentucky, on one of the mortg notes, that he was indebted to Woolfolk th on. Up to that date, at least, the possess of Todd and Smith was the possession of Wo folk. This suit to foreclose the mortgage w not, therefore, barred.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U

G. DE ROSSET LAMAR, Executor of G AWAY B. LAMAR, Deceased, Plff. in Err.

v.

HUGH McCULLOCH.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 163-188.)

Captured or abandoned cotton—construction statutes affecting action of trover—bar.

*Under sec. 2 of the Act of July 27, 1868, chap (15 Stat. at L. 243), now embodied in sec. 1059 of Revised Statutes, in an action of trover brou against a former Secretary of the Treasury of United States, in a court other than the Cour Claims, to recover a sum of money as the valu certain cotton, alleged to have been the pri property of the plaintiff, the defendant plea that the cotton had, in an insurrectionary S been taken, received and collected, as capture abandoned property, into the hands of a spe agent appointed by the defendant while such Se tary, to receive and collect captured or abando property in that State, under sec. 1 of the Ac March 12, 1863, chap. 120 (12 Stat. at L., 820); tha provisions of that Act were carried out in re to the cotton, as being captured or abandoned tor; that all the acts done by the defendant resp ing the cotton were done by him throughsuch ag in the administration of and in virtue and u color of the Act of 1863; and that, by force of of the Act of 1863, and of sec. 3 of the Act of the action was barred, and was exclusively w the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims. It appe that the cotton had been taken, so far as the de ant was concerned, as being captured or aband property, under a claim, made by him in good f to that effect, in the administration of and u color of the Act of 1863; Held, that, without r ence to the question whether the cotton w fact abandoned or captured property withi Act of 1863, the fact that it was taken as being under such claim, made in good faith, was a b the action, under the Act of 1868, and sec. 1059 o Revised Statutes.

[No. 828.]

Argued Oct. 15, 16, 1885. Decided Oct. 26,

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the U States for the Southern District of York.

The history and facts of the case app the opinion of the court.

Messrs. George Ticknor Curtis an ward N. Dickerson, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. H. Garland, Atty-Gen., for de ant in error.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of trover, originally brought by Gustavus R. Lamar, against Hugh McCulloch in the Supreme Court of New York, in September, 1873, and removed into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, by the defendant. The declaration was framed to recover $150,280, as the value of 378 bales of cotton, known as the Thomasville cotton, and $110,760, as the value of 426 other bales of cotton, known as the Florida cotton. The suit was afterwards discontinued as to the Thomasville cotton. The defendant pleaded (1) the general issue; (2) that the defendant was the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and the 426 bales had, in the State of Florida, which had been designated as in insurrection against the lawful government of the United States by the Proclamation of the President of the United States, dated July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. at L., 1,266), "been taken, received and collected, as abandoned or captured property, into the hands of certain special agents, duly appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, to recover and collect captured or abandoned property" in said State, in pursuance of the provisions of the last section of the Act of Congress approved March 12, 1863, chap. 120 (12 Stat. at L., 820), and the Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; that "all the other provisions of said Act of Congress were carried out in regard to said bales of cotton, as being captured or abandoned cotton"; that all acts done by the defendant "respecting said cotton, were done by him, through the agents aforesaid, as such officers of the United States as aforesaid, and in the administration of and in virtue and under color of the aforesaid Acts of Congress"; and that, by force of § 3 of the said Act of March 12, 1863, and § 3 of the Act of Congress approved July 27, 1868, chap. 276 (15 Stat. at L., 243), the plaintiff "has no legal cause of action herein, and is barred from such action, which, by force of the statutes aforesaid, is exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims"; (3) that this action is brought against the defendant "for or on account of private property taken by him as an officer or agent of the United States, in virtue or under color of" said Act of March 12, 1863, and the Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; that the acts done by the defendant, "in regard to said private property, were done by him as an officer or agent of the United States, in the administration of and in virtue and under color of said Act" of March 12, 1863, and said Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; and that, by force of § 3 of said Act of July 27, 1868, the plaintiff has no legal cause of action against the defendant. There were other pleas to which it is not necessary to refer.

To the general issue the plaintiff put in a replication. To the second plea he put in two replications: (1) That the defendant seized and detained the cotton mentioned in the plea in his own wrong and without the cause alleged, concluding to the country; (2) that the cotton was not property abandoned or captured in the State of Florida, "and had not been taken, received and collected, as abandoned or captured property, into the hands of special agents duly appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, to receive and collect captured and abandoned property" in said State, in pursuance of the statutes cited, and was "not seized by any agent or officer of the United States as such abandoned or captured property, and that all acts done" by the defendant "respecting the said cotton, were not done by him through the agents aforesaid, as the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and in the administration of and in virtue and under color of" the Acts of Congress set forth in the plea, concluding to the country. To the third plea the plaintiff replied, that the cotton was not private property taken by the defendant "as an officer or agent of the United States in virtue or under color of" the Acts of Congress mentioned in the plea, and that the acts done by him in regard to the cotton "were not done by him as an officer or agent of the United States, in the administration of and in virtue and under color of" said Acts of Congress, concluding to the country.

To these replications the defendant put in similiters. The case was at issue in March, 1874. In October, 1874, Mr. Lamar died, and, the present plaintiff having been appointed and qualified as his executor in November, 1874, an order was made in November, 1875, continuing the action in his name as executor. The cause was tried before a jury in November, 1884. At the close of the plaintiff's evidence, and without any evidence being put in by the defendant, the court directed the jury to find a verdict for the defendant, "upon the ground that the Court of Claims had exclusive jurisdiction of the cause of action set forth in the plaintiff's declaration, and in the evidence as given thereunder, by virtue of the statute of March 12, 1863, and the statutes passed amendatory thereof." The plaintiff excepted to this ruling, and a verdict was rendered for the defendant, followed by a judgment in his favor, to review which the plaintiff has brought this writ of error. [166]

The case made out by the plaintiff by his evidence set forth in the bill of exceptions, as applied to the pleadings above set forth, was this, so far as such evidence is material, in the view we take of the case:

On the 16th of November, 1865, one Samuel G. Cabell, being in Washington, addressed to the defendant, who was then the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, a written application or petition, asking for compensation for certain services performed by him "in collecting and securing for the Government of the United States certain captured property therein enumerated." No copy of this letter is put in evidence, and its tenor is to be gathered from subsequent correspondence.

On the 17th of November, 1865, the defendant sent to Mr. Cabell the following letter:

"Treasury Department, November 17th, 1865.

Sir: I have received your application for compensation for certain services performed by you under an appointment from J. H. Alexander, Esq., ass't special agent at Pensacola and Apalachicola, Fla., in collecting and securing for the Government of the United States certain captured property therein enumerated.

In fixing the amount of your compensation Mr. Alexander transcended his authority, and promised you an amount larger than has been approved by me in any case, and much larger, in my opinion, than the circumstances in these cases would justify. [167]

[illegible] question [illegible] may agent [illegible] from the [illegible] however, [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] return [illegible] cotton [illegible] ro- [illegible] day; [illegible] com- [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] you [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

of Sept. 6th last, I have now the honor to make the following report:

"It will be seen by an official transcript of the books of the 'custom-house,' Jacksonville, Fla., collector's office, January 25th, 1866, and herewith submitted, marked 'Exhibit A,' I shipped on board the brig Lewis Clark one hundred and seventy-two (172) bales of cotton, weighing ninety-two thousand one hundred and one (92,101) pounds; also shipped on board the schooner Queen of the West, ninety-five (95) bales of cotton, weighing forty-eight thousand three hundred and twenty-one (48,321) pounds, all of which cotton was marked 'S. G. C.' and consigned by me to Simeon Draper, Esq., cotton agent, New York City.

"The above mentioned cotton which was seized by me, as, was owned by the Exporting and Importing Company of Georgia (president, G. B. Lamar), a company engaged in the sole business of blockade running, and holding said property for the purpose of aiding and abetting the rebellion, as stated in my communication to you of the 16th of Nov. last.

"Most of the cotton purchased for the above company in Florida and Southern Georgia was made by one who signs himself as 'W. W. Cheever, agent for G. B. Lamar,' as will more fully hereafter appear when reference is made to certain lots of cotton by me seized and shipped. It also appears that the said cotton was purchased by the agents of Mr. Lamar and left on the plantations subject to their order."

This letter proceeds to give an account of the various lots of cotton making up the 272 bales, stating where in Florida they were seized or taken by Mr. Cabell, and transmitting various documents, and among them, an account showing that he had paid out $6,654, as expenses relative to the cotton, before it was shipped to New York. The letter says: "It will thus be seen, from the papers submitted, that I have been engaged since July last, in seizing and otherwise obtaining this two hundred and seventy-two (272) bales of cotton for the Government"; and concludes with asking a compensation for the services, one third of the cotton, or 90¾ bales.

On the 27th of February, 1866, Mr. Cabell presented to the Treasury Department a petition, setting forth that, on the 22d of July, 1865, J. H. Alexander, then acting assistant supervising special agent of the United States Treasury Department for the 9th special agency, "under the regulations of said department for the collection of captured and abandoned property in the disloyal States," had appointed Mr. Cabell acting aid to the assistant special treasury agent for the District of Florida, "to collect and receive all the cotton, tobacco and other property belonging to the United States"; that, in July, 1865, one Douglas shipped from Tallahassee to one Ottman, a reputed treasury agent at Jacksonville, Florida, 268 bales of "Government cotton," which Mr. Cabell then claimed were taken from his district and should of right be under his control; and that, in August, 1865, Mr. Cabell paid the expenses of preparing the cotton for shipment, which Ottman had not paid, being $6,883.89. The petition prayed that Mr. Cabell be paid the $6,883.89, and be allowed compensation for his services in the matter.

On the 4th of May, 1866, the defendant sent the following letter to Mr. Draper, the United States Cotton Agent at New York:

"May 4, 1866.

"Application is made to me by S. G. Cabell, Esq., for the allowance to him of a portion of certain two hundred and seventy-two (272) bales of cotton collected by him, and shipped to you from Jacksonville, Fla., on the 25th of January last, and for a portion also of certain two hundred and sixty-eight (268) bales alleged to have been collected by him and turned over or shipped to Reuben Ottman, Esq., assistant special agent at Jacksonville, Fla.

I am not at present prepared to make a division of either lot, but it appearing, to my satisfaction, that Mr. Cabell has paid, as expenses incidental to securing the first lot, the sum of six thousand six hundred and fifty-four dollars ($6,654), and on the second the sum of six thousand eight hundred and eighty-three dollars and eighty-nine cents ($6,883,89), which amounts should probably be reimbursed, you are hereby authorized and directed to pay to his attorneys, Messrs. Hughes, Denver & Peck, the two amounts named, charging the first as an item of expense against the two hundred and seventy-two bales above referred to, and the second as a similar item against the shipment of cotton received by you from Mr. Ottman at Jacksonville.

Mr. Cabell also asks a per diem allowance as a compensation for his time, personal services, and expenses in connection with the cotton named; for this purpose you are also authorized and instructed to pay his attorneys, Messrs. Hughes, Denver & Peck, the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars ($350), being at the rate of five dollars ($5) per day from the 17th of Nov. last, the date of my letter authorizing him to take action in the premises, to the 25th of January, the date of the shipment by him of the two hundred and seventy-two (272) bales mentioned, from Jacksonville, making a charge of this amount, also, as an item of expense against the two hundred and seventy-two (272) bales.

These several sums should be charged against Mr. Cabell on your books, and will be deducted from any portion of cotton hereafter allotted, or any allowance made to him, on a final settlement of his claims.

You will, of course, require proper receipts for the money thus paid, and promptly report your action hereunder to the Department. [174]

Very respectfully. H. M'Culloch,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Simeon Draper, Esq., U. S. Cotton Agent, New York."

The $13,887.89 was paid by Mr. Draper, May 7th, 1866. The 272 bales of cotton were sold at auction by Mr. Draper, at New York, September 12, 1866, and produced the net sum, above expenses of sale, of $28,792.19, which sum was paid into the Treasury of the United States. When the 268 bales were sold does not appear, but the net proceeds of it, at New York, above expenses, appear to have been $42,883.76, and it is assumed they were paid into the Treasury.

On the 25th of May, 1867, the defendant sent to the Commissioner of Customs the following letter:

"May 25, 1867.

Sir: In compliance with the promise made to him in my letter of November 17th, 1865, I have decided to pay to Mr. Samuel G. Cabell, as full compensation for information furnished, services performed, and expenses incurred by him, in the collection, putting in order and shipment to New York of certain 272 and 268 bales of cotton, ex brig Lewis Clark, and schooners Queen of the West, Julia Crawford, and R. E. Pecker, etc., and for information furnished and expenses incurred by him touching the cottons captured at Thomasville, Ga., and other cottons claimed by the Georgia Exporting and Importing Company, or by G. B. Lamar, and held by Government as captured or abandoned property, the sum of four thousand eight hundred and eighty-one dollars and ten cents ($4,881.10).

You will, therefore, please issue your requisition upon F. E. Spinner, Esq., Treasurer, U. S., special agent, the same to be satisfied out of any funds in his hands as proceeds of captured and abandoned property, for the amount named, viz.: $4,881.10, in favor of George Peabody Este, whose full power of attorney to act in the premises is on file in this office. [175]

The draft, therefore, when issued, should be handed to Mr. S. H. Kauffman, a clerk in this office, for delivery to the payee, under such instructions relative thereto as he may have or receive.

Very respectfully, H. M'Culloch,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Nathan Sargent, Esq're. Commissioner of Customs."

This settlement was made on the basis of giving to Mr. Cabell one fourth part of the gross value of the cotton as sold at New York, and deducting therefrom the $6,654 and the $6,883.80, and also one fourth part of the expenses on the cotton before its shipment at Jacksonville, and for its transit from there to New York, and at New York, and adding $500 in respect of the Thomasville cotton, making a total allowance of $4,881.10, which sum was paid to Mr. Este, for Mr. Cabell, by Mr. Spinner, as special agent, by a draft on the Treasurer of the United States, May 27, 1867.

[181] The foregoing written documents show the connection of the defendant with the case. Mr. Cabell's application or petition of November 16, 1865, claimed compensation for having collected or secured cotton, cedar timber and cattle. It enumerated the property. The defendant, in his letter of November 17, 1865, to Mr. Cabell, refers to it all as "captured property," but says that as none of it had been actually placed in the possession of any agent of the Treasury Department, or removed from the places where it had been discovered, he desires that Mr. Cabell will return South and do all in his power "to secure to the Government the cotton named" by him, and "to transport the same to a proper place of shipment." Only cotton was to be secured; and it is a fair interpretation of the letter, that the cotton was to be secured as having been "captured property," and that it was referred to by the defendant as a part of the "captured property" enumerated by Mr. Cabell. Mr. Cabell, in his letter to the defendant of December 11, 1865, speaks of the 170 bales he had already shipped as cotton "formerly owned by the Exporting and Importing Company." The defendant, in his letter to Mr. Cabell of December 29, 1865, says that his letter of November 17, 1865, was intended to empower Mr. Cabell to take into his possession "any cotton belonging to Government not in the custody of any other officer of the department, and which might not otherwise be secured by them"; that a perusal of that letter will show that it was not intended to do more than secure his services in connection with the lots of property which had been specified by him; and that "no indiscriminate seizures and collections were contemplated by it." Mr. Cabell's letter to the defendant, of February 17, 1866, says that the 272 bales he had shipped from Jacksonville to New York on January 25, 1866, were "owned by the Exporting and Importing Company of Georgia (president, G. B. Lamar), a company engaged in the sole business of blockade-running and holding said property for the purpose of aiding and abetting the rebellion." In his petition of February 27, 1866, to the defendant, Mr. Cabell states that he had been appointed by Mr. Alexander, in July, 1865, to "collect and receive all the cotton, tobacco and other property belonging to the United States," and speaks of the 268 [182] bales as "government cotton," and speaks of Mr. Alexander as agent of the Treasury Department, "under the regulations of said department for the collection of captured and abandoned property in the disloyal States." In his letter of May 25, 1867, to Mr. Sargent, the defendant speaks of the 272 and 268 bales as being "held by Government as captured or abandoned property," and directs the $4,881.10 to be paid out of the "proceeds of captured and abandoned property."

By section 1 of the Act of March 12, 1863, chap. 120 (12 Stat. at L., 820), the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to appoint special agents "to receive and collect all abandoned or captured property" (with specified exceptions), in any State designated as in insurrection by the Proclamation of the President, of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. at L., 1266). Florida was such a State. By section 2, the property collected, if not appropriated to public use, was to be forwarded to a place of sale in the loyal States, and sold at auction, and the proceeds paid into the Treasury of the United States. By section 3, the Secretary of the Treasury was to cause "books of account to be kept, showing from whom such property was received, the cost of transportation, and proceeds of the sale thereof." Section 3 further provided as follows: "And any person claiming to have been the owner of any such abandoned or captured property may, at any time within two years after the suppression of the rebellion, prefer his claim to the proceeds thereof in the Court of Claims; and on proof to the satisfaction of said court, of his ownership of said property, of his right to the proceeds thereof, and that he has never given any aid or comfort to the present rebellion, to receive the residue of such proceeds, after the deduction of any purchase money which may have been paid, together with the expense of transportation and sale of said property, and any other lawful expenses attending the disposition thereof."

By section 3 of the Act of July 27, 1868, chap. 276 (15 Stat. at L., 243), it was declared to have been the true intent and meaning of the Act of March 12, 1863, "that the remedy given in cases of seizure made under said Act, by preferring claim in the Court of Claims, should be conclusive, precluding the owner of any property taken by agent, of the Treasury Department as abandoned or captured property, in virtue or under color of said Act, from suit at common law, or any other mode of redress whatever, before any court or tribunal other than said Court of Claims; and in all cases in which suits of trespass, replevin, detinue, or any other form of action, may have been brought and are now pending, or shall hereafter be be brought, against any person, for or on account of private property taken by such person as an officer or agent of the United States in virtue or under color of the Act aforesaid," "the defendant may and shall plead or allege in bar thereof, that such act was done or omitted to be done by him as an officer or agent of the United States, in the administration of one of the Acts of Congress aforesaid, or in virtue or under color thereof, and such plea or allegation, if the fact be sustained by the proof, shall be, and shall be deemed and adjudged in law to be, a complete and conclusive bar to any suit or action." This statute was in force when the suit was brought, and when the issues in were joined and the provision as to the jurisdiction of, and conclusive remedy in, the Court of Claims, is re-enacted, in substance, in section [illegible] of the Revised Statutes, which gives jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear and determine all claims for the proceeds of captured or abandoned property, as provided by the Act of March 12, 1863, or by the Act of July 2, [illegible], chap. 226 (13 Stat. at L., 375), and then adds: "Provided, That the remedy given in cases of seizure under the said Acts, by preferring claim in the Court of Claims, shall be exclusive, precluding the owner of any property seized by agents of the Treasury Department as abandoned or captured property, in virtue or under color of said Acts, from suit at common law or any other mode of redress whatever, in any court other than said Court of Claims."

The occasion for the enactment of the provisions of section 3 of the Act of July 27, 1868, appears to have been this: "One Elgee brought a suit in a state court in Missouri, against one Lovell, to recover the possession of some bales of cotton. Lovell removed the case into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Districts of Missouri, on the ground that he was in possession of the cotton as agent for the Government of the United States, which claimed it as abandoned property, under the Act of March 12, 1863. Elgee having died, the suit was continued in the name of his administrator. It was decided by the Circuit Court, held by Mr. Justice Miller and District Judges Treat and Krekel, in October, 1865, and is reported in 1 Wool. 1 in Elgee's Admr. v. Lovell. The opinions of the court, for there were two, were given by Mr. Justice Miller. To the ordinary decisions in defence the defendant pleaded that the cotton had, before the suit was brought, and in March, 1864, been taken, received and collected in the State of Mississippi, as abandoned property, into the possession of one Hart, a special agent, appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury to receive and collect abandoned or captured property, under the Act of March 12, 1863, Mississippi having been designated as an insurrection, by the Proclamation of July 1, 1862, that the cotton was in possession of the defendant, at St. Louis, as agent of the United States, in his transit to a place of sale, and he was holding it for and on behalf of the United States and not otherwise; and that the cotton was claimed by the United States as abandoned property, under said Act. The plaintiff demurred to this plea, and the demurrer was overruled. The Circuit Court said, in regard to the plea: 'It shows that the cotton mentioned in the declaration was seized as abandoned property in one of the districts declared by the Proclamation to be in a State of insurrection, by a duly appointed agent of the Treasury Department for that district, and that, when this suit was brought, it was held by the defendant as an officer of the Government, with a view of disposing of it under the Act. The objection taken is, that it does not aver that the property, when taken possession of by the treasury agent was captured or abandoned property, or in any other manner show that it was rightfully seized. * * * The question is, whether Congress intended to make the remedy given by the Act exclusive of all others, or to permit the Treasury agents to be sued for the possession of such property wherever the party aggrieved might find a court of general jurisdiction. * * * The Act evidently contemplates that, in some instances at least, property will be seized which ought to be returned to its owner, or for which compensation should be made by paying him the proceeds. Otherwise it were unnecessary to provide any means of determining when a return should be made. And the remedy applied to property taken by mistake, or by the unjustifiable act of the agent, equally as to property which has been abandoned or captured. * * * I am of opinion that Congress intended to prescribe to all claimants who should prove their loyalty and their right to the property, this remedy for all cases of seizure by agents, under this law, whether made in a strict accordance with its provisions or not." Upon this decision, the plaintiff filed a replication to the plea, which averred that the cotton before it came into the possession of Hart, was the property of Elgee; that by the Proclamation of the President, of December 8, 1863 (13 Stat. at L. 737), there was promised a full pardon and amnesty, with restoration of all their rights of property, except as to slaves, to all those living in the insurrectionary districts, except certain classes of persons therein mentioned, who should thereafter take, subscribe and keep inviolate a certain oath therein prescribed; that, before the suit was brought, Elgee, then living in said insurrectionary districts, not being one of the excepted persons, took and subscribed the oath required and had kept it inviolate; and that his rights of property in the cotton were thereby restored to him. The defendant demurred to this replication. The demurrer was sustained by the Circuit Court, which held, in its decision, that as the Act of March 12, 1863, contemplated that the property of loyal citizens might and would be taken under it, and as the only remedy of a loyal citizen of a loyal State, in respect to property owned by him, seized by a treasury agent in an insurrectionary district, as abandoned property, was by an application to the Court of Claims, pardon and amnesty could not place the disloyal citizen in any better position than that occupied by the loyal citizen.

[185]

There was a final judgment against the plaintiff, and the case was brought into this court by a writ of error sued out by Elgee's administrator, and was No. 63 on the docket of December Term, 1867. Briefs for both parties were filed, and the case was argued orally. The court was equally divided in opinion, eight judges sitting, and the judgment was consequently affirmed on the 27th of January, 1868. Subsequently the bill which became a law on the 27th of July, 1868, was introduced into the House of Representatives and passed by it and by the Senate, and was approved by the President. It is proper to assume, from this history and the contents of the Act, that it was introduced and passed because of the difficulties which had attended the decision of this court in the Elgee Case.

[186]

It is manifest, we think, that section 3 of the Act of July 27, 1868, was intended to cover, and does cover, a case like the present. The Act, in terms, includes a suit for what is in fact private property, taken by an agent of the United States, as being abandoned or captured property, in the administration of the Act of March 12, 1863, or in virtue thereof, or under color thereof. Whatever doubt there may have been before the Act of July 27, 1868, was passed, on facts such as those in Elgin's Case, there can be none as to this case, on its facts, under the language of that Act. Even though the property taken was private property, if it was taken by an officer or agent of the United States, under a claim that it was abandoned or captured property, in the administration of the Act of March 12, 1863, or in virtue thereof, or under color thereof, the jurisdiction of every court but the Court of Claims, in respect to every mode of redress, is taken away, when it is pleaded or alleged, in defense, that the property was taken by the defendant, as such officer or agent, in the administration of the Act, or in virtue or under color thereof, and that fact is sustained by the proof. The fact to be sustained by the proof is, not that the property was in fact abandoned or captured property, but that it was in fact taken as being such, on a claim to that effect, in the administration of the Act, or in virtue of it, or under color of it. Of course, there must be good faith, or there can be no color. The claim must not be made in bad faith. In McLeod v. Callicott, Chase's Decisions, 443, Chief Justice Chase, in speaking of section 3 of the Act of July 27, 1868, says [187] that, if a person proceeds in good faith, believing himself to be warranted, as an officer of the Government, in taking charge of property under the Act, he is covered by its provisions; and that, in such case, although the acts he does as such officer are done under a mistake as to the character of the property, he is protected by the Act against a private suit. This we believe to be the proper interpretation of the statute. In Lammon v. Feusier, 111 U. S., 17 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 337], where a marshal, having an attachment against the property of one person, levied it on the property of a stranger, it was held by this court that the sureties on the official bond of the marshal were liable to the stranger, because the marshal had acted colore officii, although he had acted without sufficient warrant.

This suit is not against Mr. Cabell. No accusation of bad faith against Mr. Cabell can affect the defendant, except so far as the acts of Mr. Cabell were authorized in advance by the defendant, or sanctioned or approved or ratified by him with full knowledge. Starting out with the fact that it cannot be held that in the beginning the defendant gave any authority to Mr. Cabell except in regard to "captured property," we find that he impressed upon Mr. Cabell the fact that he was authorized only to take cotton belonging to the Government, and nothing beyond the specific cotton which Mr. Cabell had named; that the proceedings Mr. Cabell was authorized to take in regard to such cotton were proceedings under the Act of March 12, 1863, to collect it and ship it, so that it might be sold; and that the representations made in regard to all the cotton, by Mr. Cabell to the defendant, after it was shipped to New York, were such as to indicate that it was "government cotton," and to warrant the defendant in fairly regarding it as cotton which had been "captured," within the Act; and we think the defendant had the right to treat it as cotton to be sold under the Act, and to see that its proceeds were paid into the Treasury to await adjudication by the Court of Claim called upon to take upon himsel bility of restoring the cotton or
Mr. Lamar, under any represen are shown to have been made t
Lamar in regard to the ownership
or in regard to its status as not b or abandoned property, or in status of Mr. Lamar as having tak oath on January 6, 1865, under tion of December 8, 1863 (13 St
Nor do we think these conclusio
by the contents of the written op
Mr. Eames, in December, 1866.

As to the general instructions is of the Treasury Department, by
of the Treasury, on the 27th of
are of opinion that, notwithstan structions, the Secretary of the the right to give to Mr. Cabell t thority which he gave to him.

Under these views, the instruc
to find a verdict for the defendant,
stated in the instruction, was co

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, S

ARTHUR NORRINGTON, *
v.
JAMES A. WRIGHT E

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 1

*Mercantile contracts—time or pl
as a warranty or condition scission.*

*1. In a mercantile contract, a sta
tive of the subject matter, or of so cident, such as the time or place
ordinarily to be regarded as a war
tion precedent, upon the failure o
ance of which the party aggrieve
ate the whole contract.

2. Under a contract made in Ph
the sale of "5,000 tons iron rails, for a European port or ports, at the ra tons per month, beginning Febr
whole contract to be shipped befor
at $45 per ton of 2,240 lbs. custom-h ship Philadelphia; settlement cash
of bills accompanied by custom-h
of weight; sellers not to be compe
any parcel lost after shipment";
bound to ship 1,000 tons in each mon
ary to June inclusive, except that important deficiencies may be m
and if only 400 tons are shipped in 885 tons in March, and the buyer a for the February shipment on its ar
at the stipulated price and above it and in ignorance that no more has February, and is first informed of the arrival of the March shipment
cepting or paying for either of t
scind the contract by reason of th
about 1,000 tons in each of the mon
and March.

[No. 13.]

Argued Jan. 20, 21, 1885. De 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Cour States for the Eastern Distri
vania.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice GRAY

NOTE.—Sales; warranty or cond breach; rescission.
See Pope v. Allis and note, post.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Samuel Dickson and John C. Bullitt, for plaintiff in error:

A partial failure in the performance of a divisible contract does not justify the other party in refusing to go on with it. If the covenant broken goes to the entire consideration, the object of the contract is defeated, but if capable of compensation, the only remedy is in damages.

The leading American case is Milldam Foundry Co. v. Hovey, 21 Pick., 417, where the entire subject of dependent covenants and conditions precedent is discussed and the authorities reviewed.

See also Johnson v. Johnson, 3 Bos. & Pul., [illegible]; Stoddart v. Smith, 5 Binn., 355; Graver v. [illegible] 80 Pa. St., 88; 2 Chit. Cont., 1092, citing Franklin v. Miller, 4 Adol. & E. 268, 599; Johnson v. Young, 4 B. & S., 296; Weaver v. [illegible], 6 Taunt., 155; Keenan v. Brown, 21 [illegible]; Simson v. Crippin, L. R. 8 Q. B., [illegible]. For a full discussion, see 21 Am. Law Reg., [illegible], note by Lucius S. Landreth.

Mr. Richard C. McMurtrie, for defendants in error:

Where the contract intends that there shall be performance in distinct parcels at different times, a breach in respect of any installment at the option of the other side absolves him from any further performance.

[illegible] v. Burness, 3 Best & S., 755; Canal Co. v. [illegible], 6 Wall., 562 (73 U. S., bk. 18, L. [illegible]); King Phillip Mills v. Slater, 12 R. [illegible]; Doe v. Dey, 3 Wend., 361; Catlin v. [illegible], 26 N. Y., 217; Elting Woolen Co. v. [illegible], 5 Daly, 417; Hill v. Rewee, 11 Met., [illegible]; Miner v. Bradley, 22 Pick., 459; Reynold v. Voorhees, 30 Pa. St., 116; Shinn v. [illegible], 60 Pa. St., 182; Dwinel v. Howard, 30 [illegible]; Tyson v. Doe, 15 Vt., 571; Haines v. [illegible], 30 N. H., 309; Bradley v. King, 44 [illegible]; Chit. Cont., 913, note, stating this to be the American rule. See also Benj. Sales, [illegible] note, in Corbin's ed. of 1883; 1 Whart. Cont. § [illegible].

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court.

This was an action of assumpsit, brought by Arthur Norrington, a citizen of Great Britain, trading under the name of A. Norrington & Company, against James A. Wright and other citizens of Pennsylvania, trading under the name of Peter Wright & Sons, upon the following contract:

"Philadelphia, January 19, 1880. Sold to [illegible] Peter Wright & Sons, for account of A. Norrington & Co., London: Five thousand [illegible] tons old T iron rails, for shipment from a European port or ports, at the rate of about [illegible] thousand (1,000) tons per month, beginning February, 1880, but whole contract to be shipped before August 1st, 1880, at forty-five [illegible] per ton of 2,240 lbs. custom-house weight, ex ship Philadelphia. Settlement cash on presentation of bills accompanied by custom-house certificate of weight. Sellers to notify buyers of shipments with vessels' names as soon as known by them. Sellers not to be compelled to replace any parcel lost after shipment. Sellers, when possible, to secure to buyers right to name discharging berth of vessels at Philadelphia.

Edward J. Etting, Metal Broker."

The declaration contained three counts. The first count alleged the contract to have been for the sale of about 5,000 tons of T iron rails to be shipped at the rate of about 1,000 tons a month, beginning in February, and ending in July, 1880. The second count set forth the contract verbatim. Each of these two counts alleged that the plaintiffs, in February, March, April, May, June and July, shipped the goods at the rate of about 1,000 tons a month, and notified the shipments to the defendants; and further alleged the due arrival of the goods at Philadelphia, the plaintiff's readiness to deliver the goods and bills thereof, with custom-house certificates of weight, according to the contract, and the defendants' refusal to accept them. The third count differed from the second only in averring that 400 tons were shipped by the plaintiff in February and accepted by the defendants, and that the rest was shipped by the plaintiffs at the rate of about 1,000 tons a month in March, April, May, June and July. The defendants pleaded non assumpsit. The material facts proved at the trial were as follows: [190]

The plaintiff shipped from various European ports 400 tons by one vessel in the last part of February, 885 tons by two vessels in March, 1,571 tons by five vessels in April, 850 tons by three vessels in May, 1,000 tons by two vessels in June, and 300 tons by one vessel in July, and notified to the defendants each shipment.

The defendants received and paid for the February shipment upon its arrival in March, and in April gave directions at what wharves the March shipments should be discharged on their arrival; but on May 14, about the time of the arrival of the March shipments, and having been then for the first time informed of the amounts shipped in February, March and April, gave Etting written notice that they should decline to accept the shipments made in March and April, because none of them were in accordance with the contract; and in answer to a letter from him of May 16, wrote him on May 17 as follows: "We are advised that what has occured does not amount to an acceptance of the iron under the circumstances and the terms of the contract. You had a right to deliver in parcels, and we had a right to expect the stipulated quantity would be delivered until the time was up in which that was possible. Both delivering and receiving were thus far conditional on there being thereafter a complete delivery in due time and of the stipulated article. On the assumption that this time had arrived, and that you had ascertained that you did not intend to or could not make any further deliveries for the February and March shipments, we gave you the notice that we declined accepting those deliveries. As to April, it is too plain, we suppose, to require any remark. If we are mistaken as to our obligation for the February and March shipments, of course we must abide the consequences; but if we are right, you have not performed your contract, as you certainly have not for the April shipments. There is then the very serious and much debated question, as we are advised, whether the failure to [191] make the stipulated shipments in February or March has absolved us from the contract. If it does, we of course will avail ourselves of this advantage."

On May 18 Etting wrote to the defendants, insisting on their liability for both past and future shipments, and saying, among other things: "In respect to the objection that there had not been a complete delivery in due time, of the stipulated article, I beg to call your attention to the fact that while the contract is for five thousand tons, it expressly stipulates that deliveries may be made during six months, and that they are only to be at the rate of one thousand tons per month." "As to April, while it seems to me 'too plain to require any remark,' I do not see how it can seem so to you, unless you intend to accept the rails. If you object to taking all three shipments made in that month, I shall feel authorized to deliver only two of the cargoes, or, for that matter, to make the delivery of precisely one thousand tons. But I think I am entitled to know definitely from you whether you intend to reject the April shipments, and if so upon what ground, and also whether you are decided to reject the remaining shipments under the contract. You say in your last paragraph that you shall avail yourselves of the advantage, if you are absolved from the contract, but as you seem to be in doubt whether you can set up that claim or not, I should like to know definitely what is your intention."

On May 19 the defendants replied: "We do not read the contract as you do. We read it as stipulating for monthly shipments of about one thousand tons, beginning in February, and that the six months' clause is to secure the completion of whatever had fallen short in the five months. As to the meaning of 'about,' it is settled as well as such a thing can be; and certainly neither the February, March or April shipments are within the limits." "As to the proposal to vary the notices for April shipments, we do not think you can do this. The notice of the shipments, as soon as known, you were bound to give, and cannot afterwards vary it if they do not conform to the contract. Our right to be notified immediately that the shipments were known is as material a provision as any other, nor can it be changed now in order to make that a performance which was no performance within the time required." "You ask us to determine whether we will or will not object to receive further shipments because of past defaults. We tell you we will if we are entitled to do so, and will not if we are not entitled to do so. We do not think you have the right to compel us to decide a disputed question of law to relieve you from the risk of deciding it yourself. You know quite as well as we do what is the rule and its uncertainty of application."

[192]

On June 10 Etting offered to the defendants the alternative of delivering to them 1,000 tons strict measure on account of the shipments in April. This offer they immediately declined.

On June 15 Etting wrote to the defendants that two cargoes, amounting to 221 tons, of the April shipments, and two cargoes, amounting to 650 tons, of the May shipments (designated by the names of the vessels), had been erroneously notified to them, and that about 900 tons had been shipped by a certain other vessel on account of the May shipments. S day, the defendants replied that the
as to April shipments could not be
this late date, and after the terms
tract had long since been broken.

From the date of the contract to its rescission by the defendants,
price of such iron was lower than lated in the contract, and was falling. After the arrival of the c their tender and refusal, they were ting, with the consent of the def
the benefit of whom it might conc

At the trial the plaintiff contend
under the contract he had six mont
to ship the 5,000 tons, and any defic
earlier months could be made up su
provided that the defendants coul
quired to take more than 1,000 ton month. 2. That, if this was not tract was a divisible contract, and of the defendants for a default in
was not by rescission of the whole
only by deduction of the damages
the delays in the shipments on the plaintiff.

But the court instructed the jur
defendants, at the time of acceptin
ery of the cargo paid for, had no r
failure of the plaintiff to ship abou
in the month of February, and i upon learning that fact gave notice
tention to rescind, the verdict sh them.

The plaintiff excepted to this and, after verdict and judgment for ants, sued out this writ of error.

In the contracts of merchants, ti essence. The time of shipment is t convenient means of fixing the prol arrival, with a view of providing f
for the goods, or of fulfilling co
third persons. A statement descri subject-matter, or of some materi
such as the time or place of shipm
narily to be regarded as a warra
sense in which that term is used i
and maritime law, that is to say,
precedent, upon the failure or non-p
of which the party aggrieved ma
the whole contract. Behn v. Burne 751; Bowes v. Shand, 2 App. Cas.
v. Bangs, 2 Wall. 728 [69 U. S., bk
768]; Davison v. Von Lingen, 113 U
28, L. ed. 885].

The contract sued on is a single
the sale and purchase of 5,000 tons shipped from a European port or po adelphia. The subsidiary provision ping in different months, and as to each shipment upon its delivery, do
the contract into as many contra shall be shipments or deliveries of tinct quantities of iron. Mersey Co
9 App. Cas. 434, 439. The furthe that the sellers shall not be comp
place any parcel lost after shipmen
duces, in the event of such a loss,
to be delivered and paid for.

The times of shipment, as desig
contract, are "at the rate of abou
per month, beginning February, 188
contract to be shipped before Aug

These words are not satisfied by shipping one sixth part of the 5,000 tons, or about 833 tons, in each of the six months which begin with February and end with July. But they require about 1,000 tons to be shipped in each of the five months from February to June inclusive, and allow no more than slight and unimportant deficiencies in the shipments during those months to be made up in the month of July. The contract is not one for the sale of a specific lot of goods, identified by independent circumstances, such as all those deposited in a certain warehouse, or to be shipped in a particular vessel, or that may be manufactured by the seller, or may be required for use by the buyer, in a certain mill; in which case the mention of the quantity, accompanied by the qualification of "about," or "more or less," is regarded as a mere estimate of the probable amount, as to which good faith is all that is required of the party making it. But the contract before us comes within the general rule: "When no such independent circumstances are referred to, and the engagement is to furnish goods of a certain quality or character to a certain amount, the quantity specified is material and governs the contract. The addition of the qualifying words 'about,' 'more or less,' and the like, in such cases, is only for the purpose of providing against accidental variations, arising from slight and unimportant excesses or deficiencies in number, measure or weight." Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 168, 171, 172 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 622, 623, 624].

The seller is bound to deliver the quantity stipulated, and has no right either to compel the buyer to accept a less quantity, or to require him to select part out of a greater quantity; and when the goods are to be shipped in certain proportions monthly, the seller's failure to ship the required quantity in the first month gives the buyer the same right to rescind the whole contract that he would have had if it had been agreed that all the goods should have been delivered at once.

The plaintiff, instead of shipping about 1,000 tons in February and about 1,000 tons in March, as stipulated in the contract, shipped only 400 tons in February and 885 tons in March. His failure to fulfill the contract on his part in respect to these first two installments justified the defendants in rescinding the whole contract, provided they distinctly and seasonably asserted the right of rescission.

The defendants, immediately after the arrival of the March shipments, and as soon as they knew that the quantities which had been shipped in February and in March were less than the contract called for, clearly and positively asserted the right to rescind, if the law entitled them to do so. Their previous acceptance of the single cargo of 400 tons shipped in February was no waiver of this right, because it took place without notice, or means of knowledge, that the stipulated quantity had not been shipped in February. The price paid by them for that cargo being above the market value, the plaintiff suffered no injury by the omission of the defendants to return the boat; and no reliance was placed on that omission in the correspondence between the parties.

The case wholly differs from that of Lyon v. Bertram, 20 How., 149 [61 U. S., bk. 15, L. ed. 827], in which the buyer of a specific lot of goods accepted and used part of them with full means of previously ascertaining whether they conformed to the contract.

The plaintiff, denying the defendants' right to rescind, and asserting that the contract was still in force, was bound to show such performance on his part as entitled him to demand performance on their part, and, having failed to do so, cannot maintain this action.

For these reasons, we are of opinion that the judgment below should be affirmed. But as much of the argument at the bar was devoted to a discussion of the recent English cases, and as a diversity in the law, as administered on [206] the two sides of the Atlantic, concerning the interpretation and effect of commercial contracts of this kind, is greatly to be deprecated, it is proper to add that, upon a careful examination of the cases referred to, they do not appear to us to establish any rule inconsistent with our conclusion.

In the leading case of Hoare v. Rennie, 5 H. & N., 19, which was an action upon a contract of sale of 667 tons of bar iron, to be shipped from Sweden in June, July, August and September, and in about equal portions each month, at a certain price, payable on delivery, the declaration alleged that the plaintiffs performed all things necessary to entitle them to have the contract performed by the defendants, and were ready and willing to perform the contract on their part, and in June shipped a certain portion of the iron, and within a reasonable time afterwards offered to deliver to the defendants the portion so shipped; but the defendants refused to receive it, and gave notice to the plaintiffs that they would not accept the rest. The defendants pleaded that the shipment in June was of about 20 tons only, and that the plaintiffs failed to complete the shipment for that month according to the contract. Upon demurrer to the pleas, it was argued for the plaintiffs that the shipment of about one fourth of the iron in each month was not a condition precedent, and that the defendants' only remedy for a failure to ship that quantity was by a cross action. But judgment was given for the defendants, Chief Baron Pollock saying: "The defendants refused to accept the first shipment, because, as they say, it was not a performance, but a breach of the contract. Where parties have made an agreement for themselves, the courts ought not to make another for them. Here they say that in the events that have happened one fourth shall be shipped in each month, and we cannot say that they meant to accept any other quantity. At the outset, the plaintiffs failed to tender the quantity according to the contract; they tendered a much less quantity. The defendents had a right to say that this was no performance of the contract, and they were no more bound to accept the short quantity than if a single delivery had been contracted for. Therefore the pleas are an answer to the ac- [207] tion." 5 H. & N., 28. So in Coddington v. Paleologo, L. R. 2 Ex., 193, while there was a division of opinion upon the question whether a contract to supply goods "delivering on April 17th, complete 8th May," bound the seller to begin delivering on April 17th, all the judges agreed that if it did, and the seller made no delivery on that day, the buyer might rescind the contract.

On the other hand, in Simpson v. Crippin, L. R. 8 Q. B., 14, under a contract to supply from 6,000 to 8,000 tons of coal, to be taken by the buyer's wagons from the seller's colliery in equal monthly quantities for twelve months, the buyers sent wagons for only 150 tons during the first month; and it was held that this did not entitle the seller to annul the contract and decline to deliver any more coal, but that his only remedy was by an action for damages. And in Brandt v. Lawrence, 1 Q. B. D., 344, in which the contract was for the purchase of 4,500 quarters, ten per cent more or less, of Russian oats, "shipped by steamer or steamers during February," or, in case of ice preventing shipment, then immediately upon the opening of navigation, and 1,139 quarters were shipped by one steamer in time, and 3,361 quarters were shipped too late, it was held that the buyer was bound to accept the 1,139 quarters, and was liable to an action by the seller for refusing to accept them.

Such being the condition of the law of England as declared in the lower courts, the case of Bowes v. Shand, after conflicting decisions in the Queen's Bench Division and the Court of Appeal, was finally determined by the House of lords. 1 Q. B. D., 470; 2 Q. B. D., 112; 2 App. Cas., 455.

In that case, two contracts were made in London, each for the sale of 300 tons of "Madras rice to be shipped at Madras or coast, for this port, during the months of March and/or April, 1874, per Rajah of Cochin." The 600 tons filled 8,200 bags, of which 7,120 bags were put on board and bills of lading signed in February; and for the rest, consisting of 1,080 bags put on board in February, and 50 in March, the bill of lading was signed in March. At the trial of an action by the seller against the buyer for refusing to accept the cargo, evidence was given that rice shipped in February would be the spring crop, and quite as good as rice shipped in March or April. Yet the House of Lords held that the action could not be maintained, because the meaning of the contract, as apparent upon its face, was that all the rice must be put on board in March and April, or in one of those months.

[208]

In the opinions there delivered, the general principles underlying this class of cases are most clearly and satisfactorily stated. It will be sufficient to quote a few passages from two of those opinions.

Lord Chancellor Cairns said: "It does not appear to me to be a question for your Lordships, or for any court, to consider whether that is a contract which bears upon the face of it some reason, some explanation, why it was made in that form, and why the stipulation is made that the shipment should be during these particular months. It is a mercantile contract, and merchants are not in the habit of placing upon their contracts stipulations to which they do not attach some value and importance." 2 App. Cas. 463. "If it be admitted that the literal meaning would imply that the whole quantity must be put on board during a specified time, it is no answer to that literal meaning; it is no observation which can dispose of or get rid of or displace that litera

to say that it puts an additional bur seller, without a corresponding be purchaser; that is a matter of which
and the purchaser are the best judg
it any reason for saying that it w
means by which purchasers, witho cause, would frequently obtain an rejecting contracts when prices ha
The nonfulfillment of any term in a
is a means by which a purchaser is rid of the contract when prices hav
but that is no reason why a term
found in a contract should not be
Pp. 465, 466. "It was suggested t
the construction of the contract be stated, still if the rice was not put o
the particular months, that would n
son which would justify the appell
ing rejected the rice altogether,
might afford a ground for a cros
them if they could show that any damage resulted to them from the n
ing been put on board in the mont
tion. My Lords, I cannot think t any foundation whatever for that If the construction of the contract b
said, that it bears that the rice is to board in the months in question, th
the description of the subject matte
sold. What is sold is not 300 tons gross or in general. It is 300 tons rice to be put on board at Madras particular months." "The plaintiff
upon that contract, has not launch
until he has shown that he has te thing which has been contracted for unable to show that, he cannot clai ages for the nonfulfillment of the
Pp. 467, 468.

Lord Blackburn said: "If the de
the article tendered is different in s it is not the article bargained for, a party is not bound to take it. I th case what the parties bargained fo
shipped at Madras or the coast Equally good rice might have bee
little to the north or a little to the coast of Madras. I do not quite kn boundary is, and probably equally might have been shipped in Febru
shipped in March, or equally as goo
have been shipped in May as was April, and I dare say equally good
have been put on board another s
which was put on board the Rajah
But the parties have chosen, for r known to themselves, to say: We take rice shipped in this particula
that particular time, on board that ship; and before the defendants c
pelled to take anything in fulfillm contract it must be shown not mere equally good, but that it is the sam
they have bargained for; otherwis
not bound to take it." 2 App. Cas

Soon after that decision of the Lords, two cases were determined i
of Appeal. In Reuter v. Sala, 4 C.
under a contract for the sale of "ab
five tons (more or less) black pepp
and/or November shipment, from Pens
don, the name of the vessel or ves

[illegible] particulars to be declared to the buyer [illegible] within sixty days from date of bill [illegible] the seller, within the sixty days, de[illegible] twenty-five tons by a particular vessel, [illegible] only twenty tons were shipped in [illegible], and five tons in December; and it [illegible] that the buyer had the right to refuse [illegible] any part of the pepper. In Honck v. Muller, 7 Q. B. D., 92, under a contract for the [illegible] of 2,000 tons of pig iron, to be delivered to [illegible] free on board at the maker's wharf [illegible] November, or equally over November, De[illegible] and January next," the buyer failed to [illegible] any iron in November, but demanded de[illegible] of one third in December and one third [illegible] January; and it was held that the seller was [illegible] in refusing to deliver, and in giving [illegible] to the buyer that he considered the con[illegible] as concluded by the buyer's not taking any [illegible] in November.

The plaintiff in the case at bar greatly relied [illegible] the very recent decision of the House of [illegible] in Mersey Co. v. Naylor, 9 App. Cas., 434, [illegible] the judgment of the Court of Appeal [illegible] Q. B. D., 648, and following the decision [illegible] Court of Common Pleas in Freeth v. Burr, [illegible] C. P., 208.

[illegible] the point there decided was that the fail[illegible] of the buyer to pay for the first installment [illegible] goods upon delivery does not, unless the [illegible] evince an intention on his part [illegible] no longer bound by the contract, entitle [illegible] to rescind the contract and to decline [illegible] further deliveries under it. And the [illegible] of the decision, as stated by Lord [illegible] Selborne in moving judgment in [illegible] House of Lords, are applicable only to the [illegible] of a failure of the buyer to pay for, and [illegible] of a failure of the seller to deliver, [illegible] installment.

[illegible] Lord Chancellor said: "The contract is [illegible] purchase of 5,000 tons of steel blooms [illegible] company's manufacture; therefore it is [illegible] contract for the purchase of that quantity [illegible] blooms. No doubt there are subsidiary [illegible] the contract, as to the time of the delivery [illegible] delivery, 1,000 tons monthly commencing [illegible] next;—and as to the time of payment, [illegible] payment net cash within three days after [illegible] of shipping documents';—but that does [illegible] cut up the contract into as many contracts [illegible] shall be deliveries for the purpose, of [illegible] distinct quantities of iron. It is quite [illegible] with the natural meaning of the con[illegible] that it is to be one contract for the pur[illegible] of that quantity of iron to be delivered at [illegible] and in that manner, and for which [illegible] is to be made. It is perfectly clear [illegible] particular payment can be a condition [illegible] of the entire contract, because the de[illegible] under the contract was most certainly to [illegible] payment; and that being so, I do not [illegible] without express words, it can possibly [illegible] a condition precedent to the subse[illegible] fulfillment of the unfulfilled part of the [illegible], by the delivery of the undelivered [illegible]." 9 App. Cas., 436.

[illegible], although in the Court of Appeal [illegible] were uttered tending to approve the de[illegible] in Simpson v. Crippin, and to dispar[illegible] the decisions in Hoare v. Rennie and Honck [illegible] Muller, above cited, yet in the House of [illegible] Simpson v. Crippin was not even referred to, and Lord Blackburn, who had given the leading opinion in that case, as well as Lord Bramwell, who had delivered the leading opinion in Honck v. Muller, distinguished Hoare v. Rennie and Honck v. Muller from the case in judgment. 9 App. Cas., 444, 446.

Upon a review of the English decisions, the rule laid down in the earlier cases of Hoare v. Rennie and Coddington v. Paleologo, as well as in the later cases of Reuter v. Sala and Honck v. Muller, appears to us to be supported by a greater weight of authority than the rule stated in the intermediate cases of Simpson v. Crippin and Brandt v. Lawrence, and to accord better with the general principles affirmed by the House of Lords in Bowes v. Shand, while it in nowise contravenes the decision of that tribunal in Mersey Co. v. Naylor.

In this country, there is less judicial authority upon the question. The two cases most nearly in point that have come to our notice are Hill v. Blake, 97 N. Y., 216, which accords with Bowes v. Shand, and King Phillip Mills v. Slater, 12 R. I., 82, which approves and follows Hoare v. Rennie. The recent cases in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, cited at the bar, support no other conclusion. In Shinn v. Bodine, 60 Pa. St., 182, the point decided was that a contract for the purchase of 800 tons of coal at a certain price per ton, "coal to be delivered on board vessels as sent for during months of August and September," was an entire contract, under which nothing was payable until delivery of the whole, and therefore the seller had no right to rescind the contract upon a refusal to pay for one cargo before that time. In Morgan v. McKee, 77 Pa. St., 228, and in Scott v. Kittanning Coal Co. 89 Pa. St., 231, the buyer's right to rescind the whole contract upon the failure of the seller to deliver one installment was denied, only because that right had been waived, in the one case by unreasonable delay in asserting it, and in the other by having accepted, paid for and used a previous installment of the goods. The decision of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Winchester v. Newton, 2 Allen, 492, resembles that of the House of Lords in Mersey Co. v. Naylor. [212]

Being of opinion that the plaintiff's failure to make such shipments in February and March, as the contract required, prevents his maintaining this action, it is needless to dwell upon the further objection that the shipments in April did not comply with the contract, because the defendants could not be compelled to take about 1,000 tons out of the larger quantity shipped in that month, and the plaintiff, after once designating the names of vessels, as the contract bound him to do, could not substitute other vessels. See Busk v. Spence, 4 Camp. 329; Graves v. Legg, 9 Exch., 709; Reuter v. Sala, above cited.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite was not present at the argument and took no part in the decision of this case.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—115 U. S., 360, 362.

[213]

OLIVER B. FILLEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
THOMAS J. POPE ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 213-221.)

Mercantile contracts—time or place of shipment as a warranty or condition precedent.

*1. In a mercantile contract, a statement descriptive of the subject matter, or of some material incident, such as the time or place of shipment, is ordinarily to be regarded as a warranty, or condition precedent, upon the failure or non-performance of which the party aggrieved may repudiate the whole contract.

2. Under a contract for the sale of "500 tons No. 1 Shott's (Scotch) pig iron, at $26 per ton cash in bond at New Orleans; shipment from Glasgow as soon as possible; delivery and sale subject to ocean risks"; shipment from Glasgow is a material part of the contract, and the buyer may refuse to accept such iron shipped as soon as possible from Leith, and arriving at New Orleans earlier than it would have arrived by the first ship that could have been obtained from Glasgow.

[No. 21.]

Argued Apr. 6, 7, 1885. Decided, Oct. 26, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

The history and facts of the case fully appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Henry Hitchcock, for plaintiff in error:

The non-performance by the vendor, of a condition precedent on his part, releases the vendee. Jones v. U. S. 96 U. S. 24 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 644); Slater v. Emerson, 19 How. 224 (51 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 626); Smoot v. U. S. 15 Wall. 46 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 109); Gouverneur v. Tilotson, 3 Edw. Ch. 348.

Nor does it matter that such condition is difficult or foolish.

Story, Cont. §§ 47, 587; 2 Benj. Sales, §§ 858, 864; Dermott v. Jones, 2 Wall. 1, 7 (69 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 762, 764); Smoot v. U. S. 15 Wall. 46 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 109); Milldam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. 417, 441; Harmony v. Bingham, 12 N. Y. 99; Eddy v. Clement, 38 Vt. 486; Bacon v. Cobb. 45 Ill. 47; School District v. Dauchy, 25 Conn. 530; Bettini v. Gye, 1 Q. B. Div. 187; Jones v. St. Johns Coll., L. R. 6 Q. B. 115.

Plaintiff's agreement to ship from Glasgow was a condition precedent.

Cadwell v. Blake, 6 Gray, 402; Bowes v. Shand, 2 App Cas. L. R. (H. of L.) 473; Bank of Col. v. Hagner, 1 Pet. 464 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 222); Lowber v. Bangs, 2 Wall. 728 (69 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 768); Roberts v. Brett, 11 H. of L. Cas. 337; Cutter v. Powell, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 1, notes; 2 Benj. Sales, §§ 854, 855.

Mr. Edward Cunningham, Jr., for defendants in error:

The question whether shipment from Glasgow is a condition precedent, or mere matter of explanation, is to be determined by the intention and meaning of the parties as it appears in the instrument, and by the application of common sense to this particular case.

Lowber v. Bangs, 2 Wall. 728 (69 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 768); Tileston v. Newell, 13 Mass. 406; Todd v. Summers, 2 Gratt. 169.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice GRAY.

NOTE.—Sales; warranty or condition precedent; breach; rescission.

See Pope v. Allis and note, post.

When mutual covenants go to sideration, on both sides, they a ditions precedent. But unless th
ance alleged in breach of a cont
whole consideration, the coven
not to be considered a condition
as a distinct, independent cov
breach of which the party injur
pensated in damages.

Davidson v. Gwynne, 12 East, Eyre, 1 H. Bl., 273, note; Lou supra.

Shipment from Glasgow is n precedent here.

Bettini v. Gye, 1 Q. B. Div., Legg, 9 Ex., 716.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered t
the court:

This action was brought by T
and James E. Pope, citizens and partners under the name
Pope & Brother, against Oliver
zen of Missouri.

The petition alleged that on 1880, the defendant bargained f
of the plaintiffs and they sold t
of number one Shott's (Scotch) price of $26 per ton, to be paid
defendant upon the delivery to in bond at New Orleans; the iro
from Glasgow, Scotland, as so and the delivery and sale to be s
risks; and the defendant agree iron as aforesaid, and to pay the
for the sum of $13,000; and th
lars of the sale and agreement w
a note and memorandum thereof
defendant, as follows:

"St. Louis, February 20, 188
Pope & Bro., New York: Hav
account to Mr. O. B. Filley, St.
No. 1 Shott's (Scotch) pig iron,
cash in bond at New Orleans.
Glasgow as soon as possible. D
subject to ocean risks. Very tr
"Willard

Across the face of this was w
cepted, O. B. Filley."

The petition further alleged th
and as soon as possible, the plain iron to be shipped from Glasg
leans; that upon its arrival at N
May 26, 1880, they offered to de defendant in bond at that port,
him to receive and pay for it, bu
do so, and the plaintiffs were fo
a loss.

The defendant, in his answer
contract and his refusal to ac
denied the other allegations o
and alleged, as the ground of his
a defense to the action, that the
to ship the iron from Glasgow a ble after the date of the contra tiffs filed a replication, denying in the answer.

The testimony of the witness plaintiffs at the trial, tended to p ing facts: Immediately after n
tract, the plaintiffs by telegraph
of John Anderson of Glasgow,
him to ship it to New Orleans.

[illegible] the works of the Shott's Iron Company [illegible] instead, equidistant and equally accessible [illegible] railway from the ports of Glasgow on the west coast and of Leith on the east coast; and such iron was sometimes shipped from Glasgow and sometimes from Leith. Anderson at [illegible] made diligent inquiry and efforts to secure transportation from Glasgow, and from Leith, and from other Scotch ports, to New Orleans, [illegible] owing to the great scarcity of ships at that time could only secure one vessel, the barque [illegible], which was then discharging her cargo at Leith. This vessel he chartered on February 21, 1860, three days after the contract in question was made at St. Louis. No vessel or transportation could be obtained from Glasgow to New Orleans then or for weeks afterwards. The iron was sent down from the works of the Shott's Iron Company to Leith as fast as the [illegible] could receive it. With all speed, she discharged her cargo, took in the iron, and sailed from Leith for New Orleans, where she arrived about May 26. The distance by sea was greater from Leith to New Orleans than from Glasgow to New Orleans. If The Alpha had come round to Glasgow and shipped the iron there, it would have taken from six to twenty-[illegible] days, according to the winds, and she would have had to take in ballast at Leith and discharge it at Glasgow, involving considerable delay and expense.

The court instructed the jury that the provision of the contract that the iron was to be shipped from Glasgow was not a material provision of the contract, so far as this controversy was concerned; that the purpose of the contract was the sale by the plaintiffs to the defendant of a certain quantity of iron, to be delivered in a certain time at a certain place, and the fact that it was shipped from Leith instead of Glasgow was not material to the rights of the parties in the case, if the other provisions of the contract were complied with; and that if the jury found that it was impossible for the plaintiffs to obtain a vessel from Glasgow, and that it was practicable to obtain one from Leith, and that shipping from Leith was a more expeditious way of putting the iron to New Orleans than waiting for a vessel from Glasgow would have been, and the plaintiffs were justified in shipping the iron from Leith instead of from Glasgow. 8 [illegible] 190.

The defendant excepted to the admission of evidence relating to the shipment from Leith, and to the instruction to the jury, and, after verdict and judgment for the plaintiffs in the sum of $8,155, sued out this writ of error.

The contract between these parties belongs to the same class as that sued on in the case last decided, of Norrington v. Wright, ante, [illegible] and likewise falls within the rule that, in a mercantile contract, a statement descriptive of the subject matter, or of some material incident, such as the time or place of shipment, is ordinarily to be regarded as a warranty, or condition precedent, upon the failure or non-performance of which the party aggrieved may repudiate the whole contract. The provision in question in that case related to the time; in this, it relates to the place of shipment.

The thing sold, and described in the contract, was "[illegible] No. 1 Shott's (Scotch) pig iron," to be shipped "from Glasgow as soon as possible." It is not merely 500 tons of iron of a certain quality; nor is it such iron to be shipped as soon as possible from any Scotch port or ports; but it is iron of that quality to be shipped from the particular Port of Glasgow as soon as possible. The court has neither the means nor the right to determine why the parties in their contract specified "shipment from Glasgow," instead of using the more general phrase "shipment from Scotland," or merely "shipment," without naming any place; but is bound to give effect to the terms which the parties have chosen for themselves. The term "shipment from Glasgow" defines an act to be done by the sellers at the outset, and a condition precedent to any liability of the buyer. The sellers do not undertake to obtain shipment, nor does the buyer agree to accept iron shipped, at any other port. The buyer takes the risk of delay in getting shipment from Glasgow, or of delay or disaster in prosecuting the voyage from Glasgow to New Orleans. But he does not take the risk of delay or of sea perils which may occur in the course of the different voyage from Leith to the same destination.

One or two illustrations may help to make this clear. If the sellers had shipped the iron by the first opportunity from Glasgow, the buyer could not have refused to accept it, even if it could have been shipped sooner from Leith. Again; the buyer would have an insurable interest in the iron during the voyage, by reason of the title which would accrue to him under the contract on arrival and delivery, and of the profits that he might make in case of a rise in the market. 3 Kent, Com. 276; French v. Hope Ins. Co. 16 Pick. 397; Eastern Railroad v. Relief Ins. Co. 98 Mass. 420, 423. But a [221] policy of insurance upon the iron for a voyage from Glasgow would not cover a voyage from Leith. Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 4 Johns. 443; Manly v. United Ins. Co. 9 Mass. 85.

This view of the case renders it unnecessary to consider the other questions raised at the trial and argued at the bar, and requires the judgment of the Circuit Court to be reversed and the case remanded with directions to order a new trial.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—115 U. S., 372.

RICHARD D. LANCASTER, Plff. in Err., [222]
v.
HENRY C. COLLINS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 222-227.)

Appeal and error—weight of evidence—variance between proof and answer—rulings on admission of evidence, sustained—error without prejudice, not a ground for reversal.

*1. The bill of exceptions in this case contained all the evidence, and the charge to the jury. There was no exception to the charge. The court refused to direct a verdict for the plaintiff, it being asked for on the ground of a variance between the proof and the answer; and there was a verdict for the defendant; Held, that there was no such variance, and that the question of the existence of the defense set up was fairly put to the jury, on conflicting evidence.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

2. This court cannot review the weight of the evidence, and can look into it only to see whether there was error in not directing a verdict for the plaintiff, on the question of variance, or because there was no evidence to sustain the verdict.

3. The question as to which party shall make the closing argument to the jury is one of practice, and is not the subject of a bill of exceptions or of a writ of error.

4. Rulings on the admission of evidence sustained.

5. No judgment should be reversed in a court of error when it is clear that the error could not have prejudiced, and did not prejudice, the rights of the party against whom the ruling was made.

[No. 14.]

Submitted Oct. 23. Decided Nov. 2, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

The case is sufficiently stated by the court.

Mr. George A. Castleman, for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

[222] On the 29th of September, 1873, Henry E. Collins executed and delivered to the Big Muddy Iron Company his promissory note, payable ninety days after date, to its order, for $10,000. It was indorsed successively by the company, by Thomas O'Reilly, by Amelia Collins and by Richard D. Lancaster. From the latter it passed to the National Bank of the State of Missouri. The bank obtained a judgment on it against the company, and O'Reilly and Henry E. Collins and Lancaster, for $11,290.68 and costs. O'Reilly paid to the bank one half of the amount due on the judgment, and Collins refunded it to him. Lancaster paid to the bank the other half of the amount due on the judgment, and then brought this suit against Collins to recover from him the sum so paid.

Collins, in his answer to the petition, set up the following defense: "That the Big Muddy [223] Iron Company was a corporation, duly organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, and that, on the day of the execution of said note and the delivery thereof to the said company, the plaintiff in this suit was the president thereof; that said note was given in part consideration for 130 shares of stock of the said Big Muddy Iron Company; that the plaintiff solicited this defendant to subscribe for said stock at its par value; that, yielding to the solicitation of the said plaintiff in that behalf, this defendant did subscribe for said stock, and paid in cash the sum of $3,000 and executed the before-mentioned note for the balance; that, before the defendant would agree to subscribe for said stock, and execute the said note, and pay the said sum of $3,000, it was agreed and understood, between the plaintiff and defendant, that the defendant should pay cash the sum of $3,000, and execute his note at ninety days for $10,000, with the privilege, upon the part of this defendant, to renew the same, from time to time, as it became due, and that the 130 shares of stock in the said Big Muddy Iron Company, the par value of which was $13,000, should be held by the said plaintiff as collateral security for the payment of said note, with the right, upon the part of this defendant, if he saw proper to avail himself of it, wit from the date of said note to forfe in cash and the said 130 shares of relieved from further liability o that, in pursuance of said agreem 130 shares of stock was placed wit as collateral security, the $3,000 paid, and the said note for $10,000 and delivered; that defendant, be piration of said year, notified the that he would forfeit said $3,000 a that the note would not be paid b fendant says that the said stock turned or offered to be returned t plaintiff, or any one for him. W fendant says that the plaintiff has action against him, that he owes nothing, and prays to be dismisse his costs."

Issue being joined, the action w jury, which found a verdict for there was a judgment in his favo Lancaster brought this writ of err

There is a bill of exceptions c the evidence in the cause. It al the charge to the jury, but there is to the charge. The plaintiff, quested the court, after the evide to instruct the jury to render a v plaintiff, which request was refu plaintiff excepted. This refusal is error, on the alleged ground of tween the proof and the answer tended that the answer alleges t ment made by Collins with Lancas with the latter as president of t and that it does not allege any Lancaster personally, to take th scribed for by Collins and pay th the verdict was rendered for the the theory that there was such an Lancaster personally. We thin construction of the answer, in vi tory of the case, as given in the that it alleges such an agreement received from Collins the certif stock, with a transfer of it in bla Collins, and indorsed the note, a counted for the benefit of the co question of the existence of such by Lancaster personally was fair jury in the charge of the court. conflicting evidence in regard to it cannot review the weight of the can look into it only to see whet error in not directing a verdict f tiff, on the question of variance there was no evidence to sustai rendered.

It is also assigned for error, t refused to permit the counsel fo to make the closing argument to contention on the part of the p that the affirmative was with him purely a question of practice, to only by a motion for a new tri court, and is not the proper subje exceptions or of a writ of error, b not affect the merits of the contr v. Woodworth, 18 How., 363, 370 14, L. ed. 181, 184].

The plaintiff, as a witness at asked, on cross examination by t

what was the value of the 130 shares of stock, or whether it was good security for the $[illegible] note. The question was objected to as immaterial and irrelevant, but was admitted. The answer was, that if it had been paid up he would have thought it good security, but it was not paid up and he thought it was not good security. The answer did not tend to prejudice the plaintiff, but the contrary; for he was seeking to prove that he had not taken the stock personally as security for his indorsement, and the fact that the stock was inadequate security to him went rather to show that he was not looking for security for his personal liability. Besides, the question was put on cross examination, and was proper as showing the character of the stock, in view of the evidence the plaintiff had given, on his direct examination, as to the transaction respecting the stock.

The defendant was allowed, under objection, to put in evidence, from the book of minutes of the board of directors of the company, the proceedings of the board at four meetings held between the time of the original transaction in regard to the stock and the date of the note on which the judgment was recovered, that note being a renewal of prior notes. These proceedings were in the handwriting of the defendant, who was the secretary of the company, and the plaintiff, who was a director of the company, was present at all of the meetings in question. The proceedings contained nothing which appeared to relate to this controversy, but referred only to the purchase of property by the company, and to the mode of paying for stock, and the powers of the secretary, and sundry minor matters. The objection made at the time to the introduction of these minutes was, that they were irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial, and tended to confuse in the minds of the jury the true issue to be tried, and could not throw any light upon the question on trial. The same objection was made to the putting in evidence of the proceedings of a meeting of the stockholders of the company, at which the plaintiff was present, held prior to the date of the note on which the judgment was recovered, and of the proceedings of nine meetings of the board of directors and one meeting of the stockholders, held after that date, at all of which the plaintiff was present. These proceedings contained nothing which appeared to relate to this controversy, but they showed the pecuniary embarrassment of the company, and the execution by it of a deed of trust to secure its indebtedness, and the final sale of its property. The only matter in all these proceedings which could possibly have operated to the prejudice of the plaintiff was the fact that the stock had become worthless, it being argued that the jury might have been induced thereby to relieve the defendant from paying any more of the amount of the worthless stock, after he had paid the $[illegible] to the company, and the one half of the judgment to O'Reilly. But we think it sufficiently appears from other testimony that the stock became worthless. Aside from this, there is not one anything in the proceedings objected to which could possibly have harmed the plaintiff more than the defendant, or have misled the defendant to the prejudice of the plaintiff. To show that the stock was worthless, showed that neither party could derive any advantage from it, and left the case between the plaintiff and the defendant to be decided without reference to any value in the stock. No judgment should be reversed in a court of error when it is clear that the error could not have prejudiced, and did not prejudice, the rights of the party against whom the ruling was made. Deery v. Cray, 5 Wall., 795, 803 [72 U. S., bk. 18, L. ed. 653, 655]; Gregg v. Moss, 14 Id. 564, 569 [81 U. S., bk. 20, L. ed. 740–742]; Lucas v. Brooks, 18 Id., 436, 454 [85 U. S., bk. 21, L. ed. 779, 782]; Allis v. Ins. Co., 97 U. S., 144, 145 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1008]; Cannon v. Pratt, 99 Id., 619, 623 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 446, 448]; Mining Co. v. Taylor, 100 Id., 37, 42 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 541, 542]; Hornbuckle v. Stafford, 111 Id., 389, 394 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 468, 470].

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[260]

BRUTUS J. CLAY AND WIFE, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

DAVID I. FIELD.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 260–263.)

Administrator's sales—ejectment—parties—Mississippi Code of 1871—construction of sections 2173, 2506 and 2512.

*1. The Mississippi Code of 1871, § 2173, by which any action to recover property, because of the invalidity of an administrator's sale by order of a probate court, must be brought within one year, "if such sale shall have been made in good faith and the purchase money paid," does not apply to an action brought by the heir to recover land bid off by a creditor at such a sale for the payment of his debt, and conveyed to him by the administrator, and not otherwise paid for than by giving the administrator a receipt for the amount of the bid.

2. Under the Mississippi Code of 1880, §§ 2506, 2512, a tenant in common who has been ousted by his cotenant may maintain ejectment against him, and recover rents and profits in the same action.

[No. 571.]

Submitted Oct. 19, 1885. Decided Nov. 2, 1885.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Mississippi.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. William L. Nugent, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Frank Johnston and J. E. McKeighan, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court: [260]

This was an action of ejectment, brought November 27, 1880, to recover possession of an undivided half of a tract of land, and the rents and profits thereof. Both parties claimed title under David I. Field, who died in 1869. At the time of his death, he and his brother, Christopher J. Field, owned in fee simple and occupied the land as tenants in common, and were partners in the business of planting thereon. The plaintiff, who came of age within a year before bringing the action, was the only son and heir at law of David I. Field. The defendants were in possession and claimed title under a sale and conveyance made by his administrator to the female defendant on December 20, 1869, by virtue of an order passed by the probate court on April 18, 1869, upon a petition filed by the administrator for the sale of the [261] land to pay a debt due from the partnership to Christopher J. Field and by him probated in the usual form. The judgment below was for the plaintiff, and the defendants sued out this writ of error.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice GRAY.

As appears by a uniform series of decisions of the Supreme Court of Mississippi, and is not denied by the defendants, that sale was invalid as against the heir, because the administrator never gave bond to account for the proceeds of the sale, as required by the statute of the State. Currie v. Stewart, 26 Miss., 461, and 27 Miss., 52; Washington v. McLaughan, 34 Miss., 304; Heth v. Wilson, 55 Miss., 587.

The other objections urged by the plaintiff against the validity of the sale need not therefore be considered; and the case turns on the effect of section 2178 of the Code of Mississippi of 1871; which is in these words:

"No action shall be brought to recover any property heretofore sold by any administrator, executor or guardian, by virtue of the order of any probate court in this State, on the ground of the invalidity of such sale, unless such action be commenced within one year after this chapter shall take effect, if such sale shall have been made in good faith, and the purchase money paid; nor shall any action be brought to recover land or other property, hereafter sold by order of a chancery court, where the sale is in good faith and the purchase money paid, unless brought within one year after such sale."

This is a remedial statute, the object of which is to shorten litigation over the estates of deceased persons, and to quiet the titles of those who have in good faith paid the purchase money for lands sold under defective and invalid proceedings in the probate court; and the courts of the State have given it full effect, according to its terms, even against heirs who are infants or under other disability. Morgan v. Hazelhurst Lodge, 53 Miss., 665; Hall v. Wells, 54 Miss., 289; Summers v. Brady, 56 Miss., 10.

But it protects no one who is not proved to have purchased the land in good faith, and to have actually paid the purchase money.

In the case at bar, Mrs. Clay (the daughter and sole heir of the brother and partner of the intestate, who had probated against the estate a debt due to him from the partnership) bid off [262] the land at the administrator's sale, and received a deed thereof from the administrator. But the court, before which the case was tried (a jury having been waived in writing by the parties), has expressly found that "no money was ever paid on the bid," and "no credit was ever entered upon the probated indebtedness." It is indeed found that "a receipt was given to the administrator for the amount" of the bid; and, although by whom that receipt was given does not appear, it may be presumed to have been given by some one authorized to represent her father's estate and herself. But a mere receipt, acknowledging payment of money, is not conclusive evidence against the person giving it. It is not shown that any release of the probated debt was ever executed, or that the administrator ever accounted in the probate court for the amount of the bid. could not have been compelled t amount; and, if she bought withou the invalidity of the sale, could ha sale set aside in equity. Miller v. Miss., 323. In short, no act appears t done by herself, by the administrato probate court which, on the one han her condition or estopped her, or sentative of her father, to deny th probated by him had been paid or or to assert any right which existed sale; or, on the other hand, estopp ministrator to deny that the purchas the land had been paid to him.

Under such circumstances, to ho purchase money is proved to have would be to disregard both the wo intent of the statute.

The case of Summers v. Brady, a on which the defendants relied, is guishable. The facts of that case, in the opinion, and more fully bro Sivley v. Summers, 57 Miss., 712, w lows: The land was sold by order bate court, for the payment of sever bated by Sivley, the administrat Drone, and by various other perso bought by and conveyed to Drone name, but in fact for himself and Si Drone immediately conveyed two t land to Sivley, and the two afte veyed the whole to a third person, u the defendants claimed title. The tor settled his final account, charg with the whole of the purchase mo hands; the court ordered that mon vided pro rata on all the probated all the creditors but Drone and Siv tually paid their dividends out of and Sivley were estopped to den debts had been extinguished by t conveyance of the land to them, b had not only taken possession of t had conveyed it away; and Sivley, trator, was estopped to deny that paid the whole purchase money u iginal sale, because he had char with it in his final account allowed bate court.

In the other case cited for the de Callicott v. Parks, 58 Miss., 528, the not show that any question of the n ment was presented or considered.

The title in the land being in the Mrs. Clay as tenants in common, e an undivided half, and she having and claiming title to and holding p the whole land, he has the right, Mississippi Code of 1880, § 2506, mon law, to maintain ejectment ag well as to sue her for a share of th profits. Co. Lit., 199 b; Goodtitle Wils., 118; Corbin v. Cannon, 31 Letchford v. Cary, 52 Miss., 791. tion 2512 of that Code, mesne profi any defendant in ejectment is lia sued for and recovered, either in t ejectment, or by a subsequent sepa

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup

WILLIAM H. HENDERSON, as Executor of the last will and testament of ELEANOR ANN HENDERSON, deceased, Plff. in Err.,
v.
H. ESTELLE WADSWORTH.

HOWARD L. HENDERSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.
H. ESTELLE WADSWORTH.

WILLIAM H. HENDERSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.
H. ESTELLE WADSWORTH.

WARREN N. HENDERSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.
H. ESTELLE WADSWORTH.

VICTORINE S. McCARTHY ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,
v.
H. ESTELLE WADSWORTH.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 264-284.)

Jurisdiction—suit against heirs—separate judgments—liability of widow under Civil Code of Louisiana on partnership note of husband's firm—prescription—evidence.

1. Where suit is brought against heirs to enforce their liability for the payment of a note on which their ancestor was bound, and they plead neither compensation nor set-off, and ask no affirmative relief, and separate judgment is rendered against each for his proportionate share, this court has jurisdiction in error only over those judgments which exceed $5,000.

2. Under the Civil Code of Louisiana, a widow, even where she has accepted the succession of her husband without benefit of inventory, is not liable in solido with the surviving partners for the payment of a note made by the firm of which her husband was a member; and payments made on the note by the surviving partners cannot be given in evidence to show interruption of prescription running in her favor.

[Nos. 337, 338, 339, 340, 341.]

Submitted Jan. 6, 1885. Decided Nov. 2, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice WOODS:

Mrs. H. Estelle Wadsworth, the defendant in error in these cases, was the plaintiff in the circuit court, where she brought a joint action at law against the several plaintiffs in error and John G. Gaines and Stephen Z. Relf. The facts shown by the record were as follows:

On and long before the 8th day of November 1860, William Henderson and the defendants, John G. Gaines and Stephen Z. Relf, were engaged in business as commercial partners in the City of New Orleans, under the name of Henderson & Gaines, and on the day above mentioned, for the consideration of $30,450, money sent to them by the plaintiff, they made and delivered to her their note, of which the following is a copy:

"New Orleans, 8th November, 1860.

"$30,450. On or before the fifth of May, 1861, we promise to pay, for value received, to the order of Mrs. H. Estelle Wadsworth, fifteen thousand dollars, and the further sum of fifteen thousand four hundred and fifty dollars, on or before the twentieth day of the same month and year (together thirty thousand four hundred and fifty dollars), with interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum, the interest to be paid semi-annually on the fifteenth day of May and November of each year.

Henderson & Gaines."

On July 1st, 1866, the firm of Henderson & Gaines was dissolved, Henderson retiring, and was succeeded by the firm of Gaines & Relf, composed of the other two members of the dissolved firm. The new firm, Gaines & Relf, bought all the personal property and assets of the old firm, assumed all its liabilities, including the note above mentioned, and agreed to exonerate Henderson.

The firm of Henderson & Gaines, while it continued, paid the interest as it fell due on the note above mentioned up to May 15, 1867, and Gaines & Relf thereafter up to May, 1877.

William Henderson died on May 1, 1870, in the City of New Orleans, where he had been domiciled since the year 1860 and before. He left as his widow Eleanor Ann Henderson, and as his sole heirs at law the defendants, William H. Henderson, Howard L. Henderson, Warren N. Henderson and Victorine S. Henderson, the latter of whom had intermarried with the defendant M. C. McCarthy, all of full age, and all domiciled in the City of New Orleans. The widow and children subsequently removed to the State of Kentucky, where, on July 27, 1880, the widow died. Her son, William H. Henderson, was qualified as executor of her last will and testament.

In June, 1877, the firm of Gaines & Relf was adjudicated bankrupt. On April 10, 1882, the present suit was brought by Mrs. H. Estelle Wadsworth, the payee, on the note of Henderson & Gaines, against William H. Henderson individually and as the executor of the last will of the widow, Eleanor Ann Henderson, and against the other persons above mentioned, as the heirs of William Henderson, and against John G. Gaines and Stephen Z. Relf. M. C. McCarthy was joined as a defendant with his wife, Victorine S. McCarthy. The petition alleged that the widow and heirs of William Henderson had accepted his succession, purely and simply, without the benefit of inventory, and had taken and upon their own petition had been put in possession of his estate, the said Eleanor Ann, as widow, in community of one half, and the heirs of the other undivided half of the community property subject to the usufruct of the same in favor of their mother, the said Eleanor Ann Henderson, whereby the said widow and heirs became personally liable for the payment of all the debts of said William Henderson, deceased, including the debt sued on, in the following proportions: the widow, Eleanor Ann Henderson, for one half, and each of the above-mentioned heirs for one fourth. The petition, therefore, prayed for judgment against Gaines and Relf for the whole amount due on the note; for judgment against William H. Henderson, as executor of Eleanor Ann Henderson, for one half; and for judgment against each of the heirs of William Henderson for one fourth of said amount.

[266]

The defendants, except Gaines and Relf, who never appeared or made any defense, filed a joint and several answer to the petition, in which they denied that they had accepted the succession of William Henderson, purely and simply, without benefit of inventory; but, as this issue was specially found against them by the verdict of the jury, it must be taken as a fact in the case that they did so accept the succession.

* Read notes by Mr. Justice WOODS.

They also, by way of defense, made the following averments:

"[illegible] and for further answer, these defendants say the pretended note sued on herein was made, and on its face made payable, in New Orleans and State of Louisiana, and by its terms matured and fell due not later than the [illegible] and twenty-third days of May, A. D. [illegible], while said William Henderson and John [illegible] and Stephen E. Relf resided in said city and State, and plaintiff's supposed cause of action, [illegible] accrued to her [illegible] William Henderson, in the [illegible] and not elsewhere, but did not ac[illegible] within five years next before the bringing [illegible] all which time, as was and [illegible] plaintiff, all these defendants [illegible] Henderson resided in said [illegible] New Orleans and State of Louisiana, [illegible] of said State, in force at the [illegible] pretended note and continuously [illegible] in force therein, said pretended [illegible] and is prescribed in five years next [illegible] the date of the maturity thereof, as aforesaid, and being so prescribed, no action thereon [illegible] be maintained in Kentucky under her [illegible]. Wherefore these defendants plead and [illegible] on the lapse of time and Statute of Limitation in bar of plaintiff's right of recovery herein against them."

The plaintiff replied to this defense, that the prescription and limitation so pleaded in bar had been interrupted and prevented from running against her right of recovery, in each and every year from the maturity of said note up to the time of bringing the action, by frequent acknowledgments of said debt by the firm of Henderson & Gaines and its members, and by the firm of Gaines & Relf, and by defendants Gaines and Relf, debtors bound in solido with William Henderson for the payment of said debt.

The defendants rejoined, taking issue on the replication of the plaintiff.

Upon the trial of the cause, the court, against the objection of the defendants, admitted evidence tending to show payments made upon the note by the firm of Gaines & Relf, after the death of William Henderson, and by the assignee of Gaines & Relf, after their bankruptcy, the purpose of such evidence being to show interruption of the prescription set up by the defendants against a recovery on the note.

When the testimony was closed, the defendants moved the court to charge the jury as follows: "That any payments made on the paper sued on herein by the firm of Gaines & Relf, or the assignee or liquidator of said firm, after William Henderson's death, did not interrupt prescription as to said Henderson, nor would any acknowledgment of said paper by said firm after said Henderson's death have that effect;" but the court overruled the motion, and refused to charge the jury as prayed for by the defendants; to which ruling of the court the defendants, and each of them, then excepted.

[268]

The jury returned a verdict in f
plaintiff and assessed separate and d
ages against each of the defendant
this verdict the court rendered sep
ments in favor of the plaintiff, agai
H. Henderson, as executor of E
Henderson, for $17,172.25, and agai
H. Henderson individually, Howa derson, and Warren N. Henderso
$4,293.18; and against Victorine S and M. C. McCarthy, her husband sum.

The parties defendant to these prosecuted separate writs of error t
ment, and each gave a separate bo cute the writ of error to effect and damages and costs on failure to ma
plea. But one record was brought t
to which all the writs of error had

In each of the cases, except the o
William H. Henderson, executor, w in error, the defendant in error fil
to dismiss the writ of error "for w diction, because the amount in disp
exceed five thousand dollars, and w
cient to sustain a writ of error."

Messrs. Thomas L. Bayne a
Evans, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Agustus E. Wilson,
Wilby and Gustavus H. Wald, fo
in error.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered th
the court:

We think the motion to dismiss error must prevail.

The obligation upon which the
the heirs of William Henderson w was based, not on the note made upon the fact that they had, without taken possession of the property
cession, and had thereby subjected each to pay his proportionate share of the succession.

This is evident from the followin
the Revised Civil Code of Louisian

"Art. 1422. The personal action creditors of a succession can exer
the heirs has for its basis the oblig
the heirs are under to discharge the deceased. This action is modifie
as the deceased has left one or sever

"Art. 1423. The heirs, by the f
the simple acceptance of a successio
contract the obligation to discha
debts of such succession to whateve
may amount, though they far excee of the effects composing it. The
tion to this rule is when the heirs,
dling with the succession, have ca
and faithful inventory thereof to
* * * for in this case they are bour
the debts to the value of the effec
the succession."

"Art. 1425. But though the heir universal sucessors who have not m ventory, as is before prescribed, are the payments of all the debts of the
to which they are called, even whe
exceed the value of the property
they are not bound in solido, and other, for the payment of the debts.

"Art. 1427. If, on the contrary, t he left two or more heirs, they are bound to contribute to the payment of those debts only in proportion to the part which each has in the succession. Then the creditors of the succession must divide among the heirs the personal action which they have against them, and cannot sue one for the portion of the other or one for the whole debt."

It is plain, from these provisions of the Civil Code, that the suit was brought to enforce against each of the plaintiffs in error a separate and distinct liability, which sprang from the succession of the succession of their ancestor, and that no joint judgment could be rendered against them. The petition was framed on this theory, and separate judgments were accordingly rendered against each of the plaintiffs in error. The note of Henderson & Gaines was introduced merely to prove the debt of the succession of Henderson.

The judgments against the four plaintiffs in error, whose writs of error we are asked to dismiss, are all less than the amount which authorizes a writ of error to this court. We have, therefore, no jurisdiction. For it is the settled rule that where a judgment or decree against a defendant, who pleads no counterclaim or set-off, and asks no affirmative relief, is brought by him to this court by writ of error or appeal, the amount in dispute on which the jurisdiction depends is the amount of the judgment or decree which is sought to be reversed. Gordon v. Ogden, 3 Pet. 33 [28 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 323]; Oliver v. Alexander, 6 Pet. 143 [32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 349]; Knapp v. Banks, 2 How., 73 [43 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 184]; Rich v. Lambert, 12 How., 347 [53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 1017]; Walker v. United States, 4 Wall., 163 [72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 319]; Merrill v. Petty, 3 Wall., 338 [88 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 499]; Troy v. Evans, 97 U. S., 1 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 941]; Hilton v. Robinson, 108 U. S., 165 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 688]; Railroad Company v. Higgins, 112 U. S., 227 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 715]; First National Bank of Omaha v. Rudick, 110 U. S. 224 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 26].

It is also settled that neither codefendants nor coplaintiffs can unite their separate and distinct interests for the purpose of making up the amount necessary to give this court jurisdiction upon writ of error or appeal. Rich v. Lambert, ubi supra; Seaver v. Bigelow, 5 Wall., 848 [72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 595]; Paving Company v. Bickford, 100 U. S. 147 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 581]; Russell v. Stansell, 105 U. S., 303 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1090]; Ex parte Balt., etc., R. R. Co., 106 U. S. 5 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 73]; Farmers' Loan & Trust Company v. Waterman, 106 U. S. 265 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 215]; Adams v. Crittenden, 106 U. S. 557 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 297]; Hawley v. Fairbanks, 106 U. S. 345 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 299]; New Jersey Zinc Company v. Porter, 108 U. S., 364 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 828]; Tupper v. Wise, 110 U. S., 398 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 189]; Fourth National Bank v. Stout, 113 U. S., 684 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1123]. The cases cited are conclusive of the question of jurisdiction. The authorities mentioned in the note,* on which the plaintiffs in error rely, were discussed by the Chief Justice in Ex parte Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co., ubi supra, and were shown to have no application to cases like the present. The case of Davies v. Corbin, 112 U. S., 36 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 627], also cited for the plaintiffs in error, clearly belongs to the same class. The motions to dismiss for want of jurisdiction are, therefore, sustained.

It remains to consider, upon the merits, the writ of error of William H. Henderson, as executor of the last will of Eleanor Ann Henderson. [277]

The plaintiff in error in this case relied for his defense upon article 3540 of the Civil Code of Louisiana, which reads as follows: "Actions on bills of exchange, notes payable to order or bearer, except bank notes, those on all effects negotiable or transferable by indorsement or delivery, and those on all promissory notes, whether negotiable or otherwise, are prescribed by five years, reckoning from the day when the engagements were payable."

It was ruled by the circuit court that the prescription established by this article of the Code of Louisiana was by the law of Kentucky made the limitation in this case, and this was not disputed by counsel for the defendant in error. General Statutes of Kentucky, 1872, chap. 71, art. 4, § 19.

The suit against the executor of Mrs. Henderson was not brought until nearly fifteen years after the maturity of the note of Henderson & Gaines, and nearly twelve years after the death of William Henderson. The obligation on which the suit was based was, therefore, prescribed as against the executor of Mrs. Henderson's will, unless the prescription had been interrupted. But the defendant in error insisted, as already stated, that the prescription had been interrupted by acknowledgments of the debt made by the firm of Gaines & Relf, with which, as she claimed, William Henderson was bound in solido for the payment of the note of Henderson & Gaines. To prove these acknowledgments, she introduced evidence tending to show payments made by Gaines & Relf, after the death of William Henderson, of interest on the note. The contention of the defendant in error was that these acknowledgments were made competent to show an interruption of prescription, as against the present plaintiff in error, by article 3552 of the Civil Code of Louisiana, which provides as follows:

"A citation served upon one debtor in solido, or his acknowledgment of the debt, interrupts the prescription with regard to all the others, and even their heirs."

It is plain that, to make this article applicable to the case of the plaintiff in error, it must be shown that Mrs. Henderson, his testatrix, was bound in solido with Gaines & Relf to pay the debt evidenced by the note of Henderson & Gaines, or that she was the heir of her husband, William Henderson, who at the time of his death, was bound in solido with Gaines & Relf, lately his partners. Counsel for the defendant in error concede, as well they may, that Mrs. Henderson did not become bound for the debt as the heir of her husband, William Henderson. Her liability was that of widow in community, and it was so averred in the petition filed in this case in the circuit court. [278]

The only question for decision is, therefore, Was Mrs. Henderson, as the widow of William

*Thomas v. Thomas, 17 How. 3 [59 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 1]; Martin Co. v. Hoffman, 102 U. S. 112 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 79]; The Commerce, 102 U. S. 112 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 79]; The Minnie, 105 U. S. 773 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1]; [illegible]

Henderson, bound in solido with Gaines & Relf, by whom the alleged acknowledgments were made, for the payment of the note of Henderson & Gaines? This question must be settled by the law of Louisiana. If it shall turn out that Mrs. Henderson was not bound in solido with Gaines & Relf, then the prescription as to her was not interrupted by any acknowledgments made by Gaines & Relf, and such acknowledgments were improperly admitted in evidence against her.

The articles of the Code bearing upon this question are as follows:

"Art. 2093. An obligation in solido is not presumed; it must be expressly stipulated. This rule ceases to prevail only in cases where an obligation in solido takes place of right, by virtue of some provision of law."

Such a provision is found in article 2872, which declares that "commercial partners are bound in solido for the debts of the partnership."

"Art. 2082. When several persons obligate themselves to the obligee by the term in solido, or use any other expressions which clearly show that they intend that each one shall be separately bound to perform the whole of the obligation, it is called an obligation in solido on the part of the obligors."

"Art. 2091. There is an obligation in solido on the part of the debtors when they are all obliged to the same thing, so that each may be compelled for the whole, and when the payment which is made by one of them exonerates the others towards the creditor."

[279]

"Art. 2092. The obligation may be in solido, although one of the debtors be obliged differently from the other to the payment of one and the same thing; for instance, if the one be but conditionally bound, while the engagement of the other is pure and simple, or if the one is allowed a term which is not granted to the other."

These articles make it clear that it is an indispensable requisite to the obligation of debtors in solido that they should be bound to perform the same obligation and the whole of it. Applying this test, it is evident that Mrs. Henderson was not bound in solido with Gaines & Relf for the debt evidenced by the note of Henderson & Gaines.

The liability of Mrs. Henderson was based upon and was co-extensive with her obligation as a member of the partnership or community between herself and her husband to pay the debts of the community. What this obligation is, is shown by the following articles of the Civil Code:

"Art. 2405. At the time of the dissolution of the marriage all effects which both husband and wife reciprocally possess are presumed common effects or gains, unless it be satisfactorily proved which of such effects they brought in marriage, or which have been given them separately, or which they have respectively inherited."

"Art. 2406. The effects which compose the partnership or community of gains are divided into two equal portions between the husband and the wife, or between their heirs at the dissolution of the marriage."

"Art. 2409. It is understood that in the partition of the effects of the partnership or community of gains, both husband and wife are to be equally liable for their share of the debts contracted during the marriage, a quitted at the time of its dissolutio

"Art. 2410. Both the wife and h assigns have the privilege of being onerate themselves from the debts
during the marriage, by renouncing
ship or community of gains."

From these provisions of the Co
dent that if the widow, upon the di
the community by the death of he fails to renounce the community
which, as the law stood at the t
death of William Henderson, was
to an acceptance of the community,
personally bound to pay one half of the community, but no more.
therefore, bound in solido for the
the debts of the community, unless upon which her obligation is based stipulates. This will be clear from ing authorities:

Pothier, in his Treatise on Oblig
graph 261, says: "An obligation i
in solido on the part of the debtors
of them is obliged for the whole, b
payment by one liberates them all."

The same author, in his work "
munauté," paragraph 729, speakin band's obligations on behalf of the says: "There is no difficulty when t has contracted alone. But would it if he was obligated jointly with his out any expression of solidarity? W this case, be debtor for the whole, as creditor, after the dissolution of the
The cause of the doubt is, that if gated jointly with any other pers
wife, without expression of solidari
be considered as having bound him his own proportion. Nevertheless monly held that even when the h
bound himself jointly with his w
expression of solidarity, he is oblig
whole, and remains, after dissolutio
munity, debtor for the whole as creditor. The reason is, that whe comes a party to the obligation of the intention of the parties is to ob
security to the creditor rather th
and diminish the liability of the hu

But, with regard to the obligation
he says, in paragraph 731: "The w dissolution of the community, whe
accepted the community or renou
tinues to be debtor for the whole respects the creditors) of the debts munity which proceed from her a say, those which she herself has whether before or after the marriag
of successions which have fallen t

He then adds:

"Par. 732. When the wife, duri
riage, has not contracted alone, but her husband, without expression o
though the husband be regarded
the whole, the wife is not conside
bound for anything but the half,
debtor, as regards the creditors, fo

"Par. 733. In regard to all other community which the wife has not tracted, and for which she is only character of member of the com wife, after the dissolution of the

which she has accepted, is only debtor for a moiety as towards the creditors."

So, in his Coutumes D'Orleans, introduction to title 10, the same author says:

"Par. 136. The husband is held in solido towards the creditor, not only when he has contracted alone, but even when he has bound himself with his wife without expression of solidarity, although it would be otherwise if he had so bound himself with another person."

"Par. 138. The wife is held in solido towards the creditors for debts of the community which proceed from her act, that is to say, for those which she has herself contracted before the marriage, and for those which grow out of successions which have fallen to her. She is also held in solido for debts contracted by her husband when she has bound herself in solido with him. If she has bound herself for his debts without solidarity having been expressed, she is held even towards the creditor only for half."

See also Touillier's Commentary on the Code Napoleon, t. 13, pp. 310, 313; Duranton, t. 6, p. [illegible], par. 197, t. X., French ed. and t. 8, p. 222, par. 401, t. XIV., French ed.; Zachariæ, t. 3, p. [illegible], 304, § 520, art. 1, par. 2.

In accord with these views of the text writers, the Supreme Court of Louisiana, in the case of Boulet v. Trepagnier, 11 Rob. 266, said: "The obligation which the widow incurs by her acceptance of the community is an additional security for the creditors, but they have the right to look to the heirs and direct representatives of the husband for the whole debt, because it is with him they trusted, and it is to whom they trusted. Ejus solius fidem secuti sunt, says Touillier, vol. 13, No. 233; 2 Pothier Traité de la Communauté, No. 719. But, although the creditors have this option, the widow who has accepted the conjugal partnership or community becomes absolutely and personally bound to them for one half its debts."

In the present case the debt which is sought to be enforced against the estate of Mrs. Henderson is not one which she contracted herself before the marriage, nor did it grow out of successions which had fallen to her, nor did she bind herself in solido therefor with her husband, nor did the husband in contracting the debt use any words which bound his wife solidarily with him, if in his power to do so. It is, therefore, clear, upon the authorities cited, that she was not bound in solido with her husband, during the community or after its dissolution with its succession, for the debt evidenced by the note of Henderson & Gaines. In fact, the petition filed in this case, and the judgments rendered by the circuit court, are based on this fact. She was, therefore, not bound in solido with Gaines & Relf, the codebtors of her husband. The payments made on the note by them after the death of her husband should not, there fore, have been admitted in evidence to interrupt the prescription of five years, which began to run in her favor upon his death.

The only authority not already noticed to which we have been referred by counsel for defendant in error, to show that Mrs. Henderson was bound in solido with Gaines & Relf for the note of Henderson & Gaines, is the case of Edwards v. Ricks, 30 La. Ann. 928. In explanation of this case it may be stated that in Louisiana the succession of a deceased wrongdoer is liable for the actual damage resulting from his torts. Art. 25, Code of Practice. The suit was brought by Edwards to recover damages for a trespass upon his property and an assault on his family, committed by Ricks and one Vernado. Before suit brought, Vernado had died, and the action was against Ricks and the widow and the two children and heirs of Vernado, who, it was alleged, had taken possession of his property without inventory, and were, therefore, liable for the obligations of the deceased trespasser. The judgment of the lower court was against Ricks for $5,000, and against the widow of Vernado for $2,500, and against his two heirs for $1,250 each, "the judgment," as the report states, "being in solido." [283]

Upon appeal the Supreme Court of Louisiana decided that, while Ricks might be held for exemplary damages, the widow as well as the heirs of Vernado were liable only for the actual damages, and accordingly affirmed the judgment against Ricks for $5,000, which included exemplary damages, and rendered judgment for the actual damages "against the widow and heirs of Vernado in the sum of three hundred dollars (in solido with the judgment against Ricks); said three hundred dollars to be paid" one half by the widow, and one half by the two heirs jointly. In delivering its opinion the court said: "Ricks and the estate of Vernado, represented by the widow and heirs, are sued as cotrespassers and solidary obligors. To the extent that the estate of Vernado is liable, the judgment against it would be solidary with that against Ricks, but would divide itself as follows: one half against the widow, and one half against the two heirs, jointly."

It is to be observed that the case did not involve a construction of article 3552 of the Civil Code, which we now have under consideration, and is not authority to support the contention of the defendant in error that a payment by Gaines & Relf interrupted the prescription in favor of Mrs. Wadsworth. And whatever the court may have said about the estate of Vernado being liable in solido with Ricks, was merely obiter, for no judgment was asked or rendered against the estate, and it is clear that under articles 1425 and 1427, heretofore cited, the obligation resting upon Ricks and the widow and heirs of Vernado was not a salidary obligation; and the court did not treat it as such, for it rendered a separate judgment against Ricks for one amount, a joint judgment against the two heirs of Vernado for a different amount, and a third judgment against the widow for still another amount, and the judgment against Ricks was made up of $4,700 exemplary damages, and $300 actual damages; while the judgment against the widow and heirs were only for the actual damages. [284]

It seems plain, therefore, that the court, by calling the obligation and the judgments solidary, merely meant that a payment made by one of the judgment debtors would pro tanto exonerate the others towards the creditor. But this quality, as we have shown, is not the only one necessary to an obligation in solido, as defined by the Civil Code. The debtors must be "all obliged to the same thing, so that each may be compelled for the whole." These parties were not under the same obligation, either in character or amount, and were not all bound for the whole.

Nor do we think it is a reasonable construction of article 3552 of the Civil Code to hold, that when two persons are jointly bound, one for the entire debt and one for only a part of it, the acknowledgment of the latter interrupts the prescription as to the former.

Therefore, as the Circuit Court admitted incompetent evidence upon a vital point of the case against the executor of Mrs. Henderson, and, when requested by him, refused, by its charge to the jury, to counteract the effect of the evidence thus admitted, the error is fatal to the judgment in favor of the defendant in error against the executor of Eleanor Ann Henderson.

The judgment against William H. Henderson, executor, is therefore reversed, and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions to grant a new trial, and the motions to dismiss the writs of error in the cases of Howard L. Henderson, William H. Henderson, Warren N. Henderson and Victorine S. and M. O. McCarthy are granted.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[291] HIRAM K. HAZLETT, Appt.,
v.
THE UNITED STATES.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 291-299.)

Contracts—contract with quartermaster's department to furnish transportation—rights of contractor.

*A person who by a contract made with him by the quartermaster's department of the army in behalf of the United States, agrees to furnish all the steamboat transportation required by the United States for officers and soldiers between certain places, and to certain Indian posts and agencies during a certain time, and to "receive from the officers or agents of the quartermaster's department all such military, Indian and government stores, supplies, wagons and stock, as may be offered or turned over to him for transportation * * * by said officers or agents of the quartermaster's department, and transport the same with dispatch, and deliver them * * * to the officer or agent of the quartermaster's department designated to receive them," at a certain rate, is not entitled to claim compensation for Indian supplies, never in the charge of the quartermaster's department for transportation, transported, between places named in the contract, by another person under a contract between him and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; although during the same time some Indian supplies are delivered by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to the quartermaster's department, and by that department turned over to the claimant for transportation at the rate specified in his contract.

[No. 17.]

Argued Oct. 23, 1885. Decided Nov. 2, 1885.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Theodore H. N. McPherson and Enoch Totten, for appellant:

The legal intention of the contracting parties may be ascertained and determined by reference to the subject-matter of the co surrounding circumstances.

Merriam v. U. S. 107 U. S. 437 Towne, 5 Wall., 689 (72 U. S. b 527); Barreda v. Silsbee, 21 Hov S., bk. 16, L. ed. 86); Brawley v S., 168 (bk. 24, L. ed. 622.)

Greater regard is to be had to t of the parties than to any pa which they may have used in the their intent.

1 Chit. Cont. 105; Morey v. B 565; Gray v. Clark, 11 Vt., 5 Miller, 6 B. Mon., 612.

Contracts should be supporte defeated.

Smith v. Packhurst, 3 Atk., 1 Stacy, 9 Q. B., 1033; Broom v. & N., 255; Atkins v. Sleeper, 7 Mr. John Goode, Solicitor pellee.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivere of the court:

The foundation of this actio agreement of February 17, 1870 United States and the appellant, v ant below, in relation to the tra him, at specified rates, of militar government stores, supplies, wag Full compensation was made fo actually performed by him. B that he was entitled to transport stores and supplies, which w against his protest, to the Northv tation Company for transportatio agencies included in his contract and stores last named were trans written contract made, without by the Commissioner of Indian tember, 1870, at higher rates than the claimant. If they had been him, under his contract, he woul a large profit, after deducting have cost to do the work, and als sum for being relieved from the responsibility and risk attend vice. Although fully prepared transport them, the officers of t reau refused to turn them over to contends, was a breach of his c court below adjudged that the the Government, and dismissed He now insists that the judgm upon an erroneous construction c and was also inconsistent with th terpretation given to its provisio of the Government immediately its execution.

We are of opinion that the cl cause of action against the Unite contract did not obligate the G deliver to him, nor did it bind h for transportation during the peri all Indian supplies or stores in t agents or officers, of whatever branch of the public service. It v the claimant by an officer of the q department, under directions fro master-General of the Army. By he became bound to furnish all transportation required by the U officers and soldiers on the Miss

*Head note by Mr. Justice HARLAN.

[illegible] certain named places, and for posts or Indian agencies between certain other named places, at any time from March 20, 1870, to October 31, 1870. He agreed to "receive, at any time during that period, from the officers or agents of the quartermaster's department, at St. Louis, or any point between St. Louis and Fort Benton," mentioned in the tabular statement annexed to the written contract, "all such military, Indian and government stores, supplies, wagons and stock as may be offered or turned over to him for transportation, in good order and condition, by said officers or agents of the quartermaster's department, and transport the same with dispatch, and deliver them in like good order and condition to the officer or agent of the quartermaster's department designated to receive them," etc. These words define the nature and extent of the obligations assumed by the contractor. It was entirely competent for the quartermaster's department to enter into an agreement whereby the contractor became bound to receive from its officers or agents all such military, Indian or government supplies as they might deliver to him for transportation. But it had no authority, without reference to the views of the Interior Department, and of the officers having special connection with Indian affairs, to control the transportation of Indian supplies or stores of every kind. Nor did the quartermaster's department assume to exercise such authority; for, it only stipulated with claimant that he should receive and transport such supplies and stores as were turned over to him by its officers and agents. As, therefore, the claimant was not bound to receive Indian supplies or stores turned over to him for transportation by the Indian Bureau, the employment by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs of others to effect the transportation of Indian stores and supplies—which were never, so far as the record discloses, in charge of the quartermaster's department for transportation—was not an infringement of his legal rights. There is no escape from this conclusion, unless it be that the quartermaster's department had, under the law, the sole power of making contracts for the transportation of Indian supplies and stores. But that proposition cannot be maintained.

It is also contended that the Government, in view of the conduct of its agents, subsequent to the making of the contract with claimant, cannot now be permitted to dispute the proposition that he was entitled by his contract to receive for transportation, during the period designated, all Indian supplies and stores, by whatever department held, which were to be sent to the several Indian posts or agencies designated in his contract.

This proposition arises out of the following facts found by the Court of Claims:

"It does not appear that either the Commissioner of Indian Affairs or the Secretary of the Interior had actual knowledge of the fact that a contract in suit existed with the claimant, relating to the transportation of Indian stores and supplies by or through the officers of the quartermaster's department; nor did they expressly authorize General Rucker to enter into a contract for the transportation of Indian stores or supplies nor did they ratify such contract, unless its ratification be implied from the following facts and circumstances: The Indian Bureau directed that two lots of Indian supplies be forwarded in April and May, 1870, amounting to 221,242 pounds, which was acccordingly done by Quartermasters Gilliss and Fury, at Sioux City, Iowa, turning them over to the claimant for transportation, and they were by him transported (under his contract with the quartermaster's department to include the transportation of the Indian supplies) to Whetstone and Big Cheyenne agencies; and the Indian Bureau reimbursed the War Department for this transportation. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior directed the Secretary of War, June 21, 1870, to turn over the army subsistence stores collected at the instance of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for the Indians at Forts Rice, Stevenson, Buford and Shaw, to the Indian agents at the Grand River and Fort Berthold agencies, and that the cost of transporting the stores from the forts to the agencies would be paid by the Indian Bureau. The claimant transported, September 27, 1870, 82,720 pounds of Indian stores and supplies from Fort Rice to Grand River agency, for which he was paid accordingly. The contract in suit was duly filed in the returns office of the Department of the Interior the 12th March, 1870." [299]

These facts give no support to the suggestion that the Government recognized claimant's right to transport all Indian supplies for the posts or agencies named in his contract. That contract did not forbid the quartermaster's department from receiving Indian supplies, in the first instance, from the Indian Bureau, and delivering them to the claimant for transportation under his contract. And that which was done in respect of the Indian supplies forwarded in April and May, 1870, and of those transported in September, 1870, to Grand River agency, so far from implying authority in the quartermaster's department to control the whole matter of the transportation of Indian supplies, was a recognition of the authority of the officers, having special charge of Indian affairs, to provide for the transportation of any Indian supplies in their hands, for the cost incurred in transporting Indian supplies to the Whetstone, Big Cheyenne and Grand River agencies was borne by the Indian Bureau. If the Indian Bureau chose to make arrangements with the War Department for the transportation of certain Indian supplies, under the contract made with the claimant, that fact falls short of proving that the purpose was to grant him the right to transport all Indian supplies, by whatever department or officers held, to the posts or agencies designated in his contract.

We perceive no error in the judgment, and it is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[228] PETER C. A. M. VAN WEEL, Appt.,

v.

FREDERICK H. WINSTON, THE CHICAGO AND SOUTHWESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 228-247.)

Parties—the president of a railroad company, not personally liable to the purchasers of its bonds—fraudulent representations—equity jurisdiction.

1. The president of a railroad company is not personally liable for losses alleged to have resulted to the purchasers of its bonds through fraudulent representations contained in circulars of the company signed by him as president.

2. Representations contained in circulars issued by a railroad company, to advertise a new issue of bonds for the construction of a branch line, are held to have been superseded by the mortgage or trust deed given by the company on such branch line to secure the payment of said bonds, in so far as such representations differed from the terms of that instrument.

3. A provision that the branch line when located should not exceed fifty miles in length does not require that it should be of that length, especially as the bondholders were given, in addition to the mortgage on said branch line, a second mortgage on the company's main line.

4. There is no privity or trust relation existing between the president of a railroad company and the purchasers of its bonds. In this case the purchasers obtained in the mortgage the only security for which they contracted. For any improper or fraudulent appropriation of the proceeds of the bonds the president is only liable to the company or its stockholders, unless it be to a judgment creditor, with an execution returned nulla bona.

5. Unless the transactions to which charges of fraud or of a breach of trust refer, are such as in their essential nature constitute a fraud or breach of trust, a court of chancery cannot give relief.

[No. 2.]

Argued Oct. 21, 22, 1885. Decided Nov. 2, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. James K. Edsall and William H. Moore, for appellant.

Messrs. W. C. Goudy and Melville W. Fuller, for Frederick H. Winston and the executors of George C. Campbell, appellees.

[236] Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the Circuit Court of the Northern District of Illinois, dismissing the bill of Van Weel, who was plaintiff below and is appellant here.

The original bill was filed December 12, 1876, [237] and several amended bills were filed, until, on May 22, 1880, complainant filed what he calls his amended and supplemental bill, substituting it in lieu of his previous bill and amended bills.

The defendants named in this bill are the Chicago and Southwestern Railway Company of Iowa and Missouri, Frederick H. Winston and George C. Campbell, citizens of Illinois, Calvin F. Burnes, a citizen of Missouri, and David Dowes and Frederick S. Winston, citizens of New York.

Mr. Van Weel describes himse and a subject of the King of the
and a holder and owner of bond
cago and Southwestern Railway $67,000, principal, and overdue in to the amount of $35,175. H suit, as his bill alleges, not only
but on behalf of numerous other
same issue of bonds, whose name
the amount, including interest, o

The bill was demurred to, the sustained and a decree rendered
from which this appeal is taken.

The contest seems to be mainly
plainant Van Weel on one side,
H. Winston on the other. Calvin
zen of Missouri, has not been ser
cess within Northern District of
has not appeared by himself or a same may be said of Frederick who is a citizen of New York.

F. H. Winston has demurred s
if the bill cannot be sustained ag obvious, from its character, that against the other defendants. Th
Southwestern Railway Co. also

The bill is a long one, the alleg
classified, nor the true foundat
very clearly stated. It is full fraudulent and corrupt, and gene conspiracy and violation of trus Mere words, in and of themselve
qualifying adjectives of more sp
are not sufficient grounds of equit
unless the transactions to which such as in their essential nature
fraud or a breach of trust, for wh
chancery can give relief. Ambl
107 U. S., 590 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 32

The charges in this bill on w
sought may be arranged under tw

1. Fraudulent misrepresentati fendant affecting the character an security on which the bonds in negotiated.

2. The violation of certain obli nature of a trust, which he assu
to the security and ultimate pa
bonds.

A few of the most important cable to both these charges as fo
may be thus stated:

A company had been incorpor
laws of Iowa to build a railroad f
of Washington in that State, on Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific
in a southwesterly course to the M
or to the line of the State of Mi direction. Another corporation
ganized under the laws of Misso
railroad in that State, from a poi
City of Leavenworth in Kansas,
state line, in the direction of th
Moines in that State.

These companies were consoli
under the name of the Chicago a ern Railway Co., with the declar building a single road from Was Missouri River, at a point opp
worth. Of this Company Mr. W
the president, and a member of committee of its board of d Company issued bonds for fiv

dollars, which were guarantied by the Rock Island Co., and made a mortgage on the entire line of its road to secure their payment. The length of this line was 266 miles, and the money raised on these bonds secured its rapid completion. In the meantime another corporation had been organized in Missouri to build a road from the Missouri River, opposite the City of Atchison in the State of Kansas, to some point on the line of the Chicago and Southwestern Road. This road was called the Atchison Branch, and when the main branch of the Southwestern Road was nearly finished, lacking, as the bill avers, only fifty miles of its completion, a consolidation was effected between the company organized to build this branch road to Atchison and the original Chicago and Southwestern Co., in which consolidation the corporation retained the name of this latter company.

This company, as consolidated, at once determined to raise a new loan of $1,000,000, to be used mainly for the purpose of building the Atchison branch road, on which but little, if any, work had been done. As a security for the bonds of this loan, they made another mortgage, which was a first mortgage on the Atchison Branch and a second mortgage on the main line. These bonds were all sold, and the two lines of road completed within a reasonable time; and it may as well be added that both mortgages were forfeited in a few years for non-payment of interest, and the mortgages foreclosed by a sale of the roads under two different foreclosure suits.

The charge of actual fraud against Mr. Winston grows out of certain acts and representations made by him in connection with the sale of these bonds by the Chicago and Southwestern Co.

In order that no injustice may be done the complainant in regard to his allegations on this point, the language of the bill will be here given.

"Your orator further complains and states that the said Frederick H. Winston and his confederates afterwards, to wit: on or about the [illegible] day of June, A. D. 1871, contrived and agreed upon a scheme to secure a loan of the further sum of $1,000,000, for the ostensible purpose of building a branch line of road as hereinafter stated, but in reality to enable him and his confederates to get control of and convert to their own use a large part of the funds secured and advanced to build said branch road. And to that end, said Winston, as president of said Southwestern Company, caused a circular to be issued, a true copy of which is here annexed, marked 'Exhibit A,' to which reference is made as if it was incorporated herein, in which, among other things, speaking as president of said Southwestern Company, he said:

"'On the first day of May, 1871, the Chicago and Southwestern Railway, from Washington, Iowa, to Leavenworth, Kansas, a distance of [illegible] miles—now finished and in operation, 216 miles—will be fully completed and opened for business under the auspices and management of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company. The two roads, thus under one management, will constitute a through line, and the shortest through line, from Chicago and the great lakes of the north to the extreme southwest. Congratulating our friends and ourselves upon the prompt sale of our first issue of bonds, as well as their present established market value, both in this country and in Europe, we would present for sale, through the financial agents of the company, a second issue, for the purpose of constructing a branch railroad from the main line to Atchison, Kansas, a distance of about fifty miles."

Said Winston, after setting forth the advantages of Atchison as a commercial and railway center, continued as follows:

"To carry on the arrangements before stated, the Chicago and Southwestern Railway Company have issued one thousand bonds, dated June 1, 1871, each for $1,000, due thirty years after date, with semi-annual coupons annexed, at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, principal and interest payable in American gold coin, at the American Exchange National Bank, in the City of New York; all of which are equally secured by a first mortgage on the road to be built, its assets, rights of way, earnings and other property, as well as by a second mortgage upon the Chicago and Southwestern Railway, its property and franchises."

It was further stated in said circular that said mortgage would be "a safe and reliable security," the value of which would be better appreciated by the fact that the "Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company had already agreed to lease, and would, when completed, operate, the whole line," on terms that would pay a handsome dividend to the stockholders, and "which in no event" would be "less than the interest on all the bonds outstanding," and that the value and security of the contract aforesaid was "equal to a direct indorsement of the bonds" by the Rock Island Co.

It was further stated in said circular: [241]

"The Chicago and Southwestern Railway, for over two hundred miles west from Washington, is pointing almost directly to Atchison, so that its extension to that place involves less curvature than that of the established line to Leavenworth." "The Atchison Branch, through the populous Counties of Buchanan, Clinton and Platte, offers railroad facilities to wealthy agricultural communities, which in return must afford a heavy and lucrative local traffic. Every tract over which it will pass is a farm, teeming with the abundant products of the famous Platte purchase." "With the offering of the first loan of the Chicago and Southwestern Railway Company, we are admonished, as the originators of a new enterprise, to avoid the language of eulogy and enthusiasm. Difficult as was the task to those who knew its real merits, we have compensation now in a final and complete success, far beyond any expectation we dared to hope to excite by any statement in our former publication. Reviewing with a just pride all that was then written, we feel authorized to claim the confidence of the numerous friends, both in Europe and in this country, of the Chicago and Southwestern Railway Company, to whom we have more than verified all our statements." "To complete the connections of the Chicago and Southwestern Railway, to extend its power and usefulness, and to increase its business and earnings, by the construction of the Atchison Branch, we now offer this loan and commend it to our friends as a safe and de

[illegible] "New York, June, [illegible]," and signed "[illegible] Winston, President."

The [illegible] in these representations is in the alleged fact that the branch road, when built, was only twenty-nine miles, and not fifty, whereby the bondholders were deprived of the security of twenty-one miles of road which they had a right to expect, to make good their bonds, and that it was not known to Winston at the time that the road would not be as long as thus represented, and would not go through all the counties named. There was one of these counties, in point of fact, not touched by the road.

The first observation to be made on this subject is, that circulars, on which this allegation [242] is founded, are exhibits to the bill, and in every instance they are clearly the circulars of the Chicago and Southwestern Railroad Co. They are signed by Winston, as president of that Company, and purported to be issued from its office, and in the charging part of the bill, copied above, and all through it, he is said "to be speaking as president of that Company." There is no allegation anywhere that Winston ever gave his personal pledge or statement to any one about to invest in the bonds of the Company, that the road would be fifty miles long, or any other length. It is obvious, from the nature of these circulars, that the branch road had not then been located, and Mr. Winston, as an individual, could give no pledge on that subject which would bind the Company, nor could he do so as president of the Company. The road had yet to be located, and this could only be done by the board of directors, of whom Mr. Winston was but one, of eight or ten.

A source of much safer reliance as to the security which these purchasers of the bonds were getting, was the mortgage given by the Company. This of course was made and recorded before the negotiation for the loan was commenced, and copies of it accompanied the bonds when offered for sale. Every prudent man knowing that this mortgage was his main security, would examine it, or his agent would, before investing his money.

In this mortgage or deed of trust, the trustees being David Dowes, Frederick S. Winston and Calvin F. Burnes, the property conveyed is described as "the branch railroad of said party of the first part, as the same now is or may be hereafter surveyed and being constructed, and leading from the Missouri River in the State of Missouri, at a point opposite the City of Atchison in the State of Kansas, by the most practicable route, not exceeding fifty miles in length, to a junction with the main line of the railroad of said party of the first part."

Whatever representations may have been made in the circulars of the Company was, according to all rules of evidence, superseded by this solemn instrument between the parties If they differed in any respect, the latter must be looked to as the security on which the bond-[243] holders alone had a right to rely. This instrument, so far from giving any pledge or assurance that the branch road should be fifty miles long, or near that, is careful to say it shall not exceed that length. The limitation is in its length, not its shortness. The latter is provided for by saying that it should be by the most practicable route.

It is impossible to read this desc
line of road, conveyed as security f without seeing clearly that the lin
located— that its future locatio
govered by two considerations:
should be the most practicable ro
Atchison and the main line of th
(2) that its length should not excee
If the most practicable line, by v
dently meant the best working line
pany who was building it, should re
er line than fifty miles, there is no
of a promise or suggestion that it s
so long, and no longer, as that req
in the provision that its length sh
ceed fifty miles, there was a prote wasting the money, received fro
holders, on a long and unprofitabl
made only for the benefit of people that line.

But this line of road was not t
rity for the payment of these bond
gage included also the entire ma
Washington to Leavenworth, 266 was now nearly completed. This connection between the rich agric
try of western Missouri and the Ci
by means of the Chicago, Rock Islan Co., then a rich and prosperous co
deeply interested in this Southwes
that it had guaranteed $5,000,000
of the company. It was further this mortgage or deed of trust that of the sale of these bonds should
the hands of the Rock Island Co., only pay them out in the regular p
the work. It was further provided gage that if any of these proceeds re
that company after the completio
it should be paid over to the presi authorized agent of the Chicago an ern Co.

It cannot be doubted that this
the main line, though a second lien,
as an important part of the securit
holders under it, and when taken with the aid and interest of the Co., the precise length of the bran
not have been held to be very im
fact, as the two lines belonged to o
and that company was liable for a
it was obviously the interest of the
and of the stockholders that the
should be so located as to make profits of the entire enterprise on wh holders held a lien.

In regard to the allegation of
matter, it is apparent:

1. That all that is charged against is that he signed or permitted hi
affixed to a circular which stated
length of the branch road, then un
unlocated, as about fifty miles.

2. That the place of junction wi western Road, which necessarily de length of the branch road, was not mentioned.

3. That in the mortgage which said branch road, all that was said
should not exceed fifty miles.

4. That it is nowhere averred was not properly located, or that it been located otherwise.

1. That the security which the bondholders had upon that line and the other seemed to render the place of connection between the branch and the main line unimportant, as regards the security for their loan.

We are of opinion, therefore, that the complainants had no right to rely on the statement concerning the length of the line as materially affecting their security, and that Mr. Winston committed no fraud in the part he took in that matter. This view is reinforced by the admission of the bill, that the branch road was completed mainly out of the money arising from the bonds sold to plaintiff and others, and that several years after both it and the main line had been finished and in operation, both roads were sold under the two mortgages; that the branch line was sold under foreclosure proceedings instituted by Van Weel, and was bought in for $10,000 by Mr. Berg, one of Van Weel's associates as bondholder, and that they now, as far as appears, own the road their money was used to build.

Other transactions are mentioned as fraudulent, such as that Mr. Winston converted some of the money arising from these bonds to his private use, and not to the purpose of the Company. The answer to this is, that Mr. Winston came under no obligation to see to the application of this money as the bondholders might think it ought to be applied. They had bought their bonds, paid their money, and received their security. The money so diverted was the money of the Southwestern Co., and not their money.

The wrong done by Winston in that matter, if wrong there was, was done to that company and not to the bondholders. They had provided their own means of insuring the building of this branch road, by disbursing the money through the Rock Island Co., and it was successful. The road was built. There was no privity between Mr. Winston and these bondholders as to the use of money which they had loaned to the Company, which was no longer their money. The error which pervades the bill throughout is to treat this corporation, to which the bondholders loaned their money, as if it had no existence, as if they had loaned it to Mr. Winston and hold his personal obligation that it should all be honestly applied, and he be responsible for the misapplication of the loan. If Mr. Winston cheated the Company out of its money, the right to redress for that wrong is in the Company or in its stockholders. As a creditor of the Company, Mr. Van Weel has no right to interfere in the matter until he has a judgment against the Company, with an execution returned nulla bona. He has not in this suit shown any right to use the name of the Company or of its stockholders to obtain redress for a tort committed on them. [United States v. Union Pacific R. R. Co. 98 U. S. 569, 25 L. ed. 154].

There are probably other allegations of fraud, but they are no better founded than these, and we can give them no further attention.

2. As regards the matter of trust, which is one of the grounds of relief set up in the bill, we need not occupy much time in its consideration.

The trustees in the mortgage, which is the only express trust that we can find set out in the bill, were Frederick S. Winston, David Dows, and Calvin Burnes, neither of whom resides within the jurisdiction of the court, or has been served with process.

If, however, they were before the court, they are not charged with any breach of duty with which they were intrusted.

The application of the money arising from the mortgage bonds was not by the mortgagors intrusted to them, nor had they any control over it after the bonds were sold.

It is not alleged that they refused to foreclose the mortgage when it became forfeited by nonpayment of interest, or that they failed to perform any duty imposed upon them by the mortgage.

It is asserted, however, that Frederick H. Winston, as president of the company, was bound to see that the money raised on these bonds was used exclusively in the construction of the branch road, and that, in this regard, he was a trustee for the lenders of the money. We are unable to see any such trust in the matter.

The contracting parties, in regard to this loan, were the bondholders and the Southwestern Co. The one became debtor for the money loaned, the other became creditor. Mr. Winston, as the president of the Company, represented the Company, the borrower. The lenders desired a security for the payment of their money, which they obtained in the mortgage, and their trustees in that trust were Dows, Burnes, and F. S. Winston. They, in that instrument, undertook to secure the building of this road out of the money loaned, by requiring its deposit with the Rock Island Co., and its disbursement, for that purpose, under its supervision. But if the loan should produce more than was necessary for that purpose, what was to become of it? Was it to go back to the lenders? There is no hint of that kind. It was impracticable to do so, because the bonds would, many of them, have changed hands. As to the new owner, it would have been a mere gratuity to return it. And the original lender had no interest in the matter. Instead of this, it is expressly declared that the Rock Island Co. could relieve itself of further obligation in the matter by payment to the president of the Company. [247]

When thus paid, did he hold it as trustee for the bondholders? If so, under what trust or what obligation? Could he return it to the bondholders, with the bonds still outstanding against the Company? Or did he hold it merely as the representative of the Company of which he was president? We think it was clearly the money of the Company, and could have been used by it for the purchase of rolling stock, general equipment, or any other legitimate use of its own money.

This money belonged to the Company. The road was built—the only interest in the nature of a trust which the lenders had attempted to protect by the control of the funds. The obligation of Mr. Winston in the disposition of the money, if any of it came to his hands, was to the Company. If it was lost, it was the Company's loss, not appellant's. If he improperly or fraudulently converted it to his own use, he was liable to the Company and not to the plaintiff in this suit. There was no privity or trust relation between him and them in this regard.

We think appellant has shown no right to relief in this suit, that the demurrer was properly sustained, and the decree of the Circuit Court dismissing the bill is therefore affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[248] JOHN H. STARIN, INDEPENDENT STEAMBOAT COMPANY ET AL., Appts.,

v.

MAYOR, ALDERMEN AND COMMONALTY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

INDEPENDENT STEAMBOAT COMPANY

v.

SAME.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 248-259.)

Removal of causes—suit arising under Constitution or laws of the United States—separate controversy—ferries—right of City of New York to establish—whether exclusive.

1. Where it appears that some title, right, privilege or immunity, on which the recovery depends, will be defeated by one construction of the Constitution or a law of the United States, or sustained by the opposite construction, the case is one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States.

2. A separate defense by one defendant in a joint suit against him and others upon a joint or joint and several cause of action, does not create a separate controversy so as to entitle him to removal under the Act of 1875.

3. The decision of the question whether the City of New York has, under its charter, the exclusive right to establish ferries between Manhattan Island and the shore of Staten Island on the Kill von Kull, and, if so, whether the defendants have, in law and in fact, interfered with that right by setting up and operating such a ferry, does not depend on the Constitution or laws of the United States.

[Nos. 836, 837.]

Submitted Apr. 22, 1885. Decided Nov. 2, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Charles McNamee, Roscoe Conkling and A.L. Pincoffs, for appellants:

"If a part of a case turns on a federal law, the circuit court has jurisdiction."

Osborn v. Bank of U. S. 9 Wheat. 738 (22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 204).

As to what are cases arising under the laws of the United States, see R. R. Co. v Mississippi, 102 U. S. 135 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 96); West. U. Tel. Co. v. Nat. Tel. Co. 19 Fed. Rep. 561.

In this case removal is claimed because provisions of the Constitution and federal laws are ingredients of the defense.

If there is any question whether the privileges claimed can come into collision with the rights secured by the coasting license, such question is a federal one.

Ry. Co. v. Renwick, 102 U. S. 180 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 51); State of Ill. v. C. B. & Q. R. R. Co. 16 Fed. Rep. 706.

The question raised as to the respective rights of the holders of a coasting license and the grantee of a ferry right such
by the City of New York, has n
termined or covered either by th
Conway v Taylor, 1 Black, 603 (
17, L. ed. 191), or by any of th
collected in Cardwell v. Bridge
207 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 960).

It does not follow from Wiggi
v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365
ed. 419), that the holder of a co
has no right to complain when h
from traversing the waters of the
in any mode and for any pur choose. On its face a coasting li contain any restriction. If a su claimed in virtue of a grant by a power of the State to grant such tested, it is a federal question.

Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black,
Bk. 17, L. ed. 191); Judiciary
709; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East
U. S., 365 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 419).

This action being in tort is in i eral.

Skinner v. Gunten, 1 Wm.
Hutchins v. Hutchins, 7 Hill, 1
Baker, 7 Cow. 445; Boyd v. Gill,
145; Smith v. Rines, 2 Sumn. 346

An examination of the authoriti
that it was the intention of Cong
ing the Act of 1875, to provide t
like the present, the suit could be

Smith v. Rines, 2 Sumn. 346; W
18 How. 468 (59 U. S. bk. 15, Carneal v. Banks, 10 Wheat.
bk. 6, L. ed. 299); Cameron v.
Wheat. 591 (16 U. S. bk. 4, L. e
B. S. M. Co. v. F. S. M. Co.
579 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 914, 9 Vose, 99 U. S. 545 (Bk. 25, L. ed
v. Lowsdale, 1 Deady, 288; Frase
106 U. S. 191 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 1
Wiswall, 112 U. S. 187 (Bk. 28,

Mr. W. W. McFarland, f
The case is not removable, as pendent Steamboat Co. on the grou
is a separable controversy betwe
pany and the plaintiff.

Hyde v. Ruble, 104 U. S. 40
ed. 823); Alum v. Thomas, 16 F
Moore v. Construction Co. 19 Fed

There is but one cause of actio against the defendants jointly.

L. & N. R. R. Co. v. Ide, 114
29, L. ed. 63); Putnam v. Ingrah
57 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 65).

"The authority to establish ferries is not included in the pow
eral Government to regulate comm

Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black, 603
17, L. ed. 191).

It does not appear that the case
under the Constitution and laws States.

Manhattan Ry. Co. v. Mayor, 1
195; McFadden v. Robinson, 22
Sawyer v. Concordia Parish, 4
Gold Washing Co. v. Keyes, 96 U 24, L. ed. 656); McManus v. O'S
S. 578 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 390; Brow
92 U. S. 327 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 511)
v. B. & M. R. R. Co. 112 U. S.
L. ed. 678).

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

These are appeals from orders of the Circuit Court remanding a suit which had been removed from a state court under the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, 18 Stat. at L. 470. The questions to be decided arise on the following facts:

The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York, a municipal corporation of the State of New York, commonly called the City of New York, brought a suit in equity on or about the 11th of August, 1884, in the Superior Court of the City of New York, against John H. Starin, Independent Steamboat Company, Starin's City, River & Harbor Transportation Company of New York, New York and Staten Island Steamboat Company, David Manson, Franklin Wilson, William Clark, John C. Bishop, James B. Corwin, Max Golden, Samuel Underhill and Frank Smith, to restrain them from using and employing the steam ferryboats "Pomona," "D. R. Martin," "Laura M. Starin" and "Castleton," or any other vessel or vessels of any kind, for and in the transportation of persons, animals, vehicles, freight, goods and chattels from or to pier No. 18, North River, or from or to any place in Manhattan Island, to or from certain landing places on the shore of Staten Island, without the license or permission of the plaintiffs; and also for account of moneys received by the defendants, or any or either of them, for such transportation. Both Manhattan Island and Staten Island are in the State of New York. The cause of action, as stated in the complaint, is that the City, under its charter granted originally January 15, 1730, by the Province of New York, and since confirmed by the State of New York, has the exclusive right of establishing ferries from Manhattan Island to the opposite shores, in such and as many places as the common council may think fit; that the defendants without the permission of the City, have set up and are maintaining a ferry between Manhattan Island and various landing places on Staten Island, and for that purpose employ the boats above named; that the defendant Starin is the owner of The Castleton and The D. R. Martin and the person chiefly interested in Starin's City, River and Harbor Transportation Company of New York, which owns The Laura M. Starin, and in the New York and Staten Island Steamboat Company, which owns The Pomona; that while the business is done in the name of the Independent Steamboat Co., that Company was organized and incorporated through his instrumentality and in his interest, and is composed of not three persons, all of whom are in his employ and under his control; that the incorporation of the Company was a devise for his own personal benefit; and that he is in fact the person actually operating the ferry. The certificate of incorporation, a copy of which is attached to the complaint, shows that the Company was organized under the laws of New Jersey July 28, 1884, with a capital of $5,000, divided into 500 shares of $10 each, all owned by three persons, for the transportation of persons and property upon water, as common carriers for hire; that the principal part of the business of the Company in New Jersey was to be transacted in Jersey City, and that the business out of that State was to be done in the Cities of New York and Brooklyn and the several villages, landing places, cities and towns on the Hudson River, Staten Island and Long Island, in New York, accessible by water.

The defendants, Starin, Independent Steamboat Co., Starin's City, River & Harbor Transportation Co. and New York & Staten Island Steamboat Co., each filed a separate answer to the complaint. All the other defendants, who are the masters or pilots or engineers employed in running the several boats, united in one answer. The answers all contained substantially the same defenses. They admit the ownership of the boats as set forth in the complaint, except that it is alleged The Castleton belongs to the New York & Staten Island Steamboat Co. instead of Starin. They admit the charter of the City, with words purporting to grant certain rights as to the establishment of ferries from Manhattan Island to the opposite shores, but deny that this grant extends to ferries between New York and that part of Staten Island which borders upon the Kill von Kull. They admit that the several boats mentioned in the complaint were run at stated times by the Independent Steamboat Co., under the management of the masters and engineers, without the license or permission of the City, for the transportation of persons and property between pier 18, North River, which is on Manhattan Island, and certain landing places on the shore of Staten Island, making daily fourteen trips or thereabouts; but they deny that, in so doing, the Company either operated a ferry or usurped any franchise belonging to the City. They also deny the allegations in the complaint as to the connection of the defendant Starin with the Independent Steamboat Co., and deny that Starin is the person who is actually operating the boats.

The answers then allege, "as a matter of special defense under the laws of the United States":

1. That the Independent Steamboat Company is a corporation, organized and incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, for the purpose of transporting persons and property [251] by water, as a common carrier for hire, in and over the waters of the Hudson River, Kill von Kull, Raritan Bay, and their tributaries, between places on such waters in New York and New Jersey, including Staten Island and Long Island, and the Cities of New York and Brooklyn; that the Company chartered the boats in question from the several owners thereof, and leased wharves and landing places in New York and on the shores of Staten Island bordering on the Kill von Kull, for the purpose of engaging in the business of transportation by water between such wharves and landings.

2. That all the boats in question are enrolled and licensed, under the laws of the United States for carrying on the coasting trade, as vessels of the United States, and that the individual defendants described as masters or engineers on the boats are all licensed under the laws of the United States to act as masters or pilots, or as engineers, on steam vessels upon the waters traversed by the boats in question.

3. That for a number of years, terminating in 1874, steamboats, similar to those operated by the Company, and doing a transportation business similar to that in which the Company is engaged, had been, without any license or permission from the City, navigated from pier 18, New York, to the landing places on Staten Island made use of by the Company, and back; that large sums were realized therefrom, and that since 1874 this business has greatly increased.

4. That the waters of the Hudson River or Bay of New York, and the Kill von Kull, are waters of the United States, and public and common highways of interstate and international commerce; that the steamboats, as operated by the Company, do not constitute a ferry within the meaning of the laws of the United States, or of the State of New York, or of the city charter, but that the City seeks, under the cover of its charter and by this suit, to establish in itself, as and for a monopoly and as private property, the ownership of all rights to carry on commercial intercourse, consisting in the daily or regular interchange or transportation of passengers and property between Manhattan and Staten Islands, over such waters, and to [252] obstruct the navigation of such waters, although carried on by citizens of the United States in steam vessels duly enrolled and licensed under the laws of the United States, and navigated by masters, pilots and engineers duly licensed under the laws of the United States, thus practically nullifying the laws of the United States regulating commerce and navigation.

After the answers were filed, two petitions were presented for a removal of the suit to the circuit court, one by all the defendants, on the ground that the suit was one arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and the other, by the Independent Steamboat Co. alone, on the ground that there was in the suit a controversy wholly between that Company and the City as to whether the Company "had or had not the right to use and operate its steamboats" in the way contended for, and that this controversy could be fully determined as between them.

A copy of the record in the state court having been filed in the Circuit Court of the United States, that court remanded the cause, and thereupon these appeals were taken, one by all the defendants, and the other by the Independent Steamboat Co. alone. The two appeals were docketed in this court separately.

[257] We will first consider whether the suit is one which arises under the Constitution or laws of the United States; for, if it is not, the order to remand was right, so far as the removal upon the application of all the defendants is concerned.

The character of a case is determined by the questions involved. Osborn v. Bank of U. S. 9 Wheat. 824 [22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 224]. If from the questions it appears that some title, right, privilege or immunity, on which the recovery depends, will be defeated by one construction of the Constitution or a law of the United States, or sustained by the opposite construction, the case will be one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, within the meaning of that term as used in the Act of 1875; otherwise, not. Such is the effect of the decisions on this subject. Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 279 [19 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 284]; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 824 [22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 224]; Cooper, 6 Wall. 252 [73 U. S. 852]; Gold Washing & Water C U. S. 201 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 658]; T sis, 100 U. S. 264 [Bk. 25, L. e road Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S L. ed. 98]; Ames v. Kansas, 111 28, L. ed. 487]; Kansas Pacific R. Co. 112 U. S. 416 [Bk. 28, President Savings Soc. v. For 641 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 261]; U. Pa moval Cases, 115 U. S. 11 [Bk. 2

The questions in this case, as pleadings, are (1) whether the City has, under its charter, the exclus tablish ferries between Manhatt the shores of Staten Island, on Kull; and, if it has, then (2) w fendants have, in law and in f with that right by setting up such a ferry. The determination tions depends (1) on the const grant in the charter of the City, character of the business in whi ants are engaged. It is not conte is anything either in the Const laws of the United States which right from the City, if it was in f the original charter before the which defines what a ferry is or s vides that enrolled and licens managed by licensed officers, ma public waters as ferry-boats, wit grants that may have been made authority of exclusive ferry privi is not the defense set up in the case. The question here is as t the ancient grant made to the the rights of the defendants in of the waters of the United Stat of this grant.

It is not pretended that the have in any manner attempted to the power of a State to grant privileges across public waters within its own jurisdiction. made by the City to control licensed and enrolled vessels of or their licensed officers, in any by preventing them from running tween the points named. The they please, and engage in any may be desirable, not inconsiste clusive ferry rights of the City. the City is based entirely on its seeks in its complaint to control of the navigation of the public tion which is connected with the and operation of ferries between the specified landing places on Although the prayer for judgme by itself, may appear to go furth construed in connection with th tion as stated in the complaint, a cordingly. The defense is that are not operating a ferry within the charter, or, if they are, that ferry as comes within the monopo If they are not operating such they are, and it appears that granted to the City does not incl tween New York and Staten Isla von Kull, they must prevail in t [illegible] of the suit. The decision of these questions does not depend on the Constitution or laws of the United States. There is nothing in the Constitution or laws of the United States entering into the determination of the cause which, if construed one way will defeat the defendants, or in another sustain them.

It remains to consider the removal on the application of the Independent Steamboat Co. alone. The suit is against all the defendants jointly, on the allegation that, acting in common, they are all engaged in violating the rights of the City by keeping up and maintaining the ferry in question. The averment in the complaint is that the defendant Starin is in reality the person actually operating the ferry, and that he uses the other defendants as his instruments for that purpose. It is conceded that the Independent Steamboat Co. does not own the boats running on the route. They all belong to Starin or to companies in which he is the person chiefly interested. The Independent Co. was not organized until a few days before this suit was begun. It has a capital of only $5,000, and while it claims to have chartered the boats in question from their respective owners and to be engaged in running them on the route, it does not deny that the other defendants are directly interested in the establishment and maintenance of the ferry, if it be one, which is being operated by and in the name of the Company. The only controversy in the case, as stated in the complaint, is as to the right of the defendants to keep up and maintain a ferry on the route in question. Upon one side of that controversy is the plaintiff, and upon the other all of the defendants. There cannot be a full determination of this one controversy unless all the defendants are parties. The case as stated in the complaint makes Starin the principal defendant, and the Independent Co. only an instrument of his. The object is to prevent him, as well as the others, from using these boats or any others they may own or control, in the way they are being used. There is, according to the complaint, but a single cause of action, and that is the violation of the exclusive ferry rights of the plaintiff by the united efforts of all the defendants. The case is therefore within the rule established in L. & N. Railroad Co. v. Ide, [illegible] U. S. 52 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 63]; Putnam v. [illegible], 114 U. S. 57 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 65]; [illegible] v. Tooth, 115 U. S. 41 [Bk. 29, L. ed. [illegible]], that a separate defense by one defendant, to a joint suit against him and others upon a joint or a joint and several cause of action, does not create a separate controversy so as to entitle the defendant, if the necessary citizenship exists as to him, to a removal of the cause under the second clause of section 2 in the Act of [illegible].

It follows that the case was properly remanded, and the orders of the Circuit Court to that effect are affirmed.

This copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[illegible] U. S. 281.

SOLOMON MOSES ET AL., Appts. [285]

v.

GEORGE H. WOOSTER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 285-288.)

Practice—death of appellant—appeal may proceed at the suit of survivors—sec. 956, R. S.

Upon appeal from a decree against all of the defendants jointly, upon a point cause of action, after the death of one of the appellants and failure of his representatives to appear, the appeal may proceed, under the Judiciary Act, sec. 31 (sec. 956, R. S.), at the suit of the survivors.

[No. 408.]

Argued Oct. 19, 1885. Decided Nov. 2, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

On motion to abate the suit as to deceased appellant and proceed at the suit of the survivors.

The case is sufficiently stated by the court.

Messrs. W. F. Mattingly and Horatio P. Allen, for appellants, in support of motion.

Messrs. J. E. Hindon Hyde and Frederick H. Betts, for appellee, contra:

Section 956, Revised Statutes U. S., is to be read in connection with section 955. The latter relates only to the death of a party before final judgment. Section 956, properly construed, relates also to the death of a party before final judgment.

Neither section applies to appeals from a final judgment.

Green v. Watkins, 6 Wheat. 260 (19 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 255).

A suit cannot abate after a final judgment in favor of a plaintiff, except through the fault of the plaintiff himself or his representatives.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

The suit below was in equity and brought by George H. Wooster, the appellee, against Solomon Moses, Gotcho Blum and Solomon Weil, partners under the name Moses, Blum & Weil, for an infringement of letters patent. A final decree for an injunction and damages was rendered against the defendants, May 23, 1883. From this decree all the defendants appealed, and the appeal was docketed here October 12, 1883. Blum died January 2, 1884. On the 11th of April, 1885, Wooster appeared in this court and suggested his death, whereupon the usual order under Rule 15, sec. 1, was entered, that, unless his representatives should become parties within the first ten days of this term, the appeal would be dismissed. Proof of the due publication of a copy of this order has been made, but the representatives of the deceased appellant have not appeared. The surviving appellants now move that the action abate as to the decedent, but that it proceed at their suit as survivors. [285]

The Judiciary Act of 1789, 1 Stat. at L. 90, ch. 20, sec. 31, provided that "If there be two or more plaintiffs or defendants, and one or more of them shall die, if the cause of action shall survive to the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs, or against the surviving defendant or defendants, the writ or action shall not be there- [287]

by abated, but such death being suggested upon the record, the action shall proceed at the suit of the surviving plaintiff or plaintiffs against the surviving defendant or defendants."

This was re-enacted in the Revised Statutes as section [illegible], and is substantially a copy of the Act of 8 and 9 W. III., ch. 11, sec. 7, which, it was held in Clarke v. Rippon, 1 B. & A. [illegible], was applicable to writs of error. Lord Ellenborough, in giving that judgment, said: "The proceeding is an action which is commenced by a writ, and the cause of action is the damage sustained by the parties from the error in the previous judgment, and this damage equally attaches on the survivor in this as in any other action." This court gave the same effect to our statute in M'Kinney v. Carroll, 12 Pet. 66 [37 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. [illegible]].

Appeals to this court from the circuit and district courts are "subject to the same rules, regulations and restrictions as are or may be prescribed by law in cases of writs of error." Rev. Stat. § 1012. The cause of action in this appeal, that is to say, "the damage sustained by the parties in the previous decree," attaches to the surviving appellants. All the defendants were enjoined from infringing the patented machine, and all were made liable for the payment of the damages which the patentee had sustained by their joint acts as partners. Clearly, therefore, the case is within the statute and may be proceeded with accordingly. The cause of action is one that survives to the surviving appellants.

Undoubtedly cases may arise in which the presence of the representatives of a deceased [288] appellant will be required for the due prosecution of an appeal, notwithstanding the survivorship of others. If that should be so, the court can, with propriety, direct that the appeal be dismissed, unless it be properly revived within a limited time. The House of Lords made such an order in Blake v. Bogle, a note of which is found in Macqueen's App. Jur. H. of Lords, 244. Here, however, there is no need of a revivor, that substantial justice may be done. The decree below was against all the defendants jointly, upon a joint cause of action. It affected all alike, and the interest of the decedent is in no way separate or distinct from the others. If the representatives of a deceased appellant voluntarily come in and ask to be made parties, they may be admitted. Such a course was adopted by the House of Lords, in Thorpe v. Mattingly, 1 Phil. Ch. 200. In the present case, the representatives of the decedent, although notified, do not appear.

It is proper, therefore, that the appeal should proceed under the statute at the suit of the survivors, and an entry to that effect may be made.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[288] THOMAS M. JACKS, Plff. in Err.
v.
CITY OF HELENA.

SAME v. SAME.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 288, 289.)

Jurisdiction—federal question.

A motion to dismiss will be granted where it appears on the face of the opinion, wh[illegible] of the record, that the decision by th[illegible] not involve a federal question.

[No. [illegible]]

Submitted Nov. 2, 1885. Decid[illegible]

IN ERROR to the Supreme [illegible] State of Arkansas.

On motion to dismiss.

This case arose upon applica[illegible] of mandamus, filed in Phillips [illegible] Arkansas, to compel the proper [illegible] City of Helena to issue and [illegible] bonds alleged to be due upon a [illegible] said a certain railroad. The cou[illegible] subscription was without autho[illegible] and rendered judgments refu[illegible] These judgments having been [illegible] peal by the court below, the pl[illegible] these writs of error.

Mars. M. T. Sanders a[illegible] Clarke, for defendant in erro[illegible] motions.

Mars. J. C. Tappan and [illegible] for plaintiff in error, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite del[illegible] ion of the court:

These motions are granted o[illegible] of Detroit City Railway Co. [illegible] U. S. 133 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 118] there cited. It appears distinctl[illegible] the opinion of the court below [illegible] laws of Arkansas, forms par[illegible] Rev. Stat. Ark. 1884, sec. 13[illegible] cision of the case was put, an[illegible] on a ground which did not inv[illegible] ation of the federal question th[illegible] have been presented by one of [illegible] fenses set up in the answer of [illegible] that the Constitution of 1874 [illegible] issue of the bonds in dispute. [illegible] timated in the opinion that, [illegible] rested on this defense alone, the [illegible] have been the other way.

Dismissed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, [illegible]

BOSTON HYDRAULIC G[illegible] COMPANY, Plff. i[illegible]
v.
EAGLE COPPER AND SI[illegible] COMPANY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed[illegible]

Practice.

In the absence of any assignm[illegible] counsel for plaintiff in error hav[illegible] appearance, the judgment will b[illegible]

[No. 3.]

Submitted Oct. 22, 1885. Deci[illegible]

IN ERROR to the Circuit Co[illegible] States for the District of C[illegible]

No counsel appeared for pl[illegible]

Mr. Geo. A. Nourse, [illegible] error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite d[illegible] ion of the court:

When this cause was reached on the call of the docket, it was submitted by the defendant in error on a printed brief. An assignment of error was not annexed to or returned with the writ of error, as required by section 997 of the Revised Statutes. At the last term the counsel for the plaintiff in error was permitted to withdraw his appearance, and no one has taken his place. No argument has been submitted in behalf of the plaintiff in error, and no errors have been assigned in any form.

We therefore affirm the judgment without opening the record.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

THOMAS J. POPE ET AL., Plfs. in Err.,

v.

EDWARD P. ALLIS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed. 363-373.)

Pleading—variance—averments under oath in another suit as evidence—weight of—sales—rescission.

1. Where the complaint alleged a contract for delivery of iron at one place, and the answer a contract for delivery at a different place, evidence offered by the plaintiff, which tended to support the contract of the answer, was properly admitted under § 1260 of the Revised Statutes of Wisconsin; the defendants having failed at the trial to prove that they were misled by the variance between the complaint and the proof.

2. Averments made under oath, in a pleading in a suit at law, are competent evidence in another suit against the party making them; and the fact that the averments are made on information and belief, goes only to their weight and not to their admissibility as evidence.

3. Where goods of a specified quality, not in existence or ascertained, are sold, and the seller undertakes to ship them to a distant buyer, and, when they are made or ascertained, delivers them to a carrier for the buyer, the latter, on their arrival, has the right, if they are not of the quality required by the contract, to reject them and rescind the sale, and, if he has paid for them, to recover back the price in a suit against the seller.

[No. 34.]

Argued Oct. 29, 1885. Decided Nov. 9, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Wisconsin.

Statement by Mr. Justice Woods: [363]

Edward P. Allis, the defendant in error, was the plaintiff in the circuit court. He brought his suit to recover from the defendants, Thomas J. Pope and James E. Pope, now the plaintiffs in error, the sum of $17,840, the price of 500 tons of pig iron, which he alleged he had bought from them and paid for, but which he refused to accept because it was not of the quality [364] which the defendants had agreed to furnish. The plaintiff also demanded $1,750 freight on the iron, which he alleged he had paid.

The facts appearing upon the record were as follows: The plaintiff carried on the business of an iron founder in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and the defendants were brokers in iron in the City of New York. In the month of January, 1880, by correspondence carried on by mail and telegraph, the defendants agreed to sell and deliver to the plaintiff 500 tons of No. 1 extra American and 300 tons No. 1 extra Glengarnock (Scotch) pig iron. The American iron was to be delivered on the cars at the furnace bank at Coplay, Pennsylvania, and the Scotch at the yard of the defendants, in New York. By a subsequent correspondence between the plaintiff and the defendants, it fairly appeared that the latter agreed to ship the iron for the plaintiff, at Elizabethport, New Jersey. It was to be shipped as early in the spring as cheap freights could be had, consigned to the National Exchange Bank at Milwaukee, which, in behalf of the plaintiff, agreed to pay for the iron on

---

Head notes by Mr. Justice WOODS.

1 REF.—Compare Norrington v. Wright, ante, 366, Pope v. Pope, ante, 372.

2 REF. warranty of quality; breach of; whether ground for rescission in the absence of fraud on the part of vendor; remedies of vendee.

The cases which arise may be divided for convenience, although perhaps not with scientific accuracy, into three classes:

1. Sales of a specific ascertained article already in existence. (a) Where goods are inspected by vendee. (b) Where goods cannot be inspected. (c) Where goods might be but are not inspected.

2. Sales of an article not ascertained and specific, or not in existence.

3. Sales by sample. (a) Where goods are ascertained. (b) Where goods are not ascertained.

It may be premised that in cases of fraud by the vendor the vendee's right to rescind may rest upon that ground independently of other considerations.

It may also be stated that where the property in the subject matter of the contract has not actually passed to the vendee, his right to reject the goods when they do not correspond with the description or warranty under which they were sold is probably unquestionable.

Benj. Sales, § 1249; Story, Sales, § 421. But see Lyon v. Bertram, cited below; 61 U. S. (20 How.), bk. 15, 847.

3. Sale of specified, ascertained article.

It was formerly held in England that the vendee could avoid the contract for breach of warranty of quality.

Curtis v. Hannay, 3 Esp., 82.

This case was overruled in Street v. Blay, 2 B. & Ad. 456. It is to be observed that in neither of these cases was the decision of this question necessary to the decision of the case. In Street v. Blay, supra, the observations of the court on this point were stated to be confined to the purchase of a specific article accepted and received by the vendee, the property in which is completely vested in him. In Kennedy v. Panama, etc., Mail Co. (L. R. 2 Q. B., 587), it was said that "where there has been an innocent misrepresentation or misapprehension, it does not authorize a rescission unless it is such as to show that there is a complete difference in substance between what was supposed to be and what was taken, so as to constitute a failure of consideration."

See Couston v. Chapman, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc., 254.

In this country the authorities differ. In Thornton v. Wynn 25 U. S. (12 Wheat.) 196, bk. 6, 598, it is said that "if the sale be absolute and there be no subsequent agreement or consent of the vendor to take back the article the contract remains open and the vendee is put to his action upon the warranty, unless it be proved that the vendor knew of the unsoundness of the article and the vendee tendered a return of it within a reasonable time." In Lyon v. Bertram, 61 U. S. (20 How.), 149, 154, bk. 15, 847, the question came up again but under such a state of facts that the court did not directly pass upon this question.

The doctrine of Thornton v. Wynn and Street v. Blay, supra, is supported by Day v. Pool, 52 N. Y., 416; Rust v. Eckler, 41 N. Y., 488; Muller v. Eno, 14 N. Y., 597; Freyman v. Knecht, 78 Pa. St., 141; West v. Cutting, 19 Vt., 586 (see Richardson v. Grandy, 49 Vt., 23); Buckingham v. Osborne, 44 Conn., 138; Dawson v. Pennaman, 65 Ga., 698; Wright v. Davenport, 44 Tex., 164; Briggs v. Hilton, 1 Cent. Rep., 313; Hoover v. Sidener, 98 Ind., 290.

In many of the other States the older English doctrine, as laid down in Curtis v. Hannay, 3 Esp., 82, has been followed: "He to whom property is sold receipt of the bills of lading. That quantity of American iron was landed at Milwaukee and delivered to the plaintiff about July 15. Before its arrival at Milwaukee, the plaintiff had not only paid for the iron but also the freight from Coplay to Milwaukee. Soon after the arrival in Milwaukee, the plaintiff examined the 500 tons American iron, to which solely the controversy in this case referred, and refused to accept it on the ground that it was not of the grade called for by the contract, and at once gave the defendants notice of the fact, and that he held the iron subject to their order, and brought this suit to recover the price of the iron and the freight thereon.

The defenses relied on to defeat the action were (1) that the iron delivered by the defendants to the plaintiff was number one extra American iron, and was of the kind and quality required by the contract, and (2) that the title [365] having passed to the plaintiff when the iron was shipped to him at Elizabethport, he could not afterwards rescind the contract and sue for the price of the iron and the freight which he had paid, but must sue for a breach of the warranty.

It was conceded upon the trial that if the plaintiff was entitled to recover at all, his recovery should be for $22,315.40. The defendants pleaded a counterclaim for $5,311, which was admitted by the plaintiff. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $16,513.11, for which sum and costs the court rendered a judgment against the defendants. This writ of error brings that judgment under review.

Messrs. George P. Miller and Wm. P. Lynde, for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Eppa Hunton, Jeff. Chandler and J. G. Jenkins, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The first assignment of error relates to nine exceptions to the admission of evidence by the court against the objection of the plaintiffs in error. The complaint having alleged that the contract between the parties was for the delivery of the iron at Milwaukee, the plaintiffs in error objected to the introduction of evidence offered by the defendant in error which tended to show a contract for the delivery of the iron at Coplay or Elizabethport, because the proof offered did not support the averments of the complaint; and the court having overruled their objections and admitted the evidence, they now contend that the judgment should for that reason be reversed.

But it is clear that, under section 2669 of the Revised Statutes of Wisconsin, which constitutes a rule for the guidance of the federal

---

with an express warranty, as well as he to whom it is sold with an implied warranty, may rescind the contract for breach of warranty by a reasonable return of the property, and thus entitle himself to a full defense to a suit brought against him for the price of the property, or to an action against the seller to recover back the price if it have been paid to him." Bryant v. Isburgh, 13 Gray, 607.

To same effect see Sparling v. Marks, 86 Ill., 125; Howe M. Co. v. Rosine, 87 Ill., 105 (but see Owens v. Sturges, 67 Ill., 366); Prickett v. McFadden, 8 Bradw., 197; Lane v. Lantz, 27 Md., 211; McCeney v. Duvall, 21 Md., 166; Warder v. Fisher, 48 Wis., 338; Churchill v. Price, 44 Wis., 540; Merrill v. Nightingale, 39 Wis., 247; Marston v. Knight, 29 Me., 341; Rogers v. Hanson, 35 Ia., 283 (in this case the court says: "The doctrine of the Massachusetts cases, though perhaps not sustained by the greater number of authorities, is, to our minds, the more reasonable and just. We know of no satisfactory reason why one who desired a good article and is willing to pay a price which will command it, should be required to keep an inferior article at a lesser price. Such a construction of the law substitutes for the parties' contract an agreement which he did not make, and requires him to accept an article which he would not have purchased if he had known of its defects"); Jack v. Des Moines, etc., Co., 53 Ia., 399; Dill v. O'Ferrell, 45 Ind., 268; Byers v. Chapin, 28 Ohio St., 300; Perry v. Johnson, 59 Ala., 648; Johnson v. Whitman Agr. Co., 2 West. Rep., 414; Brauson v. Turner, 77 Mo., 489.

It should be added that the right to rescind, where it exists, must be exercised within a reasonable time and the sale must be rescinded in toto.

See Harzfeld v. Converse, 105 Ill., 534.

An offer to return the goods, if rejected, or a notification that the vendee rescinds the sale and holds the goods subject to the vendor is usually held to have the same effect as an actual return of the goods. The rule that the sale must be rescinded in toto, if at all, or that the vendor must be put in statu quo, is subject to the exception that where the use of some of the goods is necessary to a proper test, the vendee may use the amount necessary to such test. This qualification has special application to sales by sample.

It will be seen that the authorities are about equally divided as to the right of the vendee in this class of cases to rescind for breach of warranty of quality.

In the English courts, where this right is denied, a distinction has been made or attempted, between cases of breach of warranty of quality and cases where the goods sold are found not to correspond with a description, the correspondence of the goods with such description being held to constitute a condition precedent, the breach of which avoids the sale.

"A warranty is an express or implied statement of something which a party undertakes shall be part of a contract, and though part of the contract collateral to the express object of it." Charter v. Hopkins, 4 M. & W. 399.

"If the sale is of a described article, the tender of an article answering the description is a condition precedent to the purchaser's liability, and if the condition be not performed the purchaser is entitled to reject the article, or if he has paid for it to recover the price as money had and received for his use; whereas, in case of warranty the rules are very different." Benj. Sales, § 917.

This distinction between warranty of quality and description as condition precedent, although sometimes laid down in such terms as to cover all cases, is seldom, if ever, applied to cases where goods are inspected by the vendee.

Perhaps the clearest statement of this doctrine is contained in Smith's Leading Cases, Vol. 2, p. [illegible] ed. 1879, quoted with approval, Benj. Sales, § 134: "A warranty properly so called can only exist where the subject matter of the sale is ascertained and existing, so as to be capable of being inspected at the time of the contract, and is a collateral engagement that the specific thing so sold possesses certain qualities; but the property passing by the contract of sale, a breach of warranty can not entitle the vendee to rescind the contract and revest the property in the vendor without his consent. But where the subject matter of the sale is not in existence, or not ascertained at the time of the contract, an engagement that it shall when existing or ascertained possess certain qualities, is not a mere warranty but a condition, the performance of which is precedent to any obligation upon the vendee under the contract, because the existence of those qualities being part of the description of the thing sold becomes essential to its identity, and the vendee cannot be obliged to receive and pay for a thing different from that for which he contracted." Mr. Benjamin adds that the same reasoning would apply to goods beyond the reach of the buyer's inspection. Lord Abinger, in the case of Charter v. Hopkins, supra, regrets the confusion which has arisen from the failure to observe the distinction above mentioned, in the distinction between a sale with warranty of quality and a sale by particular description, the latter being held to constitute a condition precedent. This is concurred courts in that State, this assignment of error is not well taken. The section mentioned provides "No variance between the allegations in pleading and the proof shall be deemed material unless it shall actually mislead the adverse party to his prejudice in maintaining his action or defense on its merits; whenever it shall be alleged that a party has been so misled, the fact shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court, in what respect he has been misled, and thereupon the court may order the pleading to be amended upon such terms as may be just."

The answer of the plaintiffs in error denied that the contract provided for the delivery of the iron in Milwaukee, and averred that the iron was to be delivered at Coplay. We do not think that evidence offered by the defendant in error, which tended to establish the averments of the answer rather than of the complaint, was such a variance as could mislead the plaintiffs in error to their prejudice in maintaining their defense upon the merits. But if they had been really misled, they should have proved the fact to the satisfaction of the court upon the trial. Having neglected to do this, they cannot now complain. It is clear that, under the Statute of Wisconsin, the plaintiffs in error had no just ground of exception to the admission of the evidence objected to. Bonner v. Home Insurance Co. 13 Wis. 677; Leopold v. Van Kirk, 29 Wis. 553; Giffert v. West, 33 Wis. 617. These cases show that the discrepancy between the pleading and the proof was a variance within the meaning of the Statute of Wisconsin, and that the section cited is applicable to the question in hand.

2. The next contention of the plaintiffs in error is that evidence was improperly admitted by the circuit court to show that the iron landed at Milwaukee was not of the quality required by the contract, the defendant in error not having shown or offered to show, as the plaintiffs in error insisted, that it was the same iron which the defendant in error had purchased, and which had been shipped at Elizabethport. And on the ground that the identity of the iron was not shown, the plaintiffs in error insist that the court erred in refusing to charge the jury, as requested by them, to return a verdict in their favor.

We think the assignment of error is not supported by the record. The defendant in error did introduce evidence and, as it seems to us, persuasive evidence, to show that the iron shipped for the defendant in error at Elizabethport was the iron landed and delivered to him at Milwaukee.

The testimony introduced tended to prove that one Hazard, on whose dock, at Elizabethport, New Jersey, iron belonging to the plain-

---

is by Mr. Benjamin and the modern English authorities.

"Where there is a sale of goods by description, that is to say, where either goods in genere are sold under a certain description, or where the sale is of specific goods whose character is presumably only known to the buyer by the description under which they are sold to him (e. g., bales of goods specified by marks in a bill of lading and described in the contract as being of a certain kind); it is of the essence of the contract that the goods furnished shall agree with the description." Campbell, Sales (London, 1871, p. 300, citing Tye v. Fynmore, 3 Camp., 462; Powell v. Horton, 2 Bing. (N. C.) 668; Barr v. Gibson, 3 M. & W., 390; Allan v. Lake, 18 Q. B., 560; Reid v. Godts, 10 Hurl. & Gord. Ex., 191; Josling v. Kingsford, 13 C. B. N. S. 447. (In this last case the article sold was "oxalic acid" and although the purchaser saw the bulk of the goods, yet a chemical analysis having shown the goods to be so inferior as not to be "oxalic acid" in a mercantile sense, the purchaser was held not bound to take the goods.) Compare Pettitt v. Mitchell, 4 M. & G., 819; Hopkins v. Hitchcock, 14 C. B. N. S., 65.

The distinction has not been made in many of the American cases.

"The right to repudiate the purchase for nonconformity of the article delivered to the description under which it was sold, is universally conceded. That right is founded upon the engagement of the vendor by such description that the article delivered shall correspond with the description. Substantially the description is warranted. It will comport with sound legal principles to treat such engagements or conditions in order to afford the purchaser more enlarged remedy by rescission than it would have on a simple warranty." Wolcott v. Mant, 38 N. J. L., 268. See Shields v. Reibe, 9 Iowa, 492.

1. Sale of articles not in existence or not ascertained.

The law as to this class of cases may be regarded as settled. See the statement of it and authorities cited in the opinion in the principal case. It is to be noted that the court says that in this class of cases the undertaking that an article shall possess certain qualities is not a mere warranty but a condition precedent. See the quotations and authorities cited under the first class. It will be seen that under the English rule there is practically no such thing as a mere warranty in this class of cases.

2. Sale by sample.

This class of cases is analogous to the second class the law touched upon in the opinion in the principal case. It has been said that in sale by sample it is one of the conditions of the contract that the goods shall equal the sample, that the vendee may examine the goods when tendered, and if not equal may reject them. Benj. Sales, § 910. In other parts of his work the author calls such sale a sale with warranty. § 969.

In Couston v. Chapman, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc., 254 (1872), it is said: "In England if goods are sold by sample and they are delivered and accepted by the purchaser, he cannot return them; but if he has not completely accepted them—that is, if he has taken the delivery conditionally—he has a right to keep the goods for a sufficient time to enable him to give them a fair trial, and if they are found not to correspond with the sample, he is then entitled to return them. As I understand the law of Scotland, although the goods have been accepted by the purchaser, yet if he find that they do not correspond with the sample he has an absolute right to return them." Per Ld. Chelmsford.

It is believed that a delivery before inspection would, in the absence of anything to show a contrary intention, be presumed to be on condition that the goods might be returned if not in accordance with sample. Story, Sales, § 456; Benj. Sales, § 910. And it will be a question for the jury whether the goods have been retained longer than is necessary for inspection. Benj. Sales, § 1380.

In Dawson v. Collis, 10 C. B. (1 J. Scott), 523, it was held that upon a sale of specific goods with a warranty that they were equal to the sample, the vendee could not refuse to receive them on the ground that they did not correspond with the sample, unless there was an express condition to that effect, but must resort to a cross action or rely on that fact in reduction of damages. In this case Street v. Blay is quoted from at length. See also Heyworth v. Hutchinson, L. R. 2 Q. B., 447 (1867), which was a sale by sample, of a specific quantity of wool to arrive. It was held that the buyer could not reject it for inferiority. Compare Toulmin v. Hedley, 2 C. & K. N. P. 845, 157. The principles laid down in these last two cases are believed to be irreconcilable. See also Azemar v. Casella, L. R. 2 C. P., 431, 677.

In Grimaldi v. White, 4 Esp., 95, it was held that if a party purchased a picture pursuant to a specimen shown, and on delivery the picture was found inferior in quality to the specimen, his only remedy was to reject it. In an action for the price he could not reduce the damages by showing its inferiority. But see Fielder v. Starkin, 1 H. Bl., 17; Poulton v. Lattimore, 9 B. & C., 259.

Notwithstanding the English authorities hold that a breach of warranty of quality does not authorize a tiffs in error was stacked, shipped, between April 28 and May 12, at Elizabethport, on five canal boats, whose names are given, 500 tons of American iron, consigned to Thomas J. Pope & Brother, care National Exchange Bank, [369] Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and to be transported to Milwaukee by the river, canal and lakes; that about the same time there was shipped to the same consignees, and to the care of the same bank, the 300 tons of Scotch iron, which had been sold by the plaintiffs in error to the defendant in error.

It was further shown that on June 9 and 15 following, 800 tons of iron, 500 being American and 300 Scotch, were transferred from the dock at Buffalo to two schooners, and the bills of lading given by the schooners stated that the 500 tons of American iron were the cargo of canal boats of the same name as those on which the iron had been shipped at Elizabethport, and it appeared that both the American and Scotch iron transferred to the schooners was consigned to Thomas J. Pope & Brother, care National Exchange Bank, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. It was further shown that, about July 15, the two schooners above mentioned landed at Milwaukee 500 tons American iron and 300 tons of Scotch iron for the consignees mentioned in the bills of lading, and the iron was delivered to the defendant in error, and it was conceded that the 300 tons of Scotch iron was th had been sold by the plaintiffs i defendant in error and shipped signees for him.

In addition to this evidence, t
in error introduced the deposition
Pope, one of the plaintiffs in erro testified as follows: "There is a between my firm, as plaintiff, a Iron Company, as defendant, r
American Iron shipped to E. P.
As an exhibit to this deposition
copy of the complaint in the suit
James E. Pope, from which it a
the action was brought to recove
lay Iron Company, damages for t
contract by which that compa
that a certain 500 tons of iron, so plaintiff in said suit, as No. 1 ex
of that quality; and it clearly a
the complaint referred to, that on
on which the cause of action w
that the 500 tons of iron sold and s plaintiffs in error to the care of Exchange Bank, for the defenda
No. 1 extra American iron, was iron delivered for him to the ba kee, and which he had purchased

We therefore repeat that there
sive evidence offered to show

---

rescission of a contract, yet in cases of sales by sample it has in many cases, as seen above, been held that the vendee could rescind if the bulk did not correspond with the sample. But the law is laid down by Mr. Benjamin "that in a sale of goods by sample the vendor warrants the quality of the bulk to be equal to that of the sample." Benj. Sales, § 969.

"A sale by sample, properly so called, is merely a particular case of a sale by description. * * * If it turns out that the sample does not truly represent the bulk, the purchaser may reject the goods either before the delivery or (if the time for inspection as agreed on is subsequent to delivery) after delivery, provided the inspection is made in due time, and the rejection intimated at once. But in either case the purchaser may (if he does nothing to waive his objection) accept the goods tendered and, treating the stipulation as collateral, bring his action upon the warranty. This is at least the practical result of the cases." Campbell, Sales, 305. See Heilbutt v. Hickson, L. R. 7 C. P., 438 (an elaborate discussion); Johnson v. L. & Y. R. Co., 3 C. P. Div., 499; Lomi v. Tucker, 4 C. & P., 15; Parker v. Palmer, 4 B. & Ald., 387.

The American authorities sustain the right of rescission in sales by sample where the bulk does not correspond, without making distinction. See principal case supra; also Brigg v. Hilton, 10 Daly, 222; Gill v. Kaufman, 16 Kan., 571.

Conclusions.

In Massachusetts, Iowa and a large number of other States breach of warranty of quality is held to be sufficient ground for rescission of a contract of sale. The law in these States is believed to be in much the most satisfactory state. Distinctions of great complexity and of an almost inappreciable fineness between executory and executed contracts, between descriptions and warranties, etc., are avoided. And aside from the practical advantages, the law in these States is based upon sound principles. See quotations above from cases in Massachusetts and Iowa.

In England a breach of warranty of quality in the sale of a specific ascertained article, whether inspected by the vendee or not, does not authorize a rescission. A failure to comply with a description, compliance being a condition precedent, does authorize a rescission. This doctrine, although often laid down in general terms, is believed to have no relation to a sale where goods are ascertained and actually inspected by the vendee. The question, description or warranty, is determined rather by the circumstances than by the precise words used. In fact, in a sale of goods not in esse, for instance, the English courts, it is believed, would of a descriptive nature as raising a cedent, when in case of the sale of article the same words would be warranty merely. So in sales by s
cases, depending on the condition
the goods, there is held to be mere
that the bulk shall equal the sample cases the correspondence is held to precedent.

Our own view is that the distinc
sale by description and a sale wit
quality has no sound basis in princ
plication tends to confusion.

If adopted the line should be draw where goods are inspected by the one hand, and all other cases hand. Where goods are actually ins
ranty may be regarded as collateral essence of the contract. All other s essence sales by description. This i the article is yet to be made or is st
whether it is to be separated from a cealed in a box in the presence of sale by sample is a sale by descrip equally true where the property is where it is sold "to arrive," either or indefinite part, or the whole, of a
it is stored in a warehouse, already not inspected.

In Pope v. Allis, supra, the right of class of cases under consideration is eral terms to exist in sales by sampl article not in existence, and in sale
not ascertained.

The facts in the case of Thornton v.
(12 Wheat.), 183, bk. 6, 594, are such doubtful how far the language alres
be considered of binding authority;
by this court upon the question of vendee to rescind a sale of a spec
article, whether inspected or not, wh found not to correspond with the warranty, will be awaited with intere
of authority is probably against suc
the right exists in all cases of sale
difficult to see why it should not e
sale by description or warranty of qu
article is not inspected.

Other remedies of vendee.

"In the note to Cutter v. Powe Lead. Cases, 1, the annotator says:
Street v. Blay, 2 B. & Ad., 456, and P
more, 9 B. & C., 259, where an artic
and the warranty is not complied w

shipped at Elizabethport, for the defendant in error at Milwaukee, was the identical iron landed at Milwaukee and received by him. The assignments of error, based on the contention that there was no such evidence, must therefore fail.

1. The bill of exceptions shows that the complaint above mentioned, in the suit of the plaintiffs in error against the Coplay Iron Company, was sworn to by James E. Pope; that it contained an averment, on information and belief, touching the quality of the iron in controversy in this suit, and that the plaintiffs in error asked the court, on the trial of this case, to charge the jury that such complaint was not evidence of any facts therein stated on information and belief. The court refused the charge, but instructed the jury that, in determining what weight as an admission the complaint should have, they might consider the fact that the allegation in relation to the quality of the iron in question was made on information and belief.

The plaintiffs in error having excepted at the trial, now assign as error the refusal of the court to give the charge requested. We think the court did not err in its refusal.

When a bill or answer in equity or a pleading in an action at law is sworn to by the party, it is competent evidence against him in another suit as a solemn admission by him of the truth of the facts stated. Studdy v. Sanders, 2 Dow. & Ry. 347; De Whelpdale v. Milburn, 5 Price, 485; Central Bridge v. Lowell, 15 Gray, 106; Bliss v. Nichols, 12 Allen, 443; Elliott v. Hayden, 104 Mass. 180; Cook v. Barr, 44 N. Y. 156; Taylor, Ev. § 1753, 7th ed.; Greenl. Ev. §§ 552, 555.

When the averment is made on information and belief, it is nevertheless admissible as evidence, though not conclusive. Lord Ellenborough, in Doe v. Steel, 3 Campbell, 115. The authority cited sustains the proposition that the fact that the averment is made on information and belief, merely detracts from the weight of the testimony; it does not render it inadmissible. The charge given by the circuit court on this point, therefore, deprived the plaintiffs in error of no advantage to which they were entitled. [371]

4. The assignment of error mainly relied on by the plaintiffs in error is that the court refused to instruct the jury to return a verdict for the defendants. The legal proposition upon which their counsel based this request was that the purchaser of personal property, upon breach of warranty of quality, cannot, in the absence of fraud, rescind the contract of purchase and sale and sue for the recovery of the price. And they contended that, as the iron was delivered to defendant in error either at Coplay or Eliza-

---

[illegible] three courses, any one of which he may pursue: (1) he may refuse to receive the article at all; (2) he may receive it and bring a cross action for the breach of the warranty; (3) he may, without bringing a cross action, use the breach of warranty in reduction of damages in an action brought by the vendor for the price.' * * * The second and third propositions of this learned author are indisputable and have received the sanction of this court." Lyon v. Bertram, 61 U. S., 149, bk. 15, 850. The court proceeds to say that the first proposition is an open question. But see first part of this note.

The second and third propositions are still in accord with the current of authority, although not universally admitted. In some of the cases it seems to be held that where the vendee has the right of rescission and fails to exercise it he waives his right to other remedies against the vendor. Some of the older cases in England hold this doctrine. See Grimwood v. White, 4 Esp., 95. The law may be regarded as settled in England, however. In Benjamin on Sales, § 1263 the second proposition is said to rest on authority—that it is taken for granted. As to the third proposition, in England before the Judicature Acts the vendee could set up defective quality in diminution of price, but he could not claim special or consequential damages except in a cross action. Mondel v. Steel, 8 M. & W., 858. See Jones v. Bright, L. R. 6 Q. B., 687. This was changed by statute. The English cases, so far as these remedies are concerned, seem to make no distinction between sales by description or sales with warranty.

In this country as a general rule the vendee may have the same remedy by way of recoupment on set-off as by cross action. This question is so largely regulated by statute that a citation of the authorities would be of little value.

A more important question is, Does the vendee, when he has the right to return the goods, or, in case of executory sales, reject them, waive all remedy by accepting and using them? "When the defects in the goods are patent and obvious to the vendee, where the purchaser has a full opportunity for examination and knows of such defects, he must, either when he receives the goods or within a reasonable time thereafter, notify the seller that the goods are not accepted as fulfilling the warranty; otherwise the defects will be deemed waived." Jones v. Williamson, 40 Wis., 377. See Ney v. Iowa Agricultural Works, 51 Iowa, 122.

The question has been much discussed in New York. See Sprague v. Blake, 20 Wend., 61; Harper v. Vigelius, 5 N. Y., 79; Muller v. Eno, 14 N. Y. 597; Reed v. Randall, 29 N. Y., 358; McCormick v. Brown, 45 N. Y., 265; Dutchess Co. v. Harding, 49 N. Y., 321; Day v. Pool, 52 N. Y., 416; Gaylord Mfg. Co. v. Allen, 53 N. Y., 515; Parks v. Morris Tool Co., 54 N. Y., 586; Gurney v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 58 N. Y., 358; Gautier v. Douglass, etc., Co., 13 Hun, 514; Marshuetz v. McGreevy, 23 Hun, 408; Walling v. Schwartzkopf, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct., 576; Marcus v. Thornton, Id., 411; Dounce v. Dow, 64 N. Y., 411; McParlin v. Boynton, 71 N. Y., 604; Bliss v. Locke, 9 Daly, 526; Provenzano v. Thayer Mfg. Co., 9 Daly, 90; Bach v. Levy, 50 N. Y. Super. Ct., 519.

Where there is a warranty as to quality, in a sale of chattels—although on inspection at the time of sale—if the property sold does not answer the warranty it may still be retained by the vendee and the sale affirmed, and he may sue upon the warranty. Houghton v. Carpenter, 40 Vt., 588.

An exception is noticed in some cases where the defect was known to the purchaser or readily discoverable. Henshaw v. Robbins, 9 Met., 83; Vandewalker v. Osmer, 65 Barb., 556; Benj., Sales, § 616.

Where no exception applies, the warranty is an independent contract and may be sued on when broken, like any other violated contract. Gilson v. Bingham, 43 Vt., 410, per Veazey, J.; Pennock v. Stygles, 54 Vt., 229, a sale by sample.

The offer to return must be within a reasonable time and must be unconditional. Use of property after offer to return is inconsistent. Reasonable time is a question for jury. Churchill v. Price, 44 Wis., 544.

Where property is not as warranted vendee may return it within reasonable time or may keep it and recoup damages in action for price. Warder v. Fisher, 48 Wis., 338; Smith v. Mayer, 3 Col., 207.

In support of the principle that the buyer may maintain action for breach of contract as to quality of goods or recoup in action for purchase money after he has accepted them, see further Tomlinson v. Quigley, 5 Del., 168; Polhemus v. Heiman, 45 Cal., 573; Youghiogheny Iron Co. v. Smith, 66 Pa. St., 341; Lewis v. Rountree, 78 N. C., 323; Perley v. Balch, 23 Pick., 283; Vincent v. Leland, 100 Mass., 432; Douglass Axe Mfg. Co. v. Gardner 10 Cush., 88; Taylor v. Cole, 111 Mass., 363. Compare Owens v. Sturges, 67 Ill., 366; Hollfield v. Black, 2 West. Rep., 601; Kent v. Friedman, 1 Cent. Rep., 718; Briggs v. Hilton, 1 Cent. Rep., 307.

If, however, a sale is held to be on a condition precedent, is not the acceptance or retention of the goods with knowledge that the condition has not been complied with, a waiver of the condition? And if the condition is waived, should the vendee or principal have any remedy?

bethport, and the sale was completed thereby, the only remedy of the defendant in error was by a suit upon the warranty.

It did not appear that at the date of the contract the iron had been manufactured; and it was shown by the record that no particular iron was segregated and appropriated to the contract, by the plaintiffs in error, until a short time before its shipment, in the latter part of April and the early part of May. The defendant in error had no opportunity to inspect it until it arrived in Milwaukee, and consequently never accepted the particular iron appropriated to fill the contract. It was established by the verdict of the jury that the iron shipped was not of the quality required by the contract. Under these circumstances the contention of the plaintiffs in error is, that the defendant in error, although the iron shipped to him was not what he bought and could not be used in his business, was bound to keep it, and could only recover the difference in value between the iron for which he contracted and the iron which was delivered to him.

We do not think that such is the law. When the subject matter of a sale is not in existence or not ascertained at the time of the contract, an undertaking that it shall, when existing or ascertained, possess certain qualities, is not a mere warranty, but a condition, the performance of which is precedent to any obligation upon the vendee under the contract; because the existence of those qualities being part [372] of the description of the thing sold becomes essential to its identity, and the vendee cannot be obliged to receive and pay for a thing different from that for which he contracted. Chanter v. Hopkins, 4 M. & W. 404; Barr v. Gibson, 3 M. & W. 390; Gomperts v. Bartlett, 2 E. & B. 849; Okell v. Smith, 1 Stark. N. P. 107; Notes to Cutter v. Powell, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 37, 7th Am. ed.; Woodle v. Whitney, 23 Wis. 55; Boothby v. Scales, 27 Wis. 626; Fairfield v. Madison Mfg. Co. 38 Wis. 346. See also Nichol v. Godts, 10 Exch. 191.

So, in a recent case decided by this court, it was said by Mr. Justice Gray: "A statement" (in a mercantile contract) "descriptive of the subject matter or of some material incident, such as the time or place of shipment, is ordinarily to be regarded as a warranty in the sense in which that term is used in insurance and maritime law; that is to say, a condition precedent upon the failure or non-performance of which the party aggrieved may repudiate the whole contract." Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 188 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 366]. See also Filley v. Pope, 115 U. S. 213 [Bk. 29, L ed. 372].

And so, when a contract for the sale of goods is made by sample, it amounts to an undertaking on the part of the seller with the buyer, that all the goods are similar, both in nature and quality, to those exhibited, and if they do not correspond, the buyer may refuse to receive them, or if received, he may return them in a reasonable time allowed for examination, and thus rescind the contract. Lorymer v. Smith, 1 Barn. & C. 1; Magee v. Billingsley, 3 Ala. 679.

The authorities cited sustain this proposition, that when a vendor sells goods of a specified quality but not in existence or ascertained, and undertakes to ship them to a distant buyer, when made or ascertained, and delivers them to the carrier for the purchaser, t bound to accept them without
The mere delivery of the goods to the carrier, does not necessarily dee to accept them. On their a the right to inspect them to ascer
they conform to the contract, and inspect implies the right to reject
are not of the quality required by The rulings of the circuit court w
ance with these views.

We have been referred by the error, to the cases of Thornton
Wheat. 184 [25 U. S. bk. 6, L.
Lyon v. Bertram, 20 How. 149
15, L. ed. 847], to sustain the pr
the defendant in error in this ca
rescind the contract and sue to re
price of the iron. But the cas point. In the first, there was an with, warranty and delivery to th
specific chattel, namely: a race
second, the sale was of a specifi
nated lot of flour, which the ve
cepted, and part of which he ha ample means to ascertain whether formed to the contract.

The cases we have cited ar
against the contention of the plai
The jury has found that the iron quality which the contract requ
that ground the defendant in erro opportunity, rejected it, as he had His suit to recover the price was, t brought.

Other errors are assigned, but, i
they present no ground for the re judgment and do not require disc

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Su

Cited—117 U. S. 129.

WALTER H. SMITH,
v.
DAISY P. D. BLACK, T

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 308

*Trust deed to secure payment of pr
—power of sale—execution of—creditor—adequacy of price—se trustee.*

*1. Under a deed of trust, covering l trict of Columbia, made by a debtor, to their heirs and assigns, to secure the promissory note, with power by w grantees were empowered, on defau
land at public auction, "on such ter
tions, and at such time and place, s
previous public advertisement," as th
signs or heirs," should deem adva
proper, and to convey the same in fe
purchaser, a sale was had by public
a notice of sale, signed by both of the duly published in a newspaper; but a
one of the trustees was present. Th at the sale were fair, both of the trus
a deed to the purchaser, and no gro
for setting the sale aside; Held, the
from the sale, of one of the trustees,
cient reason, of itself, for setting as against the former owner of the land

*Head notes by Mr. Justice BLATC

e was the purchaser at
at there was nothing
n from becoming such

ice considered, and the llegation.
e he took the deed from
of the trustees, on the
although the terms of
d, as holder of the note
nount of the net pro-
still due on the note.
rmer owner of the land

.]
Decided Nov. 9, 1885

preme Court of the

f the case appear in

and Samuel Shel-

ett, for appellee:
mployed for the pur-
urchaser.
ow. 503 (45 U. S. bk.
v. Minchin, 5 Mad.
s. 630, note; Ex parte

ut the knowledge of
, was void.
39; Downes v. Glaze-
v Duff, 4 Johns. Ch.
Cow. 543; Wilder v.
nan v. Wilson, 71 N.
5 Ind. 250; Heard v.
il v. Jacobs, 62 Mo.
ed. Eq. 336; Powell v.
v. Smith, 45 N. Y.
N. Y. 144; Peay v. astian v. Johnson, 72
, 27 N. J. Eq. 145;
442; Brickenkamp v.

ion of the deed by ct in the execution of

607 (34 U. S. bk. 9,
m Co. v. Cumberland Trusts (ed. of 1856),

d delivered the opin-

2, John Stearns, be-land in the City of ict of Columbia, on nire Avenue, and P Circle, containing in
cuted, with his wife,
the land, as security
issory note for $5,500
lay 23, 1872, payable t at the rate of 6 per semi-annually, to the
the note being given rchase money of the deed were John F.
a, their heirs and as-
in the deed was exult being made in the
or interest as stipu-
charge, commission,
se, in and about the
me hereafter, to sell

the said piece or parcel of ground and premises, at public auction, upon such terms and conditions, and at such time and place, and after such previous public advertisement," as the said Fuller and Latta, "their assigns or heirs, in the execution of this trust, shall deem advantageous and proper, and to convey the same in fee simple to and at the cost of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, who shall not be required to see to the application of the purchase money; and the proceeds of said sale or sales: first, to pay all proper costs, charges and expenses, and to retain as compensation a commission of 5 per cent on the amount of the said sale or sales; secondly, to pay whatever may then remain unpaid of the said note and the interest thereon, whether the same shall be due or not; and, lastly to pay the remainder, if any, to the said John Stearns, his heirs or assigns."

On the 19th of April, 1873, Mrs. Mary A. Derby purchased the premises from Stearns, at the price of $1 per square foot, making $19,886. She paid $6,000 in cash, gave her notes for $8,886, and assumed the payment of the $5,500 note, with interest from November 23, 1872. Stearns conveyed the land to her.

On the 14th of April, 1875, Linkins sold the $5,500 note to the defendant, Walter H. Smith. It fell due May 26, 1877, and was not paid. There was some negotiation between Mrs. Derby and Smith in the summer of 1877, in regard to providing for its payment. Mrs. Derby, being in ill health, on October 27, 1877, conveyed the land in question (with other land) to her daughter, Mrs. Black, the plaintiff in this suit, her heirs and assigns, in trust, to lease, sell and convey it; and, after paying expenses and commissions, to pay the proceeds to the grantor, her heirs, executors or administrators. There was further negotiation between Smith and Mrs. Black; but the note being past due, with interest from May 23, 1877, the following notice was published in the Evening Star, a newspaper in the City of Washington, the description of the land in the notice being the same as in the deed of trust to Fuller and Latta: [310]

"B. H. Warner, Real Estate Auctioneer.
Trustees' sale of valuable property bordering on the P Street Circle, New Hampshire Avenue and 20th Street.

By virtue of a deed of trust dated May 23, A. D. 1872, and duly recorded in liber No. 682, folio 405, one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, we will sell at public auction, in front of the premises, to the highest bidder, on Wednesday, January 30th, A. D. 1878, at 4 o'clock p. m., the following real estate in the City of Washington, in said District, to wit:" [Here follows the description.] "Terms of sale: Three thousand dollars in cash; the balance in equal installments in six and twelve months respectively, with interest at eight per cent until paid, secured by a deed of trust on the property. Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser. If the terms of the sale are not complied with in five days after the sale, we reserve the right to resell at the risk and cost of the defaulting purchaser.

James M. Latta
John F. Fuller,
J F. Caldwell, Salesman. Trustees."

The sale took place by public auction in front of the premises, at the time named in the notice, and they were sold to the defendant Smith, he being the highest bidder, for $7,000. On the 13th of February, 1878, Latta and Fuller, the trustees, executed a deed conveying the land to Smith, his heirs and assigns. The deed contained this recital: "And whereas the period fixed for the payment of said note has expired without the same being liquidated, and the said party of the first part, at the written request of the legal holder of the said note, being the party secured by said trust, did, on the seventeenth day of January, A. D. 1878, according to the provisions of said trust, advertise the hereinafter described premises for 12 days in the Evening Star, a newspaper printed and published in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, to be sold on the thirtieth day of January, A. D. 1878, at the hour of four o'clock p. m., on the premises, at which public sale, the said Walter H. Smith being the highest bidder, the same was sold to him for the sum of seven thousand dollars, the terms of which sale being three thousand dollars in cash and the balance in two payments in six and twelve months, with interest at 8 per cent; and whereas the said Walter H. Smith, having complied with the terms of said sale, the said party of the first part executes these presents."

[311]

On the 25th of March, 1880, the bill in this suit was filed by Mrs. Black, in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. The defendants are Smith, Fuller and Latta, and the trustees in two deeds of trust, each to secure $3,000, which Smith has executed, covering the premises, since they were conveyed to him; but it is stated in the bill that the plaintiff does not seek to disturb the rights acquired by those trustees. The bill alleges that in March, 1880, Smith dedicated to public use a part of the land fronting on P Street Circle, and sold to one Page, for $14,200, another part of it, receiving $8,200 in cash, and an agreement to pay the $6,000 secured by the two deeds of trust above named; and that the plaintiff does not seek to disturb the rights acquired by Page.

The bill prays for a decree that, as to so much of the land as Smith did not convey to Page (excepting what was dedicated to public use), the sale by Fuller and Latta be set aside, and their deed to Smith be canceled; that an account be taken of the proceeds of the sale by Fuller and Latta, and of the amount due on the $5,500 note at the time of the sale, and of all taxes on the property chargeable to the plaintiff; that the proceeds of the property, whether from the sale to Page, or from rents collected by Smith, be accounted for by him, and be brought into court to constitute a trust fund for the benefit of the plaintiff; that the amount properly payable on the $5,500 note and all costs and charges properly to be added thereto, be ascertained; that the same be paid in liquidation of the note and charges, and the plaintiff and the land be released from liability therefor; and that the balance of the fund be paid to her. There is also a prayer for general relief.

[312]

The bill alleges that Fuller knew nothing about the advertisement, or that the property was to be sold, or had been sold, until the day on which he executed the deed to Smith; that Latta acted on his own sole responsibility in fixing on the place and time and terms and conditions of the sale, and was the present at it; that Fuller signed Smith, at the request of the latter,
it to him when he was ill in bed,
that it was satisfactory to Linkins;
did not authorize Smith to repres
kins was satisfied with the sale;
took place at 4 o'clock in the afte
inclement day, few persons being one person asked if a lot could be privilege, and was told it could n
he was ready to make a bid therefo
was no competition; that the price
a foot, at which it was knocked do was wholly inadequate; that in vie sence of his cotrustee, the absenc
and the low price offered by Smit
duty of Latta to adjourn the sale;
property, even at a forced sale,
brought, with the least competition
foot.

The bill further alleges that B
was intrusted with looking after t
that Smith knew this fact; that learned from a letter sent by W
January 24, 1878, that the sale w
for January 30, 1878; that she th
ative to Washington to see what co
and he sent back word that he coul
nothing, and that the holder of purchased the property at the sal
that she being at a distance and with business, relied on the fact th
regularity had existed in the sale,
would have been communicated b
the advertisement showed that th
be conducted by an auctioneer fr
establishment; that she supposed longer had any rights in the premi
had never received any account or tion from the trustees; that she had a few days past accidentally learn
were suspicious transactions at t
that it was irregularly conducted;
soon as she heard it she took step
the facts.

Smith answered the bill, as di
Latta. Proofs were taken and,
the court at special term on the
ruary, 1881, made a decree setti
sale, except as to the land sold to P dedicated to public use, and refer to an auditor to state an account parties, as prayed in the bill. T
ported, March 24 1881, that there
Smith to the plaintiff $5,860.30.
excepted to the report as to items in
but the court, at special term, over
ceptions and confirmed the report
rendered a decree on April 12, 1881,
there was due on that day from plaintiff $5,860.30; and ordering twenty days he pay her that sum,
from that day, and that Fuller and thirty days execute to her a deed
that part of the premises as to w was set aside. The decree impo of the suit on the plaintiff. Sm
from the decree, to the general t
plaintiff appealed to it from so mu
cree as omitted to allow her inte
date of filing the bill, and from overruled her exceptions to the aud

ith costs. Both appeals
rt in general term; and,
882, it rendered a decree
crees of the special term,
that Smith join with conveyance to the plain-
d to pay the costs of the cree Smith has appealed

ecial term on the merits,
s Cox (MacArthur &
the ground that Latta
onducted the sale, and took no part in it; and y the sale by signing the d it without any consul-
without any information
at the sale, or any other urnished by the recitals
as presented to him by his request. The Judge
oper further to remark,
g in the evidence involv-
eproach against the fair-purchaser." It is stated he general term was by justices, and proceeded
that held by the special

ound for setting aside the ad so conducted himself
operty as to have become ing and holding it as nd that, being the cred-ts, in fixing the terms of
otice, to the same extent
he had been his cotrus-
ly of the notice and sed was the organ of com-
tta and Fuller in regard
t see anything, in what preparations for the sale,
from becoming the pur-
agent or trustee for the orney for the trustees or ttorney and counselor at g the note, had acted for ught it with her money,
, though taking the title
s her agent and trustee
. Latta was selected as
d Fuller by Linkins.
ed with the duties of a
not know him or where
mith insisting on a sale,
d in accordance with tta, and was signed by took to find Fuller, and his signature to the noe auctioneer named in ne person named in the oyed by Mrs. Derby and r to sell the property or pay the note held by e to find any cause in anything else developed
der the most rigid rule,
becoming a purchaser
court held, in Richards
[59 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed.
f trust like the present,
isfaction of whose debt
ght to compete fairly at the sale, and may become the purchaser. No fraud in fact is alleged in the bill or shown in the evidence, no effort to keep bidders away from the sale, or to have a surreptitious sale, no want of the usual notice of sale, nor any conduct on the part of Smith inconsistent with what was due from him, as a creditor, to Mrs. Derby and the plaintiff. He waited nearly eight months after the principal of the note and the install- [316]

ment of interest payable at the date of its maturity became due, before he took measures for a sale. He allowed Mrs. Derby and the plaintiff to make every effort to sell the land at private sale, or to raise the money at a higher rate of interest than 6 per cent, to pay off the note. In July, 1877, Mrs. Derby wrote to him that she had tried in vain to get the money at a lower rate than 10 per cent, and asked him to have the debt extended at that rate at least until the fall, when she would sell the property if it brought no more than enough to pay the debt. In December, 1877, the plaintiff wrote to him that she had people working for her all the time trying to sell the ground, but she had failed so far to receive any offer which she thought more to her advantage than a sale under a foreclosure, and that she would sell the land to him at fifty cents per square foot, he paying enough in cash to repay his sister-in-law and the taxes on the property, and giving her his note for the rest at 8 per cent interest, secured on the property. But the general taxes on the property were unpaid, and it had been sold for their nonpayment, and there were special taxes against it, and Mr. Smith declined to purchase at the price asked. Prior to that, and in August, 1877, as his sister-in-law was pressing for some money, and in order to allow the plaintiff time to see if she could arrange the debt, he signed a note for $1,000 at 60 days, which Mr. Warner indorsed, and it was discounted and the money sent to the sister-in-law. This note was renewed for sixty days more; but, the plaintiff having accomplished nothing, proceedings for a sale were taken.

The question as to whether the signature "John F. Fuller" to the notice of sale, the original of which was produced in evidence, was genuine and made by Fuller, received some prominence in the proofs. Fuller's real name was "John E. Fuller." But he was called "John F. Fuller" in the deed of trust, and there is no dispute that he signed his name "John F. Fuller" to the deed to Smith, and to a paper he executed at the same time assigning to Smith his interest in the trustees' commissions. His testimony as to his not signing the notice of sale, amounts only to this: that he does not recollect [317]
signing it, and does not recollect the conversations and interviews with Smith, to which Smith testifies. His denial of the signature appears to be based on the fact that his name is John E. Fuller; and his ultimate answer is that he will not swear he did not sign the notice. Smith testifies positively that he saw him sign it, and gives details and circumstances. The evidence satisfies us that the notice was signed by Fuller. It also appears that the deed to Smith was fully read to and understood by Fuller before he signed it. The recitals in the deed, which were true, gave Fuller all the information it was necessary he should have, as a basis for his signature to it.

We come now to consider the alleged inadequate price obtained at the sale. In May, 1872, Stearns sold the land to Linkins at 45 cents per square foot. In April, 1873, Mrs. Derby purchased at $1 per square foot. At the time Mrs. Derby purchased, and during the summer of 1873, speculation in real estate in the neighborhood of this land was rife, and prices were high; but in the fall of 1873 came a revulsion, and a depression of prices, which continued until after the sale in this case. In March, 1880, Smith sold a little over 15,000 feet of the land to Page for $14,200, or about 92 cents per square foot. The price which Smith paid was a little over 35 cents per square foot. But, in view of the efforts which had been made by the plaintiff to sell the property or to raise money on it, and of all the facts of the case, it cannot be said that the property sold for less than it could have been reasonably expected to bring at public auction at the time. Smith made the first bid, at $4,500. The bidding reached $6,000 by $500 bids, and then either $6,500 or $6,900 by $100 bids, every alternate bid being Smith's. The $6,500 bid or the $6,900 bid was made by Mr. John W. Thompson. Then Smith bid $7,000. Latta, who was present, endeavored to induce Mr. Thompson to bid more, but he would not. Shailer, the person who visited Washington by the plaintiff's desire, was present at the sale. It was held at the usual hour of the day for such sales. The evidence shows that Smith immediately offered the property at his bid to several persons, including Mr. Thompson, but no one would take it. We see no ground for setting [318] aside the sale because of inadequacy of price. The bill in the case was filed a few days after Smith had sold to Page. The period of depression had passed. The price had gone up again to nearly what Mrs. Derby had paid. But the fact of depression in value is no ground in itself for not upholding a sale under the trust deed, nor is a subsequent rise in value a ground for setting aside the sale. Those who speculate in real estate on credit take the risk of depression in value at the time the credit expires, and those who buy for cash in time of depression are entitled to the benefit of a subsequent rise in value.

The principal question discussed at the bar was the validity of the sale in the absence of Fuller. Latta, the other trustee, was present. No objection, at the time of the sale, to the absence of Fuller was made on behalf of the plaintiff, although she actually knew of the time and place of sale and in consequence sent Shailer to Washington, and he attended the sale. The question of the necessity of the presence of a sole trustee at a sale under a deed of trust like the present was before the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, in 1838, in Connolly v. Belt, 5 Cranch, C. C. 405, on a bill filed by the grantor in the deed of trust, to set aside a sale under it. It was contended that the sale was void because the sole trustee was not present, though he was represented at it by an agent. The objection was not made at the sale, but was raised by a bill filed by Belt, the debtor, against the creditor and Semmes, the trustee, and the purchaser. The court was held by Chief Judge Cranch and Assistant Judge Morsell. The case of Heyer v. Deaves, 2 Johns. Ch. 154, was cited

to it as holding that under a stat York, which required all sales o premises, under a decree, to be ma ter, a sale was invalid which was competent agent of the master, in Chief Judge Cranch says, in deliver ion of the court: "Neither that sta
case is applicable to the present ca
a sale under a common deed of time, place, terms and conditions
were deemed by the trustee most f est of all the parties concerned in t
as appears by the answer of the tr
sale made by an agent of the truste
to the terms and conditions, and at place prescribed, is a sale by the t
being no law requiring him to b
present at the auction. No obje been made by Mr. Belt or his fri count of the absence of Mr. Semm tee, who was represented by Mr. C agent, at the sale, and their suffer
to go on is, I think, a waiver of th
if it would have been otherwise val
objection, in itself, is of no avail."
advised of any decision since that District of Columbia, holding to t until the one now before us. I nearly fifty years ago, and has proba
lowed in some cases as a rule
which it is; and the fact that in v
statute has been passed by Congre
the personal presence of a sole t
both trustees, at a sale under a dee persuasive to show that the abse
trustee, or of one of two trustees,
be held, of itself, to vitiate a sale.
is a statute requiring a thing to known and responsible public of well be held that he must do it in
in a sale under a deed of trust like where private persons appoint othe
sons, their heirs and assigns, to m
then, if the notice of sale is given is executed by the sole trustee or t
tees, and the sale is fairly condu
ground otherwise appears for setti
the mere fact that the sale is not the sole trustee, or that it is mad
sence of one or even both of two tr
alone a sufficient ground for hold invalid. The absent trustee or t
after the sale is advertised, becon
called to a distance, not to return fo
The creditor has rights as well as
and where, in the case of two trust
is conducted, as in this case, in pu
notice signed by both of them, co
the deed of trust, and previously vertised, and one of them is pres
sale is fairly and properly made, a ceedings under the deed of trust a regular, and both of the trustees af
ecute such a deed as was executed
there is no ground of public polic
right which requires it to be held sence of the second trustee vitiates

After the sale, and on the day o
deed was executed to Smith, he m
ment with Latta for the purchase.
to consider it as one wholly for cas
had a right to do, notwithstanding sale. No duty of the trustees or y this course. The rest was $5,739.25.

missions, taxes and
down at $2,086.78.
,000 left $4,913.22
25, and that amount that day, leaving a n if something less
against the $7,000,
han $826.03, it does
ot a deficiency.
General Term, made
and the cause is re-
directions to reverse,
urt in Special Term,
o dismiss the bill of

ting:
he judgment of this
to the conclusion
fact as to the pre-
, one of the trustees
ce of sale. He tes-zed the sale; never ver speak to him on
s after it had taken
o his house and got sign the deed. He ure "John F. Ful-
of sale is not in his

es I cannot but con-
istaken in his recol-onfounded Fuller's
ecution of the deed
assent to the notice

proceedings by joinemove, in my judg-
evident that it was
l the circumstances place. I agree with trustee can ratify
can only be upon
upon full informal it is clear that this
the present case.

erk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Exr. of RICHARD
and MARY H.
OMAS J. DURANT,

DDINGS.

ed., 300-307.)

nt—contingent fee
e—compromise.

oyed by the State of
and coupons, or the nsation to be a perered. Agents subse-ne purpose are not to the attorneys to
d until the attorneys
having, before the money was paid over, entered into a compromise and released the State.

[No. 25.]

Argued Oct. 23, 26, 1885. Decided Nov. 9, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. John Selden, for plaintiffs in error:

The action for money had and received lies "wherever the defendant has received money which is the property of the plaintiff and which the defendant is obliged, by natural justice and equity, to refund."

Bayne v. U. S. 93 U. S. 643 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 998); U. S. v. State Bank, 96 U. S. 35 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 648).

"It is an equitable action to recover back money which the defendant ought not to retain."

Nash v. Towne, 5 Wall. 702 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 580).

The Messrs. Giddings contracted, with the sanction of the State, to pay the claim of the plaintiffs; and they "were entitled to retain, out of the funds recovered by them, sufficient to meet the claim."

Cowdrey v. Galveston, etc. R. R. Co. 93 U. S. 355 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 952).

Messrs. A. H. Garland and Fletcher P. Cuppy, for defendant in error:

The plaintiffs, in contracting with the defendant, were bound to know the extent of the authority from the State under which he acted.

State v. Bank of Missouri, 45 Mo. 538; State v. Hays, 52 Mo. 580; Delafield v. State, 26 Wend. 192; Whiteside v. U. S. 93 U. S. 257 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 885; The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. 676 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 173); Mayor v. Reynolds, 20 Md. 10.

The record shows that plaintiffs did not act upon or have any knowledge of the contract of June 2, 1874, until after their settlement with the Governor. The parties to that contract had a right to modify or rescind it; and if they did so, as shown, before plaintiffs accepted it or became privy to it, they can claim no rights under it.

Trimble v. Strother, 25 Ohio St. 378; Davis v. Calloway, 30 Ind. 112; Durham v. Bischof, 47 Ind. 211; Thorp v. Coal Co. 48 N. Y. 257.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court: [300]

This action was brought by Richard T. Merrick and Thomas J. Durant to recover damages sustained by them in consequence of the violation of an agreement alleged to have been made by the defendant in error, in reference to compensation due them for certain legal services rendered in behalf of the State of Texas. The declaration contains a special count, and also a common count for money had and received to the use of the plaintiffs. The answer put in issue the existence of the alleged agreement and every material fact averred in the declaration. Although the record contains several bills of exceptions upon plaintiffs' offer to introduce evidence, the decisive question is, whether the court erred in peremptorily instructing the jury, upon the whole case, to find for the defendant. 1 Mackey, 394.

[301] After the present writ of error was sued out, each of the plaintiffs died, and the action has been revived in the name of their respective personal representatives.

The instruction to find a verdict for the defendant must be tested by the same rules that apply in the case of a demurrer to evidence. Parks v. Ross, 11 How. 373 [52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 735]; Richardson v. City of Boston, 19
[305] How. 268 [60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 642]; Schuchardt v. Allens, 1 Wall. 370 [68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 646]. If, therefore, the facts established and the conclusions which they reasonably justify do not disclose a valid cause of action against the defendant, the judgment must be affirmed; otherwise reversed.

[301] The bill of exceptions states that there was evidence tending to make the following case:

In the year 1867 Mr. Merrick, in conjunction with other counsel, was employed by the State to conduct and they did conduct legal proceedings for the recovery of certain bonds and coupons, of which, at the commencement of the recent civil war, she was the holder and owner, but which, pending that conflict, were transferred by a military board of the insurrectionary government of Texas for the purpose of enabling it to carry on war against the United States. These bonds had been received by the State from the United States under and in pursuance of the Act of Congress, approved September 9, 1850, entitled "An Act Proposing to the State of Texas the Establishment of her Northern and Western Boundaries, the Relinquishment by the said State of all Territory Claimed by Her Exterior to said Boundaries, and of all Her Claims upon the United States, and to establish a Territorial Government for New Mexico." 9 Stat. at L. ch. 49, p. 446. At the time of the employment of Mr. Merrick, some of the bonds and coupons so transferred were held, in this country, by the firm of White & Chiles, while the residue had been sent to England, and were there held, for others, by Droege & Co. and the Manchester Bank.

The suit instituted was by original bill filed in this court in the name of the State against the firm of White & Chiles and others. By the final decree therein it was adjudged that the State was entitled to recover the bonds and coupons of which White & Chiles claimed to have become owners under a contract made between them and said military board on January 12, 1865. Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 741, 742 [74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 242, 243]. Subsequently, in 1873, the Governor of Texas employed Mr. Merrick and Mr. Durant to institute, and accordingly they did institute, suit in the Court of Claims for the recovery of the proceeds of such of the bonds and coupons as had been sent to England; their compensation to be 20 per centum of what might be recovered by means of that suit. It does not appear what, if anything, was realized by that proceeding.

[302] After the decree in this court in Texas v. White, etc., establishing the invalidity, as to the lawful government of Texas, of the transfer made to White & Chiles, title was asserted by Chiles, individually, to the bonds and coupons, or their proceeds, held in England. Of this new claim, based upon a contract which Chiles pretended was made with him alone by said military board, Droege & Co. and the Manchester Bank were formally notified; and notice constituted the sole imp way of the prompt recognition and bank, of the State's right
bonds and coupons, or their pr
by them.

In this condition of affairs, th
2d of June, 1874, entered into a ment with J. D. Giddings and whereby they were constituted
ceed by suit against all persons adverse to Texas, to all or any ps transferred by said military boar
ity to compromise those claims u
as the Governor of the State sh
And it was stipulated that the
have for their services a contin
per cent for all sums actually r
their appointment, by comprom
cent on all sums recovered and a
by suit, and no more; such "pe
tively, to cover all costs and ex
torney's fees, whether accrued b
be incurred hereafter, so as to gi Texas all of the money so to be and except the ten per cent af selection of J. D. Giddings and as agents of the State was not terfere with the counsel previo
for, shortly after their appointm
ernor of Texas informed the la agents were to be only their "o
conducting the litigation.

On the 18th of October, 1874,
of objections made by defendan
of the contract of June 2, 1874, agreed to its modification, as in indorsement, as follows:

"Whereas, apprehensions pressed by J. D. and D. C. Gi consequence of outstanding co
fore made with other attorney contingent fees are claimed, that are sustained the said Giddings liable to the State for any excess
ten or twenty per cent stipulated contract; this indorsement is ma
pose of declaring that no such said Giddings in said event was i templated; and as, under outstan
as aforesaid, the per cent for f or exceed that stipulated for t
this contract, it is hereby decl Giddings shall be paid, in that e
able per cent of the amount rec
on compromise, which shall be sation for their services."

Subsequently, in November
1874, Merrick and Durant were e
State to institute and conduct fu
ings to remove and avoid the ne tension set up by Chiles to the pons, or their proceeds, held in En agreed that if, by means of thos
the State recovered the bonds a their proceeds, the attorneys sho
their compensation twenty per c was so obtained. Under such they commenced proceedings
which resulted in a judgment, r 29, 1875, to the effect that Chi claim to the bonds and coupons
ceeds, in England, was in co uld pay a fine to the d stand committed un-

. White, 22 Wall. 165
822]. Of these pro-
as informed by Mer-defendant urged upon sity of such a suit, in gland be attended with hed by the attorneys
all the proceedings in nt, with knowledge of the attorneys, and also 20 per cent of what gland, went abroad in September 29 of that ering of such bonds
proceeds, an amount
n the currency of the ollection was effected
he last-mentioned pro-Prior to his departure
fter his return to this romised the attorneys fund collected until
and he informed them
as had given him the ight be paid from that to the State. The last at promise was made
as on the 30th of Sep-interview with Mr.
t was in Washington
ning payment of the vered in Europe. The
on the same day, and
r the requirement of paid to the latter, of
the sum of $300,000.
s were informed by def October, 1875. They tified that, out of the hands, the Governor of D. and D. C. Giddings
ing for the attorneys
which latter amount agreed should be held d from. Finally, on $8,000 was paid by de-
of Texas. After Deor to January 12, 1876,
ed by the Governor of
ey would accept said
receipt in full for all ed to the State in re-coupons, etc., he would asury of the State, and settle the matter."
ry, 1876, Merrick and
dge of the existence of 1874, or of its modifictober, 1874, or of the
the $8,000 on 21st of
until December 17,
to the Governor of
gh protesting against y limiting the amount $8,000, they inclosed
"acknowledging the
ll demands against the
he recovery of the said their proceeds." The rth that had they been
f which, as just stated,

they had no knowledge, they would not have executed that receipt, or received the said $8,000 upon it.

Other facts are set out in the bills of exceptions, but as they do not materially affect the conclusion to be necessarily reached from those recited, they need not be stated.

It must be conceded that the claim of Merrick and Durant to be entitled, under their contract, to receive for their services an amount equal to 20 per cent of the bonds and coupons, and their proceeds, recovered by the defendant in England, finds strong support in the facts which the evidence, as we are informed by the bill of exceptions, tended to establish; for, not only does that recovery seem to have been the immediate result of the legal proceedings instituted and conducted by the attorneys, but the evidence justifies the conclusion that it was in the minds of all the parties, including the Governor of Texas and the defendant, that the attorneys should be deemed to have participated in any collections made in England, provided it appeared that those collections were the result of the suit last instituted in this court.

In this view of the evidence, and under all the circumstances of the case, it may be that the promise by the defendant not to part with the bonds and coupons or their proceeds, which might be recovered in England, until the fees of the attorneys were settled, was not inconsistent with the relations which he and they respectively held to the State. And it may also be that, for the violation of that promise, the defendant was responsible to them in damages. But, in our opinion, the attitude of the parties towards each other, and the whole aspect of the case, was changed when the attorneys, with information as to the amount collected by defendant, and with knowledge that their claim of 20 per cent of such collections was controverted, came to a final settlement with the State upon the basis of $8,000 as full compensation for all services rendered in and about the recovery of the bonds and coupons, or their proceeds. That settlement, we are constrained to hold, swept away the very foundation of their demand against the defendant; for, in establishing that demand, it was necessary to show that the State was actually indebted to them for legal services rendered. But how could such indebtedness be shown to exist, and how could the attorneys be said to have been damaged, within the meaning of the law, when, prior to any suit against defendant for violation of his agreement, the attorneys voluntarily submitted to a compromise, by which, in consideration of a named sum, they released the State from all further liability to them? Their suit proceeds upon the distinct ground that defendant's failure to keep his promise deprived them of the opportunity to obtain such amount as the State owed them for their services. But that breach by defendant of his promise could not be made the basis of an action for damages, after they stipulated with the State to receive and did receive a specified sum in full discharge of all claims for legal services in respect of the bonds and coupons, or their proceeds. And this view of the rights of the parties is not at all affected by the fact that the attorneys were, at the time of their settlement with the State, ignorant of the existence of the contract of June 2, 1874, or of its subsequent modification. To that contract they were not parties, and it was entirely competent for the State and her agents to modify it without notice to or consultation with others. The [307] attorneys had their separate contract with the State, made at the time of their employment, under which they proceeded against Chiles in respect of his individual claim to the securities, or their proceeds, held in England. The defendant was not bound by his relations with them to disclose the terms of the contract which he and his partner had with the State. The attorneys were in possession of all the facts essential to their determination of the question whether they would stand upon their own contract or accede to the proposition made by the Governor, to pay them, in full of all demands, a specified sum. With information as to the amount actually recovered for the State, and as to the amount claimed by and allowed to the defendant and his partner for their services, the attorneys made a final settlement with her upon the basis already indicated. That settlement, we repeat, precluded them from making any further claim upon the fund which came to the hands of the defendant as agent of the State and, consequently, precludes them from recovering damages by reason of the defendant having surrendered that fund in advance of the payment of their fees, retaining only what was allowed to him and his partner for their services.

[306]

Touching the suggestion that the defendant and his partner were not justly or equitably entitled to receive more than the attorneys who conducted the litigation, it is sufficient to say that the former did not receive more than the State agreed to pay them, while the attorneys have received what they agreed to accept in full discharge of their claim against the State.

For these reasons, and without reference to other considerations pressed upon our attention, it was proper to instruct the jury to find for the defendant.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[290] CITY OF WATERVILLE, Plff. in Err.,

v.

BALTUS VAN SLYKE.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 290.)

Practice—motion to dismiss before printing the record—motion papers.

Upon a motion to dismiss before printing the record, the motion papers must so present the case as to make a reference to the transcript unnecessary.

[No. 955.]

Submitted Nov. 2, 1885. Decided Nov. 9, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas.

On motion to dismiss.

Mr. S. E. Brown, for defendant in error, in support of motion.

Messrs. E. Stillings and W. W. Guthrie, for plaintiff in error, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delive
ion of the court:

The judgment in this case is $5,000, but the record contains a division. The motion to dismis ground that this court has no juri
such a certificate as is filed herei
ord has not been printed, and i Ins. Co. 100 U. S. 43 [Bk. 25, L. announced the rule that to get a motion to dismiss before printing papers must present the case in will enable us to act understandi
referring to the transcript on file.
we have not been furnished either of the certificate on which the mo
or with an agreed statement of wh
In fact, there is nothing on which unless we go to the transcript.
consideration of the motion is postponed until the case is for h merits.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Su

EDMUND H. WATTS, Libel

v.

JOHN B. CAMORS ET

JOHN B. CAMORS ET AL

v.

EDMUND H. WAT

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 35

*Admiralty—charter-party—statem
—whether a warranty or conditi liquidated damages—penalty—b tract—damages.*

*1. In a charter-party which descri name and as "of the burthen of 1,10
abouts, registered measurement,"
the owner agrees to receive on board
terer engages to provide, "a full and c
say about 11,500 quarters of wheat
statement of her registered tonnag ranty or condition precedent; and if rying capacity is about 11,500 quarte
charterer is bound to accept her, alth
tered measurement (unknown to bot
time of entering into the contract) i

2. The clause in a charter-party,
parties mutually bind themselves,
freight, and the merchandise to be l
"in the penal sum of estimated amou
to the performance of all and every ments, is not a stipulation for liquid
but a penalty to secure the payment of damage that either party may
from any breach of the contract;
treated in a court of admiralty of th
whatever may be the rule in the cou ticular State in which the contract i court of admiralty sits.

3. Under a charter-party which lay days for loading, after the ship w
ceive cargo, the owner of the ship
the charterers. They immediately re
her, and thirty-six days afterwar
another cargo; but negotiations we tween the parties for half of that owner sustained substantial damag
amount by the failure of the charte
with their contract. The circuit cou facts, and entered a decree against
for that amount. Held, no erro

*Head notes by Mr. Justice GRAY.

have the decree re-33].
cided Nov. 16, 1885.

ircuit Court of the Eastern Dis-ict of

the case appear in

for plaintiff:
decreeing the full
ges.
is simply a contract
a contract, from a
a house, and is gov-
ce where the contract
l, as the case may be.
part of this contract.
mmon law and the n, 311; Haviland v.

Mavor v. Bush, 16
tchum, 8 Johns. 189;
. 259: Cox v. U. S. 6
. ed. 359); Lanusse
6 U. S. bk 4, L. ed.
Y. 124; Curtis v. Le-
, 230; 2 Kent, Com.
§ 317, 320, 332, 349,
. Civ. Code, arts. 9, 2125, 2127, 2130.
airsplitting learning
g agreed liquidated
'penalty." Penalty
er all circumstances
olute default on the

. Ann. 276; Hunt v.

Jr., for defendants.

vered the opinion of

ralty by a citizen of
of Great Britain,
ghbury, against two
the State of Louisi-
the terms of which

ade and concluded
Orleans, La., the 7th
een A. B. French &
of Steamship High-1,100 tons, or there-ment, now due here
eptember, of the first
., of the second part,
d party of the first
g and chartering of sel (with the excepessary room for the ons, sails and cables)
d part, for a voyage
re, St. Nazaire, Ant-n, orders, on signing
following: The said
,strong, and in every age, and receive on d voyage, the mer-
oned.
econd part doth en-
h to the said vessel a full and complete cargo, say about 11,500 quarters of wheat in bulk, and pay to the said party of the first part, or agent, for the use of the said vessel during the voyage aforesaid, seven shillings and sixpence per quarter of 480 pounds weight delivered in full, payable in cash on right delivery of the cargo.

It is agreed that the lay days for loading and discharging shall be as follows (if not sooner dispatched), commencing from the time the vessel is ready to receive or discharge cargo: Fifteen running days (Sundays excepted) for loading and discharging, lay days to commence when the captain reports the vessel is ready for cargo, and that for each and every day's detention by default of said party of the second part, or agent, fifty pounds sterling per day, day by day, shall be paid by said party of the second part, or agent, to the said party of the first part, or agent.

The cargo or cargoes to be received and delivered within the fifteen days above specified, the dangers of the sea and navigation of every nature and kind always mutually excepted.

To the true and faithful performance of all and every of the foregoing agreements we, the said parties, do hereby bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, adminisirators and assigns, and also the said vessel, freight, tackle and appurtenances, and the merchandise to be laden on board, each to the other, in the penal sum of estimated amount of freight." [355]

The district court dismissed the libel, and the libelant appealed to the circuit court, which found the following facts:

The charter-party was executed at New Orleans on August 7, 1879, by the libelant, through his agents A. B. French & Co., and by the respondents. The libelant complied in all things with his contract. The Highbury arrived at the port of New Orleans on or before September 11. On that day, she being in that port and ready to receive cargo, her master notified that fact to the respondents, tendered her to them, and demanded of them a full cargo of wheat in bulk, according to the terms of the charter-party. On the next day, the respondents in writing refused to accept the ship, or to furnish the cargo, for the reason that her tonnage was greater than that expressed in the charter-party. Thereafter, during the lay days, various negotiations were pending between the parties, until September 30, when the master caused public protest to be made before a notary and witnesses of the respondents' refusal. On October 19, the master obtained at the same port a full cargo of cotton and oil cake, the freight of which exceeded in value, by $532.10, that of the cargo of wheat which the respondents had contracted to furnish.

The actual tonnage of the Highbury was 1,203 tons, registered measurement. Her actual carrying capacity for grain was about 11,500 quarters of wheat, depending upon the length of voyage between coaling stations. The estimated amount of freight, the penalty stipulated in the charter-party, was $20,872.50.

At the date of the charter-party, the Highbury was a new ship, and neither of the contracting parties in New Orleans knew her exact registered measurement or tonnage or carrying capcity. All the negotiations between them, preliminary to the contract, were with reference to her carrying capacity, which, under the custom among merchants and shippers of grain, might run not exceeding 10 per cent over or under the cargo stipulated for.

[356] By reason of the respondents' failure to accept the ship, furnish a cargo, and comply with their contract, the libelant suffered damages to the amount of $5,693.15 (consisting of $611.15 for expenses incurred in fitting up the Highbury to receive a cargo of wheat; and $5,082 for the delay, after the expiration of the fifteen lay days; of twenty-one days, at the rate of £50 a day, in obtaining and loading another cargo), with interest from the date of the libel.

The circuit court stated, as conclusions of law, that the libel should be maintained, and that the libelant recover from the respondents the sum of $5,693.15, with interest and costs, and entered a decree accordingly; and each party appealed to this court. The opinion of the circuit court upon the merits is reported in 10 Fed. Rep. 145.

[359] In this case, as brought before us by the appeal and the cross appeal, three questions have been argued, which may naturally and conveniently be considered in the following order:

1. Is the statement of the registered tonnage of the Highbury in the charter-party a warranty or condition precedent?

2. If it is not, is the owner of the ship entitled to recover the estimated amount of freight; that is to say, the sum of $20,872.50, as liquidated damages?

3. If both these questions are answered in the negative, have the charterers shown any error in law in the amount of damages for which a decree was rendered against them in the circuit court?

1. In the charter-party, the ship is described as the "Steamship Highbury, of the burthen of 1,100 tons, or thereabouts, registered measurement"; and the owner agrees to receive on board, and the charterer engages to provide, "a full and complete cargo, say about 11,500 quarters of wheat in bulk." In fact, her registered tonnage was 1203 tons, a little more than 9 per cent above that stated in the charter; but this was not known to either party at the time of entering into the contract; and her actual carrying capacity corresponded to the cargo which the charterers engaged to furnish, and the owner agreed to receive on board.

[360] The statement in the charter-party, concerning the registered tonnage of the ship, clearly does not constitute a warranty or condition precedent that she is of 1,100 tons registered measurement. The intention and the agreement of the parties, as apparent upon the face of their written contract, were that the steamship Highbury should receive and carry a full and complete cargo of about 11,500 quarters of wheat in bulk. There being no willful or fraudulent misrepresentation, the description, "of the burthen of 1,100 tons, or thereabouts, registered measurement" (if it could under other circumstances be held a warranty), is controlled by the designation of the ship by name, and by the unequivocal stipulations regarding the cargo to be carried. Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 168 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 622]; Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 188, 204 [ante, 366]; Barker v Windle, 6 E. & B. 675; Ashburner v. Balchen, 7 N. Y. 262; Morris v. Levison, 1 C. P. D. 155. The refusal of the charterers to accept her can be justified.

2. The concluding clause of the cl by which "to the true and faith ance of all and every of the fore ments" the parties bind themselves executors, administrators and assig the vessel and freight, and the me be laden on board, each to the oth penal sum of estimated amount is clearly not a stipulation for liqu ages, but a penalty to secure the the amount of damage that either actually suffer from any breach tract.

The principal object of this clau be to pledge the ship and freigh for the performance of the agreen owner, on the one hand; and the to be laden on board, as security formance of the agreements of th on the other. It is in the form o it covers alike an entire refusal to contract, and a failure to perform ticular, however slight; and for whether total or partial, a just c can be estimated in damages.

At the common law, indeed, bef ute of 8 & 9 Wm. III, ch. 11, § might have been rendered for the of the penalty. But in a case like of equity would stay proceedings payment of the damages actual Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436, L. ed. 780, 786] et seq.; Sloman v. Ch. 418; In re Newman, 4 Ch. D at the present day, even a court of regard such a clause in such a c penalty only, and not as liquidati ages. Tayloe v. Sandiford, 7 Whe S. bk. 5, L. ed. 384]; Van Buren How. 461, 477 [52 U. S. bk. 13 777]; Higginson v. Weld, 14 Gray, 1 v. Wright, 13 East, 343.

In Abbott on Shipping, Shee's ed § 2, speaking of charter-parties, it "it is usual for each of the parties tracts to bind himself, his heirs, e administrators, and the owner or m the ship and her freight, and the m cargo to be laden, in a pecuniary the true performance of their resp nants; this is commonly done by the end of the instrument. Suc not the absolute limit of damag side; the party may, if he thinks his action upon the other clauses c and may in such action recover dam the amount of the penalty, if in shall be found to exceed it. On the if the party sue on such a penal cl not in effect recover more than the tually sustained."

In such cases, accordingly, the United States, sitting in admiralty damages actually suffered, whether or fall short of the amount of the Salem's Cargo, 1 Sprague, 389; Th Woods, 302. In England and in a court of admiralty, within the powers, acts upon equitable pri when the facts before it, in a matt jurisdiction, are such that a cou urt of law could not, it of admiralty to grant Dobson, 504, 521; The 82, 192; The Virgin, 8 bk. 8, L. ed. 1036, 1040]; . 443; Hall v. Hurlbut, mond v. New Bedford 5.

e Civil Code of Louisi- of her Supreme Court, e courts of that State, in of the contract by one have judgment for the nalty stipulated by the partial breach he could l damages. Louisiana s. 1945, 2117, 2124, 2125, pson, 5 Mart. (La.) 525, tham, 3 Mart. (La.) N. , 16 La. Ann. 188, 196; a. Ann. 276.

uisiana does not govern it is treated as a question contract of the parties, licial remedy.

depending upon the in- nanifested by their writ- rmance of that contract he law which they must had in view when they v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, d. 252, 264]; Pritchard v. 24 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 104]. lishmen entering into a nglish ship for an ocean umed to look to the gen- he two countries, and not e State in which the cons a question of the remedy icially administered, the jurisdiction of the courts under the national Con- uniform throughout the e limited in its extent, or rcise, by the laws of the ted States v. Howland, 4 . bk. 4, L. ed. 526]; Liv- t. 632 [34 U. S. bk. 9, L. outhard, 12 How. 139 [53 . 927]; Neves v. Scott, 13 bk. 14, L. ed. 140]; The 55; The St. Lawrence, 1 . bk. 17, L. ed. 180]; The . 558 [88 U. S. bk. 22, L. §§ 913, 914.

herefore, rightly held that able only for the amount of r breach of the contract o the owner of the ship. in behalf of the charterers, endered on September 11, g on the next day, it was er and the owner at once ro, and thus prevent any ollow, instead of lying idle d expired; and therefore, l down in Warren v. Stod- [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1117], no e been decreed.

urt having found, as facts, ions were pending between first refusal until September 30, and that it was by reason of the failure of the charterers to accept the ship, furnish a cargo and comply with their contract, that the owner suffered damages to the amount decreed, no error in law is shown in the decree; and it is not open to revision by this court in matters of fact. Act of February 16, 1875, chap. 77, § 1, 18 Stat. at L. 315; The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 168]; The Francis Wright, 105 U. S. 381 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1100]; The Connemara, 108 U. S. 352 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 751].

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

HUMPHREY BELL ET AL., Plffs. in Err., [373]
v.
FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF CHICAGO.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 373-383.)

Bills of exchange—protest without allowance of days of grace.

*A bill of exchange, dated March 4th, payable in London 60 days after sight, drawn in Illinois on a person in Liverpool, and accepted by him "due 21st May," without any date of acceptance, was protested for nonpayment on the 21st of May. In a suit against the drawer, on the bill, it was not shown what was the date of acceptance. Held, that the bill was prematurely protested, it not appearing that days of grace were allowed.

[No. 35.]

Submitted Oct. 30, 1885. Decided Nov. 16, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. O. H. Horton, for plaintiffs in error:

The pretended protests were made on the days the drafts were due, without allowing days of grace. The protests were premature, and the drawers were thereby discharged.

Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 1 Pet. 31 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 28); Hoover v. Wise, 91 U. S. 313 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 394); National Bank v. City Bank, 103 U. S. 670 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 418); Perkins v. Franklin Bank, 21 Pick. 485; Montgomery Co. Bank v. Albany City Bank, 8 Barb. 399; S. C. 7 N. Y. 461; Bowen v. Newell, 8 N. Y. 194; Ivory v. Bank, 36 Mo. 475; Cook v. Renick, 19 Ill. 601.

Messrs. Charles A. Dupee and H. A. Gardner, for defendant in error:

The acceptor's declaration that the bills were due May 21 and 31, was a declaration that the sixty days after sight and the three days of grace expired on those dates.

Dan. Neg. Inst. sec. 633; Kenner v. Creditors, 7 Mart. (N. S.) 540.

As the language of Turner, the acceptor, was equivalent to saying that sixty days would terminate on May 21st and 31st, and as he testified that they did mature on those days and were then dishonored, there was here no disputed fact for the consideration of the jury.

The authorities cited by plaintiff in error to this point are not inconsistent with these positions.

*Head note by Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD.

[374] Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, by the First National Bank of Chicago, as indorsee, against the plaintiffs in error, copartners under the name of Humphrey Bell & Co., as the drawers of three bills of exchange. One was in this form:

Canton, Ill., March 4th, 1878.

"Exchange for £850.00.

Sixty days after sight of this first of exchange (second and third unpaid), pay to the order of ourselves, in London, eight hundred and fifty pounds sterling, value received, and charge to account of Humphrey Bell & Co.

To Mr. W. D. Turner, Jr., Liverpool."

Across the face of the bill, as sued on, these words were written:

"Accepted. Payable at Messrs. Barclay & Co., bankers, London. Due 21st May.

W. D. Turner, Jr."

The foregoing description applies to each of the other two bills, and the writing across its face, except that each was for £800, and one was dated March 11, 1878, and had in the writing across its face "Due 31st May," instead of "Due 21st May."

The declaration was in assumpsit. Each of the defendants separately pleaded non assumpsit, and there were various special pleas, on which issue was joined. At the trial the court directed the jury to find a verdict for the plaintiff for $10,937.13 damages, which was done; and for that amount, with costs, a judgment was rendered for the plaintiff, to review which the defendants have brought this writ of error.

After making certain necessary proof, the plaintiff offered in evidence the three bills, and a notary public's certificate of protest accompanying each. The bill of exceptions says: "The paper introduced and read in evidence as the certificate of protest of said £850 draft states, that on the 21st day of May, 1878, at the request of the City Bank of London, the notary public exhibited the original bill of exchange, before copied, to a clerk in the bank-[375] ing house of Messrs. Barclay and Company, bankers, London, where the said bill is accepted payable, and demanded payment of its contents, which demand was not complied with, but the said clerk thereunto answered, 'No orders,' whereupon the said notary protested the said draft against the drawers, acceptor and indorsers. The other two papers introduced as certificates of protest of the other two of said drafts are in the same form, and state the protest to be in each case the same day they are stated to be due in the acceptance thereof." When the drafts and certificates of protest were offered in evidence, the defendants objected to the admission of each of them, but the objection was overruled, and they were read in evidence, to which the defendants excepted.

The bill of exceptions purports to set forth all the evidence offered by either of the parties on the trial, but there is no evidence showing any presentation for payment of any one of the bills on any other day than that stated in the acceptance as the day it was due, nor is there any evidence showing when the acceptances were written by Turner, although his deposition taken at Liverpool, sixteen months before the trial, was read in evidence by t
All that is said on the subject in tha
is: "The last three bills for £800 £800, drawn by defendants on me s
by me, and which matured on th
and 31st May, 1878, were dishonor

At the close of the evidence on and before the charge, the defendar
the court to instruct the jury as fol
other things: "That the bills of ex
on in this case are what are know
as foreign bills; that upon such bill called days of grace, are allowed b
the day on which they become du that such a bill does not become du in law, on the day mentioned on i
on the last day of grace; that, unle
are duly protested on the last day
on the second day, if the last day
such protest is not duly made, and
and indorsers are thereby discharg bility upon such bills. That, if the
from the evidence and under the
of the court, that the bills of excha
in this case were not protested u
day of grace (or upon the precedin
last day fell on a Sunday), then th
the jury must be for the defendants.
refused to instruct as requested as
the above points, and the defendar
to each refusal.

The court then charged the ju plaintiff was entitled to a verdict,
them to render a verdict for the $10,937.13 damages, which was such ruling and direction the de cepted. In the charge set forth i exceptions, the views of the court
tions embraced in the instructions
and refused, were given in these w
eral defenses are urged against th
right to recover. First. That th prematurely presented for payme
tested; that is, as I have said, the b
able sixty days after sight; they w
by Turner, and, by the terms of ances, were made payable, the two twenty-first and the last on the th
May, 1878, and were protested f
ment on the days on which they w tively made payable. The defenda that, as the law allows three days
all bills of this character, they shou
been presented for payment, or p manded, until three days after the
in the acceptance, and that, theref
tests are void and inoperative. * *
first point made, that the bills were protested, which is equivalent to were never protested at all, this de
a question of law upon undisputed bills each appear on their face to h
cepted by Turner, on whom they w
payable, the two first on the twen
the last on the thirty-first of Ma
were protested for non-payment o
There is no proof in the record,
bills, nor has any been offered, ten
when Turner first saw these dra
when they were presented to him ance. The law applicable to these sixty-three days from the time th sighted until they were due—that i unquestioned, and ad-verning the rights of . This acceptor saw nce payable on a day

pinion that the court
ms of this acceptance,
nake the bills payable,
f grace, on the days
and therefore the bills
for non-payment on y-first days of May."
plaintiffs in error that ely protested, and the lischarged, because it ee days of grace were rt erred in ruling oth-

ustice Marshall, in dethis court, in 1828, in Triplett, 1 Pet. 25, 31 37, 40]: "The allow-usage which pervades world. It is now uninter into every bill or racter, and to form so contract, that the bill fact or in law, on the
ce, but on the last day
payment previous to ze a protest, or charge
This is universally aden accepted."
in the acceptance in ich the bills would bed 31st of May respect-
g to indicate that those
f three days of grace,
the several days of the
es. We are of opinion
natively, in the case of those in question, that ating the day of pay-
" included the days of
signated cannot be re-
time for presentment,
llowance.
m. 469) that where an d "within three days
which three days are t may be protested for y on Bills, p. 374, it is s payable at a certain payable at the precise
bill, but days of grace
) that they are always ng to the law of the due, which in England Chancellor Kent says
three days of grace ap
to the custom of mer-
nland bills and promis-
the acceptor or maker
time of the end of busi-
the third day of grace
r the paper falls due)

ge v. Sherborne, 11 M. e rule very tersely, in e are to be allowed in f money is, by a nego-
payable at a fixed day.
in question, made up-
y days after sight, are of rare occurrence. But no reported case has been found in England or in this country where such an acceptance has been held to have included, by mere force of its words, ex vi termini, the days of grace.

Some cases may here be referred to which go to support the conclusion at which we have arrived. In Griffin v. Goff, 12 Johns. 423, in 1815, a promissory note dated August 12, was made payable on the 1st of December then next; and it was held that the indorser was discharged, because payment was demanded of the maker on the 1st of December and not on the 4th.

In Kenner v. Creditors, 7 Mart. N. S. 540, in 1829, a bill drawn at 60 days' sight was accepted by an acceptance which was dated September 12, and made payable on November 14, and was protested on the latter day. It was alleged that the holders had lost recourse on the drawers, (1) because the acceptance was made for payment on the 63d day after sight instead of the 60th; and (2) because it was protested on the day of payment instead of the last of the days of grace. But the court held that the 14th of November was the peremptory day of payment, and not the day from which the days of grace were to be reckoned, because it appeared from the face of the bill that the days of grace were included between the 12th of September and the 14th of November; that the acceptance was according to the tenor of the bill; and that the protest was timely. The view taken was, that a dated acceptance is not vitiated by the express designation of a day of payment, when that day is designated according to the tenor of the bill; and that when it appears, from a comparison of the tenor of the bill, the date of the acceptance and the day designated for payment, that the latter is the third after the expiration of the days after sight, the day thus designated is the peremptory day of payment, the acceptance is according to the tenor of the bill, and the protest on the day expressly designated is timely. In Kenner v. Creditors, 8 Mart. N. S. 36, another case, decided a week after the former one, the acceptances, which were of bills drawn at 60 days' sight, were not dated, but were made payable on a day named. Proof as to the day of acceptance was admitted, and, that being proved, it was held that the case fell under the rule in the case in 7 Martin, because it clearly appeared that both the days of sight and those of grace had been computed and included between the date of acceptance and that designated as the day of payment. These views were affirmed in another case, in 1830—Kenner v. Creditors, 1 La. 120. [382]

In McDonald v. Lee's Administrator, 12 La. 435, in 1838, a note dated May 5, 1835, payable on the 5th of November, 1837, "without defalcation," was held to be payable on the 8th of November, 1837, and not before.

In Perkins v. Franklin Bank, 21 Pick. 483, in 1839, a bank post-note, dated December 7, 1836, was made payable in seven months, with interest "until due and no interest after." On the margin were written these words: "Due July 7, 1837." It was held that the bank was entitled to grace on the note; and that the memorandum on the margin was not an express stipulation in the note that it should be payable without grace, within a statute allowing grace in the absence of such a stipulation. In delivering the opinion of the court, Chief Justice Shaw said: "Grace is an allowance of three days to the debtor, to make payment, beyond the time at which, by the terms of the note, it becomes due and payable." In regard to the memorandum, "Due July 7, 1837," he said: "It shows when the note is to become due, and in this respect corresponds with the stipulation in the body of the note. The time it becomes due being fixed, the statute gives three days from that time for payment, under the term 'grace,' unless the contrary be expressly stipulated." A like decision was made in Mechanics Bank v. Merchants Bank, 6 Met. 13, in 1843.

In Bowen v. Newell, 8 N. Y. 190, in 1853, it was held that a negotiable draft on the cashier of a bank, dated October 5, directing him to pay a specified sum on October 12, could not be presented for payment, so as to hold the drawer and indorser, until October 15.

In Cook v. Renick, 19 Ill. 598, 602, in 1858, it was said that by the common law as adopted by the Legislature of Illinois, "A bill of exchange payable on a given day does not mature till three days after the day appointed on its face for its payment."

[383]

In Coffin v. Loring, 5 Allen, 153, in 1862, it was held that the maker of a note which is payable by installments, at future times certain, with interest, is entitled to grace on both the principal and the interest; and that the condition of a mortgage given to secure the payment of the same sums and interest, at the same times, is not broken until the expiration of the grace which is allowed upon the note. On the same principle it was decided in Oridge v. Sherborne, ubi supra, that the maker of a promissory note, payable by installments on days named in the note, was entitled to days of grace on the falling due of each installment.

The case of Ivory v. State Bank, 36 Mo. 475, in 1865, was like that of Bowen v. Newell, ubi supra. A negotiable draft on a bank dated October 12, directing it to pay a specified sum on October 22, was held to be payable on October 25, and not before.

The principle deducible from all the authorities is, that, as to every bill not payable on demand, the day on which payment is to be made to prevent dishonor is to be determined by adding three days of grace, where the bill itself does not otherwise provide, to the time of payment as fixed by the bill. This principle is formulated into a statutory provision in England, in the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, 45, 46 Vict. chap. 61, § 14.

In the present case, the time named in the acceptance after the word "due" can be regarded only as the time of payment fixed by the bill, to which days of grace are to be added, and not as a date which includes days of grace. This view goes to the foundation of the action, and makes it unnecessary to examine any other question, and leads to the conclusion that the judgment must be reversed, and the case be remanded to the Circuit Court, with a direction to award a new trial; and it is so ordered.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

DANA SARGENT AND MARTI
VAN, EXR., AND EMILY S.
EXRX. of DANIEL F. SULLIVA
Assignee of DANA SARGENT,

v.

JOHN A. HELTON, Sheriff
County, Alabama, JAMES
Sheriff of Escambia County, A cessor in Office of Said JOHN
YOUNG M. RABB and McDUFF
YOUNG M. RABB and McDUFF
the Style of RABB & MAN MORNINGSTAR, AND JAMES

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 34

Jurisdiction—bankruptcy—convey signee—sale by state court—in

*Where a sale of the lands of a b
has been made and confirmed by orde
ruptcy court, and the lands have bee
the assignee, the Circuit Court of the
is without jurisdiction at the suit of
to enjoin a sale of the same lands abo
upon the order of a state court.

[No. 30.]

Argued Oct. 23, 1885. Decided 1

APPEAL from the Circuit C
United States for the Southe Alabama.

Statement of the case by Mr. Jus

Dana Sargent, one of the appell
sole plaintiff at the commencemen
in the circuit court. His bill was 1879. It alleged in substance as f

The Pensacola Lumber Compan
tion of the State of New York,
ruary 27, 1875, adjudicated bank
District Court of the United St Southern District of New York, an day of May following, a deed of a
all the property of the bankrupt
to the assignee in bankruptcy. T
so conveyed consisted in part of a land in Escambia County, in the bama. Under a decree of the bank made on December 22, 1875, thes sold at public sale on January 5,
City of New York, and were p
Dana Sargent, one of the plaintif
was confirmed by the court on Janu
and, Sargent having complied with sale, on the 25th of the same m signee conveyed the land to him, a took and still retained possession few days before the Pensacola Lum adjudicated bankrupt, to wit: on t
and 22d of February, 1875, all o ants respectively, except the sheriff County, commenced actions agains
ment in the Circuit Court of Escam Alabama, and the writs of attac levied on the lands above mentione sacola Lumber Co. lying in the C cambia. More than two years to wit: at the fall term in the year
Circuit Court of Escambia Count

*Head note by Mr. Justice WOODS.

against the Pensacola
achment suits, and or-
o be sold to satisfy the e fact that the attach-l by the adjudication
akrupt. On June 24,
uit Court of Escambia
iff an order, directing the lands attached, in nts condemning them
was about to execute

said order of sale had title of Sargent to the their value; that the ale would still further
the title, and further
e lands, impair plain-
and inflict an injury
tain no satisfaction,
of the defendants and
eriff's bond and estate;
ting of ninety odd sec-
s, would probably, if y persons, and thus
ed in a multiplicity of
.

l that the defendants,
re general creditors of
to the bankrupt pro-
e lands were sold and prayer of the bill was ts and deputies might
the lands attached.

by consent of the par-
made to the bill, by
, who was represented
ana Sargent, the pur-
made a party plaintiff.
urred to the bill on which were that the
and the court without t Court made a decree
was sustained and the t decree the plaintiffs

Mayer, Richard L.
aham, for appellants.
for appellees.

livered the opinion of

evised Statutes of the
"that the writ of in-
anted by any court of y proceedings in any
n cases where such ined by any law relating ptcy."

e bill in this case was
of an order of the Cir-
of Escambia, a court
; and no relief which,
e bill, this court could without the writ of
The Circuit Court of
herefore, deprived of quoted, to protect the less the writ of injunc-
e law relating to pro-Haines v. Carpenter,
d. 345]; Dial v. Rey- nolds, 96 U. S. 340 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 644]. In a timely suit brought by the assignee in bankruptcy, there is no doubt that, upon a proper showing, the circuit court might have enjoined proceedings in the attachment suits in the state court. This is the express ruling in Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 83]. [351] But the plaintiff in this case is not the assignee in bankruptcy. Sullivan, the transferee of Sargent, the vendee at the bankruptcy sale, was the real plaintiff and the only party who, at the final hearing, asked for the injunction. The question therefore is, Does any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy authorize an injunction at the instance of a purchaser of property at a bankruptcy sale or his vendee, to stay proceedings in a state court?

There is no Act of Congress expressly authorizing a Circuit Court of the United States to restrain by injunction, even at the suit of an assignee in bankruptcy, proceedings in a state court. The case of Chapman v. Brewer, ubi supra, was a bill in equity filed by an assignee in bankruptcy to enjoin the defendant from selling the property of the bankrupt, upon execution issued out of the state court. The jurisdiction to issue the writ in that case was placed by the court upon section 5024 of the Revised Statutes, which authorized the District Court, sitting in bankruptcy, when a petition in involuntary bankruptcy had been filed, to restrain by injunction all persons from interfering with the debtor's property; and upon section 4979, which gives the Circuit Court concurrent jurisdiction with the District Courts, of all suits at law or in equity brought by an assignee in bankruptcy against any person claiming an adverse interest in any property transferable to or vested in him. The court, in the case cited, said: "It must be held that Congress, in authorizing a suit in equity in a case like the present, has, in order to make the other relief granted completely effective, authorized an injunction as necessarily incidental and consequent to prevent further proceedings under the levies already made and new levies under the judgment." The case makes it clear that the injunction to stay proceedings in a state court is only allowed by the statute for the purpose of aiding the assignee in bankruptcy to discharge his duty and of protecting the property of the bankrupt estate for the equitable distribution among the creditors. But there is no Act of Congress from which can be inferred authority to a court of the United States to issue an injunction to restrain proceedings of a state court at the instance of a purchaser at a bankruptcy sale, or of his vendee. [352]

The right of the assignee in bankruptcy, by section 5057 of the Revised Statutes, to maintain any suit touching any property or rights of property transferable to or vested in him against any person claiming an adverse interest, is cut off by section 5057 of the Revised Statutes, by the lapse of two years from the time the cause of action accrued.

But the contention of the plaintiff in this case is that the Bankruptcy Act, without limitation of time, allows a purchaser at a bankruptcy sale, or his vendee, to sue out a writ of injunction from a federal court to restrain proceedings in a state court, while it denies that right to all other persons, except the assignee in bankruptcy, and allows it to him only for two years after his cause of action has accrued.

The argument against the jurisdiction in this case is clear. The suit was not brought until long after the lands in controversy had been sold and conveyed by the assignee, and the purchaser had been put in possession. Neither the assignee nor the creditors of the bankrupt estate had any further interest in or concern with them. They had been fully administered, the purchase money had been paid to the assignee, and the lands no longer formed any part of the assets of the bankrupt estate, and no proceedings in the bankruptcy court could have any reference to them. There is, therefore, no law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy which authorizes the injunction prayed for.

The case of Dietzsch v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 494 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 497], cited by counsel for plaintiff, merely decided that a court of the United States could enforce its own judgment in a replevin suit removed from a state court, by enjoining the defeated party from proceeding on the replevin bond in the court from which the cause had been removed, the condition of the bond having been satisfied by the judgment of the federal court in favor of the obligor. The court further held that the bill filed for the purpose of restraining the defendant was merely ancillary to the replevin suit, its object being to secure to the defendant therein the fruits of his judgment. The authority cited does not tend to sustain the jurisdiction of the court in this case.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[321] CINCINNATI, NEW ORLEANS AND TEXAS PACIFIC R. R. CO., Plff. in Errr.,

v.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE R. R. CO., Plff. in Errr.,

v.

SAME.

CHESAPEAKE, OHIO AND SOUTHWESTERN R. R. CO., Plff. in Errr.,

v.

SAME.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., "Ky. R. R. Tax Cases," 321-339.)

Constitutional law—14th Amendment—"due process of law"—"equal protection of the laws"—valuation and taxation of railroad property—Act of the Legislature of Kentucky of April 3, 1878—validity of—construction

1. "Due process of law," as applied to proceedings for the levy and collection of taxes, does not imply nor require the right to such notice and hearing as are considered essential to the validity of the proceedings and judgments of judicial tribunals.

2. The mode of valuing property for taxation under the Act of the Legislature of Ken 3, 1878, is due process of law.

3. Whenever, by the laws of a St authority, a tax, assessment, servi burden is imposed upon property for
and provision is made for confirming
the charge thus imposed in the ordi
justice, the judgment in such proce deprive the owner of his property
process of law.

4. Under the Constitution of Kent nothing to forbid the classification o
purposes of taxation, and the valuati
classes by different methods.

5. Railroad property, owing to it ture, may form a separate class, for p uation and taxation. If the mode o
due process of law, its difference i
from the mode of valuing other de classes of property does not operate
the equal protection of the laws.

6. The Constitution and a statute u construed together as one law.

[Nos. 497, 498, 499.]

Argued Oct. 16, 19, 1885. Decided

IN ERROR to the Court of Ap
Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Statement by Mr. Justice Mat

The Commonwealth of Kentuc
several actions against the Railro
above named as plaintiffs in error
to recover the amounts of certai
against each of them, under the
"An Act to prescribe the mode o
the value of the property of railro
for taxation, and for taxing the sa April 3, 1878. (Bullitt & Feland of Ky. 1881, p. 1019.)

As the validity of this statute question in these actions, it is he full, as follows:

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted, by the sembly of the Commonwealth of K
the president or chief officer of company, or other corporation o
road lying in this State, shall, in July in each year, return to th
Public Accounts of the State, u
total length of such railroad,
length thereof beyond the limits
and designating its length with
and in each county, city and inc
therein, together with the avera mile thereof, for the purpose of b
as a carrier of freight and passeng engines and cars and a list of the and improvements and other
the said company, and the valu
the respective counties, cities
rated towns in which the same
That if any of said railroad co
or operates a railroad or railroa
State, but in connection with its State, the president or chief of company shall only be required proportion of the entire value of stock as the number of miles of this State bears to the whole nu operated by said company in a State.

"Sec. 2. That should any railr
a line of railroad, in this State, b or under the control of a receive
son, by order or decree of any c
any other State, it shall be the du ceiver or other person to make, u

required by the first
ould such president
ad company, or such
l returns and valua-
t day of August in aid auditor shall pro-
and values required
and in such manner
may deem best, and failing to make the

or of the State, on or gust, 1878, shall ap-eeholders, citizens of stitute a Board of
eet annually at the Frankfort, on the
each year, a ma-
a quorum for the
nd at the said meet-
before them the re-
r this Act, and any
s he may have made
reof; and should the
, in the judgment of
igh or too low, they
he same by a proper
f. Said board shall eedings, to be signed
at any meeting; and uthorized to examine
f any railroad com-
of its property, or to ny suitable disinter-
ed by them for that aid board shall hold four years, and shall ten dollars per day
r necessary expenses Provided, That said
onger period of time
ne year; and before ir appointment, they
the governor of the
ully and impartially
mbers of said Board
e case of the death,
llure to act, the gov-
by another appoint-

of taxation for state
e in any year levied
his Commonwealth
ied upon the value
rd, of the railroad,
e of each company;
on for the purposes
r precinct, in which
d is located, which evied on other real od is hereby, levied
ate of said company
of miles of such road
value of the average
h railroad with its
l as aforesaid And
oard shall have com-
ear, the Auditor of fy the clerk of each
t so assessed for tax-
h railroad company
sment for taxation

for state purposes and for the purposes of such county, city, town or precinct. And all existing laws in this State, authorizing the assessment and taxation of the property of railroad companies by counties, cities or incorporated towns, are hereby repealed; and no county, city or incorporated town in this State shall hereafter assess, levy or collect any taxes on the property of railroad companies of this State, except as provided by this Act.

"Sec. 5. All taxes levied under the provisions of this Act shall be paid on or before the 10th day of October in each year; and for a failure to pay the same, the officers of the said companies shall be subject to the same penalties to which they are now subject for a failure to pay the taxes now levied by law. And the taxes in behalf of the Commonwealth may be recovered by action in the Franklin Circuit Court, and those in behalf of the counties by actions [325]
in the courts of civil common-law jurisdiction in such counties, respectively.

"Sec. 6. That all laws in conflict with this Act are repealed.

"Sec. 7. This Act shall take effect from its passage."

The powers and duties conferred by this Act upon the Board of Equalization were, by a subsequent Act approved April 19, 1882, devolved upon the Board of Railroad Comissioners, appointed under an Act approved April 6, 1882.

These actions were brought in the Franklin Circuit Court in pursuance of the 5th section of the Act.

The cause of action against the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railroad Company was set out in the petition, according to the practice in Kentucky, as follows:

"The plaintiff states that the defendant is a railroad company and corporation, and is, and was during the year 1882, the owner of, by lease, and operating, a line of railway lying in the State of Kentucky known as the Cincinnati Southern Railway, and the same constructed under, and chartered and incorporated by, an Act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, entitled 'An Act to authorize the trustees of the Cincinnati Southern Railway to acquire the right of way and to extend a line of railway through certain counties in this Commonwealth,' approved February 18, 1872.

"Plaintiff states that the defendant, for the purpose of assessment and taxation for the year 1882, as required by law, reported to the Auditor of Public Accounts of the State of Kentucky the total length of said road owned and operated by it as aforesaid and the value thereof per mile, and also reported its engines, cars, depot grounds, improvements and other real estate, and the value thereof. The total valuation of said roads, including sidings and other taxable property, as reported, was —— dollars.

"Plaintiff states that after said report and valuation was made to the Auditor of Public Accounts by the defendant, the Board of Railroad Commissioners, who by law constitute a Board of Equalization to value and assess the railroad property of the State, after being sworn, as required by law, met on the first day of September, 1882, at the office of the auditor, [326]
in Frankfort, and with a majority of said board present, constituting a quorum, the auditor placed before them the valuations, returns and report made to him by defendant.

"Plaintiff states that said Board of Equalization continued its sittings from day to day, as provided by law, of which the defendant had due notice; and plaintiff avers that defendant did appear before said board by its officers, agents, and attorneys, and presented such facts, figures and information and argument in relation to the valuation and assessment for taxation of its said property as it saw proper to.

"Plaintiff states that said board, after a full hearing of defendant, by her officers, agents, and attorneys, and a full consideration of said returns, reports, information, and arguments before them, valued and assessed for taxation for the year 1882 the defendant's line of railroad lying in this State, the same reported by defendant to the auditor, together with the rolling stock, engines, cars, depot grounds, improvements, and other real estate, at the sum of $6,027,942, and on the ——— day of September, 1882, returned and filed with the Auditor of Public Accounts the record of said assessment and valuation, signed and attested, as provided by law, a certified copy of which, marked 'A,' is filed herewith as a part hereof.

"Plaintiff states that the Auditor of Public Accounts, before the 10th day of March, 1882, duly notified defendant of the amount of its assessment for taxation, and, as required by law, opened an account with defendant, charging it with the sum of $28,632.42, the amount of tax due the State of Kentucky upon said assessment and valuation of the defendant's property for the year 1882 at 47½ cents on the one hundred dollars, which is the rate of taxation prescribed by law on such property, and all other real estate of the Commonwealth. A certified copy of said account is filed herewith as a part hereof, marked 'B.'

"Plaintiff states that the defendant is indebted to him in the sum of $28,632.42, taxes due as aforesaid for the year 1882, no part of which has been paid.

"Wherefore plaintiff prays judgment against [327] the defendant for said debt, and interest from October 10, 1882, and for her costs and all proper relief."

In the case against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, the petition is substantially the same, except the averment of the valuation of its lines of railroad, which, it is alleged, were valued and assessed at the sum of $15,521,406, on which the amount of tax, at 47½ cents to the one hundred dollars, is $72,726.69, on which there is admitted a credit of $25,000, paid January 22, 1883.

The taxable property of the other plaintiff in error, the Chesapeake, Ohio and Southwestern Railroad Company, it is averred in the petition, otherwise substantially the same as in the other cases, was valued and assessed at $2,791,994, on which the tax levied was $13,261.98, which is credited with $6,798.82, paid January 5, 1883.

An answer was filed in each case, but, so far as they raised an issue of fact, they were withdrawn, and the causes were heard on demurrers, the questions of law being such as arose upon the face of the petitions.

Judgments were rendered in favor of the Commonwealth in all the case

firmed by the court of appeals;
the present writs of error we have been prosecuted.

Messrs. C. B. Simrall, Wm
Holmes Cummins, for plain
State taxation is embrace Amendment. San Mateo Tax
Eng. R. R.Cas. 11; Poinderter
U. S. 270, 297, 335, 336 (ante, 18
Corporations and corporat
within the 14th Amendment.
vate Corp. § 457, and authori
shall v. B. & O. R. R. Co. 16 H bk. 14, L. ed. 959); Sinking F
S. 718 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 501);
Cases, 16 Wall. 36 (83 U. S. bk Butchers Union Co. v. Crescent
S. 746 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 585); L
monwealth, 1 Duvall, 295; L.
Commonwealth, 1 Bush, 253.
The taxpayer is entitled, as a
to notice of any proposed char
tion of his property for taxa Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183; Patten
325; State Railroad Tax Cas
(Bk. 23, L. ed. 663); K. P. R.
8 Kan. 558; Cooper v. Board
Eng. Com. Law, 180; Cooley,
As to what is constitutional
Quillan's Case, 9 Dana, 513;
8 Bush, 498; Exchange Bank
St. 15; Cummings v. National
158 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 905).
As to classification of railro
Applegate v. Ernst, 3 Bush,
R. Co. v. Elizabethtown, 12 Bu
& T. P. R. R. Co. v. Commo
492.

Messrs. P. W. Hardin, At
tucky, and Alvin Duvall, f
error:
The terms "due process of the Federal Constitution, and land" as used in the State Co
never been construed to invest
the right of hearing, notice,
plied to the taxing powe of th
Murray v. Hoboken Land I
276 (59 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 37
Anderson, 95 U. S. 37 (Bk.
Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U
L. ed. 618); High v. Shoemak
Weimar v. Bunbury, 30 Mich.
Dogan, 48 Miss. 17; Doe v. De
Cooley, Tax. 39.
The power of the State in the
of regulating and apportionin
uniformly been held unlimited Maryland, 4 Wheat. 428 (17 U.
606); Providence Bank v. Bill
(29 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 956); St.
Co. 11 Wall. 429 (78 U. S. bk.
State Tax on Foreign-Held Bon (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 186); K kiss, 100 U. S. 491 (Bk. 25, L.
blood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 415.

Mr. Justice Matthews deli
ion of the court:
Two federal questions arise
in these cases, contained in the ositions affirmed by the plainti

April 3, 1878, and the ice of it, if enforced,
se judgments, in ef-
he defendants below
; and,
itute a denial of the
ws; in both particenth Amendment to
ited States.
f these propositions,
of the plaintiffs in
ment of these judged of their property
, because the valua-
r the Act is made by amissioners without
otice of the proceed-
l in opposition to any rd in its progress.
peatedly decided by
ings to raise the pub-
collecting taxes are d that "due process
subject, does not imuch notice and hear-
essential to the va-
and judgments of
by statute is gener-
, and that has been ng what is 'due proctice Bradley, in Da-
J. S. 97, 107 [Bk. 24, st be had to the cause
whether under the
of eminent domain
nt for local improve-
and if found to be e special case, it will ocess of law'; but if pressive and unjust,
not 'due process of

ceedings for the levy
was said in McMillen
42 [Bk. 24, L. ed.
and never has been,
e validity of a tax,"
ould have been pres-ty to be present, in was assessed." This sed in the decision of nse tax where all the ment were declared
was intrusted to the
rs; but, in the State
S. 575, 610 [Bk. 23,
ascertainment of the
was the duty of a cases, whose assess-
the reason that the process of law," for ring, it was said by ing the opinion of the time of sitting fixed not secret. No obarance of anyone be-redress a wrong; and taxes, this is all that

tioned in these cases,
w, notice and a hear-
ny, by its president or law, at a specified

time, to return to the Auditor of Public Accounts, under oath, a statement showing "the total length of such railroad, including the length thereof beyond the limits of the State, and designating its length within this State, and in each county, city and incorporate town therein, together with the average value per mile thereof, for the purpose of being operated as a carrier of freight and passengers, including engines and cars and a list of the depot grounds and improvements and other real estate of the said company, and the value thereof, and the respective counties, cities and incorporated towns, in which the same are located. That, if any of said railroad companies owns or operates a railroad or railroads out of this State, but in connection with its road in this State, the president or chief officer of such company shall only be required to return such proportion of the entire value of all its rolling stock as the number of miles of its railroad in this State bears to the whole number of miles [333] operated by said company in and out of this State."

This return, made by the corporation through its officers, is the statement of its own case, in all the particulars that enter into the question of the value of its taxable property, and may be verified and fortified by such explanations and proofs as it may seem fit to insert. It is laid by the Auditor of Public Accounts before the Board of Railroad Commissioners, and constitutes the matter on which they are to act. They are required to meet for that purpose on the first day of September in each year, at the office of the auditor, at the seat of government, when these returns are to be submitted to them. The statute declares that, "should the valuation be either too high or too low, they shall correct and equalize the same by a proper increase or decrease thereof. Said board shall keep a record of their proceedings, to be signed by each member present at any meeting; and the said board is hereby authorized to examine the books and property of any railroad company, to ascertain the value of its property, or to have them examined by any suitable disinterested person, to be appointed by them for that purpose." And in the performance of these duties, their sessions are limited to a period of not longer than twenty days in any one year.

These meetings are public, and not secret. The time and place for holding them are fixed by law. The proceedings of the board are required to be made matter of record, and authenticated by the signature of the quorum present. Anyone interested has the right to be present. In reference to this point, the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, in its decision in these cases, says (81 Ky. 492, 512): "As we construe this Act, although in the nature of an original assessment, the parties had the right to be heard, and were in fact heard before the board passing on the question of valuation." It is averred, in the petitions filed in these actions, that "defendant did appear before said board by its officers, agents and attorneys, and presented such facts, figures and information, and argument in relation to the valuation and assessment for taxation of its said property, as it saw proper to"; and "that said board, after a full [334] hearing of defendant by her officers, age 1 and attorney, and a full consideration of sa returns, reports, information and arguments before them, valued and assessed for taxation" the defendant's line of railroad, etc. These averments are not denied, but stand confessed in the record of each case.

It is said, however, in answer to this, by counsel for plaintiffs in error, in argument, that whatever was in fact this alleged hearing, it could only have beeen accorded as a matter of grace and favor, because it was not demandable, as of right, under the law; and consequently has no such legal value as attaches to a hearing to which the law gives a right, and to which it compels the attention of the officer, under an imperative obligation, with the sense of official responsibility for impartial and right decision which is imputed to the discharge of official duty.

But such is not the construction put upon the statute, as we have seen, by the Court of Appeals of the State, nor the practical construction, as we infer from the averments of the pleadings, put upon it by the officers called to act under it. And if the plaintiffs in error have the constitutional right to such hearing, for which they contend, the statute is properly to be construed so as to recognize and respect it, and not to deny it. The Constitution and the statute will be construed together as one law. This was the principle of construction applied by this court, following the decisions of the state court, in Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 567], where words, denying the right, were regarded as stricken out of the State Constitution and statutes, by the controlling language of the Constitution of the United states; and in the case of Cooper v. The Wandsworth Board of Works, 14 C. B. N. S. 180, 194, in a case where a hearing was deemed essential, it was said by Willes, J., "that, although there are no positive words in a statute requiring that the party shall be heard, yet the justice of the common law will supply the omission of the Legislature."

It is still urged, however, that there is, notwithstanding what has been said, no security that the final action of the Board of Railroad Commissioners, in valuing and assessing railroad property under this statute, may not be unequal, unjust and oppressive; and that either [335] by error of judgment, through caprice, prejudice, or even from an intention to oppress, valuations may be made which are excessive, bearing no reasonable relation to what is fair and just, and fixed arbitrarily, based neither upon actual evidence nor an honest estimate. But the same suppositions may be indulged in, in opposition to all contrary presumptions, with reference to the final action of any tribunal appointed to determine the matter, however carefully constituted, and however carefully guarded in its procedure, and whether judicial or administrative. Such possibilities are but the necessary imperfections of all human institutions, and do not admit of remedy; at least no revisory power to prevent or redress them enters into the judicial system, for, by the supposition, its administration is itself subject to the same imperfections.

But whatever relief courts of justice may afford against the injuries apprehended, when, in fact, they have resulted, is secured to the plaintiffs in error by the very statute of which they complain. For the valuatio[illegible] property, under that Act, and the[illegible] the taxes thereon, are not final, in [illegible] they constitute a charge upon the [illegible] ject to the tax, or a liability fixed [illegible] poration owning it. That resul[illegible] tained, and the tax actually colle[illegible] suit, as provided in the fifth sectio[illegible] ute, either against the officers of t[illegible] for penalties incurred by a failur[illegible] taxes levied, or for the recovery [illegible] themselves, by action in the Fra[illegible] Court, or in the courts having ju[illegible] the counties, for the taxes payabl[illegible] spectively. The case is thus bro[illegible] and distinctly within the decision [illegible] v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 104 [illegible] ed. 616, 619], where it was held [illegible] ever by the laws of a State, or by [illegible] ity, a tax, assessment, servitude [illegible] den is imposed upon property fo[illegible] use, whether it be of the whole [illegible] some more limited portion of the [illegible] and those laws provide for a mod[illegible] ing or contesting the charge thus [illegible] the ordinary courts of justice, wit[illegible] to the person, or such proceeding[illegible] the property as is appropriate to t[illegible] the case, the judgment in such [illegible] cannot be said to deprive the owne[illegible] erty without due process of l[illegible] obnoxious it may be to other obje[illegible] this is the principle that was fol[illegible] subsequent case of Hagar v. Recl[illegible]trict, 111 U. S. 701 [Bk. 28, L. [illegible] that case, the statute of Californi[illegible] ferred the jurisdiction, authorized [illegible] going either to the validity or to t[illegible] the tax assessed, to be pleaded. [illegible] ies may be permitted in such case[illegible] is a matter that depends upon t[illegible] provisions of the law of the juri[illegible] the absence of such provisions, an[illegible] ple of general jurisprudence, it i[illegible] that any defense is admissible whi[illegible] the illegality of the proceeding, re[illegible] alleged assessment, whether be[illegible] violation of the local law which i[illegible] conferring the authority upon whi[illegible] or because it constitutes a denial [illegible] cured to the party complaining, b[illegible] tution of the United States. Th[illegible] now under review were rendered [illegible] actions, so that we cannot escape[illegible] sion that there is no ground for th[illegible] error to contend that they have b[illegible] without due process of law.

The plaintiffs in error, howev[illegible] pose a defense below, legitimate [illegible] arising under the Constitution o[illegible] States, namely: that in the proce[illegible] Board of Railroad Commissioner[illegible] the valuation and assessment, un[illegible] April 3, 1878, they were several[illegible] equal protection of the laws, co[illegible] Fourteenth Amendment to the [illegible] As this defense was overruled by [illegible] Appeals of Kentucky, another [illegible] tion is presented which we are b[illegible] examine and decide.

The discrimination against ra[illegible] nies and their property, which is [illegible] complaint as being unjust and u[illegible]

t, in the legislation
t, railroad property,
s classed by itself as ate, such as farms
l to different means
ing their value for iffering as well from rty of corporations
es, such as bridge,
nufacturing, gas and latter report to the
e of their property,
as a tax, upon each value, a sum equal
he same value of real
and valuations are perfect assessments,
ny board or court,
xing officers.
the Constitution of
xes to be levied by a descriptions of prop-
left to the discretion
nd there is nothing
of property for pur-
valuation of different nods. The rule of
e subject, only re-
methods to be ap-
constituents of each operate equally and
s in similar circum-
ection, therefore, to
as between railroad
rations in the meth-
by which the value
ined. The different property justify the
ect which the discre-
seen fit to impose.
gislature has chosen
oses of taxation, real
with farming lands
nse as imperatively
nt of the same mall, in the process of taxation. Calling es not obliterate the en them, and, ac-
on in argument, as
that a railroad runnties is valued and cial board organized
r real estate is valued
. The final point of ced to this: In the e, it is said, when valuation, it is subervisors, who may not so as to increase xpayer, and an op-
ing, upon testimony
and with a right of a county judge, and tax is equal to fifty
rt. This is contrast-the case of railroad
of Railroad Commis-
ed there is no notice
e valuation returned peal allowed if it is wever, is apparent

rather than real. An examination of the statutes shows that the original valuation of the assessor, in case of ordinary real estate, is conclusive upon the taxpayer, no matter how unsatisfactory; and the appeal allowed is only from the action of the board of supervisors, in case they undertake to increase the valuation made by the assessor. But in the case of railroad property, no board has authority to increase the original assessment made by the Railroad Commissioners, and there is, therefore, no case for an appeal similar to that of the owner of ordinary real estate.

But were it otherwise, the objection would not be tenable. We have already decided that the mode of valuing railroad property for taxation under this statute is due process of law. That being so, the provision securing the equal protection of the laws does not require, in any case, an appeal, although it may be allowed in respect to other persons differently situated. This was expressly decided by this court in the case of Missouri v. Lewis, 101 U. S. 22, 30 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 989, 992]. It was there said by Mr. Justice Bradley, delivering the opinion of the court and speaking to this point, that "the last restriction, as to the equal protection of the laws, is not violated by any diversity in the jurisdiction of the several courts, as to subject matter, amount or finality of decision, if all persons within the territorial limits of their respective jurisdictions have an equal right, in like cases and under like circumstances, to re- [339] sort to them for redress." The right to classify railroad property as a separate class for purposes of taxation grows out of the inherent nature of the property and the discretion vested by the Constitution of the State in its Legislature, and necessarily involves the right, on its part, to devise and carry into effect a distinct scheme, with different tribunals, in the proceeding to value it. If such a scheme is due process of law, the details in which it differs from the mode of valuing other descriptions and classes of property cannot be considered as a denial of the equal protection of the laws.

We see no error in the several judgments of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky in these cases, and they are accordingly affirmed.

Mr. Justice Blatchford did not sit in these cases, nor take any part in their decision.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.S.

JAMES EACHUS, Appt., [429]

v.

JOSHUA B. BROOMALL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 429-439.)

Patent law—letters patent No. 142,154—reissue No. 6,315—validity of.

1. In view of the state of the art, the only invention covered by letters patent No. 142,154 consisted in the particular organization of the machine described. It could not be construed to include a process.

2. In the absence of a defective or insufficient specification, or a claim embracing too much, the error having arisen from inadvertence, accident or mistake, a patent for a machine will not sustain a reissue for a process.

[No. 19.]

Argued October 27, 1885. Decided Nov. 16, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Wayne MacVeagh, Joseph C. Farley and George Tucker Bispham, for appellant:

If a process is properly patentable, there is no rule of law which prohibits its claim by reissue, where the original patent had mistakenly claimed a mechanism.

Powder Co. v. Powder Works, 98 U. S. 126 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 77); James v. Campbell, 104 U. S. 356 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 786); Heald v. Rice, 104 U. S. 737 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 910); Wing v. Anthony, 106 U. S. 142 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 110); Tilghman v. Proctor, 102 U. S. 708 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 279).

An analysis of these decisions which, on a superficial examination, would seem to conflict with appellant's position, will show that they condemn the claiming of "processes" by reissue in only two classes of cases:

a. Where the process of the reissue is different from that of the original.

b. Where the word "process" in the reissue is only a cover for claiming a principle or abstract idea.

In the case at bar neither of these objections exists.

Mr. Charles H. Pennypacker, for appellee:

The original patent is for a "machine." The reissue is for a "process."

See Heald v. Rice, 104 U. S. 753 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 9;) Mfg. Co. v. Corbin, 103 U. S. 786 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 610); Moffitt v. Rogers, 106 U. S. 423 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 76); Powder Co. v. Powder Works, 98 U. S. 126 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 77); James v. Campbell, 104 U. S. 377 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 794); Wing v. Anthony, 106 U. S. 142 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 110).

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

[429] The bill in equity, which was dismissed on the merits by the decree appealed from, was filed by the appellant to restrain the alleged infringement of reissued letters patent No. 6,315, dated March 2, 1875, based on the original patent, No. 142,154, dated August 26, 1873, issued to James Eachus, the complainant.

The specification forming part of the original patent, as set out in the record, is as follows;

"Be it known that I, James Eachus, of Coatesville, in the County of Chester, State of Pennsylvania, have invented a new and useful Ma-[430] chine for Cutting Paper Boards, of which the following is a specification:

"The nature of my invention consists in combining six adjustable circular saws upon two shafts, set at any angle to each other, and a two-way carriage supported by a frame, and provided with guides so as to work easily and carry the material to be cut. The object of the invention is to trim and cut heavy paper used in the manufacture of books and boxes.

"Figure 1 is a front view of my invention. Fig. 2 a side elevation, and Fig plan.

"In Fig. 3, E is the frame, wh strongly constructed, and in the B B and T T are guides on fra
two-way carriage, constructed in
as to play freely upon guides B B and F are saw-shafts mounted up bearings bolted to frame E. C are circular saws, secured upon s
by adjustable collars.

"For the purpose of operating shafts D and F are provided wit
Rotation is communicated by be 2, from a shaft G, on which are

"Upon carriage A, Fig. 3, is p paper to be cut. The pile is c
number of large sheets, as they a the paper-machine. The carriage upon the guides B B, saws S
through the paper; thence at righ
first direction upon guides T T cutting through the pile in the
the result of the operation bein
edges and cut each sheet in four

"The saws can be adjusted
and F, so as to trim and cut the desired size.

"I make no claim to the arran
cular saws and carriages workin
for the purpose of cutting logs, b
wood of any kind, or any other m paper; but

"I claim—

"The combination of shaft D, S S S and C C C, carriage A, an
the purpose of cutting binders' a paper, substantially as shown a

The drawings referred to are a (See next page.)

The drawings accompanying
tion, which form part of the reissu
the same as the original, except
as Figure 4, which was added,
portant. The specification of th
ent is as follows:

"Be it known that I, Jam Coatesville, in the County of State of Pennsylvania, have in and improved Process of Cutting of which the following is a descri
being had to the accompanying which—

"Fig. 1 is a front view of my conducting my process. Fig. 2
tion of such machine. Fig. 3 and Fig. 4 is a detail of a saw in
ting.

"Similar letters of reference
sponding parts in the several fig

"The object of this invention
cut heavy paper used in the m
boxes and books; and it consists
the paper while in a wet state, as it
the paper-making machine, to th
cular cutters having serrated e
the sheets are cut evenly and eco
the trimmings can be returned machine without regrinding or ot

"In the annexed drawings
sented one practical form of a ma
ducting my process; but I desir stood as not confining myself to t

e, nor to the number

es the frame, which icted. B B and T T
A is a two-way carl in such manner as
es B B and T T. D
h are mounted upon
d to frame E. C C vs or cutters, having
r the purpose intend-
d upon shafts D and

erating this machine,
ed with pulleys P P.
by belts H H, Fig. 2,
are pulleys P' P'
is put upon the car
nposed of a number
e taken from the pa-
very wet condition.
n upon the guides B
through the paper
e first direction upon cutting through the
the result of the op-
edges of the sheets
our parts,
sted on shafts D and
he sheets any desired

the above description
r, while they are in
from the paper-mak-
the saws over them,
ges, and leaving them
ughout, and dividing
This process of saw-successfully and with-
f the sheets unless the e condition in which
ing machine,
e arrangement of cir-
s for the purpose of sawing logs or any kind of wood; nor do I broadly claim the machine herein described for sawing wood.

"I am aware that paper board has heretofore been sawed when in a dry state, and I therefore lay no claim to such invention, which leaves the edges of the paper thus sawed in a jagged condition, the action of the saw-teeth tending to separate the fibers of the paper board in the line of the kerf; whereas, when the paper board is sawed in a wet state, directly after leaving the paper machine, the edges are left smooth, the saws causing an interlocking of the fibers in its path through the paper, and the trimmings of the paper being in a condition to be returned to the vat without regrinding, which would not be the case with trimmings of paper board sawed in a dry state.

"What I claim as new, and desire to secure by letters patent, is,

"The process of sawing paper board as herein described, consisting in sawing the paper board while it is in the wet state in which it is taken from the paper-making machine, substantially as described, and for the purpose set forth."

The only defenses set up in the answer are a denial of the validity of the reissued patent and a denial of the alleged infringement. [434]

A comparison of the two patents, for the purpose of determining the question raised as to the identity of the inventions described in them, requires an interpretation of the original patent in the light of the state of the art at the date when the application for it was filed. And we have the material for ascertaining its meaning, in that view, by means of the evidence on that point contained in the record, which, although objected to on the ground that no prior use or knowledge of the invention claimed had been specifically set up in the answer as a defense, was nevertheless admissible for the purpose of defining the limits of the grant in the original patent and the scope of the invention described in its specification. Vance v. Campbell, 1 Black, 427 [66 U. S. bk.17, L. ed. 168]; Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 37 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 200].

From that evidence, it appears that, at the time of the alleged invention of the appellant, and for many years prior thereto, paper boards for bookbinding or for making boxes were cut, trimmed or separated, while in a wet or moist state, as the paper in sheets came from the mill, by means of a hand saw, sometimes with teeth, and sometimes ground with a curved line to a sharp edge. This was the mode or process in universal use. Heavy paper com-[435] ing from the machine in a dry condition was cut, for similar purposes, in one direction by means of rolling shears; that is, revolving circular discs, operated on a shaft, their edges ground to an angle of about sixty degrees, the same as a pair of scissors; and in the other direction by straight shears, acting like ordinary scissors.

It is manifest, from this state of the art, that it was not open to the appellant, at the time he applied for his patent, to claim as his invention the discovery that heavy paper intended for the use of bookbinders and boxmakers, could best be cut into proper shapes and sizes, while in wet sheets, as they came from the machine; nor that the cutting could best be performed by cutters with serrated edges; for this was matter of general knowledge and common practice.

Accordingly, in the specification to his original patent, he declared the nature of his invention to consist "in combining six adjustable circular saws upon two shafts, set at any angle to each other, and a two-way carriage supported by a frame, and provided with guides so as to work easily and carry the material to be cut." Then follows a description of the machine which contains this combination, and of the mode of operating it, so as to effect the result of cutting the large wet sheets of heavy paper, placed on the frames for that purpose, in both directions, into smaller sheets of any desired sizes. This description refers to the drawings, which show the machine with all its parts, and their relations to each other, in their combination.

But none of these parts, either in their construction or mode of operation, or general function, are novel; for saws and shafts, and frames for carrying material to be cut, had been in common use for cutting other material, and were well known. Accordingly, the appellant, in his specification, enters an express disclaimer as to all such uses, and the combinations and arrangements of well known machinery by which they had been effected. He says: "I make no claim to the arrangement of circular saws and carriages, working upon guides for the purpose of cutting logs, blocks of wood, wood of any kind, or any other material except paper." And thereupon states his claim, pre-
[436] cisely, as follows: "The combination of shaft D, shaft F, saws S S S and C C C, carriage A, and frame E, for the purpose of cutting binders' and boxmakers' paper, substantially as shown and described."

It is plain, then, that the only invention exhibited in the drawings, or described in the specifications of the original patent, consists in the particular organization of the machine described, whereby the various parts ar and adjusted, so as to fit it to acco specific result of cutting heavy pap large sheets and in a wet condition, from the paper-making machine, in sizes and other shapes, for use as boa binding and box making.

Whether the particular constructi rangement of the parts forming the c and adjustment described was, of it thing novel, requiring invention, the adaptation and application of su bination to the particular use decla invention by reason of the novelty and the new result obtained, within ple of the cases of Stimpson v. Woodm 117 [77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 866]; Spalding, 13 Wall. 453 [80 U. S. bk. 515]; Brown v. Piper, 91 U S. 37 [ed. 200]; Roberts v. Ryer, 91 U. S. 1 L. ed. 270]; Heald v. Rice, 104 U S 26, L. ed. 916]; Hall v. MacNeale, 1 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 367]; Atlantic Work 107 U S. 192 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 438], sylvania Railroad v. Locomotive Tru U S. 490 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 222], are not before us. It is sufficient to say th for such an alleged invention the orig could or could not be upheld, it can strued as good for anything mor than that.

We turn now, for the purpose of c to the reissued patent. In the s thereto the patentee declares that vented, not a machine, but "a ne proved process of cutting paper b which a description follows; that th referred to are views of "my machi ducting my process;" that the inve sists "in subjecting paper, while in as it is taken from the paper-making to the action of circular cutters havi edges, whereby the sheets are cut economically, and the trimmings turned to the paper machine witho ing or other treatment;" that, in th drawings "I have represented on form of a machine for conducting but I desire to be understood as no myself to the precise construction o chine, nor to the number of serra shown." After describing the const operation of the machine, by refer drawings, the specification proceed be seen from the above description sheets of paper, while they are in a tion, directly from the paper-makin and pass the saws over them, thereb their edges and leaving them of an ness throughout and dividing them i sheets. This process of sawing ca formed successfully and without surface of the sheets, unless the sh and in the condition in which th paper-making machine."

Then follow these disclaimers:

"I make no claim to the arrange cular saws and carriages for the sawing logs or any kind of woo broadly claim the machine herein d sawing wood. I am aware that has heretofore been sawed when in and I therefore lay no claim to such

ne paper thus sawed action of the saw-
e fibers of the paper
whereas, when the wet state, directly hine, the edges are ng an interlocking
ugh the paper, and
being in a condition
vithout regrinding,
ase with the trim-
d in a dry state."
oncludes with the

nd desire to secure

aper board as herein
ing the paper board
n which it is taken chine, substantially urposes set forth."
ro patents makes it
ntee had in fact con-
ng the scope of his rom a machine into ains to conceal or ne entitled his orig-
nd useful machine
vhile with equal ex-declared that he had ved process of cut-
is at least a prima
iginal grant, which
f not fatal, under a f the Commissioner
new patent only for
he original has been or invalid, by rea-
ficient specification, ntee claiming as his
more than he had
the error has arisen
r mistake, and with-ptive intention. If
s to how the matter
entee himself, it has mony in the case, in uestion, "For what
ue of your patent?"
process would cover
e, and so I applied

sense, the reissued ne condemnation of
owder Co. v. Powder
25, L. ed. 77], and
ssary to be cited.
argument on behalf
ction to convert the
nt for a process, in cribed "consisted in d of material with a l in which the claim
o as to cover mere-
not the process in actors. But we have to the state of the
vy paper in a wet
of a saw, that the
be construed as in-
out invalidating it;
specification itself,
ribed as the invention intended to be claimed. The patent is plainly limited by its language to the combination, arrangement and adjustment of the particular parts of the very machine described, for the uses to which it is declared to be applicable. On the other hand, the claim of the reissued patent is broad enough to cover the process of sawing paper boards in a wet state by means of a hand saw; and if, for the purpose of saving it from the necessary consequences of such a claim, it is restrained by construction so as to include only the process described when performed by means of circular cutters having serrated edges—terms of limitation to be found in the specification—it is still broad enough to cover every arrangement, combination and adjustment in which these elements may be found; and this surely is not the same invention as that described in the original patent. [439]

The decree of the Circuit Court dismissing the bill is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

EDWARD DEFFEBACK, Appt., [392]

v.

ROBERT HAWKE.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 392-407.)

Public lands—homestead and town-site laws—mineral lands, not within—certificate of purchase of mineral land—effect of—patent of placer mining claim—color of title—improvements—authority of officers of land department.

*1. No title from the United States to land known at the time of sale to be valuable for its minerals of gold, silver, cinnabar, or copper can be obtained under the preemption or homestead laws, or the town-site laws, or in any other way than as prescribed by the laws specially authorizing the sale of such lands, except in the States of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri and Kansas.

2. A certificate of purchase of mineral land upon an entry of the same by a claimant at the local land office, if no adverse claim is filed with the register and receiver, and the entry is not canceled or disaffirmed by the officers of the Land Department at Washington, passes the right of the government to him; and, as against the acquisition of title by any other party, is equivalent to a patent. The land thereby ceases to be the subject of sale by the government, which thereafter holds the legal title in trust for the holder of the certificate.

3. The officers of the Land Department have no authority to insert in a patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals showing a compliance with the law, and the conditions which it prescribed. The patent of a placer mining claim carries with it the title of the surface included within the lines of the mining location, as well as to the land beneath the surface.

4. There can be no color of title in an occupant of land, who does not hold under an instrument or proceeding, or law purporting to transfer the title or to give the right of possession. Nor can good faith be affirmed of a party in holding adversely, where he knows that he has no title, and that under the law, which he is presumed to know, he can acquire none. So held where, in an action of ejectment for known mineral land by the holder of a patent of the United States, the occupant set up a claim to improvements made thereon under a statute of Dakota, which provides that "in an action for the recovery of real property, upon which permanent improvements have been made by a defendant, or those under whom he claims, holding under color of title, adversely to the claim of the plaintiff, in good faith, the value of such improvements must be allowed as a counterclaim by such defendant," he not having taken any proceedings to acquire the title under the laws of Congress authorizing the sale of such lands, or to acquire the right of possession under the local customs or rules of miners of the district.

*Head notes by Mr. Justice FIELD.

5. It would seem that there may be an entry of a town site, even though within its limits mineral lands are found, the entry and the patent being inoperative as to all lands known at the time to be valuable for its minerals, or discovered to be such before their occupation and improvement for residences or business under the town-site title.

[No. 564.]

Submitted Oct. 14, 1885. Decided Nov. 16, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Dakota.

[393] Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Field:

This is an action to recover a parcel of mineral land, situated in the county of Lawrence, in the Territory of Dakota, claimed by the plaintiff under a patent of the United States bearing date on the 31st of January, 1882. The complaint alleges that on the 20th of November, 1877, the plaintiff, being in the actual, peaceable and exclusive possession of the premises, filed his application in the United States Land Office at Deadwood, in that county and Territory, to enter the land as a placer mining claim; that on the 31st of January, 1878, he entered the same aud paid the government price therefor, and that on the 31st of January, 1882, a patent of the United States, conveying a fee-simple title to the land, was executed and delivered to him, the land being described as mineral entry No. 8, and mineral lot No. 53; that while thus the owner and in possession of the premises the defendant, on or about the 1st of July, 1878, with full notice of the plaintiff's title, unlawfully and wrongfully entered upon a portion of the premises, which is particularly described, and ousted the plaintiff therefrom, and has ever since withheld the possession thereof, to his damage of five hundred dollars.

The complaint also alleges that the value of the rents and profits of the premises from the entry of the defendant has been $800; and it prays judgment for the possession of the premises, for the damages sustained, and for the rents and profits lost.

[394] To the complaint the defendant put in an answer, admitting that on the 20th of November, 1877, the plaintiff filed in the United States Land Office his application for a patent of the placer mining claim, described as mineral lot No. 53; that it includes the premises in controversy; and that, on the 31st of January, 1878, the plaintiff paid to the receiver of the Land Office the price of the land per acre, and received from the register and the receiver a certificate or receipt therefor, which payment and receipt are commonly called an entry.

The answer also contains two special pleas, by way of counterclaim, upon which affirmative relief is asked; namely, that the plaintiff be decreed to be a trustee of the premises for the defendant, and be directed to convey them, or an interest in them, to him, or to allow to him compensation for improvements thereon. In the first of these, it sets up various matters as grounds to charge the plaintiff, as trustee of the premises, for the defendant. In the second special plea, it alleges improvements made upon the premises, either by the defendant or his grantor, as a ground for con der the statute of the Territory.

In the first special plea the ans stantially as follows: That on th
ruary, 1877, the day on which t
Sioux Indians was ratified, by w in Lawrence County were first tlement and occupation, the la mineral lot No. 53, together
amount of other land in its imm
was appropriated, set apart, an town-site purposes; and, as such
and laid out into lots, blocks,
leys, for municipal purposes a
was then, and has ever since be called the town of Deadwood;
then contained a population of t
habitants, and about five hun
used as residences or for busines
agriculture; that the town was ever since been, the center of t
ness west of the Missouri River i of Dakota, and, at the commen
action, contained a population
thousand inhabitants, and buil
provements of the value of abo
dollars; that the land in contro
of the lots originally laid out an town-site purposes, and has alw
occupied by the defendant or hi
the buildings and improvemen
the purpose of business and trad
agriculture; that the placer mi
which the plaintiff filed his ap patent, as alleged in the compla
cated or claimed by him or an until after the selection, settlem
appropriation of that and adja
town-site purposes; and that,
July, 1878, the town of Deadwo
corporated, the probate judge
County entered, at the local l
said town site, paid the governm
for, and received from its office
the money and a certificate sho
and purchase by him in trust fo
benefit of the occupants, includi
ant; and that such town site em
covered by the plaintiff's patent

The answer further alleges,
that thereafter, on the 10th of A Commissioner of the General
Washington ordered a hearing
office in Deadwood, between th
the probate judge, as trustee fo
of the town site, as to the chara
for mineral purposes; at which not disputed that the defendant
cupants of town lots in Dead
prior appropriators of the land;
missioner refused to allow the
any other fact than the miner
the land, holding, as a propositi
cisive of and controlling the cas
of the parties, that the only q
that could be considered was non-mineral character of the la fact of the prior occupation and
of the land for town-site purpo
fer any rights upon the occu
register and the receiver followe
tions and decided the controve
the ground of the mineral ch

pon appeal to the l Land Office, and the Interior, was the Commissioner
the land, with the e plaintiff, and re-
any interest there-
e, or to the defend-
of the judge, and tent mentioned in
l to the plaintiff;
ists that the patent
xception or reservaation all town prop-
lings, lots, blocks,
r improvements on
he plaintiff, and all
to the occupation,
of the same; that
sioner and the Sec-
erty to the plaintiff,
or protect the prior
l other occupants of law, and an errone-
nd that, therefore,
his patent, holds the e buildings and im-
st for the defendant,
nveyed to him, he portion of the legal
patent.
a the answer sets up February, 1877, one
one of the occupants
e peaceable and law-
ises in controversy,
improvements there-ne until his convey-remained in the con-
f, using the same as
l trade, claiming title
inst all persons, ex-
d claiming the right
e United States as a
e said Beaman sold
s to the defendant,
ood faith, and before
y title thereto made thereon of the value s, and that the value
the improvements
dred dollars.
with a prayer that the
his suit, and be deendant the premises
and reserving to him-extract the precious
ded, in so doing, he
, endanger, or inter-
and improvements
use and enjoyment
nt; and that, in the
ined that the plaintiff
ed to the possession of alue of the improveally found, and the
t for the same; and her relief as may be

pleas of the answer
general demurrer, on state facts sufficient
to the action nor a counterclaim in the defendant's favor against him, which was sustained, with leave to the defendant to file an amended answer. The defendant refused to amend and elected to stand on his pleadings. Judgment was therefore entered for the plaintiff. On appeal to the Supreme Court of the Territory, the judgment was affirmed, and the case is brought to this court on appeal.

Mr. G. C. Moody, for appellant.

Mr. Adoniram J. Plowman, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court. [400]

The principal question presented by the pleadings for our consideration is, whether, upon the public domain, title to mineral land can be acquired under the laws of Congress relating to town sites. The plaintiff asserts title to mineral land under a patent of the United States founded upon an entry by him under the laws of Congress for the sale of mineral lands. The defendant, not having the legal title, claims a better right to the premises by virtue of a previous occupation of them by his grantor as a lot on a portion of the public lands appropriated and used as a town site, that is, settled upon for purposes of trade and business, and not for agriculture, and laid out into streets, lots, blocks, and alleys for that purpose.

In several Acts of Congress relating to the public lands of the United States, passed before July, 1866, lands which contained minerals were reserved from sale or other disposition. Thus, the Preemption Act of 1841 excepts from preemption and sale "lands on which are situated any known salines or mines" (5 Stat. at L. 453, chap. 16, sec. 10); and the Act of 1862, extending to California the privilege of settlement on unsurveyed lands, previously authorized in certain States and Territories, contains a clause declaring that the provisions of the Act "shall not be held to authorize preemption and settlement of mineral lands." (12 Stat. at L. 410, chap. 86, sec. 7.) Similar exceptions were made in grants to different States, and in grants to aid in the construction of railroads. Thus, in the grant to California of ten sections of land, for the purpose of erecting the public buildings of that State, there is a proviso "that none of said selections shall be made of mineral lands." (10 Stat. at L. chap. 145, sec. 13.) And in the grants to the Union Pacific Railroad, and its associated companies, to aid in the building of the trans-continental railroad and branches, there is a proviso declaring that all mineral lands, other than of coal and iron, shall be excepted from them. (12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120, sec. 3; 13 Stat. at L. 358, chap. 216, sec. 4.) A similar exception is made in grants for universities and schools; and, in the law allowing homesteads to be selected, it is enacted that mineral lands shall not be liable to entry and settlement for that purpose. [401]

By the Act of July 26, 1866, this policy of reserving mineral lands from sale or grant was changed. That Act declared that the mineral lands of the public domain were free and open to exploration and occupation by all citizens of the United States, and persons who had declared their intention to become citizens, subject to such regulations as might be prescribed by law, and to the local customs or rules of miners in mining districts, so far as they were not in conflict with the laws of the United States. (14 Stat. at L. chap. 262, sec. 1.) It then provided for acquiring by patent the title to "veins or lodes of quartz or other rock in place, bearing gold, silver, cinnabar or copper." On the 9th of July, 1870, this Act was amended so as to make placer claims, including all forms of deposit, "excepting veins of quartz or other rock in place," subject to entry and patent, under like circumstances and conditions, and upon similar proceedings, as those provided for vein or lode claims. (16 Stat. at L. 217, chap. 235, sec. 12.) The Act of May 10, 1872, to promote the development of the mining resources of the United States, repealed several sections of the Act of 1866, and, among others, the first [402] section, but enacted in place of it a provision declaring that "all valuable mineral deposits" in lands belonging to the United States, both surveyed and unsurveyed, were "free and open to exploration and purchase, and the lands in which they are found to occupation and purchase," subject to the conditions named in the original Act. (17 Stat. at L. 91, chap. 152, sec. 1.) Other sections pointed out with particularity the procedure to obtain the title to veins, lodes and placer claims, and defined the extent of each claim to which title might be thus acquired. By the Act of February 18, 1873, mineral lands in the States of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota were excepted from the Act of May 10, 1872, and those lands were declared to be free and open to exploration and purchase, according to legal subdivisions, in like manner as before. (17 Stat. at L. 465, chap. 159.) The provisions of the Act of 1872, with the exceptions made by the Act of 1873, were carried into the Revised Statutes, which declare the statute law of the United States upon the subjects to which they relate, as it existed on the 1st of December, 1873. (Sec. 2345.) All other provisions contained in the Acts, of which any portion is embraced in this revision, are in express language repealed. (Sec. 5596.) No reference, therefore, can be had to the original statutes to control the construction of any section of the Revised Statutes, when its meaning is plain, although in the original statutes it may have had a larger or more limited application than that given to it in the revision. United States v. Bowen, 100 U. S. 508, 513 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 631, 632].

Turning to that portion of these statutes treating of mineral lands and mining resources, which is contained in chapter 6 of title 32, we find that its first section declares that "in all cases lands valuable for minerals shall be reserved from sale, except as otherwise expressly directed by law." (Sec. 2318.) Title, therefore, to land known at the time to be valuable for its minerals could only have been acquired after December 1, 1873, under provisions specially authorizing their sale, as found in these statutes, except in the States of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and after May 5, 1876, in the States of Missouri and Kansas. By the Act of Congress of this latter date "de- [403] posits of coal, iron, lead or other mineral," in Missouri and Kansas were excluded from the operation of the Act of May 10, 1872, that is, from such provisions of that Act as were re-enacted in the Revised Statutes. (1 52, chap. 91.) In those portions of Statutes which relate to preemp homestead entries the clauses from Acts excepting mineral lands a (Secs. 2258 and 2302.)

If now we turn to the laws rela sites on the public lands, and the p
thorizing the sale of lands under th
entry of town sites for the benefi
cupants, as contained in the Revi
we shall find a similar exception
entry under them of mineral lands.
the Revised Statutes contains the public lands. Chapter 8 of that t
the reservation and sale of town public lands. It contains provision the President to reserve from the town sites on the shores of harbors
tion of rivers, important portages
ural or prospective centers of popu
clares when the survey of such rese
lots may be made and the sale of
it prescribes with particularity th
whic', parties who have founded,
desire to found, a city or town
lands may proceed, and the title to be acquired. It also provides for the proper land office, of portions lands occupied as a town site, suc
made by its corporate authoriti
town be unincorporated, by the county court of the county in wh
is situated, the entry to be in tru
and benefit of the occupants, acco respective interests. The chapter many other clauses respecting to
with provisions against the acqui
to mineral land under them. In declares that "where mineral v
sessed, which possession is recogn
authority, and to the extent so recognized, the title to town lots t
shall be subject to such recognize and the necessary use thereof," w
tion, also, that nothing in the se construed to recognize any color sessors for mining purposes as United States. (Sec. 2386.) In an near the conclusion of the chapter
all the provisions affecting the qu
us, it declares that "no title shal
under the foregoing provisions o
to any mine of gold, silver, cinnab
or to any valid mining claim or p
under existing laws." (Sec. 2392

It is plain, from this brief sta
legislation of Congress, that no ti
United States to land known at th
to be valuable for its minerals o
cinnabar or copper can be obtain preemption or homestead laws or laws, or in any other way than
by the laws specially authorizin
such lands, except in the States
Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri
We say "land known at the time
for its minerals," as there are v
public land in which minerals kinds are found, but not in such justify expenditures in the effort to
It is not to such lands that the term
the sense of the statute is applic

t of 1866 no designation is r of mineral lands which exploration. But in the repealed that section and ader import, it is "valua-
which are declared to be ploration and purchase.
ried into the Revised Stat-ted that "lands valuable
be reserved from sale, ex-ressly directed, and that eposits" in lands belong-
tes shall be free and open purchase. We also say me of their sale to be thus avoid any possible conclu-ity of titles which may be
s of land, in which years
sits of mineral may be dis-
possible that lands settled
for agricultural purposes,
and patented by the gov
reemption laws, may be patent has been issued, to nerals. Indeed, this has
e, therefore, use the term
le at the time of sale, to being cast upon titles to nd to be different in their rom what was supposed em was made and the pa-

e there is no dispute as to r of the land claimed by pon the alleged prior occu-
and business, the same be-nent or town site of Dead-
dant relies as giving him property. But the title to United States, its occupa-iness did not and could not
it, the same being mineral eedings for the acquisition
he laws providing for the character. And those pro-
far as to vest in the plainitle, before any steps were te judge of the county to t the local land office. The d the answer admits, that ber, 1877, the plaintiff aptates Land Office at Dead-
l as a placer mining claim,
t of January, 1878, he did paying the government
adverse claim was ever
r and receiver of the local entry was never canceled
he officers of the Land De-ngton. The right of the re, passed to him; and
is, its patent, was not isnuary 31, 1882, the certifiich was given to him upon
r as the acquisition of title
was concerned, equivalent not until the 28th of July robate judge entered the l had then ceased to be the government. It was no
it held the legal title only r of the certificate. With-
Wall. 218 [71 U. S. bk. 18,

L. ed. 342]. When the patent was subsequently issued, it related back to the inception of the right of the patentee.

[406] The position that the patent to the plaintiff should have contained a reservation excluding from its operation all buildings and improvements not belonging to him, and all rights necessary or proper to the possession and enjoyment of the same, has no support in any legislation of Congress. The land officers, who are merely agents of the law, had no authority to insert in the patent any other terms than those of conveyance, with recitals showing a compliance with the law and the conditions which it prescribed. The patent of a placer mining claim carries with it the title to the surface included within the lines of the mining location, as well as to the land beneath the surface. The Act of Congress of May 10, 1872, contemplates the purchase of the land on which valuable mineral deposits are found; and its provisions in this respect are retained in the Revised Statutes, section 2319.

Whilst we hold that a title to known valuable mineral land cannot be acquired under the the town-site laws, and, therefore, could not be acquired to the land in controversy under the entry of the town site of Deadwood by the probate judge of the county in which that town is situated, we do not wish to be understood as expressing any opinion against the validity of the entry, so far as it affected property other than mineral lands, if there were any such at the time of the entry. The Acts of Congress relating to town sites recognize the possession of mining claims within their limits; and in Steel v. Smelting Company, 106 U. S. 449 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 227], we said that "land embraced within a town site on the public domain, when unoccupied, is not exempt from location and sale for mining purposes; its exemption is only from settlement and sale under the preemption laws of the United States. Some of the most valuable mines in the country are within the limits of incorporated cities, which have grown up on what was, at its first settlement, part of the public domain; and many of such mines were located and patented after a regular municipal government had been established. Such is the case with some of the famous mines of Virginia City, in Nevada. Indeed, the discovery of a rich mine in any quarter is usually followed by a large settlement in its immediate neighbor-[407] hood, and the consequent organization of some form of local government for the protection of its members." It would seem, therefore, that the entry of a town site, even though within its limits mineral lands are found, would be as important to the occupants of other lands as if no mineral lands existed. Nor do we see any injury resulting therefrom, nor any departure from the policy of the government, the entry and the patent being inoperative as to all lands known at the time to be valuable for their minerals, or discovered to be such before their occupation or improvement for residences or business under the town site title.

The claim of the defendant, under the second special plea, to allowance for improvements made upon the property, is as untenable as his claim to the title. It is asserted under a statute of the Territory, which provides that "in an action for the recovery of real property, upon which permanent improvements have been made by a defendant, or those under whom he claims, holding under color of title, adversely to the claim of the plaintiff, in good faith, the value of such improvements must be allowed as a counterclaim by such defendant." The case presented by the defendant is not covered by the provisions of this law. There can be no color of title in an occupant who does not hold under any instrument, proceeding, or law, purporting to transfer to him the title or to give to him the right of possession. And there can be no such thing as good faith in an adverse holding, where the party knows that he has no title, and that, under the law, which he is presumed to know, he can acquire none by his occupation. Here the defendant knew that the title was in the United States, that the lands were mineral, and were claimed as such by the plaintiff, and that title to them could be acquired only under the laws providing for the sale of lands of that character; and there is no pretence that he ever sought, or contemplated seeking the title to them as such lands, or claimed possession of them under any local customs or rules of miners in the district.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—115 U. S. 411, 412, 413; 117 U. S. 169.

---

[408] PHILANDER E. SPARKS ET AL., Appts.,

v.

MOSES PIERCE ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 408-413.)

Public lands—occupancy and improvement of, give no vested rights—relief in equity against patent—what must appear—compensation for improvements.

*1. Mere occupancy of the public lands and making improvements thereon give no vested right therein as against the United States or any purchaser from them.

2. To entitle a party to relief in equity against a patent of the government he must show a better right to the land than the patentee, such as in law should have been respected by the officers of the Land Department, and being respected would have given him the patent. It is not sufficient to show that the patentee ought not to have received the patent.

3. A person who makes improvements upon public land, knowing that he has no title, and that the land is open to exploration and sale for its minerals, and makes no effort to secure the title to it as such, under the laws of Congress, or a right of possession under the local customs and rules of miners, has no claim to compensation for his improvements as an adverse holder in good faith, when such sale is made to another and the title is passed to him by a patent of the United States.

[No. 563.]

Submitted Oct. 14, 1885. Decided Nov. 16, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Dakota.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Field:

[408] This is an action to recover a parcel of mining ground, situated in Lawrence County, in the Territory of Dakota, and claimed by the plaintiffs under a patent of the United States, bearing date March 22, 1880, and issued to them upon an entry made November 30, 1877. The complaint alleges that, on the 11t ber, 1878, the plaintiffs were the c and possessed of the demanded riving their title under the said United States, founded upon the tioned; that afterwards, on the 12t cember, while they were thus sei sessed of the premises, the defend right or title, entered upon them plaintiffs therefrom and have ever fully withheld them, to the damage tiffs of $500. It also alleges that the rents and profits of the premi entry of the defendants have been month; and it prays judgment for t of the premises, for the damages s for the rents and profits lost.

The answer of the defendants ally the several allegations of th except as stated therein, and ther cially, by way of counterclaim, va which they contend constitute in defense to the action and entitle t tion, at least, of the demanded pr compensation for their improvem

The matters set forth as grounds relief are alleged upon informatio and are substantially these:

That on the 28th of February, 1 in controversy, with other land ad to, was appropriated and occupied and for town-site purposes, and laid out into lots, blocks, streets ar designated as Central City, having about one hundred inhabitants; th ber increased until, on March 22, of the plaintiffs' patent, the place b portant one, containing about tw inhabitants;

That on the said 28th of Februa grantor of the defendants was in occupation and possession of the troversy as a lot in said Central C on the 12th of December, 1878, he s lot with the improvements there uable consideration;

That after the said 28th of Fe the plaintiffs, without legal right, c ground within the town site, incl controversy, to be surveyed for a p claim, and an application for a upon that survey to be filed in the land office at Deadwood, in the Co rence;

That, within the time required inhabitants of the town, including of the defendants, filed a protest office against the issuing of the p the protest upon the ground, a things, that the land was subject rights of the town-site occupants, mineral; but that, notwithstanding the local land officers, on the 30t ber, 1877, received from the plaint of the land as a placer claim, prescribed by law, and allowed of the same; that, subsequently, o April, 1877, the Commissioner of Land Office reviewed the proceedi rected that a patent issue to the the mining claim, but with a rese the grant of all town property, rig surface, and all lots, blocks, street

*Head notes by Mr. Justice FIELD.

and improvements
e plaintiffs, and all
upation and enjoy-
bsequently, on the Commissioner sus-
ered that a hearing
f the local land of-
when the land was
, the nature and ex-
d the improvements
nd was mineral or
; that such hearing
of November, 1878;
their testimony to
he 20th of January,
, that the land was
d been appropriated
r to any appropria-
hat the land should
ts of the town site,
subject to the right
nd extract the gold
they did not mate-
ossession, buildings
own occupants, int the occupants and
h this decision, and om, but, on the con-
ved; that, notwith-
October, 1879, the decision of the local
the town-site claiming the defendants,
land, upon the sole
, and, therefore, not
cept under the Min-
cordingly dismissed
hat the patent be is-ut any exception or t the possession and dants, and that the
ed to the plaintiffs;
sist that it should
n excepting there-
hts, and all houses,
blocks, streets and
ents on said land,
tiffs, and all rights
ccupation, and pos-
the same; that its ion, was contrary to
efore, hold the land
he defendants; and
them, they offering
of the expenses of

the defendants as
for improvements
hat they were made
he at the time occu-
d faith against all tates, and they hav-
of him for a valua-
since then occupied
in like good faith
The answer alleges
st of two buildings,
he value of the land
d dollars.
swers the plaintiffs
hat it did not state
te a defense to the defendants' favor

against them. The demurrers were sustained by the court, and the defendants declining to plead further, and electing to stand upon their special answers, the plaintiffs had judgment for the possession of the premises. On appeal to the Supreme Court of the Territory the judgment was affirmed. To review that judgment the case is brought here on appeal.

Mr. G. C. Moody, for appellants.

Messrs. Van Cise & Wilson and J. W. Smith, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Field, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court, as follows: [411]

This case, as seen by the pleadings stated, is in its main features similar to that of Deffeback v. Hawke, just decided [ante, 428]. The plaintiffs here, as in that case, rely upon a patent of the United States for the land in controversy, issued under the laws for the sale of mineral lands. It is admitted that the land was mineral [412] in its character, and the patent itself is evidence that all the requirements of the law for its sale were complied with. The defendants, as in that case, set up as ground for equitable relief against the enforcement of the rights of the plaintiffs under the patent, that their grantor occupied the land as a lot in a town site—here the town site being that of Central City; there that of Deadwood City—and made improvements thereon before the plaintiffs claimed it as mining ground, or took proceedings to procure its title; and that he sold the lot to them, with its improvements, for a valuable consideration. They, therefore, as the defendant did in the other case, deny the right of the plaintiffs to acquire the premises as a mining claim on the town site; but they also contend that if the plaintiffs had that right, the patent issued to them should have contained reservations excluding from its operation the buildings and improvements of the defendants, and whatever was necessary for their use and enjoyment. They also contend, that if this defense be not sustained, they should be allowed compensation for their improvements on the premises.

The case differs, however, in one important particular from that of Deffeback v. Hawke. There an entry had been made of the town site in the land office of the United States, by the probate judge of the county, for the benefit of the occupants of the town. The entry, it is true, was afterwards canceled by the Secretary of the Interior, so far as the premises in controversy in that case were concerned. The proceedings showed, however, a desire on the part of the occupants to secure the title of the United States, and not to rest upon their naked possession. Here it does not appear that any effort had been made, either by the authorities of the town, or by the probate judge of the county, or by anyone else on behalf of the occupants of the town, or by the defendants or their grantor, to acquire the legal title. The case presented, therefore, is that of occupants of the public lands without title, and without any attempt having been made by them, or by anyone representing them, to secure that title, resisting the enforcement of the patent of the United States, on the ground of such occu- [413] pation. Mere occupancy of the public lands and improvements thereon give no vested right therein as against the United States, and consequently not against any purchaser from them.

To entitle a party to relief against a patent of the government, he must show a better right to the land than the patentee, such as in law should have been respected by the officers of the Land Department, and being respected would have given him the patent. It is not sufficient to show that the patentee ought not to have received the patent. It must affirmatively appear that the claimant was entitled to it, and that, in consequence of erroneous rulings of those officers on the facts existing, it was denied to him. Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 51 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 61].

The question as to the allowance for improvements is disposed of by the decision in Deffeback v. Hawke. A person who makes improvements upon public land, knowing that he has no title, and that the land is open to exploration and sale for its minerals, and makes no effort to secure the title to it as such land under the laws of Congress, or a right of possession under the local customs and rules of miners, has no claim to compensation for his improvements as an adverse holder in good faith when such sale is made to another and the title is passed to him by a patent of the United States.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—116 U. S. 50.

---

[384] MERCHANTS EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, Appt.,

v.

BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTY OF BERGEN.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 384–392.)

Municipal bonds—special power to issue—exercise of—overissue—estoppel—genuineness of official signatures.

1. Purchasers of securities of municipalities having only a special power to issue them for a particular purpose must see that the conditions prescribed for the exercise of the power existed.

2. In the absence of recitals showing compliance with the provisions of the statutory authority, the obligor is not estopped from denying the fact of such compliance.

3. Purchasers of municipal securities must take the risk of the genuineness of official signatures.

[No. 31.]

Argued October 27 and 28, 1885. Decided November 16, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

[384] Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Field:

This is a suit in equity to compel the Merchants Exchange National Bank of the City of New York, one of the defendants below, and the appellant here, to surrender to the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Bergen, New Jersey, 102 bonds of $500 each, drawn in the form of, and purporting to be, negotiable obligations of the Board, on the ground that they were never issued by its authority. The suit was brought, not only ag

which held the bonds, but a sheriff of the City and County
who had previously levied an a
them in an action brought by th Benjamin C. Bogert, upon his edness to it of $51,000.

The sheriff, having no inter
troversy between the Board a no contest and did not appear i decree was, therefore, only ag

The facts of the case are bri
complainant below, the Board holders of Bergen County, is a poration having general charg of that county. It is composed resentatives, one from each to county. Its officers are a direc
elected by the Board, the form
its own members. It also ele collector, who acts as treasurer
but is not a member or an offic
It is his duty to collect the r
county and to pay its expenses

During the late civil war, bo
by the Board of Chosen Freeho County for money to enable it to its quota of men under the di
troops by the government. Th
about to mature when the Legisl passed on the 5th of April, 1876
boards of chosen freeholders
counties of the State to renew b
issued by them for any loan ma
der authority of law, which shou
come due, and for which no pro
made for their payment. The A
the new bonds should be made thirty years from date, and be so
and one third per cent thereof
due and payable each year; th
draw interest not exceeding should bear the seal of the signed by the director of the clerk, and countersigned by t
the county, and have coupons
one for the semi-annual intere
when the Board might judge it might be registered and be to the order of the purchaser a out coupons. The Act declare issued under it should be nu
register of the number, denom issuing and name of person to
if registered, and time of payn
made by the collector in a book
by the Board for that purpose.

On the 10th of May, 1876, th
gen County passed a resoluti
its finance committee to reissu
in place of those becoming du that year. Blanks for 800 bond with coupons attached, were pared by order of the committe
three books, with a margin or st
The first book contained the bl
250; the second from 251 to 50
from 501 to 800, and these stamped on the backs of the bo
The name of the payee and t turity were left unfilled in the books were delivered to Benj
who was at the time collector

then director of the
ygant its clerk.
g the months of July
ree books were pro-
room of the finance
use at Hackensack,
n County, and there were signed by Van-
d by Wygant, the
e request of Bogert,
course was advisa-
might be injured or sued, he agreeing to anks. The director
to have implicit con-Bogert, and it does
s any hesitation on his suggestion. The
this condition were
had neither the seal nature. These were s were issued. The county at the time
which sum $14,000
eet the balance, 696
vith the exception of
ed for the old bonds.
roceeds applied tow-lance. A register of prepared, as required
ated statement of the nom issued, with its ity, and was kept by en to inspection by ne hundred and four of Bogert. Two of place of others de-

the remaining one
one were required or
was their use ever
its Board of Chosen
h of July, 1876, Bo-them to the Mer-
s security for a loan
for thirty thousand
amount were made
May 9, 1878, it was dollars. Soon after-usand dollars more
d all the bonds were
our. Previously to
of March, 1876, Boe same Bank forty
n as collateral two
be temporary loan
nty, each for twenty tes of this character
been authorized by ers to raise money
ction of taxes. The pledged to the Bank
nt papers, never have Board. In May,
as collector of the ook his office. After ptember following,
s were consolidated
ve a new note for ook up the fictitious eir place deposited
al, seventy-eight of these county bonds. Thus the Bank held one hundred and two of them.

Bogert died January 8, 1880, and soon afterwards the issue of these one hundred and two bonds, and their possession by the Bank, were discovered, and the present suit was brought to compel their surrender. The court below held the bonds void, and decreed that they be delivered up to the complainants. From this decree an appeal is taken to this court.

Messrs. Stephen P. Nash, E. L. Fancher and Alfred J. Taylor, for appellant:

Where bonds are issued by the proper officials, and import a compliance with the law, a purchaser is not bound to look further.

Commissioners v. Aspinwall, 21 How. 539 (62 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 268); Town v. Davenport, 94 U. S. 801 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 322). See also Brooklyn v. Ins. Co. 99 U. S. 362 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 416); Hoff v. Jasper Co. 110 U. S. 53 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 68).

A recital in a bond may furnish the basis for an estoppel, but it is not essential to an estoppel.

Hackett v. Ottawa, 99 U. S. 86 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 363); Bigelow, Estoppel, 466, 467; County of Henry v. Nicolay, 95 U. S. 619 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 394); Northern Bank v. Porter, 110 U. S. 608 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 258); Dixon Co. v. Field, 111 U. S. 83 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 360).

When one of two innocent persons is to suffer from the wrong or negligence of a third, it shall be the one who enabled the wrongdoer to commit the wrong.

Michigan Bank v. Eldred, 9 Wall. 544 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 763); Dair v. U. S. 16 Wall. 1 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 491).

It is not competent to show fraud or irregularity in the issuance of bonds as against a bona fide holder.

Co. of Macon v. Shores, 97 U. S. 272 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 889); Cromwell v. Co. of Sac, 96 U. S. 51 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 681).

Messrs. Hamilton Wallis and J. D. Bedle, for appellee:

The bonds having been issued without lawful authority, there can be no such thing as a bona fide holder.

Mayor v. Ray, 19 Wall. 478 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 169); Co. of Bates v. Winters, 97 U. S. 91 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 934); Town v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 269 (Bk. 24. L. ed. 158).

The appellant is chargeable with notice of the character of the bonds.

Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 138); McClure v. Township of Oxford, 94 U. S. 432 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 129). See also School District v. Stone, 106 U. S. 184 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 90); School District v. Hall, 113 U. S. 135 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 954).

The county had no general authority to borrow money or to issue bonds or other negotiable instruments.

See the Statutes, Rev. N. J. 127, etc. See also, Mayor v. Ray, 19 Wall. 469 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 164); Hackettstown v. Swackhamer, 37 N. J. L. 191.

Mr. Justice Field, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court: [390]

There was evidence at the hearing, of a very persuasive character, that the seventy-eight bonds deposited with the Bank on the 28th of

September, 1878, when the two loans of Bogert were consolidated, were not signed by him, and that the seal of the county was not attached until after he had ceased to be collector. Our judgment leads to that conclusion. If this be the fact, they fall within the rule in Anthony v. County of Jasper, 101 U. S. 699 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 1008], where the court said that "purchasers of municipal securities must always take the risk of the genuineness of the official signature of those who execute the paper they buy. This includes not only the genuineness of the signature itself, but the official character of him who makes it." But, in the view we take of this case, it is not material whether the bonds were signed before or after Bogert had ceased to be collector. The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county never directed nor permitted their issue. The law under which it derived all its powers provided only for the issue of bonds to meet the indebtedness from those then about to mature. All such maturing bonds had been surrendered for the new bonds, except for a small amount, which was paid in cash. The power of the Board under the law was then exhausted. Any further issue was beyond its authority. Unless, therefore, there is something in connection with their issue to estop the Board from contesting their validity, they can in no manner bind the county. This is not a case where there existed in the Board a general power to issue negotiable securities of the [391] county, so that parties would be justified in taking them when properly executed in form by its officers. It is a case where there was no power, except as specially delegated by law for a particular purpose. All persons taking securities of municipalities having only such special power must see to it that the conditions prescribed for the exercise of the power existed. As an essential preliminary to protection as a bona fide holder, authority to issue them must appear. If such authority did not exist, the doctrine of protection to a bona fide purchaser has no application. This is the rule even with commercial paper purporting to be issued under a delegated authority. The delegation must be first established before the doctrine can come in for consideration. See case of The Floyd Acceptances, 7 Wall. 676 [74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 178]; Marsh v. Fulton, 10 Wall. 676 [77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 1040]; Mayor v. Ray, 19 Wall. 469 [86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 164].

There is a class of cases where recitals in obligations are held to supply such proof of compliance with the special authority delegated as to preclude the taking of any testimony on the subject, and estop the obligor from denying the fact. These have generally arisen upon municipal bonds, authorized by statute, upon the vote of the majority of the citizens of a particular city, county, or town, and in which certain persons or officers are designated to ascertain and certify as to the result. If, in such cases, the bonds refer to the statute, and recite a compliance with its provisions, and have passed for a valuable consideration into the hands of a bona fide purchaser, without notice of any defect in the proceedings, the municipality has been held to be estopped from denying the truth of the recitals. The ground of the estopped is, that the officers issuing the bonds and inserting the recitals are agents of the municipality, empowered whether the statute has been follo bind the municipality by their d See, of the late cases on this po Bank of Toledo v. Porter Townshi U. S. 608 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 258] and v. Field, 111 U. S. 83 [Bk. 28, L.

In the bonds of Bergen County recitals. The Bank in taking the to ascertain whether or not they ized. Had it examined the registe issued to take up the matured was a public record of the county inspection, it would have learned which it received were not of the authorized. Content to rely upo ported representations of Bogert, cast upon the county the conseq own mistake. Buchanan v. Lit S. 278 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 138].

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Su

Cited—117 U. S. 665.

KNICKERBOCKER LIFE I COMPANY, Piff. in v. P. H. PENDLETON

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 8

Evidence—presumption as to the p their duties by officers of a bank usage—competency—mistake in

1. It will be presumed, at least aft considerable time, that the officers performed their duties in accordi custom and course of business of th

2. Evidence of the custom and us is competent for the purpose of corroborating the conviction and cashier that a draft was duly pres ment.

[No. 4.]

Argued November 11, 1884. Dec 5, 1885. Rule to show cause 6, 1885. Judgment rescinded granted May 4, 1885. Reargue 1885. Decided November 16, 1

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court States for the Western District

The history and facts of the c the opinion of the court and in the first hearing, Bk. 28, L.ed. 86 also be found a report of the counsel and the orders of this cou the mistake in the writ of erro

Messrs. J. A. Dennison and Russell, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. L. W. Humes, W. and D. H. Poston, for defenda

Mr. Justice Bradley deliver of the court:

The judgment rendered in thi 5th of January last—see opinion, [Bk. 28, L. ed. 866]—was set as day of the last term and the cause

nent at the present term.
s brought by several joint
l children of Samuel H.
gainst the Knickerbocker
ny, on a policy of insur-
Samuel, taken out by him
d children; and judgment
laintiffs, some of whom come of age. The writ was brought to reverse
udgment of reversal was
of January last. It was ed by the court (a fact of the counsel) that the
d out, and the citation
ed, against only one of wit: P. H. Pendleton.
al bond for costs was also
ton alone; but the bond equently executed, was ffs by name, and the sub-
er generally entitled in Pendleton & als. This
efect in the writ of error,
laintiff in error to show
ent previously rendered
and the writ of error
deration of the special ase, we allowed the writ
new citation to be issued elow, set aside our pre-directed the cause to be
for reargument.
been reargued, all the
ed. We do not find ocnder a different decision
e. The only question
d it necessary to consider ore fully discussed by
, whether the evidence resentment of the draft
ent was sufficient to be The defendants in er-ontend that it was not.
that the draft was dated
s payable three months
ce, and contained a con-
at maturity the policy
We held that if the In-bed to avail itself of this
sent the draft for pay-
ut that protest for nonssary.
took place nearly ten
tions referred to, it was
e weeks before the ma-
was sent from Memphis
nters' Bank to the Louisi-
New Orleans, to be prewith directions not to the latter bank did so es, Moses Greenwood &
not accepted by them;
ed to the Memphis Bank,
f October, again sent it nk for demand of pay-
ier of the latter bank, rrogatories. After stat-
o the presentment of the nd the usage and custom
d to the presentment of ptance and payment, he n: "From your examination of the endorsements upon the draft" (which was exhibited to him), "in connection with your knowledge of the course of business of the Louisiana National Bank, as stated by you, would you say whether or no said paper has been presented for acceptance and payment as other commercial paper sent to you for collection through your corresponding banks?" To which he answered: "Yes, it was presented for acceptance and for payment, as in all similar cases [of] paper sent to us for collection, which is the custom on the part of the Louisiana National Bank in giving prompt attention to all business intrusted to its care." [342]

It was not pretended that the draft was paid.

The witness being asked, on cross examination, if he knew, of his own knowledge, that said draft was presented for either acceptance or payment, answered: "Yes, for both, from the fact that the rules of the bank make it necessary, in the ordinary course of business, to present both for acceptance and payment." Being asked if he presented the bill in person, or was present, he said: "No, for the reason that, as cashier of the bank, it is not my duty to present drafts either for acceptance or payment." He also stated that it was the custom of the bank to give notice to drawees of time drafts of the maturity of the same; and that the drawees in this case, Moses Greenwood & Son, had a regular business office in the city of New Orleans. Luria further testified that the bill was entered on the books of the bank as maturing on the 14th–17th October, 1871, the three days of grace being added according to the laws of Louisiana. It further appeared that on both occasions, when the bill was sent to the Louisiana bank for presentment, and when it was sent for payment, it was with instructions not to have it protested, which accounts for the fact of there having been no regular protest of the draft. Two letters of Moses Greenwood & Son to S. H. Pendleton were produced in evidence, one dated September 29, 1871, and the other November 4, 1871. In the first they say: "Your draft for life policy (some $330) due 14th of next month, was presented this day for acceptance. Not finding any advice of it, we requested them to hold till we got an answer from you. Please write at once if you want it paid." By the letter of November 4th, they say: "Yours of 27th ult. received. Will pay that insurance note when presented, as you request. This is the first advice we have had about it." [343] This does not show that the draft had not been already presented for payment. The letters, taken together, show that Moses Greenwood & Son were not prepared to accept or pay the draft until they received Pendleton's letter of October 27th, long after the draft became due. It seems very probable from the evidence that, as well when the draft was presented for payment (if it was so presented) as when it was presented for acceptance, the drawees requested the bank to hold it until they could get instructions from the drawer. At all events, the Louisiana bank kept the draft until November 17, 1871, and then returned it to the Union and Planters' Bank of Memphis. Luria, being asked, "Why did your bank hold this paper, which matured on the 17th of October, 1871, until the 17th of November, 1871, before reforming it to the Union and Planters Bank, Memphis?" answered, "I cannot say positively for what reason, not having the correspondence before me; my impression, however, is that, protest being waived and the demand for its payment having been made, it is quite likely that M. Greenwood & Co. may have requested it held until they could receive advice from the parties; however, it was retained, with the expectation of collecting, until the 17th of November, 1871, when it was returned by instructions of the Union and Planters Bank of Memphis, in their letter dated November 14, 1871."

[344]

Santana, the runner of the Louisiana bank, whose duty it was to present notes and drafts, was also examined on interrogatories. Being asked to state all that he knew about the draft in question (which was exhibited to him), he answered that he had it for the purpose of presenting it for acceptance, which was refused, as per pencil memorandum on the back of it in his handwriting, namely: "No advice—refused acc't." He was not asked by either party whether he presented the draft for payment.

Greene, one of the defendants' agents at Memphis, testified that, on or about the 3d day of October, 1871, they (the said agents) wrote to Pendleton, by mail, of the nonacceptance of the draft, and on or about the 20th of November they again wrote to him of the nonpayment of it; and that, in the latter part of November or early in December, he, Pendleton, called upon said agents in Memphis, and stated that the reason he did not answer their letters was, that he expected soon to come to Memphis, and that he was much surprised that Greenwood & Co. did not pay the draft, but that they were now prepared to pay it, and exhibited their letter to him before referred to.

None of this evidence was objected to except, when the deposition of Luria was offered, the plaintiffs objected to his answers relating to the custom of the Louisiana National Bank in regard to presentment of paper for acceptance and payment, which objection was overruled.

We think that the evidence, taken together, was sufficient to go to the jury on the question, whether the draft was, or was not, presented for payment, or, which is the same thing, whether demand of payment was waived by the payees in order that they might communicate with the drawer. The evidence of the custom and usage of the bank was not objected to when taken, nor when the interrogatories were proposed, and we think it was competent even if it had been objected to. It was competent for the purpose of sustaining and corroborating the conviction and belief of Luria, the cashier, that the draft had been presented for payment. His conviction and belief were undoubtedly based on this custom and usage, and were of value only so far as such custom and usage were invariably maintained and pursued.

A bank is a quasi public institution. Its officers have regular and set duties to perform, directly affecting the financial transactions of the entire public. It is essential to the public interest that these duties should be performed with invariable certainty and exactness. The business community relies upon such performance, and at least after the lapse of a considerable time, it should be presumed that have been performed and business

cordance with the custom and cours of the bank. The degree of exactness
they have been performed by a part is matter of proof, depending upon
and course of business of that bank
ter of consideration for the jury.
proof of such custom and course
cannot dispense with documenta
when such evidence is requisite in l
the act done, or to make it compl
protest and notice of dishonor, wh
necessary; and, in all cases, it is t
of the jury to determine, under all stances of the case, the weight to the evidence. See Rosenthal v. W
S. 193 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 398], and Whittier, 105 Mass. 391, there cited

This kind of presumptions of fa
to the consideration of a jury, is
and frequently recognized in the presumptions are founded upon th
of human conduct in the course
business, under the promptings o
public responsibility. "Under this Mr. Greenleaf, "may be ranked t tions frequently made from the re
of business in a public office. * * *
sent by the post, it is presumed, fro
course in that department of the pu
that it reached its destination at time, and was received by the pers
it was addressed, if living at the usually receiving letters there."
"The like presumption is also dra usual course of men's private offic
ness, where the primary evidence wanting." 1 Greenleaf, Ev. § 40.
of these propositions, the author re
authorities, which seem to be ful
The same general propositions are l
Mr. Taylor, in his treatise on Evi
ing, as he usually does, the langu Greenleaf. He adds the following derived from adjudged cases in E
letters or notices properly directed
man be left with his servant, it is onl
to presume, prima facie, that they hands. MacGregor v. Keily, 3
The fact, too, of sending a letter to
will, in general, be regarded by a sumptively proved, if it be shown handed to, or left with, the clerk w
was, in the ordinary course of busin
letters to the post, and if he can dec
though he has no recollection of th
letter, he invariably took to the p letters that either were delivered to deposited in a certain place for th
referring to Skilbeck v. Garbett, 7
Hetherington v. Kemp, 4 Camp. 1
Ld. Londesborough, 12 Com. B. 252
Thompson, 6 Irish Law R. N. S. 5 1 Taylor, Ev. § 148. We may also case of Dana v. Kemble, 19 Pick. 1
it was held, Chief Justice Shaw de opinion, that where it was the usage deposit all letters left at the bar, in
for that purpose, whence they we quently throughout the day to the different guests to whom they were
will be presumed that a letter add

was received by Central R. R. missible to show
ion and the cus-
giving notice to their changing
ation, to corrobo-
uctor in that re-
by Sutherland,
nce would tend
e principle that is a sort of pub-es a kind of pub-sumption is, that
ies according to
."
ons of this kind,
ments, §§ 1054,
cited.
How. 262 [45 U.
S. v. Ross, 92 U.
relied on by the
that the kind of
e referred cannot
of proving a dis-
which it is ad-

cases impugn the
In Musson v. Lake
ary, that he had
gn bill, was held
ad presented the ayment; and the
c officer, he had
ly this omission.
certificate of pro-
such cases; and have been proved
s no attempt to court deemed the
and insufficient,
that the defect
presumption.
ght to deduce, by sential facts that livered to a treas-
proceeds paid into roof was, and the
of Claims were,
and sent forward
ation in Georgia
and railroad lines
ere certain funds
ave been the prose, this court held cient to establish

ar as some of the sustain the com-
d in the present
f the business of
under which its
the care required
performing their
hin the operation
e and the course
e purpose of rais-
of fact in aid of
e no hesitation in fered was compe-
ny of the cashier.
y, at this time, to
as to the exact

day when the draft matured. If it was the general custom of the New Orleans banks to allow grace upon bills of exchange even when it was waived, as the testimony of Luria would seem to imply, it is possible that such a custom made it the duty of the bank to allow it in this case. We express no opinion on the subject. We are not examining the case upon its whole merits as upon an appeal; but, being satisfied that the direction of the court was wrong as to [348] the necessity of a regular protest for nonpayment, we only examine the further question raised by the defendant in error, as to the insufficiency of the evidence adduced to show a demand of payment, for the purpose of determining as to its admissibility and competency: its weight will be for the consideration of the jury under proper instructions from the court on a future trial.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to award a new trial.

True copy. Test:
J. H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

STATE OF ALABAMA, Plff., [413]
v.
ISAAC F. BURR ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 413–429.)

Pleading—demurrer—sufficiency of declaration—state indorsement of railway bonds—Acts of Legislature of Alabama of February 19, 1867, and February 11, 1870—construction of.

1. Under the Acts of the Legislature of Alabama of February 19, 1867, and February 11, 1870, the State of Alabama indorsed the first mortgage bonds of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company. In an original suit at law in this court by the State against the controlling officers and stockholders of the company, it is held upon demurrer to the declaration: 1. That the liability of the defendants to the State is statutory only, and that there can be no recovery unless the facts stated in the declaration bring them within the operation of the liability clause of one or the other of the statutes. 2. That the defendants are not liable in this action for the alleged fraud in obtaining the indorsement of the State, as it was not brought to enforce the payment of the bonds thus indorsed. 3. That the other allegations of fraud in the declaration fail to show that the losses of the State resulted from such fraud. 4. That the obligation of the company to use the bonds to build and equip its road was satisfied, if the road was actually completed and equipped in accordance with the requirements of the statutes at a bona fide cost to the company of more than the amount of the bonds.

2. Pleadings must state facts, and not conclusions of law.

[No. 4, Orig.]
Argued and submitted Oct. 30, 1885. Decided Nov. 16, 1885.

The case is fully stated by the court.

Messrs. B. F. Brooks, Henry G. Nichols, W. Hallett Phillips, John C. Coombs and Samuel A. Carleton, in person, for defendants, in support of the demurrer.

Messrs: H. C. Tompkins, Samuel F. Rice and E. S. Mansfield, for plaintiff, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opin- [414]
ion of the court:

This is a suit at law brought in this court by the State of Alabama against Isaac T. Burr, Samuel A. Carlton, John DeMerritt, citizens of Massachusetts, John C. Stanton, a citizen of New York, and Daniel N. Stanton, a citizen of New Jersey. The declaration states, in substance, that, under the operation of certain statutes of Alabama, the Governor was authorized and required to indorse, on the part of the State, the first mortgage bonds of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Co., a corporation having power to construct a railroad from Meridian, in the State of Mississippi, through the States of Alabama and Georgia to Chattanooga, [415] in the State of Tennessee, a distance of 295 miles, to the extent of $16,000 per mile, on the whole length of its road, as fast as sections of twenty continuous miles each were "finished, completed and equipped." The bonds, when issued and indorsed, were to have "priority in favor of the State over any and all other liens whatever." Sections 5 and 6 of an Act of February 19, 1867, on which the liability of the defendants to a large extent depends, are as follows:

"Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, That the bonds before specified shall not be used by said company for any other purpose than the construction and equipment of said road; and the Governor shall not indorse the same unless on the affidavit of the president of said company, and a resolution of a majority of its directory for the time being, that said bonds shall not be used for any other purpose than the construction and equipment of said road, or sold or disposed of for a less sum than ninety cents in the dollar; nor shall said bonds be indorsed until the president and chief engineer of said company shall, upon oath, show that the conditions of this Act have been complied with in all respects.

"Sec. 6. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Governor, from time to time, when there shall be reliable information given to him that any railroad company shall have fraudulently obtained the indorsement of its bonds by the Governor on the part of the State, or shall have obtained the indorsement contrary to the provisions of this Act, or shall have sold or disposed of the bonds indorsed by the Governor for a less sum than ninety cents in the dollar, he shall notify the Attorney-General of the State, whose duty it shall be forthwith to institute, in the name of the State, a suit in the Circuit or Chancery Court of the county of the place of business of the company, setting forth the facts; and when the fact shall satisfactorily appear to the court that the indorsement of any of said bonds shall have been fraudulently obtained, or obtained contrary to the true intent, meaning and provisions of this Act, or that said bonds shall have been sold or disposed of for a less sum than ninety cents in the dollar, then, and in such case, the court shall order, adjudge [416] and decree that said road lying in the State, with all the property and assets of said company, or a sufficiency thereof, shall be sold, and the proceeds thereof shall be paid into the treasury of the State; and it shall be the duty of the comptroller immediately to invest the same in state bonds, or the bonds indorsed by the Governor, under the provisions of this Act creating a sinking fund as provided for in the eleventh section of this Act; and said company shall forfeit all rights and privileges under the provisions of this Act. And th thereof shall be individually lia

ment of the bonds the indorseme
so fraudulently obtained by su
which were sold or disposed ninety cents in the dollar, an losses that may fall upon the quence of the commission of
by such company, excepting su
as may show to the said court
ignorant of or opposed the perp fraud by the company."

By another statute passed Fe
the Governor was authorized to
to the amount of $2,000,000
them with the same compan
amount of its own bonds, sec
mortgage on lands granted to the United States, and certain property, including, if the G deem it necessary, a second railroad. The bonds were onl
such sums as it should be sho
evidence had been expended b
the construction and equipmen
addition to and besides the bonds indorsed by the State wh
road company shall have rec
laws of the said State now in f
also provided that these bon sold at less than ninety cents o
"that the directors or other o
porators and stockholders of s pany, who shall knowingly
the violation without objectio
of this Act, or of the Act unde
pany is now receiving the in State upon its bonds, of $16,0 be held personally liable to the incurred thereby."

The declaration, after settin
statutes relied on, proceeds defendants were at the time la from thence continuously, un
the time of the occurrence of respective wrongs and injurie
plaintiff hereinafter stated,
controlling incorporators, offic
stockholders, as well as the act controllers of the said Alab
nooga Railroad Company;"
that the company issued 1,2 mortgage bonds in excess of the statutes, avers that such o
"with the intent fraudulent
indorsement of each of its s
Governor of plaintiff as if t
each of them by said Govern
by said Acts, and with inte
Governor of the plaintiff, an plaintiff to the extent of an a
many of said bonds and ind
as were not authorized by s dorsed by the Governor of last-named company, with su
tent, did, by false and frau tions and pretenses, some of effect that said company wa Governor of plaintiff, for ind
only so many of its bonds as ized him to indorse, and was indorsement of only so man said Acts authorized him t d Governor his indorse-

of its bonds issued as livery to that company
dorsed as aforesaid. In ment by said Governor
d of all the said bonds
ompany, that company
the following, among ent pretenses: That this
, at the time it applied
dorsements, had twenty
its railroad finished,
ed, outside of the State
e State of Mississippi, theasterly direction to-
aid last-mentioned com-lied for and procured
wenty continuous miles
l, equipped and com-
a, in the State of Tenerly direction towards
f Alabama.
aintiff was induced to
s by believing and act-
lse and fraudulent rep-
es; and otherwise would aid indorsements.
ons and pretenses were among other, respects
enty miles of road situ-ssissippi, for which the procured, had not been
by said company, but
ased by said company,
uilt several years prior cts, by the said North-
lroad Company.
ad was not equipped.
npany had not finished,
ed twenty continuous
said City of Chattanoo-
the State of Alabama,
he indorsement, by the batch of three hundred
ds, but, on the contrary,
, as a part of said twenty
ve miles of the road of tuated in the State of
used by it for the run-
an agreement with said
which said road has been
and is still the property
ion, and for the use of
and Chattanooga Railpaying, and continued
trolled and managed its al, amounting to many
h was paid out of the aid indorsed bonds.
twenty miles of road
inished and completed
Chattanooga Railroad
ity of Chattanooga, as procured said indorse-
time been equipped."
t the $2,000,000 of state
he company under the fter this was done, and 15, 1871, a petition in under which the com-
bankrupt, Nov. 6, 1871;
April, 1872, its railroad and property were sold by its assignees to the State, subject to the mortgage given the State to secure the indorsed bonds. Afterwards, the mortgage to the State was foreclosed, and the mortgaged property sold at public auction on the 22d of January, 1877, to a purchaser other than the State.

Then follows this allegation:

"The plaintiff says that in the indorsement and delivery to the said Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company of the said bonds of that corporation and the coupons thereunto attached as aforesaid, and in the issuance and delivery to that corporation of the said two thousand bonds of the plaintiff and the coupons thereunto attached as aforesaid, the plaintiff relied on the truthfulness of the several aforesaid false pretenses and statements of said Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company, as well as on all the provisions of all the said Acts of her General Assembly, and especially on all the said provisions of said Acts relating to the obligation and liability to the plaintiff of the directors, officers, incorporators and stockholders of said corporation, for any loss that should be incurred by the plaintiff by reason of the directors, officers, incorporators and stockholders of said corporation knowingly violating, or permitting the violation of, without objection, any provision of the said Act approved February 11, 1870, under and by virtue of which the said two thousand bonds of the plaintiff and the coupons thereunto attached were issued and delivered to said corporation as aforesaid, or of the said Acts under which the plaintiff indorsed and delivered to the said corporation the said bonds of the said corporation as aforesaid."

It is then averred that, in May, 1869, the company "knowingly, wrongfully, illegally and fraudulently appropriated to the defendants and their accomplices in the wrong and fraud" $160,000 of the money accruing from the sale of the indorsed bonds, and that this sum "was not used or applied in any way for the benefit of said corporation, or of plaintiff, or for the purpose of constructing or equipping its said railroad, or for any honest or lawful purpose. Also, that the company, in or about the month of May, 1869, "wrongfully, illegally, fraudulently and without any valuable consideration, appropriated and issued to the defendants and their accomplices in the fraud and wrong shares of the capital stock of the said corporation of the aggregate par value of $450,000, which the defendants thereafter pretended to sell to said corporation, and in payment therefor the said corporation fraudulently and illegally paid to the defendants, and the defendants did wrongfully, fraudulently and illegally receive: from the said corporation a large sum, to wit: the sum of $45,000, which said sum had accrued to and been received by the said corporation from the sales of a portion of said bonds, indorsed by the plaintiff and delivered to the said corporation as aforesaid, and which said sum, received by the defendants as aforesaid, they, the defendants, knowingly, wrongfully, illegally and fraudulently appropriated to their own use and benefit, and which was not used or applied in any way for the benefit of said corporation, or for the purpose of constructing or equipping its said railroad."

[420]

Also, that in the months of November and December, 1869, the company "wrongfully, illegally, fraudulently and knowingly permitted the defendants to appropriate to their own use and to the use of their accomplices" certain sums amounting in the aggregate to $118,000, "which sums had accrued to and been received by the said corporation from sales of a portion of said bonds indorsed by the plaintiff and delivered to said corporation as aforesaid, and which were not used or applied in any way for the benefit of said corporation, or for the purpose of constructing or equipping its said road." Also, that in the months of January and February, 1870, the company "knowingly, wrongfully, illegally and fraudulently permitted the defendants to misapply, misappropriate and convert to improper uses a further large sum, to wit: $400,000, which had accrued to and been received from the sales of a portion of [421] said indorsed bonds, * * * and which was never used or applied in any way for the benefit of said * * * corporation, or for the purpose of constructing, equipping, or finishing its said railroad, or for any other purpose authorized by said Acts of the Legislature."

Also, that the company, "with the knowledge and participation of the defendants, during the years 1869 and 1870, wrongfully and illegally sold and disposed of" $812,000 of the indorsed bonds, and $771,000 of the state bonds, at less than ninety cents on the dollar; and that $580,000 of the indorsed bonds were disposed of by the company, with the knowledge and permission of the defendants, by placing them as collateral security for the debts of the company, which debts were much less than ninety per cent of the amount of the bonds.

It is then alleged that the company, with the permission of the defendants, during the years 1869 and 1870, "allowed large amounts of said indorsed bonds, to wit: $200,000, as well as large sums of the proceeds of said indorsed bonds, to wit: $150,000, to be unlawfully paid or given to various persons who were not entitled to any part of said bonds or the proceeds thereof, and were at the time of such payments or gifts known by said last-named corporation, as well as by said defendants, not to be entitled to any part of said bonds or the proceeds thereof; * * * and the indorsed bonds and proceeds of said indorsed bonds which were so unlawfully paid or given by said * * * corporation were never used or applied in any way for the benefit of that corporation, or for the construction or equipment of its said railroad, or for any honest and lawful purpose, but were lost to that corporation."

It is then alleged that the company, during the years 1869 and 1870, permitted the defendants to use 200,000 of the indorsed bonds in purchasing for themselves stock in the Roane Iron Co. and in the Vicksburg and Meridian Railroad Co. and in opening and working a coal mine, and that these bonds were wholly [422] lost to the company and to the plaintiff, and were never applied in any way to its benefit, or to the construction or equipment of its road.

As an excuse for not making the "allegations as to said wrongful, illegal and fraudulent acts of said company more full, certain or definite," it is stated that the company, with the participation and concurrence of the defendants, "fraudulently concealed tiff all knowledge or information t of the aforesaid wrongful or fraud said company and of said defenda fully kept the plaintiff ignorant o wrongful and illegal acts."

The declaration concludes as fo the plaintiff says that by reason c said wrongful, illegal and fraud the said Alabama and Chattano Company, permitted and particip defendants, who were the actual m controllers of said Alabama and Railroad Company as aforesaid, t poration last named became a ban year 1871, and was rendered whol pay its indebtedness existing on the first day of September, 1871, a the interest on said indorsed bond came due on the first days of July, A. D. 1871, and that on the which became due on the first da and September in the same year, the aggregate to $537,600, all of plaintiff was compelled to pay and the holders of said bonds, which s have been compelled to pay but fo ful, illegal and fraudulent acts of fendants and said corporation as part of which sum of $537,600 h repaid to the plaintiff; and by r aforesaid wrongful, illegal and fr of the said Alabama and Chattano Company and of the said defenda said, the said plaintiff has been fu fied and injured to the addition one million of dollars in settling created and evidenced by her afor ment of said indorsed bonds, no p which loss or damage has ever bee plaintiff. And the plaintiff says th notice, information or knowledge ful, illegal and fraudulent acts of fendants and said corporation as til within the twelve months no Whereby, and by force of the said General Assembly of the plainti February 19, 1867, September 2 vember 17, 1868, February 11, tively, an action hath accrued to to recover against the said defends pensation for the aforesaid respect damages to plaintiff sustained as the said defendants, although re do, have not, nor hath either or a at any time hitherto, yielded any c or made any satisfaction or am plaintiff for the said loss so by the tained as aforesaid, but to do this fendants have hitherto altogether refused, and still do refuse, to the d plaintiff, in the sum of three mill

To this declaration the defenda generally.

The demurrer presents the ques the facts stated in the declaration to support the action. The lia officers and stockholders of the co State is statutory only, and there covery unless the facts stated in th are such as to bring the defendan operation of the liability clause i other of the statutes.

ckholders are made
of all bonds, the inudulently obtained
were sold at less llar; and (2) for all
e State in conse-
l of the company.
orsements, the obli-
s endorsed; for all
ses of the State in

o enforce a liability
yment of the bonds.
gument. With the indorsements, there-
o, because the lia-
e payment of losses
auds than these.
is, to state the es-liability of the de-
nds. In this case,
ular fraud of which ty, and (2) that the State resulted di-
uds alleged are (1)
on of which the in-
of bonds was ob-
ons, by reason of
btained before the
ere fully "finished,
and (3) the unlawful
of the bonds, or
ot into the hands of

of these classes of
o say that they re-
which the indorse-
for frauds of that has been seen, only ds the indorsement
ay. The other alle-different times, the
onds, or their pros, and paid them out
n fraud of the rights
In some instances,
ndants without con-
orized purpose, and ho were not entitled
are true, they show
ny, and the defend-ents, upon innocent
entirely to connect fallen on the State fully done. Upon
the company might,
fendants and others
had fraudulently
ns follows that the
tion against the de-
nds.
ed allege that "by ongful, illegal and
id * * * company,
in by the defend-
ame bankrupt and
le to pay its debts,
n its bonds; and that led to make certain
which she would not but for the wrong-
ts of the defendants

and said corporation;" and that, "by reason of the aforesaid wrongful, illegal and fraudulent acts of the said * * * company and of the defendants, the said plaintiff has been further damnified and injured to the additional extent of one million of dollars in settling her liability created and evidenced by her aforesaid indorsement of said indorsed bonds;" but this is not enough, unless the facts from which this conclusion is drawn are such as to show that the loss was both the natural and immediate consequence of the wrongful and fraudulent acts referred to. Pleadings must state facts, and not conclusions of law merely, and the allegation in this case that the loss arose from the fraud is only a conclusion of law. If the facts from which the conclusion is drawn are not sufficient to show that in law the loss was attributable to the fraud, the declaration is bad.

The facts are, that the State was to indorse certain bonds of the company upon certain security. It made the indorsement and got the security. The obligation of the company to use the bonds to build and equip the road was satisfied, if the road was actually completed and equipped in accordance with the requirements of the statute at a bona fide cost to the company of more than the amount of the bonds. The object of this requirement was to insure the creation of the security which the State was entitled to have. If the security was actually perfected, all claim of the State upon the indorsed bonds was satisfied. There is no pretense that the road cost less than the value of the bonds. Consequently, if the bonds were not used to build the road, other funds belonging to the company must have been, and it was proper to treat the bonds as a substitute for the other funds in the treasury of the company. This being so, it was not a fraud on the State for the company to do with the bonds as it might have done with the other funds, if they had not been used in building the road. As the State had no direct lien on the bonds for its security, a fraudulent use of the bonds was not a fraudulent diversion of the State's securities. [427]

The loss of the State is directly attributable to the deficiency in the value of its original security, and the fraudulent use of the bonds had no effect on that. The company, if the allegations are true, has wasted its property and made itself insolvent, but it has not in this way increased its obligations to, or changed its relations with, the State. Both the debt to and the security held by the State were the same after the frauds as before. The injury to innocent stockholders by the wrongful acts of the company and the defendants was direct and immediate, because their property was taken and fraudulently converted to the use of the defendants or the other wrong doers. To the State, however, the injury, if any, was both indirect and remote, because the State had no direct claim upon, or interest in, the property which was misappropriated. The law will not imply that, if the company had kept the bonds, the same loss would not have fallen on the State. There was no imperative obligation on the company to use the bonds to pay the debts for which the State was liable rather than others and, consequently, it cannot be said that, as a matter of law, if the misappropriations had not been made the State would have suffered no loss. [428]

To our minds it is clear, therefore, that, upon the facts as they are set forth in the declaration, there is no liability on the part of the defendants for the alleged frauds of the company, other than those connected with over-issues, or sales of the bonds at less than ninety cents on the dollar, and for these the suit is not brought.

2. As to the Act of 1870.

Under this Act all officers and stockholders who knowingly violate or permit without objection the violation of any of its provisions, or the provisions of the Act of 1867, are made personally liable to the State for any loss incurred thereby. There is also a prohibition against a sale of the state bonds, the issue of which to the company was authorized, at less than ninety cents on the dollar; but there is no provision for the liability of the stockholders for the payment of the bonds, in case they are so sold, as there is in the Act of 1867. The only liability under this Act, for such a violation of its provisions, is for the losses which the State sustains on that account. The declaration alleges that 771 of these bonds were sold at less than ninety cents on the dollar, but it fails entirely to show how the State was injured thereby. Stockholders are liable under this Act for violations of the Act of 1867, only when such violations occur after this Act took effect, which was February 11, 1870; and it nowhere affirmatively appears that any of the wrongs complained of were committed after that date, except in the sale of the state bonds at less than ninety cents on the dollar. It is also as much incumbent on the State to show, under this Act, that the losses for which it seeks to recover were the direct and immediate consequence of the wrongful conduct complained of, as it was under the Act of 1867. What has been said, therefore, as to the insufficiency of the allegations to charge the defendants under that Act, is equally applicable to this.

It was contended in argument that the remedy of the State to enforce the liability of the [429] defendants under the statute was exclusively in equity. This question we do not decide, as there is not entire unanimity of opinion amongst us in reference to it. There were other objections to the declaration also mentioned in the argument, but we deem it unnecessary to refer to them, as what has already been said is sufficient to dispose of the case.

Being unanimously of opinion that the facts stated in the declaration are not sufficient to constitute a cause of action against the defendants, we sustain the demurrer.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[439] WILLIAM L. GIBSON, Plff. in Err.,

v.

EDWARD LYON ET AL. AND BENNETT C. WILSON ET AL., Terretenants.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 439–453.)

Ejectment—former action as a bar—tender to mortgagee by stranger—sale under foreclosure—sale under erroneous judgment—estoppel.

1. A mortgagee is not bound to accept a tender by a stranger of the amount due on account of the mortgage, and make an assignment thereof.

2. Under the laws of Pennsylvania ejectment is not a bar to a subseque

3. The decision of the Supreme Cou though single, is entitled to peculi questions involved arising upon the State; but it is not conclusive in the United States unless it has become erty.

4. A party cannot be permitted t and against the same deed.

5. The purchaser of lands sold by Court of Philadelphia, subject to a topped from denying the authority sell such land except clear and dis liens.

6. If a judicial sale be void, the cou firmed it upon terms not authorize purchaser is without title upon wh action of ejectment; if it be erronec therefore only voidable, it cannot collaterally.

7. Under the laws of Pennsylvan under foreclosure proceedings, the j or is a party and is bound by the con a judicial decree; and the acknowl sheriff's deed cures all defects, ex power in the officer to sell, or frau An objection to the validity of th ground that more property was sold cessary, cannot be made subsequent to ledgment.

8. The fact that a judgment was might have been reversed upon a wr not destroy a sale made under the j remaining in full force and unreve

[No. 16.]

Argued Mar. 13, 16, 1885. Orde ment Apr. 20, 1885. Reargued 22, 1885. Decided Nov. 23, 18

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court States for the Eastern Distric vania.

Statement by Mr. Justice Mat

This was an action of ejectm possession of certain real estate in brought by the plaintiff in erro New Jersey, against the defend citizens of Pennsylvania, in whi judgment for the defendants be brought here for review by this w

The cause was submitted to th trial below, a jury being waive where judgment was rendered up ing findings of fact:

1. In 1861 George W. Roberts the premises in dispute, situate at corner of Broad and Oxford Stree in front on Broad Street 48 feet, in depth on Oxford Street 143 fe 13, 1861, the said George W. gaged the same to the Reliance In pany, of Philadelphia, to secur $5,000.

2. In 1862 George W. Roberts the 17th of December, 1863, his h a petition to the Orphans' Cour phia County for leave to sell th ises under the Act of April 18, 1 discharged of all liens in the han chaser. On January 13, 1864, t ises were sold to John Rice fo $10,500, which sale was, on Jan approved and confirmed by the C aforesaid, and security approved in the sum of $21,000. The conv said John Rice was made Januar consideration of the sum of $5,50 and subject to the payment of debt or sum of $5,000, with inter

George W. Roberts to the rance Company, of Phil-
l 13, 1861, and recorded
. C. H., No. 9, page 71,
is made in the habendum
in the premises. On the
A. D. 1864, this conveyance
ged before the Orphans'

1, 1865, John Rice and aid premises to Sarah A.
ion of $8,000," under and nt of the said mortgage of Reliance Insurance Com-

7, the said mortgage of gned by the Reliance In-oresaid to the defendants,
reclosed the same by pro-
me Court of Pennsylvania
No. 154. The action was ge W. Roberts, and judg-ned upon two returns of lgment, both the said Sa-Wagner Jermon appeared lications to open the judg-fused.

7, 1868, J. Wagner Jer-
, his wife, filed a bill in ne Court for the Eastern
vania, to January Term,
ing that the defendants Vagner Jermon, and were mortgage for the purpose
ms against J. Wagner Jer-ng that Sarah A. Jermon
to be made of principal,
o the defendants, and re-
cute an assignment of the
and presented to them,

ee was entered "that an
l as prayed for to restrain
e property mentioned and
, and that the said injunc-
he defendants, Lyon and assignment of the bond ed to in the bill, and a ought upon the said mort-payment of the debt and
by, together with all costs,
of which assignment and
nction shall be dissolved,
cree was affirmed by the
ruary 23, 1869, and a pro-

the Supreme Court aforeinjunction should be disdants hereto should be at pon their said mortgage,
agner Jermon or Sarah A.
e same before the 20th of ril 20, 1869, the time was,
of J. Wagner Jermon, ex-
9. No payment or tender re May 10, 1869.

18, 1869, a levari facias
ion to foreclose the mortremises were described as
:

orner of Broad and Oxford
road Street by 111 feet on

Lot No. 2. South side Oxford Street, 111 feet east of Broad Street, 16 by 48 feet.

Lot No. 3. South side Oxford Street, 127 feet east of Broad Street, 16 by 48 feet.

Lot numbered 1 was purchased by the defendants at the sheriff's sale, made October 4, 1869, for the sum of $10,000; and No. 2 was purchased at the same sale, by the defendants, for the sum of $2,000. The sheriff's return to the writ of levari facias was inter alia: "and it appearing that the plaintiffs in the writ are entitled to be paid the sum of $5,748$\frac{41}{100}$, being the amount of principal and interest to day of sale of the mortgaged premises sued on in this case, I have taken their receipt for the same, and balance of purchase money I have as within commanded."

On December 4, 1869, the sheriff's deed for the premises, Nos. 1 and 2, was duly acknowledged and delivered to the said defendants. [443]
No disposition was made of lot No. 3.

7. As to lot No. 3: By virtue of certain proceedings in the District Court of Philadelphia County, of December Term, 1866, No. 1421, the premises situate on the south side of Oxford Street, 127 feet east of Broad Street, 16 feet by 48 feet, were exposed to sheriff's sale on January 3, 1870, upon a venditioni exponas, issued December 3, 1869, under a judgment obtained by W. A. Arnold against J. Wagner Jermon and Sarah A. Jermon, his wife. The first count of the narr. filed in this action was for materials furnished to the said premises at the request of said Sarah A. Jermon. The second count was for materials furnished at the request of J. Wagner Jermon and Sarah A. Jermon, and the judgment was confessed in open court. At the sale the premises were purchased by defendant and, on January 22, 1870, the sheriff's deed therefor was duly acknowledged and delivered to defendants.

8. On the 3d July, A. D. 1872, an ejectment was brought in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania sitting at nisi prius, to July Term, 1872, No. 180, by J. Wagner Jermon and Sarah A. Jermon against these defendants, wherein a verdict was rendered for these defendants; and on March 6, 1876, this was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania sitting in banc.

9. On March 7, 1876, Sarah A. Jermon, wife of J. Wagner Jermon, conveyed the premises in dispute to William L. Gibson, a citizen of the State of New Jersey, for the consideration of $500. This conveyance purports to be made by Sarah A. Jermon alone. J. Wagner Jermon joined in the covenants, and both she and her husband signed and sealed the deed, and it was separately acknowledged.

Messrs. David C. Harrington, George W. Biddle and F. Carroll Brewster, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Wm. Henry Rawle, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court: [444]

Before proceeding to consider this case as presented by the findings of fact, it is necessary to dispose of an assignment of error based on a ruling of the Circuit Court during the progress of the trial. It appears from a bill of exceptions that "the plaintiff offered to prove that a tender of the money, under decree of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in suit No. 60, January Term, 1868, was made about the end of May, 1869, by Charles H. Muirhead; that the assignment was returned from Lyon and Taylor executed in blank; that said C. H. Muirhead required that an assignment of said mortgage, with the blanks filled in, should be signed by said Lyon and Taylor; that A. V Parsons, Esq., representing the parties Lyon and Taylor, agreed to procure the assignment so completed, but that such an assignment was not [445] made, and the parties Lyon and Taylor absolutely refused to make the assignment and receive the money. Counsel, on being asked, say that the money was ready, but was not actually shown Lyon and Taylor, or their attorney, and avers that an actual tender was not necessary under the refusal of Lyon and Taylor to take the money and make the assignment."

It will be observed that the tender referred to in this offer was not made by the party obliged to pay the debt or entitled to do so, for the purpose of removing the incumbrance of the mortgage upon the property, nor in payment of the mortgage debt, and in satisfaction of the mortgage and the judgment rendered thereon, but was an offer made by a stranger to pay the amount due on account thereof, accompanied with a demand to execute an assignment to a named third party of the debt and securities, compliance with which was a condition of the offer of payment. If accepted, the effect would have been to transfer the debt and mortgage and judgment rendered thereon to an assignee, and not to extinguish it. This the plaintiffs were under no legal obligation to do, neither by contract nor by the terms of the decree referred to, inasmuch as the time within [which] such payment might be made for that purpose was limited by the decree to May 10, 1869. After that they were expressly left at liberty by the decree itself to proceed, at law, upon the mortgage and judgment previously rendered thereon.

This question being removed from the controversy, it is urged by counsel for defendants in error, that the judgment of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in the ejectment in favor of the defendants against the immediate grantors of the present plaintiff below, referred to in the eighth finding of fact, if not entitled to the force of an estoppel as res judicata, is at least an authoritative decision of the highest court of the State upon the law of the case, which, as it involves only questions of title to real estate within its territory dependent on its local jurisprudence, ought to furnish the obligatory rule of decision for the courts of the United States.

The former judgment in ejectment is not a bar to the present action, according to the law [446] of Pennsylvania, where the subject is regulated by statute. 1 Brightly's Purdon's Dig. 535.

By the Act of April 13, 1807, two successive verdicts and judgments in favor of the same party will defeat a third ejectment; but where there is verdict against verdict, and judgment thereon, a verdict and judgment in a third ejectment is conclusive. Britton v. Thornton, 112 U. S. 526 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 816].

As a precedent, the decision of the Supreme Court of the State, though single, is entitled to peculiar respect, because all the questions decided arise upon the local law of the State; but it cannot have conclusive force in t the United States, unless it has be of property. Burgess v. Seligman, [Bk. 27, L. ed. 359]; Carroll Coun 111 U. S. 556 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 517].

The plaintiff in error, being a cit Jersey, had a constitutional right, that fact, to invoke the jurisdi courts of the United States, and i their judgment upon his rights un of Pennsylvania.

The title of the plaintiff is de ived A. Jermon. Her title was vested i deed from Rice mentioned in the t of fact, and that of Rice was acq conveyance described in the second the proceedings in the Orphans' C adelphia from which it resulted. I conveyances contains a recital th under and subject to the payment gage under which the defendants

It is contended, on behalf of the error, that he is not estopped by t to deny the existence of the mort assert that, in point of law, it was by the sale ordered by the Orphans' sales being required by law to be c charged of all liens in the hands chaser, and that consequently he is insist that the subsequent sale, ma mortgage as a subsisting and va void.

It is true that the statute of Penn which the sale ordered by the Or was authorized (Act of April 18, 18 ly's Purdon's Dig. 1242, pl. 2, sec. that "by every such public sale t sold shall be discharged from lien also true that the sale prayed for in was of the premises "clear and d all liens in the hands of the purchas the sale to Rice, approved and confi court, was for the sum of $10,500, and consideration of the purchas equally true, as appears from the re deed to Rice, which was duly ac before the Orphans' Court, that of eration, as finally agreed upon betw ties, there was actually paid in cash the remainder being represented by mortgage to the Reliance Mutu Company, under and subject to wh veyance was made, approved an The proceedings and judgment of t Court must be taken as a whole, a the execution, acknowledgment an the deed. The sanction of the cou and form of the conveyance was a necessary to perfect the proceedin out the deed, the sale would not ha summated, and no title would h vested and passed. Foster v. Gra 15; Brown's Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 53

If the whole proceeding be void, court confirmed a sale upon term ized by law, the plaintiff below ha which to base a recovery, and th below were mortgagees in possessio protection of the decision in Brobst Wall. 519 [Bk. 19, L. ed. 1002]; i neous merely, and therefore only v good and stands until reversed, a questioned collaterally. If it be co

t had the necessary legal the pre-existing mortgage, at the mortgage debt was tgage security continued, ecital in the conveyance, aintiff in error claims his does not create a personal nent of the debt, enforce- haser in an action of cov- eless, a condition upon d and depends. He cer- nitted to claim both under e deed; to insist upon its enefit and repudiate a bur- as qualified it; to affirm a . The whole title of the ts upon that conveyance, istence of the mortgage as ms part of it. The deed s evidence on behalf of the ssary support of any title he proves it for that pur- isting mortgage of the de- ct. The defendant's title, t of the plaintiff's title, and t relied on to establish the nown to be its superior, for f the plaintiff to be subject ant. It is a plain case of ew is supported by the de- ne Court of Pennsylvania, ns to it, presented in argu- n fully met. Stackpole v. Rawle, 163; Zeigler's Ap- Crooks v. Douglass, 56 Pa. McArthur, 67 Pa. St. 326. ass, ubi supra, it was said hen, if the price of the es- mortgagee is still in the is in equity estopped from was made subject to the aving bought the estate ing that he bids so much ld hold that much in his to the excepted mortgage, mouth, at least, to say he arged of it, under the op- l rule, that a judicial sale abrances except those ex- tatute." In that case the sale rested in parol, proof hat took place, while here ls in the very deed which tiff in error the foundation

re, that the defendant in ight to proceed upon his judgment thereon was val- cution sale in pursuance t as lot No. 1 is concerned, confirmed and executed by pass the legal title, and to hat of the plaintiff in error. ns are made to the validity nder the execution, in ref- f the premises described as ri facias issued upon the mortgage, directed the sale emises for the satisfaction ing them as divided into 1 was purchased by the ers of the mortgage, and o, for the sum of $10,000, and lot 2, at the same sale, was also purchased by them for the sum of $2,000. The sheriff's return showed that he took from the purchasers their receipt as plaintiffs in the writ for the amount of the debt, and interest, and that he had the balance of the purchase money as commanded.

It is now contended, on behalf of the plaintiff in error, that the sale of lot No. 1, being for more than was due to the defendants herein on the mortgage debt, satisfied the judgment and exhausted the authority to proceed further under the writ, and that the sale of lot No. 2 to the plaintiffs in the execution was therefore void for want of power in the sheriff to make it.

Under the laws of Pennsylvania, the proceeding upon a mortgage was by scire facias, in which, judgment having been rendered for the amount of the debt, interest and costs, the mortgaged premises are directed to be seized and sold on execution by a levari facias for the satisfaction thereof. 1 Brightly's Purdon's Dig. 483, pl. 122.

In case there shall be a surplus of the proceeds of the execution sales after satisfaction of the judgment, the sheriff is bound to pay the same to the debtor or defendant. Id. 484, pl. 123. And in all cases, where there shall be disputes concerning the distribution of the money arising from sales on execution, the court from which the execution shall have issued is invested with power, upon notice to parties interested, to hear and determine the same according to law and equity. Id. 656, pl. 107. The sheriff makes return of the sale, with the proceeds, to the court whence it issued, and gives to the purchaser a deed for the premises so sold, but not until it has been formally acknowledged in court, as required by law. Id. 658, pl. 119. This acknowledgment is a public, judicial act, made in open court, and only after notice to all parties in interest. Id. 658, pl. 122. [450]

To this proceeding the judgment debtor is a party, and at the hearing, may make any objection to the confirmation of the sale. The action of the court has all the effect of a judicial decree. Foster v. Gray, 22 Pa. St. 1, 15.

It was said in Shields v. Miltenberger, 14 Pa. St. 77: "Most of the cases recognize the deliberative and judicial character of an acknowledgment taken in open court, founded upon the conceded right of all parties having an interest in the question, to appear and dispute the propriety or regularity of the official sale; and all of them, from Murphy v. McCleary, 3 Yeates, 405, to Dale v. Medcalf, 9 Pa. St. 108, distinguish between those objections that touch the foundation of the proceeding, by impeaching the authority of the officer or establishing the existence of fraud, and those which simply suggest irregularities in the process of sale. The absence of authority, or the presence of fraud, utterly frustrates the operation of the sale as a means of transmission of title, and avoids it from the beginning. Either may, therefore, be insisted on, even after a formal acknowledgment of the conveyance; but mere irregularities, whether of omission or commission, which do not render the officer powerless, or taint the transaction with turpitude, may be cured by the tacit acquiescence of those who ought to speak in time."

The correctness of this rule, that the acknowledgment of the sheriff's deed in consummation and confirmation of the sale cures all defects, except want of power to sell in the officer, or fraud in making it, being conceded, it is still contended that, in the present case, the power of the sheriff to proceed with the sale of lot No. 2 ceased after he had made enough by the sale of lot No. 1 to pay the judgment debt, with interest and costs; and that consequently the sale of the latter was void for want of authority to sell.

But the sheriff acted strictly within the command of his writ. That was to seize and sell the mortgaged premises. If he proceeded to sell more than was sufficient to pay the debt, it was at most but a mere irregularity, even if it [451] could be so considered. He had no judicial authority to determine questions that might arise upon the sale, or questions of distribution. The sale of lot No. 1 might, so far as he or anyone could know, be set aside, and the proceeds of lot No. 2 might prove to be necessary to satisfy the execution. His duty was merely ministerial, and so long as he pursued only the literal precept of the writ, he cannot be said to have acted without authority, and be converted thereby into a wrong doer. For aught that he might know, and for aught that we can tell from the present record, the whole proceeds of the sale of both lots may have been necessary to pay other liens upon the property, entitled to satisfaction on distribution. The presumption certainly is, in accordance with the maxim, Omnia præsumuntur rite et solemniter esse acta, that the surplus was either so applied, in which case, no more property was sold than was necessary; or, it was paid, as the law directs, to Mrs. Jermon, its owner; and in that event, she certainly is not in a situation to complain of the invalidity of a sale the fruits and proceeds of which she received, and has ever since continued to claim and hold as her property. She was a party to the proceeding, and had the opportunity then to present to the court the very objection now made to the validity of the sale, that more property had been sold than was in fact necessary to answer the exigency of the writ and satisfy the demands entitled to the proceeds. That was a question peculiarly for that court to determine, and that was the appropriate time for its determination. It was either then made or waived, and, in either view, the action and judgment of the court in directing the acknowledgment and delivery of the deed was conclusive. We conclude, therefore, that the objections to the title acquired by the sale of these two lots cannot be maintained

A different question arises upon the title to lot No. 3. Although part of the mortgaged premises, it was not included in the sheriff's sale under the judgment and execution for the mortgage debt. It was sold in virtue of the [452] judgment and proceedings described in the seventh finding of fact, being an action by one Arnold against Jermon and his wife to charge the wife's property. It is objected that this judgment and consequently all proceedings under it, including the sale on execution to the defendants, are void, because the declaration, one count of which was for materials furnished to the premises sold at the request of the wife, does not sufficiently allege a contract binding upon her as a married woman, and judgment was confessed, and n upon a verdict or finding of the fa

These questions, as to this very were fully considered and, as we factorily decided by the Suprem Pennsylvania in the case of Swayn Pa. St. 436. That was an action purchaser at this sale of the prope tion, against the defendant, who into a contract for its purchase specific performance of that agree defense which prevailed was that not marketable. The court held th the title might be good, yet, if th would be exposed to litigation to s ought not be compelled to take it. J., delivering the opinion of the "Unless, then, in this case, Mrs. those claiming under her, would b concluded by the judgment unde sheriff's sale took place, which co foundation of the vendor's title, verting her liability for the debt fo judgment was confessed, in an act ment to be hereafter brought for t the purchaser will be exposed to th and peril of such litigation." T second counts of the declaratio stated, set out a contract by Mrs. J her husband at her instance and materials furnished and work an in and about the improvement, an efit of her real estate; and as a ma is liable on such a contract, it is that it may logically follow that rendered against her for it, wheth confession or verdict, will have al characteristics of a judgment agai sui juris. The case, therefore, turn upon the question whether or those claiming under her, in ejectment to be brought against could be permitted to show that which the judgment was confessed tracted by herself or her husban stance for the improvement of her tate. This question was answere firmative, on the ground that evi effect would not contradict the r was apparent, for the reason th count, which was the common co sold and delivered on the joint pr self and husband, showed no goo tion against her; and in a collatera she would be at liberty to prove t ery was upon this count, and not or second, which would be co the record. It was accordingly h judgment might be avoided by Mr a collateral proceeding, but only the actual recovery was upon a c as to her, that is, under the third that event it would not be supp confession, and on the other han invalidated thereby, so far as it re counts which set forth a good ca against her.

This judgment was followed by of the same court in the case of Je 81 Pa. St. 107, where, speaking this lot, it said: "As to the prem three, it may be conceded that t rroneous, and might writ of error; but sheriff's sale made

le standing in full
s judgment was ob-
ith whom Lyon and
." The opinion in
s cited with approv-
6 Pa. St. 447, 458.
h care all the de-
rt of Pennsylvania
intiff in error, and nconsistent with its ere in question, in
v. Lyon, to which

dgment of the Cir-
ngly affirmed.

erk, Sup. Court, U. S.

T AL., Appts.

OMPANY.

pts.,

D, Trustee.

's ed., 465-469.)

njunction—effect of Rule 93.

r a decree dissolving
ullified by an appeal
ause is heard in this injunction contained without reference to s in perpetuation of

was then for the first

judge who allows the e that the injunction
g the appeal.
188.]
cided Nov. 23, 1885.

cuit Court of the Eastern District of

on of supersedeas.
stated by the court.
appellants, in sup-

s to so much of the
the ultimate rights

n, 218; Nauer v.
ming v. Clark, 12

junction is void be-void, so clearly ir-
this court, on hav-ould at once relieve sufficient to secure and Manning &

tra:
the court had authority and power to make; and its exercise was a matter of discretion, with which this court will not interfere.

Wright v. Lessee, 1 Pet. 168 (26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 98); Dean v. Mason, 20 How. 198 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 876); Hovey v. McDonald, 109 U. S. 161 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 891).

Even regarding the final decree as an original injunction, the appellants should not be at liberty to change the status quo of the parties.

The effect of the supersedeas is to prevent all further proceedings in the subordinate court, except such as are necessary to preserve the rights of the parties.

Hovey v. McDonald, supra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a motion for a modification of the supersedas, or more properly, perhaps, for a modification of the injunction contained in the decree appealed from. The bill prayed, among other things, for an injunction restraining "the defendant Leonard from cutting or removing any trees, logs or timber, or any staves manufactured from any trees or timber, from any of the lands" in controversy. In the decree the defendants were "perpetually enjoined from cutting or removing any timber from said lands." The appeal operates as a supersedeas, it having been taken within sixty days after the disposition of the motion, which was made during the same term, to vacate the decree, and the bond being in the form required for that purpose. The decree was rendered by the judge of the District Court of Arkansas, sitting as circuit judge. The same judge allowed the appeal, and, in doing so, directed that it should "not operate to suspend or affect so much of the decree * * * as enjoins the defendants from cutting or otherwise trespassing on the lands in controversy, * * * or removing staves or timber cut thereon." The appellant now moves this court "to vacate so much of the decree of the court below, granting an appeal and accepting appeal bond, as qualifies said appeal and prevents the same from superseding the decree rendered for the appellees, and especially so much of the said decree granting said appeal as prevents said appellant, J. W. Leonard, from removing the staves made on the land in controversy before service or entry of the decree in favor of the appellees."

[465] [466]

The injunction ordered by the final decree was not vacated by the appeal. Slaughter-House Cases, 10 Wall. 297 [77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 922]; Hovey v. McDonald, 109 U. S. 161 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 891]. It is true that in some of the Slaughter-House Cases the appeal was from a decree making perpetual a preliminary injunction which had been granted at an earlier stage of the case, but the fact of the preliminary injunction had nothing to do with the decision, which was "that neither an injunction nor a decree dissolving an injunction is reversed or nullified by an appeal or writ of error before the cause is heard in this court." This doctrine, in the general language here stated, was distinctly reaffirmed in Hovey v. McDonald, and it clearly refers to the injunction contained in the decree appealed from, without reference to whether that injunction was in perpetuation of a former order to the same effect, or was then for the first time granted. The injunction, therefore, which was granted by the final decree in this case, is in full force, notwithstanding the appeal.

[468]

Construing the injunction as granted in connection with the averments in the bill, the prayer for relief, and the findings in the decree, we think it restrains the appellees from removing the staves manufactured from timber cut on the land, as well as the timber in its unmanufactured state, and the order made by the judge when he allowed the appeal is in reality nothing more than notice to the appellant that such was the effect of his decree. It was not, and was not intended to be, an enlargement of the original scope of the injunction, but, under the circumstances, a justifiable precaution against a possible misunderstanding by the appellant of the extent and effect of the decree appealed from.

This court no doubt has the power to modify an injunction granted by a decree below in advance of a final hearing of an appeal on its merits. An application to that effect was made to us at the October Term, 1878, in the case of the Sandusky Tool Company v. Comstock, and finding that such a practice, if permitted, would oftentimes involve an examination of the whole case, and necessarily take much time, we promulgated the present Equity Rule 93, which is as follows:

"When an appeal from a final decree in an equity suit, granting or dissolving an injunction, is allowed by a justice or judge who took part in the decision of the cause, he may, in his discretion, at the time of such allowance, make an order suspending or modifying an injunction during the pendency of the appeal, upon such terms as to bond or otherwise, as he may consider proper for the security of the rights of the opposite party."

Here the judge who heard the case allowed the appeal, and instead of suspending or modifying the injunction, he took occasion to give special notice that it was to continue in force, and if the facts are correctly stated in his opinion, it was quite proper he should do so.

The motion is denied.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[464] LAURA ELLEN JONES, Widow of SIDNEY A. STOCKDALE, Deceased, and Testamentary Exrx. and Natural Tutrix of her Minor Children, Plff. in Errr.,

v.

WATSON VAN BENTHUYSEN.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 464.)

Internal revenue—tax on tobacco.

Upon the sale of manufactured tobacco situated in a bonded warehouse, the broker, making such sale, cannot be taxed for the revenue stamps, required before removal, unless they were affixed at the time of the sale and entered into the value of the tobacco and formed a part of the price thereof.

[No. 68.]

Submitted Nov. 18, 1885. Decided Nov. 23, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

The history and facts of the
appear in the opinion of the c
port of the case when before t
October Term, 1880, Bk. 26, 4

Mr. John Goode, Solicito
tiff in error.

Mr. William Grant, fo
error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite de
ion of the court:

This was a suit brought by sen, the defendant in error, a chant engaged in the sale o
tobacco, to recover back fro collector of internal revenue, c
under protest on the amount o
co in a bonded warehouse.
versy is about the liability of pay taxes upon the amount of affixed to the tobacco at the ti
from the warehouse The ca
the October Term, 1880, and i
U. S. 87 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 477]
cided that he was "not liable
the revenue stamps required
the tobacco before the removal
bonded warehouse, unless th
time of such sales so affixed, w
tered into the value of the tob
a part of the price thereof."
the judgment of the court belo
and the cause sent back for a present writ of error was brou
of the judgment upon the sec
bill of exceptions shows that t
jury was almost in the exact opinion of this court constru
which the rights of the parties
covered the whole case.

Affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk,

SAINT LOUIS, IRON MOU
SOUTHERN RAILWAY
Plff. in Errr.

v.

HUGH McGE

(See S. C., Reporter's ed.

Public lands—grant to Missou
to aid a certain railroad—
struction of Act of July 28,

1. Lands granted by Congress t struction of railroads do not reve
broken until a forfeiture has bee
United States, either through jud
or by some legislative action suf
an intention by Congress to rea
sume possession.

2. The Act of July 28, 1866, ex for earning the lands granted to souri and Arkansas by the Act of
to aid in building the Cairo and does not declare a forfeiture and
the United States, except as to cluded within the original grant pany which succeeded to the ri
and Fulton Company holds under subject to the rights of purchase
the old company.

[Bk. 23, L. ed. 608].

6.]

Decided Nov. 23, 1885.

me Court of the State

t in the Circuit Court
ouri, by the plaintiff acres of land with
retention and use.
ubmitted to the court
of a jury, judgment tiff. This judgment appeal, by the court
out this writ of error.
e stated by the court.
A. T. Britton and
tiff in error.
or defendant in error.)

te delivered the opin-

jectment brought by ntain and Southern
t Hugh McGee, to re-
e N. ¼ of N. E. ¼ sec.
lard County, Missou-
of Missouri rendered Gee. To reverse that or was brought. The

ary, 1853, Congress
certain lands to the issouri to aid in build-
t on the Mississippi
he Ohio, by way of boundary line near
. Sections 4 and 5 of lands hereby granted

subject to the dispos-
reof, for the purposes
nd the said railroad
and remain a public
e Government of the toll or other charge
of any property or
s.
s hereby granted to ed of by said States
wing: that is to say,
t exceeding one hun-
and included within wenty miles of said
hen the Governors of certify to the Secret twenty continuous pleted, then another
by granted may be time until said road
road is not completed
urther sales shall be d shall revert to the

within the limits of

Railroad of Missouri road company under nuary 12, 1854, and 1855, the Legislature
vesting in that com-
le to the lands granted to the State by the Act of 1853, so far as the same were applicable to the building of the road from the northern boundary of Arkansas to the Mississippi, opposite the mouth of the Ohio. This grant by Missouri was made "for the uses and purposes, and subject to the condition, reversion and provisions set forth and contained in said Act of Congress and of this Act." Section 5 is as follows: [471]

"For the purpose of raising funds from time to time, for the construction of the said railroad, the said company may sell the said lands, in the manner provided for by said Act of Congress, and may issue their bonds in such sums as they may deem proper, at rates of interest not exceeding seven per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and the principal of said bonds payable at such time and place as they may designate; and may secure the payment of said bonds by mortgage of said lands, or any part thereof, to be executed by said company, and may make the said bonds convertible into land or stock of the company within such periods as they may prescribe; Provided, That the faith of the State is in no manner pledged for the redemption of said bonds, or any part thereof; And provided further, That nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to authorize said company to sell, dispose of or apply the said lands, or the proceeds thereof, in any other manner, or to any other purpose, than as required and limited by the said Act of Congress." Laws of Mo. 1855, 314.

On the 3d of January, 1859, the company sold and conveyed the land sued for to M'Gee, who immediately went into possession, and has ever since occupied and improved it as his own, and paid the taxes and assessments thereon. This deed was duly recorded January 10, 1859. The land is more than forty miles from the starting point of the road on the Mississippi, and it does not appear that when it was sold a sufficient number of miles of the road had been built to authorize its sale.

On the 19th of February, 1866, the Legislature of Missouri directed the Governor of the State to sell at auction the Cairo and Fulton Railroad of Missouri, so far as the same was "constructed or projected, together with their appurtenances, rolling stock, and property of every description, and all rights and franchises thereto belonging," "in pursuance of the provisions of the several Acts creating a lien on said railroads, their appurtenances, rights and franchises, in favor of the State." Laws of Mo. 1866, 1867, 107.

On the 28th of July, 1866, Congress enacted that the original Act of February 9, 1853, granting lands to the States of Arkansas and Missouri, "with all the provisions therein made, be, and the same is hereby revived and extended for the term of ten years from the passage of this Act; and all the lands therein granted, which reverted to the United States under the provisions of said Act, be, and the same are hereby restored to the same custody, control and condition, and made subject to the uses and trusts in all respects as they were before and at the time such reversion took effect; Provided, That all mineral lands within the limits of this grant and the grant made in section two of this Act, are hereby reserved to the United States; And provided further, That all [472]

property and troops of the United States shall at all times be transported over said railroad and branches, at the cost, charge and expense of the company or corporation owning or operating said road and branches respectively, when so required by the Government of the United States."

By section 2 of the same Act an additional grant of lands was made, "subject to the same uses and trusts, and under the same custody, control and conditions, and to be held and disposed of in the same manner as if included in the original grant." It was then provided "that the lands embraced in this grant and the grant revived by section one of this Act shall be disposed of only as follows: Whenever proof shall be furnished, satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior, that any section of ten consecutive miles of said road * * * is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner as a first class railroad, the Secretary of the Interior shall issue patents for all the lands granted as aforesaid, not exceeding ten sections per mile opposite to and within the limits of twenty miles of the section of said road and branches thus completed," and so on, as each section of ten miles was completed, until the end. It was then provided that if the road was not constructed within ten years from the time the Act went into effect, "the lands granted, or the grant of which is revived or extended by this Act, and which at the time shall be unpatented to or for the benefit of the road or company, [473] * * * shall revert to the United States." By section three, all lands "mentioned in this Act, and hereby granted, are hereby reserved from entry, preemption, or appropriation for any other purpose than herein contemplated, for the said term of ten years from the passage of this Act; Provided, That all lands heretofore given to the State of Missouri for the construction of the Cairo and Fulton Railroad, or for the use of said road lying in the State of Missouri, and all lands proposed to be granted by this Act for the use or in aid of the road herein named, and lying in said State of Missouri, shall be granted and patented to the said State whenever the road shall be completed through said State, which lands may be held by said State and used toward paying the State the amount of bonds heretofore issued by it to aid said company, and all interest accrued or to accrue thereon." 14 Stat. at L. 338, ch. 300.

After the passage of this Act of Congress, the railroad property was sold and conveyed by the State to certain persons, under whom the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company claims title. The conveyance upon the sale was of "the said Cairo and Fulton Railroad of Missouri, with all the franchise, privileges, rights, title and interest appertaining to said road, and all roads, road bed, rolling stock, machine shops, and all other property, both real and personal, of every description, belonging or in anywise appertaining thereto."

The railroad was completed by the purchasers, or those claiming under them, and, on the 23d of January, 1877, the lands in dispute were patented, with others of the same class, to the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company.

The first question presented by the assignment of errors is whether the Act of July 28, 1866, was such a legislative decl
gress of a forfeiture of the gr
would devest the title of the St lands, and defeat conveyances
railroad company before that tin
been decided that lands granted
aid in the construction of railr vert after condition broken un
has been asserted by the Unite through judicial proceedings i authority of law for that purp
some legislative action legally judgment of office found at United States v. Repentigny,
268 [72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 645,
berg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 68
22, L. ed. 555]; Farnsworth v. R.
66 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 535]; M'M
States, 97 U. S. 217, 218 [Bk.
952]; Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106
27, L. ed. 201]. Legislation must manifest an intention by assert title and to resume posse
to take the place of a suit by th
to enforce a forfeiture, and a ju establishing the right, it should itive, and free from all doubt o

In the present case no such int
On the contrary, the evident p
gress was to waive a forfeiture
time for earning the lands un
Act. The language is that the p Act of 1853 be "revived and e
term of ten years from the passa
If this had been all, no one cou
was the intention of Congress t
ties interested in the grant ju
would be if the Act of 1853 ha 1876, as the time for the comple
road. What follows does not,
manifest any different intentio
are: "and all the lands therein
reverted to the United States vision of said Act, be, and the stored to the same custody, co
tion, and made subject to the u
all respects as they were before such reversion took effect." Wh passed the property of the origin
not been sold by the State unde
ruary, 1866. There had been no
the United States to enforce a
the possession of the lands un
grant had not been changed.
far as the United States was mained after the original limit o
ing the road had been passed, Neither had the State done a back its transfer of title to the legislation looked only to a sale
ing of the franchises and prope
pany into the hands of those
forward and complete the road.
a preservation of the title of t
the lands rather than its destru
guage of the new Act is to be co
erence to these facts, and inasm
not been in law any reversion
the United States when the A
the words "reverted," "reve stored" are to be understood a
ing more than that no advant
taken by the United States of t

the grant had been ne company to com-
time originally lim-
hing in the language
ation of Congress by eiture. Taken as a
the Act of 1866
than an amendment
ing out the original
rting in lieu July 28,

Act except from the hat of 1866, all min-espective limits, and
ry for the transfer of
tes. This shows an ge of the breach of rinal grant, so far as title to and reclaim lands that may have
it, and to change the
t does not go further.
e obligations of the
ation of the property
States are changed.
3 is amended, and the
by the United States
n the nature of con-
deration of the addi-
made, and the exten-
en for the completion le, we conclude that orfeiture of the grant
is now in dispute are e of McGee stands pre-riginal company had
the time fixed in the
sers at the sale made subject to his rights,
ountain and Southern
purchasers no better selves. Under these which issued in 1877
cGee just as it would iro and Fulton Rail-
under which the new

Boyce, 92 U. S. 320
t in conflict with this.
whether a purchaser
le free of a lien of the
an of state bonds to roversy was about the
s of description in the State's lien; one side
ant was not included,
. If it was included,
r from the company
ould be good. We held uded, and gave judg-
the facts as presented estion arises. No title
in favor of the State
. There is no dispute
State to sell under its ime of such sale, the er the Act of 1853 had ire, and the company
grant of 1866, the St.
d Southern Company
If, however, the orig-
orfeited, and the Cairo
eld under that grant

when the sale was made, the new Company took title subject to the prior right of M'Gee, and must fail in this action. As we decide that the Company held under the original title, the judgment of the Supreme Court of Missouri was right; and it is accordingly affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited 116 U. S. 198.

ASAHEL GAGE, Appt., [454]

v.

MARIA B. PUMPELLY AND ADELINE P. KIDD, Executrices and Heirs at Law, EDWARD WADE, Exr., and DELPHINE M. P. READ, Heir at Law of HARMON PUMPELLY, Deceased.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 454-463.)

Tax sales under Illinois statutes—validity—judgment by default—decisions of Illinois Supreme Court.

1. Where the decisions of the highest court of the State establish a rule of property, they will as a rule be followed by this court.
2. Under the decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois, a tax sale of real estate is void when a part of the tax for which it is made is illegal.
3. Under the decisions of the same court a judgment by default, in a tax sale proceeding, is not conclusive upon the taxpayer, but may be impeached collaterally.
4. This court cannot consider an objection raised by the appellee to the decree appealed from.

[No. 42.]

Submitted Nov. 2, 1885. Decided Nov. 23, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Augustus N. Gage and Albert G. Riddle, for appellant:

The service of notice upon which the tax deed issued to appellant September 6, 1877, and the affidavits filed with the county clerk to show such service of notice, were sufficient to authorize the county clerk to issue the deed to appellant.

Garrick v. Chamberlain, 97 Ill. 620; Gage v. Bailey, 102 Ill. 11; Frew v. Taylor, 106 Ill. 159.

It does not appear that any of the items of the city taxes of 1875, charged by the bill to be in excess of the constitutional limits, were extended with the taxes against this property, and for which the property was sold and the deed issued to appellant February 4, 1880. The voluntary certificates of the county clerk are not evidence.

1 Greenl. Ev. sec. 498.

The judgments of the County Court of Cook County under which appellant purchased, are res judicata and cannot be collaterally attacked.

The county court is a court of record with general original jurisdiction in the matter of the sale of lands for delinquent taxes.

Graceland Cemetery Co. v. People, 92 Ill. 619.

its judgment is conclusive while it remains in operation.

Mayo v. Ah Loy, 82 Cal. 479; Porter v. Purdy, 29 N. Y. 106; People v. Brislin, 80 Ill. 423; C. N. W. R. R. v. People, 83 Ill. 467; Andrews v. People, 84 Ill. 28; Graceland Cemetery Co. v. People, supra; Chicago Theological Seminary v. Gage, 12 Fed. Rep. 398.

The action of the court in such matters is in rem against the property.

Rev. Stat. of Ill. 1874, ch. 120, sec. 191; Pidgeon v. People, 36 Ill. 249; Chestnut v. Marsh, 12 Ill. 173; Spellman v. Curtenius, 12 Ill. 409; Olcott v. State, 5 Gil. 431; Brown v. Joliet, 22 Ill. 123; People v. Nichols, 49 Ill. 517; St. John v. E. St. Louis, 50 Ill. 92; Atkins v. Hinman, 2 Gil. 437.

Hence the judgment is binding on all the world.

Starkie, Ev. secs. 320, 380; Wells, Res Adjudicata, 504, Groudson v. Leonard, 4 Cranch, 434 (8 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 670). See also Gelston v. Hoyt, 13 Johns. 561; 3 Wheat. 246 (16 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 381); Graceland Cemetery Co. v. People, 92 Ill. 619; McCahill v. Ins. Co. 26 N. J. Eq. 531, and cases cited; Monroe v. Douglas, 4 Sandf. Ch. 134; Bradstreet v. Neptune Ins. Co. 3 Sumn. 600.

It is held in Illinois that a record of a court imports verity and must be tried by itself.

Young v. Thompson, 14 Ill. 380.

Where the court has jurisdiction the judgment cannot be questioned collaterally.

Hobson v. Ewan, 62 Ill. 146; Goudy v. Hall, 36 Ill. 313; Young v. Lorain, 11 Ill. 624; Conover v. Musgrave, 68 Ill. 58; Osgood v. Blackmore, 59 Ill. 261; Prescott v. Chicago, 60 Ill. 121; Feaster v. Fleming, 56 Ill. 457.

The records of a court import absolute verity, and no evidence will be received to show the want of jurisdiction, if the records affirmatively assert jurisdiction.

Zepp v. Hager, 70 Ill. 223, and cases cited; People v. Gray, 72 Ill. 343; Mulford v. Stalzenback, 46 Ill. 303, and cases cited.

The valuation of property by the assessor for taxation is conclusive, and a tax based upon the assessment can be assailed only for fraud or want of jurisdiction.

Spencer v. People, 68 Ill. 510, and cases cited; Republic Life Ins. Co. v. Pollak, 75 Ill. 292; People v. Big Muddy Iron Co. 89 Ill. 116, and cases cited.

There is now a disposition to draw a distinction between a judgment rendered in a case where the owner of the land objected to the entry of the judgment, and a case where the judgment for the taxes was entered by default. The authority for this distinction is traced to the opinion in the Graceland Cemetery Case, 92 Ill. 619. See also Belleville Nail Co. v. People, 98 Ill. 399. But the cases of Gage v. Busse, 102 Ill. 592, and Gage v. Parker, 103 Ill. 528, seem to dispose of the whole question, and although the court was misled in two cases by an erroneous construction of a third, as soon as the matter was presented in its true light the court took steps immediately to correct the error.

Shortly after the determination of the case at bar in the circuit court, the learned judge before whom it was tried reviewed to some extent the questions here presented, and arrived at the conclusion now pressed.

Chicago Theological Seminary v. Rep. 398.

It does not appear by this recor jection was made to the rendition ments for the sale of the land for

Mr. Edward G. Mason, for

Only appellant's actual invest per cent interest should be refun

People v. Peacock, 98 Ill. 172 Hill, 11 Ill. 22; Reed v. Tyler, 56 I v. Hutchinson, 108 Ill. 662, 669; 102 Ill. 595.

The county court had no juris ter the two judgments upon which rest. The first judgment embrac to the county commissioners. T braced unlawful items for entert visitors and interest upon obligat of the constitutional limitation.

Law v. People, 87 Ill. 385; M Thompson, 55 Ill. 249; Belleville N ple, 98 Ill. 399, 403; Gage v. Buss Elwell v. Shaw, 1 Me. 339; Dre Vt. 506; Stetson v. Kempton, 1 Kemper v. McClelland, 19 Ohio, Davis, 4 Mich. 140; McQuilkin v. 581; Noble v. Indianapolis, 16 In v. Griffin, 51 Miss. 782; Rhode Iowa, 540; Pierce v. Schutt, 20 Wi well v. Patterson, 51 Cal. 637.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the court:

Appellees' testator, plaintiff the possession, and claiming to of a certain lot of ground in Chic the appellant, who was defendan deeds executed by the county County, Illinois, on the 6th of Se and 4th of February, 1880; whic based on sales made October 27, tober 3, 1877, for the non-payn These sales were in pursuance of the county court, rendered at t the treasurer of Cook County, who the collector of its revenue.

To the proceedings in the cou plaintiff did not appear, nor w thereto otherwise than by publica paper, giving notice of the applic ments, and, subsequently, of the sale of the property for non-pa taxes assessed against it.

The present suit was brought f of removing the cloud on the p arising from the before mentione deeds, and to obtain a decree re fendant to convey to the plainti and interests as he had thus acq

The plaintiff in the bill avow and willingness to pay not only t disbursements for the legal tax the judgments of the county co additional sum as to the court s

It was adjudged by the circuit plaintiff should pay the redem allowed by statute, had the j sales been only for legal taxes cent interest, in each case, from of two years after the the tax s other taxes as defendant subseque the lot in question, with interest on the amount of each payment

as ascertained to be
2. The defendant,
that sum with inter-
been paid into court
judged that the title virtue of the sales
l held for naught as he deeds be delivered

nois declares that the sales of real estate
xes or special assessatever, shall exist in ons interested for a wo years from such
n the General Assem-
by law "for reason-
he owners or parties
or otherwise, of the perty for such taxes
the time of redempted, That occupants
with personal notice
tion expires." Art.

e when these sales
r the assignee of any
r city lot, at any sale
ized by the laws of a deed for the lands
he served, or caused printed, or partly
, notice of his pur-
actual possession or or lot, and also the same was taxed or diligently inquiring,
unty, at least three
on of the time of re-
which notice he shall
the land or lot, in scription of the land
what year taxed or n the time of redemp-
son is in actual posch land or lot, and the same was taxed
diligent search and in the county, then shall publish such printed in such coun-
all be inserted three re than five months
than three months,
tion shall expire."
0, p. 893.
defendant's title, in received, upon the red in violation of
atutory provisions;
under both deeds,
assessment of taxes
or the non-payment
ordered the sales,
e, illegal taxes, for ot liable, and which o pay. The appel-tions to his title are gments of the coun-
e urged in any col-
the only remedy of
ing, it is contended,
Court of the State.

His argument is, that by the Constitution and laws of the State, the County Court is a court of record, with general original jurisdiction in the matter of the sale of lands for delinquent taxes; that proceedings in such cases are in rem against the property assessed; and that judgment therein rendered is conclusive upon the taxpayer, so long as it remains unmodified by the court which rendered it, or until it is set aside in some direct mode for fraud or collusion, or is reversed upon appeal for error. In support of the general rule that forbids collateral attack upon the judgments or decrees of a court having jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties, and where the want of jurisdiction does not appear upon the record, numerous authorities are cited by appellant's counsel. But they have no application to cases like the present one, as the settled course of decision in the highest courts of the State abundantly shows. It will be well to examine a few of the cases determined in that court. [460]

In McLaughlin v. Thompson, 55 Ill. 249, which was an action of ejectment, in which the plaintiff asserted a tax title, the validity of which the defendant disputed, upon the ground that the sale was, in part, for taxes levied by a county commissioner's court, at a time other than that prescribed by the statute, the court said: "The evidence shows that this county tax entered into and formed part of the judgment, and the sum for which the land was sold. That tax being illegal, appellant, or those under whom he claims, were not required to pay it, nor did the law impose the duty of redeeming from the sale. And it has been repeatedly held that if any portion of the tax is illegal, or the judgment is too large, only to the extent of a few cents, the sale and tax deed will be void. This being so, the tax deed conveyed no title, and hence there could be no recovery under it, as the plaintiff in ejectment must, as in other cases, establish his right to recover."

A case much relied upon by counsel for appellant is Graceland Cemetery Co. v. The People, etc. 92 Ill. 619. That was an appeal from a judgment rendered by a county court against certain lands belonging to the Cemetery Company for the taxes of 1871 to 1874 inclusive. It appeared that, in 1873, application was made to the county court for judgment against the lands for the taxes of 1871. The company resisted judgment upon the ground that the lands were exempted by law from taxation. After trial the defense was sustained. A similar application was made for judgment for the taxes of 1872, 1873 and 1874. It was again resisted, and the exemption again sustained. No appeal or writ of error was prosecuted from either of those judgments. Nevertheless, in 1879, another application was made for judgment against the same lands for the taxes for 1871 to 1874 inclusive, and judgment was then rendered by the county court against the company. [461] The Supreme Court of Illinois reversed the latter judgment upon the ground that the former judgments in favor of the company, in respect of its claim of exemption from taxation, having been rendered after a trial on the merits—the court having jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter—were, even if erroneous, conclusive so long as they were not reversed or modified in some legal proceeding instituted for that purpose. The court observed in that case, that it was "clear, upon principle and authority, there is no difference between a judgment rendered in a proceeding to collect taxes and any other judgment, so far as being binding on the parties is concerned."

That case is cited by counsel in support of the proposition that the judgment of the county court, in respect of the premises here in question, is conclusive against the owner, although he did not appear and resist the application for judgment. But that the court did not intend so to decide is clear from its language in Belleville Nail Co. v. People, etc. 98 Ill. 483, where it was said: "In Graceland Cemetery Co. v. People, 92 Ill. 619, we held, where the owner of the land appeared in such a proceeding, filed objections and contested the liability of his land for the tax claimed, that the judgment against the land for the tax was conclusive against him of the liability of the land for the tax, in a collateral proceeding. But it is only in the case of such appearance and defense that we regard the judgment as conclusive." It was further observed in the same case, that the declaration of the statute that the tax deed made upon a sale under a judgment for taxes shall be prima facie evidence of certain enumerated things requisite to a correct judgment, "shows the intention of the statute that the judgment was not to have the same effect of conclusiveness which is given, collaterally, to ordinary judgments rendered by default, where personal service has been had. There is in these cases no personal service, but only publication of notice in a newspaper that application will be made for judgment." These principles were reaffirmed in Gage v. Bailey, 102 Ill. 11, which was a suit in equity to set aside the sale and conveyance of lands for taxes upon several grounds, which, as the owner did not appear in the county court and contest the application for judgment for the tax assessed against his property, were fully considered and passed upon.

[462]

But the latest adjudication by the state court of the question under consideration was Riverside Co. v. Howell, 118 Ill. 259. That was ejectment for the recovery of land, the defendant claiming title under a tax deed based upon a judgment of the county court. The validity of the sale was questioned upon the ground, among others, that a part of the taxes, for the non-payment of which the sale was ordered, were illegal and void. The argument was made there, as in this case, that the judgment of the county court was conclusive as to all matters that could or ought to have been passed upon in rendering it; and, if it included too much taxes, or illegal taxes, it was only error to be remedied by appeal. But the court, finding that certain taxes included in the judgment were invalid, held that no title passed by the sale observing that "the authorities are to the effect, that when a part of the tax for which a sale of real estate is made is illegal, the sale is void," citing McLaughlin v. Thompson, 55 Ill. 249; Kemper v. McClelland's Lessee, 19 Ohio, 308; Gamble v. Witty, 55 Miss. 26; Cooley, Taxation, 295, 296; Hardenburg v. Kidd, 10 Cal. 402. In the same case the court reaffirmed the doctrine laid down in Belleville Nail Co. v. People, 98 Ill. 399; Gage v. Bailey, 102 Id. 12, and other cases, to the effect that a judgment

by default, in a tax sale proce conclusive upon the taxpayer, b
peached collaterally, distinguis
of cases from those where sale
satisfy special assessments, in re
it was said, that "if the property
make his objections in the pro
the assessment is confirmed, the
not be permitted to go behind the when steps are taken to enforce

These decisions establish a ru which determines the present c
out reference to other objection
validity of the sales and deeds u
pellant claims title, it satisfa from the proof: 1. That the non-payment of which the first included taxes to meet allowan
diem and mileage of county co
excess of what the statute author
a large part of the taxes, for th
of which the second sale was upon items in the ordinances
Chicago, representing as wel
which that city could not, und stances, legally contract, as inde
was in excess of the limit impos
Constitution upon counties, ci
municipal corporations. Law,
etc. 27 Ill. 385.

These grounds of objection to defendant were, under the set State, open for consideration in well founded, the conclusion m
sales at which the defendant p
consequently, the deeds which were ineffectual to defeat the ti of the lot in question. By t defendant receives all that to demand as a condition prece render of such title as he acqui
chase; indeed, he received mo
have been awarded to him; f
condition of granting the relief
payer was bound to do equity,
should reimburse the purchaser
all taxes paid by him, whether the property was sold, or thos
levied thereon and paid by hin
on each sum (Gage v. Bailey, 10
v. Hutchinson, 108 Id. 668; Pea 110 Id. 100), the defendant seem allowed, in the present case, am
double the amount of the taxe
lot was sold. Of this error in appellees complain, but it cann
upon this appeal by the purch
sale; and, perhaps, under the s ing the jurisdiction of this cou
have been the subject of a sepa
the owner of the lot.

We perceive no error in the
affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, S

ND EDMUND WEBB,
in Err.,
.
L AND GEORGE S.
s. of MOSES H. GRIN-Collector of the PORT

ter's ed., 477-481.)

-Act of June 30, 1864.

Act of June 30, 1864, chap.
posing a duty of 60 per cent
ty of 50 per cent on "all of which silk is the compo-
value, not otherwise pro-
silk and cotton, bought otted net," but which was the component material of ce," and subject to a duty

. 44.]
Decided Nov. 23, 1885.

cuit Court of the United thern District of New

ts of the case appear in
rt.
tanly and Edwin B.
n error.
l, Atty-Gen., for defend-

ford delivered the opin-

ught by the plaintiffs in ctor of the Port of New 50 as duties illegally ex-
on of merchandise into rpool, England, in 1869.
he defendants, executors
verdict, on which there
r favor, to review which ught. The question in-ion 8 of the Act of June Stat. at L. 210], which
fter the 1st of July, 1864,
retofore imposed by law
after mentioned, there
the merchandise enu-
n, the following duties:
ees, shawls, scarfs, man-
lkerchiefs, veils, laces
ts, hats, caps, turbans,
itts, aprons, stockings,
atch chains, webbing,
ons, tassels, cords, and um ad valorem. On all or of which silk is the chief value, not other-er centum ad valorem."
invoiced and entered as k spot net." The col-n it of 60 per cent, as he importers contended
ture of which silk was
of chief value, not othersubject to a duty of 50

s contains the following produced witnesses, who

ties BLATCHFORD.
S., BOOK 29.

testified that the merchandise in question was a manufacture made partly of silk and partly of cotton; that the ground of the fabric was silk and the spot upon it was cotton, but the fabric was made substantially of silk, and the article was universally bought and sold under the name of 'spot or dotted net,' and never by the name of 'silk lace,' and that there was in 1864, and has been ever since that time, a well known class of goods imported into this country, which was made wholly of silk, and other and different from the merchandise in question in this action, which was bought and sold under the name of 'silk lace.' Plaintiffs offered testimony tending to show that the fabrics commercially regarded as 'silk laces' were finished on one side in figures in the form of a scollop, as a rule, and having finished edges, and that lace edgings were known as 'silk laces;' that, among laces known as 'silk laces,' are Spanish laces, Pushee laces, blond laces; that all laces which are known in commerce as 'silk laces' are made on a machine; that there were minor classes of laces included in the general class of 'silk laces,' and each class is composed of several kinds of laces, which go by distinguishing names, so that, if a person should come into a store and ask for 'silk laces' it would not be possible to tell what particular silk lace he wanted until he should specify by its particular name the particular variety wanted; that there were different names for different kinds of nets, and if a person should simply ask for net goods, it could not be ascertained what particular article he required until he mentioned its specific distinguishing name; and that there were curtain nets, bobbinets, Brussels nets, Mechlin nets, zephyr nets, mohair nets, illusion nets, and a variety of others. But plaintiffs' witnesses, upon cross examination, testified that the term 'silk laces' was not a commercial term used to designate a particular article in trade, but was a general term, and that each particular silk lace had a specific trade name, such as Valenciennes, Bretonne, and a variety of other names. Plaintiffs counsel having rested their case, the defendants' counsel called witnesses who testified in behalf of the defendants, that they were and had been for twenty years, wholesale dealers in, and importers of, silk laces, and were also wholesale dealers and importers of goods like the goods which were the subject of controversy in this action; that the term 'silk laces' was not generally regarded, in trade and commerce, in the United States, among wholesale dealers in and importers of laces, as a commercial term, used to designate any particular article of trade, but was generally understood to include all laces which were made wholly or substantially of silk; that each particular lace had a particular trade name; that the goods which were the subject of controversy in this suit were a particular kind of silk lace, called 'spotted or dotted net;' that they were made upon lace machines; that, in trade and commerce generally, in the United States, laces were understood to be delicate, thin ornamental net work, the meshes of which were formed by plaiting together threads of silk, cotton, or other material; and that the goods which were the subject of controversy in this suit corresponded with that definition."

[479]

Both parties having rested, the plaintiffs requested the court to direct a verdict for them. This was refused and they excepted.

They then requested the court to charge the jury as follows: "1. That, if the jury find that goods such as those in question were not generally known among wholesale dealers in, and importers of, the articles, in buying and selling, at and prior to June 30, 1864, in our markets, under the commercial name of 'silk lace,' then the plaintiffs are entitled to recover. 2. That, if the jury find that goods such as those in [480] question were generally known among wholesale dealers in, and importers of, the article, in buying and selling, at and prior to June 30, 1864, in our markets, under the name of 'nets,' or 'spot nets,' or 'dotted nets,' or 'silk and cotton spot nets,' and not as 'silk laces,' then the plaintiffs are entitled to a verdict. 3. That, testimony having been given and not contradicted, that the goods in suit were manufactures of silk and cotton, in which silk was the component material of chief value, the plaintiffs are entitled to recover, unless the goods were known in trade and commerce, in this country, by importers, as 'silk laces.' 4. That, if the jury find that the goods were not commercially known, among wholesale dealers, in this country, as 'silk laces,' at the time of the passage of the Act of June 30, 1864, plaintiffs are entitled to recover. 5. That it is immaterial whether goods like plaintiffs' importations were or were not known as 'laces,' if they were not known commercially as 'silk laces.' 6. That, plaintiffs having shown, without contradiction, that the articles in controversy were composed of silk and cotton, the presumption, in the absence of proof, would be, that the laces were not silk laces." The court, as to each proposition, refused so to charge, and the plaintiffs excepted to each refusal.

The court then instructed the jury "that, if the plaintiffs' importation was not a silk lace within the meaning of the Act of June 30, 1864, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover; that it was a silk lace within the meaning of the Act, if it was a lace of which silk was the component material of chief value, unless, at the time the Act was passed, it was commercially known, by importers and dealers in such articles in this country, as a different article; that, if it was commercially known as 'spot net' or 'dotted net' instead of 'lace,' it would fall under the clause relating to manufactures of silk, not otherwise provided for; but, if it was called by such name only to distinguish it from other varieties of silk lace, all silk laces being known by some particular name which distinguished one variety from the others, it was, nevertheless, a 'silk lace,' within the meaning of the Act." There was no exception taken to any [481] part of those instructions.

The jury, having retired, came into court for further instructions, and the court charged them that the first clause of the 8th section imposed a duty of 60 per cent "upon articles which were made all of silk, or which were made of silk and cotton, in which silk was the controlling element, if they were known among merchants as silk goods." To this charge the plaintiffs excepted.

We think the case was, in view of the evidence, fairly and properly presented to the jury by the court. The jury were, in substance, told: (1) that the plaintiffs were entitled to article was not a silk lace; (2) the lace, if it was a lace of which sil
ponent material of chief value,
time the Act was passed it was known here as a different article
was commercially known as "spo
ted net," it would fall under th clause; but if it was so called as rieties of silk lace, each of which lar distinguishing name, it was,
silk lace within the meaning of t

The instructions asked for we roneous view that an article coul
lace, within the Act, unless it w
sold by the commercial name o
This was the substance of all th
asked. Although the article wa silk and cotton, yet, if silk was t
material of chief value, and it w
was known among merchants a clearly fell within the 60 per c
though a lace wholly of silk also clause, as a silk lace. The evi sides was to the effect that the ter
was not a commercial term for a ticle, but included all laces made stantially of silk, each particula particular trade name, and the tion being a particular kind of s
"spotted or dotted net."

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, S

P. R. BOHLEN, Plf.
v.
RICHARD ARTHURS, Assig
BAUM and JOHN CARRIER,
M. McCLURE et al.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed.,

*Replevin—parties—right of poss
in common—right to cut timb nia Statute.*

*1. A tenant in common cannot m against a cotenant, because they equally a right of possession; this r
in Pennsylvania.

2. Where under an agreement fo of an undivided interest in land, to the purchaser on his paying for it,
right to cut timber on the land wit
of the owners of the remaining in tenants in common with him of the
such timber, and removes it, and it
sion of by such owners of the remai
has no such right of possession in it
an action of replevin by him again

3. The Pennsylvania Act of May
sec. 6, which provides as follows: "
replevin, now pending or hereafter
cover timber, lumber, coal or othe
ered from realty, the plaintiff shal recover, notwithstanding the fact
the land from which said proper
may be in dispute; Provided, Said
title in himself at the time of the no operation as between tenants in

[No. 59.]

Submitted Nov. 12, 1885. Decide

IN ERROR to the Circuit Cou States for the Western Distri
vania.

* Head notes by Mr. Justice BLAT

d facts of the case appear in e court.

rt Arthurs and George
r plaintiff in error.

Dalzell and Miller & Mc-
ndants in error.

atchford delivered the opin-

on of replevin brought in the f the United States for the
of Pennsylvania, to recover
are white pine timber logs, in al the court directed a verdict
ts, and, after a judgment aclaintiff has brought this writ
efendants who pleaded, setting
hemselves, were one Arthurs, ruptcy of Baum and Carrier,
re. Each party, plaintiff and med title to the timber un-Carrier and one Osborne, who e December 18, 1872, to the h the timber was taken. On , Carrier and Osborne made a nt with one Phillips, to the efould convey to him, his heirs
warranty deed, in fee simple,
one half of certain specified
unties of Clearfield and Jeffer-
e of Pennsylvania, on his payation, and performing the cove-ed in the agreement. These ould pay them $125 per acre
vided one half, amounting to nent thereof to be made out of said lands, when and as soon
be realized from the sale of lands, or from the sale of tim-coal or other minerals therein
mber manufactured upon said
ills thereon to be erected, as ntioned and provided for."
pay no interest, and to have the y time the consideration money
r any part of the lands and re-Phillips agreed "to advance and
of such amounts of money as y to construct and erect a first
r sawmills, and such fixtures appurtenant thereto, and such
tional improvements," as he,
"from time to time, consider
o be advantageous and neces-ditable and full development"
Then followed these clauses:
awmills, machinery, and other hall be located on such parts of y be mutually agreed upon by
of the first and second parts
olding as tenants in common,
ers. And it is hereby express-
d agreed, that the said Wm.
f the second part named in this
have the right and power to vements made or to be made
, and to direct and manage the
the lands herein described and ties hereto as tenants in com-partners."
nd his administrators, in June,
the plaintiff and one Whitney
Phillips under the agreement of December, 1872, and in and to the lands described therein. At the same time, the heirs at law of Phillips quitclaimed to the plaintiff and Whitney the undivided one half of the said lands, so agreed to be conveyed to Phillips. The timber in question was cut and taken from those lands. Under a contract between the plaintiff and Whitney, and one McCracken, made in September, 1876, the latter agreed to [484] cut from the lands a specified quantity of square pine timber, for a stipulated price, and deliver it to the plaintiff and Whitney at Pittsburgh. In April, 1877, Whitney assigned to the plaintiff all his interest in that timber. McCracken, in pursuance of this contract, cut from the lands the timber in question. It was taken by the marshal under the writ in this suit, in April, 1877, and was bonded by the defendants and delivered to them.

The foregoing facts being proved at the trial, the court instructed the jury that the plaintiff had failed to show sufficient property in the timber to sustain replevin, and directed a verdict for the defendants, to which direction the plaintiff excepted.

It is contended, for the plaintiff, that Phillips acquired a right to the possession of the lands as a tenant in common, and a right to cut [485] and market the timber, with a view to paying the consideration for the purchase; that such rights had passed to the plaintiff; and that a verdict for the plaintiff should have been directed or else the case should have been left to the jury under proper instructions.

The most that was shown by the evidence was, that the plaintiff claimed title to the timber as being a tenant in common with the defendants of the lands from which it was cut (it being stated in the bill of exceptions that both plaintiff and defendants claimed under Baum, Carrier and Osborne); and that the suit was against the defendants, being such tenants in common with the plaintiff, and in possession of the timber.

It is a well settled principle, that, to maintain an action of replevin, a person must have not only some right of property but the right of possession. Hence, a tenant in common cannot maintain replevin against a cotenant, because they have each and equally a right of possession. This rule is recognized in Pennsylvania. In Wilson v. Gray, 8 Watts, 25, 35, it is said: "The defendant may plead property in the plaintiff and himself, and, if true, it must not only defeat the plaintiff in his writ, but entitle the defendant to a return of the property; because the latter, having had the possession of it, coupled with an interest, which [486] makes his case the stronger, until improperly deprived thereof by the sheriff, under the plaintiff's writ, which he had no right to use for such purpose, has a right to be placed in statu quo, that is, restored to the possession of the property as the joint owner thereof."

The terms of the agreement with Phillips did not give him any title to, or right of possession in, any timber which might be cut from the premises. He was to have a deed of an undivided half of the lands when he should pay the consideration and perform the covenants. The purchase money could be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the lands, or out of the sale of timber, coal or minerals, or lumber manufactured on the premises in mills to be erected thereon, as provided for in the agreement. But no land or timber could be sold unless the owners of the other undivided half of the lands should join with Phillips in a sale, and then one half of the purchase money would belong absolutely to the former, and only the other half to Phillips, to be applied on his purchase. There was nothing in the agreement which gave Phillips any right to cut timber on the premises without the consent of the other parties, and their consent that McCracken or the plaintiff might cut and remove the timber is not shown.

The plaintiff cites the Pennsylvania Statute of May 15, 1871, No. 249 (Sess. Laws, 1871, p. 268; 2 Purdon's Digest, p. 1266, sec. 6), which provides as follows: "In all actions of replevin, now pending or hereafter brought, to recover timber, lumber, coal or other property severed from realty, the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover, notwithstanding the fact that the title to the land from which said property was severed may be in dispute; Provided, Said plaintiff shows title in himself at the time of the severance." This statute has no operation as between tenants in common, but applies only to actions against third persons; and its object is only to prevent a defendant in a replevin suit of the character mentioned from setting up a dispute as to the title to the land, between the plaintiff and a person other than the defendant, if the plaintiff shows a title to the [487] land, as against the defendant, at the time of the severance. Besides, the plaintiff here showed no title at all to the land, in himself.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[505] ALEXANDER R. SHEPHERD, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN FREDERICK MAY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed. 505-512.)

Purchase subject to incumbrance—personal liability—principal and surety—estoppel.

1. An agreement merely to take land subject to a specified incumbrance, is not an agreement to assume and pay the incumbrance. There must be words importing a promise to pay the debt to render the grantee personally liable.

2. In the absence of the mutual agreement of the grantor, grantee and holder of the incumbrance to that effect, the relation of principal and surety does not exist between the grantee and grantor; and the latter is not discharged from his liability by an agreement between the other parties to extend the time of payment.

3. A clause in a trust deed, prescribing that the terms of sale should be the amount due on the note, and the expenses of sale in cash, does not estop the holder from denying payment in full, he having purchased at the sale for a less sum than the amount due.

[No. 50.]

Argued Nov. 11, 1885. Decided Nov. 23, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Statement by Mr. Justice Woods:

This was an action at law brought by Jo Frederick May, the defendant in error, again Alexander R. Shepherd, the plaintiff in erro to recover a balance due on a promissory not

The facts disclosed by the bill of exceptio were, in substance, as follows: On April 2 1875, May lent Shepherd $10,000, whereup Shepherd made and delivered to May a note that date and amount, payable to his order t years after date, with interest at 10 per ce per annum, payable quarter yearly until pa To secure the payment of the note, Shephe on the same day conveyed to two trustees, w power to sell, in default of the payment of t note, a certain improved lot in the City Washington of which he was the owner, a which May at that time believed to be go security for the money lent. This deed of tr provided that if default was made in the p ment of the note or the interest, the trust should sell the property thereby conveyed public sale, on the following terms: "T amount of indebtedness secured by said deed trust unpaid, with the expenses of sale, in ca and the balance at twelve and eighteen mont for which the notes of the purchaser, bear interest from the day of sale, * * * shall taken."

Before the maturity of the note, Shepherd s the lot to Gilbert C. Walker, and by deed da August 1, 1876, for the consideration, as sta in the deed, of $30,000, the receipt of wh was acknowledged, conveyed the same to h The deed to Walker was made "subject t certain deed of trust dated the twenty-sixth of April, A. D. 1875, * * * for the sum of thousand dollars," being the same deed of t executed by Shepherd to secure his note May. The deed contained a covenant by Sh herd to defend the premises conveyed, aga the claim of all persons claiming under grantor, "save and except the aforesaid dee trust." Shepherd paid the interest on his n to May as it accrued up to the time of his to Walker, and after that time Walker paid interest until the maturity of the note. W the note fell due, Walker came to May and him that "he had the note to pay," and as May to extend the time of payment for year; and thereupon May extended the note one year, Walker agreeing to pay inte thereon at the rate specified in the note. Wa paid the interest upon the note for the year, at the end of that time asked a further exten for another year. May agreed to extend the of payment for nine months at the same ra interest, which Walker agreed to pay, bu paid no interest for this period. There wa evidence that Shepherd consented to thes tensions of time for the payment of his n

At the end of the nine months allowe May to Walker for the payment of the n upon default made, the property covered by deed of trust was advertised and sold by trustees. It was purchased by May for the of $8,500, to whom it was conveyed by trustees by deed dated May 19, 1879. crediting the note with the net proceeds of May brought suit against Shepherd to rec the balance which he claimed to be due the The jury returned a verdict for May $3,163.28, on which the court rendered ment. Shepherd, by the present writ of e tness of that judgment.

attingly and Andrew intiff in error:

ances of the case Walker debtor, and Shepherd the t of the note; and the ex- ime for a valid considera- d s consent, released him e note.

2; Millerd v. Thorn, 56 v. Tallman, 67 N. Y. 96; 10 Bligh, N. R. 548, 580, Mich. 478; Calvo v. Da- eorge v. Andrews, 60 Md.

not be used to show that tgaged premises assumed ortgage. The assumption by circumstances, and a se is sufficient.

2; Moore's Appeal, 88 Pa. Zab. 680; Drury v. Tre- n, 168; Brewer v. Dyer, 7

his assumed relations to ame liable upon it to suit

ush. 337; Barker v. Buck- ence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 268; Y. 178; Ross v. Kennison, ugh v. Kugler, 3 Ohio St. ompson, 4 Ohio St. 333.

er cent interest until paid, e same rate of interest, for fficient consideration, and

ls'n v. Helmrick, 57 Mo. s, 69 Mo. 539; McComb v. 48; Wood v. Newkirk, 15 v. Freshwater, 31 Ohio St. 3 Wis. 286.

rescribed that the terms of unt of the note and expen- d the plaintiff is estopped not paid.

17 Johns. 161, 166; Free- Y. 50; Dundas v. Hitch- U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 978). property and say that the

3, 504, et seq.; Breeding v. 175; Phillips v. Rogers, 12 Davis, 26 N. Y. 495.

Duvall, for defendant in ls delivered the opinion of the plaintiff in error the transactions stated in Walker became the prin- and Shepherd became his pon a valid contract with time for the payment of consent of Shepherd, the charged.

or sought upon the trial contention by asking the ry to render a verdict in having refused to do this, igned for error.

is assignment of error to e mere conveyance of the premises in question to Walker by Shepherd, subject to the incumbrance created by the deed of trust, Walker became bound to May as principal debtor, and Shepherd became his surety. We are of opinion that the conveyance of the premises to Walker did not subject him to any liability to May whatever. To raise such a liability as is contended for by Shepherd there must be words in the deed of conveyance from which, by fair import, an agreement to pay the debt can be inferred. This was expressly held in Elliott v. Sackett, 108 U. S. 132 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 678], where Mr. Justice Blatchford, in delivering the judgment of this court, said: "An agreement merely to take land, subject to a specified incumbrance, is not an agreement to assume and pay the incumbrance. The grantee of an equity of redemption, without words in the grant importing in some form that he assumes the payment, does not bind himself personally to pay the debt. There must be words importing that he will pay the debt to make him personally liable." To the same effect see Belmont v. Coman, 22 N. Y. 438; Fisk v. Tolman, 124 Mass. 254; Hay v. Brownshall, 4 C. E. Green, 78; Fowler v. Fay, 62 Ill. 375. There are no such words in the deed made by the plaintiff in error to Walker.

Neither is there any other sufficient evidence of any agreement between Walker and Shepherd, whereby the former undertook to pay the debt of the latter to May. The remark made by Walker to May, when he asked to have the time for the payment of the note extended, that "he had it to pay," falls far short of showing any such agreement. As he had bought the property, subject to the incumbrance of the deed of trust, for the consideration of $30,000, which, as appears by the deed to him, he had paid to Shepherd, he might well say that he had the incumbrance to pay without admitting or meaning that he had become personally liable to Shepherd to pay it. His words may be fairly construed to mean that he had the incumbrance to pay or would have to lose the property on which he had already paid $30,000 of the purchase money. But, even if Walker had said to May that he was liable for the debt, his admission would not have been binding on May so as to establish the fact without other proof. And if Walker had expressly promised May to pay the debt, that would not, without the assent of May, have converted Shepherd from a principal debtor into a surety merely. Cucullu v. Hernandez, 103 U. S. 105 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 322]; Rey v. Simpson, 22 How. 341 [63 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 260]. The only way in which Walker could become the principal debtor of May, and Shepherd, the surety, was by the mutual agreement of all three. There is no proof of any such agreement. It follows that, as the relation of principal and surety did not exist between Walker and Shepherd, the latter was not discharged from his liability to May by the contract of May with Walker to extend the time for the payment of the money due on Shepherd's note. But even if it had been shown that Shepherd had become the surety of Walker, it was incumbent on the former to show as a part of his defense that the indulgence given by May to Walker was without his assent. Spriggs v. Bank of Mount Pleasant, 14 Pet. 201 [39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 419]; Bangs v. Strong, 7 Hill, 250;

[511]

S. C. 42 Am. Dec. 64; Cox v. Mobile, etc. R. R. Co. 37 Ala. 323. There was no proof of want of assent. The defense therefore failed.

It is next contended by the plaintiff in error that May is estopped to deny that the note sued on is not paid in full, because the deed of conveyance made to him by the trustees recites that the property was sold to him in accordance with the terms of the deed of trust, and the deed of trust declared that the terms of sale should be the amount due on the note of Shepherd, and the expenses of sale in cash, and the balance on a credit of twelve and eighteen months. This contention is based on the theory that the clause of the deed of trust executed by Shepherd, prescribing the terms of sale, and which merely showed his expectation that the property would bring, at least, the amount of the note and expenses of sale, estopped May from denying that the property would, and actually did, bring that amount. There is no estoppel. The proposition amounts to this, that when a mortgagor represents to his mortgagee that the property mortgaged is sufficient security for the debt, and the mortgagee, relying upon the representation, accepts the security, and it turns out that the proceeds of the mortgaged property are insufficient to pay the debt, he is estopped to deny that his debt is paid. The statement of the proposition is its answer. The authorities referred to upon this contention* by counsel for Shepherd are cited to sustain the proposition, that a person who accepts a deed of conveyance is estopped to deny recitals therein contained. But as there is no recital in the deed that May had agreed that the property should bring a sum sufficient to pay his note, he is not estopped to deny that the note is paid.

[512]

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

*Fitch v. Baldwin, 17 Johns. 161; Freeman v. Auld, 44 N. Y. 50; Dundas v. Hitchcock, 12 How. 256 ([53 U. S. bk. 13 L. ed. 978.]

---

[487]

STEPHEN KURTZ, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN MOFFITT ET AL.

JOHN MOFFITT ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

STEPHEN KURTZ.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 487-505.)

Removal of causes—Act of 1875—writ of habeas corpus—arrest of deserter from Army of the United States.

*1. A writ of habeas corpus is not removable from a State Court into a Circuit Court of the United States under the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, sec. 2.

2. A police officer of a State, or a private citizen, has no authority as such, without any warrant or military order, to arrest and detain a deserter from the Army of the United States.

[Nos. 860, 871.]

Submitted Oct. 14, 1885. Decided Nov. 23, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco and State of California; and to the Circuit Co United States for the District of Cal

The history and facts appear in t of the court.

Messrs. H. G. Siebert and R. M for Kurtz, the petitioner.

Messrs. Alfred Clarke and S. derson, for respondents.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the the court:

A writ of habeas corpus was issue 8, 1885, by and returnable before the Superior Court of the City and San Francisco in the State of Cali dressed to John Moffitt and T. W. zens of that State, upon the petition Kurtz, a citizen of Pennsylvania, al he was by them unlawfully impriso strained of his liberty, inasmuch a arrested him as a deserter from th the United States, and had no war thority to arrest him, and were not the United States.

Moffitt and Fields, at the time their appearance in that court, file to remove the case into the Circuit C United States, because the parties w of different States, and because the su a question arising under the Consti laws of the United States, to wit: t whether a person who is not an of United States has authority to arres from the Army of the United States. ordered the case to be so removed.

Moffitt and Fields thereupon signe in the circuit court the following re

"Now come the respondents and their return to the writ of habeas cor and show that respondent J. Moffitt police officer of the City and Cou Francisco, and respondent T. W. special police officer of said city a and being such officers as aforesai rested the petitioner, Stephen Ku City and County of San Francis authority of the United States, wit: that said Stephen Kurtz, name of Stephen Noll, on the 2 May, 1876, at Cleveland in the Sta enlisted in the Army of the United the term of five years, and on th of March, 1879, he being a soldier Co. D of the 21st Regiment of Infa Army of the United States, station couver Barracks, in the Territory o ton, deserted from the Army of States; and your respondents hold s er for the purpose of delivering him tary authorities of the United State according to the laws of the United

The circuit court, upon motion a made an order remanding the case perior Court of San Francisco; and Fields sued out a writ of error fro to reverse that order.

After the case had been so reman filed in the Superior Court of San suggestion that the return was insu that he was entitled to be discharg following reasons:

"First. It appears by said retu defendants were not officers of the U

*Head notes by Mr. Justice GRAY.

cers of the municipality of
l as such they have no audetain the plaintiff, and as ave been and are prohibited detaining the plaintiff as a nited States Army by a rule tment which was in force at est of the plaintiff, and still
rule was and is as follows:
e prohibited from arresting
United States Army or Navy
'

ertion set up in the return
t the United States, and not
f California, of which Com-efendants are officers, and
, incompetent to arrest or
.

rtion set up in the return is 6 of section 1342 of the Re-
e United States."

rt, upon a hearing, ordered corpus to be dismissed and custody, and entered judg-
and he sued out a writ of
rt to reverse that judgment,
e highest court of the State
n on the merits of the case
e Robb's Case, 64 Cal. 431,
24, 627 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 542,
anolly, 113 U. S. 27 [Bk. 28,

n to be considered is whether
tly remanded to the state
ve been retained and decided rt of the United States into en removed on a petition
of March 3, 1875, ch. 137,

y the removal of a case from
be circuit court under this gh that it arises under the ws of the United States, or citizens of different States,
uit of a civil nature, at law
e the matter in dispute ex-costs, the sum or value of s." 18 Stat. at L. 470.

corpus, sued out by one ar-
a civil suit or proceeding,
assert the civil right of per-nst those who are holding a criminal. Ex parte Tom [Bk. 27, L. ed. 826]. To g whether it is, within the
of 1875, a "suit at law or e matter in dispute exceeds
f five hundred dollars," it
to refer to the use and the e words in earlier Acts de-
on of the national courts.

t of September 24, 1789, ch.
ized "final judgments and
ons and suits in equity in a
the matter in dispute ex-
ne of two thousand dollars,
to be revised by this court
appeal. 1 Stat. at L. 84.
2, 1816, ch. 39, sec. 1, pro-
should be brought to this writ of error from the Cir-District of Columbia, "un-dispute in such cause shall be of the value of one thousand dollars or upwards, exclusive of costs." 3 Stat. at L. 261.

In Lee v. Lee, 8 Pet. 44 [33 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 860], decided in 1834, a petition to the Circuit Court for the District of Columbia set forth that the petitioners were entitled to their freedom, and were held in slavery by the defendant; he pleaded that they were not entitled to their freedom as they had alleged; upon that plea issue was joined, and a verdict and judgment rendered for the defendant; and the petitioners sued out a writ of error. A preliminary objection to the jurisdiction of this court was overruled, and the judgment below considered on the merits and reversed. The ground of the decision upon the question of jurisdiction appears to have been that the single matter in dispute between the parties was the freedom or slavery of the petitioners—to the petitioners, the value of their freedom, not to be estimated in money; to the defendant, claiming to be their owner, the pecuniary value of the slaves as property, which, if he had been the plaintiff in error, might have been ascertained by affidavits. 8 Pet. 48 [33 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 862].

In Barry v. Mercein, 5 How. 103 [46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 70], decided in 1847, this court dismissed for want of jurisdiction a writ of error to reverse a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, refusing to grant to a father a writ of habeas corpus to take his child out of the custody of his wife who was living apart from him. Chief Justice Taney, in delivering the opinion, after quoting the 22d section of the Judiciary Act of 1789, said: "In order, therefore, to give us appellate power under this section, the matter in dispute must be money, or some right, the value of which in money can be estimated and ascertained." "The words of the Act of Congress are plain and unambiguous. They give the right of revision in those cases only where the rights of property are concerned, and where the matter in dispute has a known and certain value, which can be proved and calculated, in the ordinary mode of a business transaction. There are no words in the law which by any just interpretation can be held to extend the appellate jurisdiction beyond those limits, and authorize us to take cognizance of cases to which no test of money value can be applied. Nor indeed is this limitation upon the appellate power of this court confined to cases like the one before us. It is the same in judgments in criminal cases, although the liberty or life of the party may depend on the decision of the circuit court. And since this court can exercise no appellate power unless it is conferred by Act of Congress, the writ of error in this case must be dismissed." 5 How. 120, 121 [46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 77, 78]. [496]

In Pratt v. Fitzhugh, 1 Black, 271 [66 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 206], decided in 1861, this court dismissed for want of jurisdiction a writ of error to reverse a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of New York, discharging on habeas corpus persons imprisoned upon an execution issued by that court directing the marshal to levy the amount of a decree for $21,581.28 out of their goods and chattels, and, for want thereof, to arrest and keep them until the moneys were paid. Mr. Justice Nelson, in delivering the opinion, said that the 22d section of the Judiciary Act had always been held to mean a property value; and he distinguished the case of Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540 [39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 579] which was a writ of error to reverse a judgment of the Supreme Court of Vermont on habeas corpus, remanding to custody a prisoner under a warrant of extradition from the Governor of that State, upon the ground that it was brought up from a state court under the 25th section of the Judiciary Act, in which case no value was required.

In DeKrafft v. Barney, 2 Black, 704 [67 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 350], decided in 1862, an appeal was taken from a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Columbia, awarding the custody of a child to the father as against the divorced mother; and Lee v. Lee, above cited, was referred to as supporting the right of appeal. But this court dismissed the appeal for want of jurisdiction, Chief Justice Taney saying that the case was not distinguishable from Barry v. Mercein, above cited, and that in that case it was held "that in order to give this court jurisdiction under the 22d section of the Judiciary Act of 1789, the matter in dispute must be [497] money, or some right, the value of which could be calculated and ascertained in money."

The Act of February 5, 1867, ch. 28, sec. 1, conferring power upon the judges of the national courts to issue writs of habeas corpus in cases of persons restrained of their liberty in violation of the Constitution, or of any treaty or law of the United States, expressly gave an appeal to this court from the judgment of a circuit court in such cases. 14 Stat. at L. 385. Shortly after the passage of that Act, Mr. Justice Nelson refused to allow an appeal from a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York upon a writ of habeas corpus issued under the 14th section of the Judiciary Act of 1789, because no appeal was provided by law in the case of a habeas corpus issued under that Act, and the appeal given by the Act of 1867 was confined to cases begun under it. In re Heinrich, 5 Blatchf. C. C. 414, 427. And within two years afterwards it was determined by this court that, independently of the Act of 1867 (which was repealed by the Act of March 27, 1868, ch. 34, 15 Stat. at L. 44), this court (except in a small class of cases of commitments for acts done or omitted under alleged authority of a foreign government, as to which provision was made by the Act of August 29, 1842, ch. 257, 5 Stat. at L. 539) had no jurisdiction by direct appeal to revise the judgments of inferior courts in cases of habeas corpus, but could only do so by itself issuing writs of habeas corpus and certiorari under the general powers conferred by the Judiciary Act of 1789. Ex parte McCardle, 6 Wall. 318 [73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 816], and 7 Wall. 506 [74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 264]; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85 [75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 332]. See also, Ex parte Royall, 112 U. S. 181 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 690]; Wales v. Whitney, 114 U. S. 564 [ante, 277].

Section 1909 of the Revised Statutes, substantially re-enacting provisions of earlier Acts, and providing that writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of the Supreme Courts of certain Territories shall be allowed to this court in the same manner and under the same regulations as from the Circuit Courts of the United States, "where the value erty or the amount in controversy
thousand dollars, except that a wr appeal shall be allowed" to this c decisions of the courts or judges
tory "upon writs of habeas corp
the question of personal freedom,
plies that writs of habeas corpus v
included if not specially mentione
Potts v. Chumasero, 92 U. S. 358 [
499]; Elgin v. Marshall, 106 U.
[Bk. 27, L. ed. 249]; Curtis, U. S.
From this review of the statut
sions, the conclusion is inevitable
diction, conferred by Congress up of the United States, of suits at lav
in which the matter in dispute exc
or value of a certain number of dol
no case in which the right of neit
capable of being valued in money
fore that writs of habeas corpus ar
able from a state court into a Cir
the United States under the Act 1875, ch. 137, § 2; and this case
remanded to the state court.

We are then brought to a con
the merits of the case, as presente
of error sued out by the prisoner t
judgment of the state court, rema custody.

The case, as shown by the reco
this: Kurtz, a deserter from the United States, was, without any w
press authority, arrested by Moffit
police officers of the City of San F
citizens of the State of Californi
United States, and held by them
pose of being delivered to the mili ties of the United States to be tri to the laws of the United States; a immunity from being arrested fo crime by persons not military of United States, and having no expr
from the United States or from su arrest him.

If a police officer or a private ci
right, without warrant or express arrest a military deserter, the righ
rived either from some rule of the land which has become part of our
the legislation of Congress.

By the common law of Englan
civil officer nor a private citizen h
without a warrant to make an crime not committed in his presen
the case of felony, and then only pose of bringing the offender b magistrate. 1 Hale, P. C. 587-59
C. 76-81; 4 Bl. Com. 292, 293, 29
Court, 6 D. & R. 623; S. C. 4 B
No crime was considered a felon
not occasion a total forfeiture of t
lands, or goods, or both. 4 Bl.
Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 42
ed. 89, 91]. And such a forfeiture
low upon conviction by a court-
crime not punishable by the court
law. Co. Lit. 391 a; 1 Clode, Mi
of the Crown, 176.

By some early English statutes, w
to have been in force down to the
of 1688, desertion was made felony
in the civil courts. 3 Inst. 86, 87;

eal, 3 Mod. 124; S.
2 Shower, 511; 12
note; 4 Bl. Com.
Allen, 480, 487–490.
disuse after Parlia-
beginning with the
, and re-enacted al-
he first time author-
to be punished at
ial in time of peace.
Hist. 458; 1 Clode,
wn, 19, 55, 56, 143,

Mutiny Acts have
nly, contained pro-
easonably suspected apprehended by a re a justice of the desertion established
eir surrender to the 7 Anne, ch. 4, sec.
c. 42; 9 Statutes of Military Law, 93,
, 3d ed. 200. By
s made for their apicer or soldier, if a ately met with; and ion whether a man
auses to be appre-
delivered to an offi-aving him brought
may not maintain
who causes his are the officer of the
he latter under the
nd hold all prison-
a military officer.
48, 81; Wolton v.

e ever been the law
cer or a private cit-ithout any warrant magistrate or from arrest a deserter for im to the military
t-martial.
line between civil
s always been main-
of Amendment of
clares that "no per-
for a capital or othnless on a present-
nd jury," expressly
the land or naval
ases subject to the regulation of those
section of the First Congress is empow-
ial form no part of United States, and the limits of their rolled or revised by Hoover, 20 How. 65
]; Ex parte Mason,
ed, 1213]; Wales
[ante, 277]. Con-
upon civil officers
citizens any power
only in a military
e Revised Statutes,
any crime or offense
e offender may, by United States," or

commissioner of a circuit court, or by any judge, mayor, justice of the peace or magistrate of any State where he may be found, "and agreeably to the usual mode of process against offenders in such State, and at the expense of the United States, be arrested and imprisoned, or bailed, as the case may be, for trial before such court of the United States as by law has cognizance of the offense," and that "copies of the process shall be returned as speedily as may be into the clerk's office of such court," manifestly applies to proceedings before the civil courts only. [501]

From the very year of the Declaration of Independence, Congress has dealt with desertion as exclusively a military crime, triable and punishable, in time of peace, as well as in time of war, by court-martial only, and not by the civil tribunals; the only qualification being that since 1830 the punishment of death cannot be awarded in time of peace. Articles of War of September 20, 1776, sec. 6, art. 1, 2 Journals of Congress, 347, continued in force by the Act of September 29, 1789, ch. 25, sec. 4, 1 Stat. at L. 96; Acts of March 16, 1802, ch. 9, sec. 18; April 10, 1806, ch. 20, art. 20; January 11, 1812, ch. 14, sec. 16; January 29, 1813, ch. 16, sec. 12; 2 Stat. at L. 136, 362, 673, 796; May 29, 1830, ch. 183; 4 Stat. at L. 418; Rev. Stat. sec. 1342, arts. 47, 48.

The provisions of the Revised Statutes concerning the trial and punishment of deserters are as follows: By section 1342, "The Armies of the United States shall be governed by the following rules and articles;" "and the convictions mentioned therein shall be understood to be convictions by court-martial." By article 47, any officer or soldier who deserts the service of the United States "shall, in time of war, suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct; and in time of peace, any punishment, excepting death, which a court-martial may direct;" and by article 48, every soldier who deserts "shall be tried by a court-martial and punished, although the time of his enlistment may have elapsed previous to his being apprehended and tried." The provisions of sections 1996 and 1998, which re-enact the Act of March 3, 1865, ch. 79, sec. 21, 13 Stat. at L. 490, and subject every person deserting the military service of the United States to additional penalties, namely: forfeiture of all rights of citizenship, and disqualification to hold any office of trust or profit, can only take effect upon conviction by a court-martial, as was clearly shown by Mr. Justice Strong, when a judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in Huber v. Reily, 53 Pa. St. 112, and has been uniformly held by the civil courts as well as by the military authorities. State v. Symonds, 57 Maine, 148; Severance v. Healey, 50 N. H. 448; [502]
Goetcheus v. Matthewson, 61 N. Y. 420; Winthrop's Digest of Judge Advocate General's Opinions, 225.

The Articles of War have likewise always provided that any officer or soldier who advises or persuades any other officer or soldier to desert the service shall be punished by court-martial. Articles of War of September 20, 1776, sec. 6, art. 4; Act of April 10, 1806, ch. 20, art. 23; Rev. Stat. at L., sec. 1342, art. 51. Section 5455 of the Revised Statutes, which re-enacts the Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, sec. 24, 12 Stat. at L.

735, embracing the provisions of earlier statutes, and by which every person who entices or procures a soldier to desert the military service of the United States, or who aids a soldier in deserting, or knowingly harbors a soldier who has deserted, "or who refuses to give up and deliver such soldier at the demand of any officer authorized to receive him," is to be punished by fine and imprisonment, merely provides for the punishment of civilians, not subject to the Articles of War, who are accessories to the crime of desertion by a soldier, or who do any of the acts specified tending to promote his commission of that crime. It has no application to the crime of the soldier himself, and no tendency to show that he may be arrested by a private citizen without authority from a military officer. Indeed, the last clause above quoted has rather the opposite tendency.

The respondents contend that their authority to make this arrest is to be implied from the usage of offering rewards for the apprehension of deserters, which has existed from a very early date.

On May 31, 1786, the Congress of the Confederation passed the following resolve: "Resolved, That the commanding officer of any of the forces in the service of the United States shall, upon report made to him of any desertions in the troops under his orders, cause the most immediate and vigorous search to be made after the deserter or deserters, which may be conducted by a commissioned or non-commissioned officer, as the case shall require. That, if such search should prove ineffectual, the officer commanding the regiment or corps to which the deserter or de-[503] serters belonged shall insert in the nearest gazette or newspaper an advertisement, descriptive of the deserter or deserters, and offering a reward, not exceeding ten dollars, for each deserter who shall be apprehended and secured in any of the gaols of the neighboring States. That the charges of advertising deserters, the reasonable extra expenses incurred by the person conducting the pursuit, and the reward, shall be paid by the Secretary of War, on the certificate of the commanding officer of the troops." 11 Journals of Congress, 81.

Since the adoption of the Constitution, Congress has never passed any similar resolve or statute; and the only legislation upon the subject, that has come to our notice, is in the provision made in the annual Army Appropriation Acts from 1844 to 1876, "for the apprehension of deserters, and the expenses incidental to their pursuit," and from 1877 to the present time, "for the apprehension, securing and delivery of deserters, and the expense incident to their pursuit." Acts of June 17, 1844, ch. 106, 5 Stat. at L. 697; July 24, 1876, ch. 226, 19 Stat. at L. 98; November 21, 1877, ch. 1, 20 Stat. at L. 2; 1885, ch. 339, 23 Stat. at L. 359. These Acts clearly confer no authority upon anyone, not otherwise lawfully authorized, to arrest a deserter.

For many years, the Army Regulations promulgated by the Secretary of War under authority of the President, have generally provided, as in those of 1821 and 1841, that a certain pecuniary reward "shall be paid to any person who may apprehend and deliver a deserter" to an officer of the Army; or, as in the later regulations, that a like reward "will be paid for the apprehension and serter to an officer of the Army
venient post or recruiting statio
ulations of 1821, art. 69, sec. 1
sec. 123; 1857, art. 18, sec. 1
sec. 156; 1863, art. 18, sec. 156
48; 1881, art. 22, sec. 214.

The Army Regulations derive the power of the President as Chief, and are binding upon all of his legal and constitutional a States v. Eliason, 16 Pet. 291
L. ed. 968]; United States v.
556 [44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed.
they could, in time of peace,
assent of Congress, confer aut
officers or private citizens to e
tary law need not be consider regulations in question cannot undertaking to confer such a
do not command or authorize arrest or detain deserters, but payment of a reward for every brought in, and justify the mi
paying the reward and receiv
the deserter.

The President's Proclamatio
March 10, 1863, 13 Stat. at L.
ing all soldiers absent without
to their regiments, on pain of
and punished as deserters, and good citizens "to aid in restori
ments all soldiers absent witho
now in force. It was issued in a temporary purpose, under s
Act of March 3, 1863, ch. 75, 12
which has been repealed by s 5596 of the Revised Statutes.

The rule of the common l
officer or a private citizen ma
without a warrant, has been g
the courts of the several States cases of felony punishable by nals. Wakely v. Hart, 6 Bin
v. Mix, 3 Wend. 350; Rohan v.
281; Brockway v. Crawford, 3
433; Reuck v. McGregor, 3 Vro
Erben, 40 N. Y. 463; State v.
377. But that rule has never,
informed, been judicially e
case of an offender against t
punishable exclusively by co
Hutchings v. Van Bokkelen, 3
which it was held that an offic
might lawfully arrest a deserte
for trial by court-martial, wit
and that proof of the person m
was de facto such an officer
was not even suggested that th
supported without any evidenc
authority. And in Trask v.
569, it was decided that a civil citizen could not lawfully arrest
out express order or warrant.

Sections 836, 837, 849, of th
California of 1872, affirming th
peace officer, without a warra person, to make an arrest "for committed or attempted in h
well as in cases of felony, an person arrested to be taken for magistrate, evidently have in vi
only, and if they could be cons

3. The mode in which fines and penalties shall be enforced, whether at the suit of a private party or at the suit of the public, and what disposition shall be made of the amounts collected, are matters of legislative discretion.

[No. 593.]

After the opening of the argument, November 12, 1885, the court declined to hear further argument. Decided, November 23, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Field:

This case comes from the Supreme Court of Missouri. It is an action against the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, a corporation created under the laws of that State, to recover in double its value damages for killing a mule, the property of the plaintiff below, of the value of $135. It was brought in the Circuit Court of St. Louis under a statute of the State which provides that "Every railroad corporation formed or to be formed in this State, and every corporation formed or to be formed under this chapter, or any railroad corporation running or operating any railroad in this State, shall erect and maintain lawful fences on the sides of the road where the same passes through, along, or adjoining inclosed or cultivated fields or uninclosed lands, with openings and gates therein to be hung, and have latches or hooks, that they may be easily opened and shut at all necessary farm crossings of the road, for the use of the proprietors or owners of the lands adjoining such railroad, and also to construct and maintain cattle guards, where fences are required, sufficient to prevent horses, cattle, mules, and all other animals from getting on the railroad; and until fences, openings, gates, and farm crossings, and cattle guards as aforesaid, shall be made and maintained, such corporation shall be liable in double the amount of all damages which shall be done by its agents, engines, or cars to horses, cattle, mules, or other animals on said road, or by reason of any horses, cattle, mules, or other animals escaping from or coming upon said lands, fields, or inclosures, occasioned in either case by the failure to construct or maintain such fences or cattle guards. After such fences, gates, farm crossings, and cattle guards shall be duly made and maintained, said corporation shall not be liable for any such damages, unless negligently or wilfully done." (Session Laws of 1875, p. 131.) [513] [514]

The petition avers the incorporation of the defendant below, the plaintiff in error here; its ownership of a railroad running into and through the City of St. Louis; the ownership of the mule by the plaintiff below on the first of August, 1877, and its value; the failure of the Company to construct and maintain the fences, gates and cattle guards required by the above statute, at the point on the line of the road in the city where it passes through, along and adjoining cultivated fields, and that the mule was on that day run over and killed by the agents, engines and cars of the Company on the road; that the killing was occasioned by the failure of the Company to construct and maintain such fences, cattle guards and gates, and that the plaintiff was damaged thereby in the sum of $135. He therefore prays judgment for $270 and costs.

[illegible] the petition, deny-[illegible] allegations, and [illegible] that such in[illegible] were assumed by the [illegible] to be true unless, neg-[illegible] directly controlling

[illegible] assumed the aver-
[illegible]
[illegible] without a [illegible] The allega-[illegible] established, and the [illegible] of the plaintiff,
[illegible] $300. Thereupon,
[illegible] were doubled, and [illegible] in his favor for $270

[illegible] were taken by the [illegible] of evidence on the [illegible] in various stages
[illegible] of the action,
[illegible] against the Com[illegible] the statute upon which [illegible] in violation of and in

[illegible] of the Constitution [illegible] that it is depriving the [illegible] property, so far as it exceeds [illegible] killed or injured, with[illegible] law, and in that it denies to [illegible] equal protection of the laws.
[illegible] article 2, of the Constitution
[illegible] Missouri, in that it is taking the [illegible] the defendant against its con-
[illegible] use and benefit of the plain-[illegible] the amount claimed by plaintiff
[illegible] the stock killed or injured, [illegible] taking and appropriating, without [illegible] law, the property of the defend-[illegible] use of the plaintiff, which use is pri-
[illegible] the meaning of said provision.
[illegible] 10, article 2, of the Constitution
[illegible] State of Missouri, in that, so far as plain-[illegible] recover in excess of the value of the [illegible] killed or injured, it is depriving the de-[illegible] of its property without due process of [illegible] against the law of the land.

[illegible] 33, article 4, of the Constitu-
[illegible] the State of Missouri, in that it is grant[illegible] a class of persons, of which plaintiff is [illegible] a special and exclusive right, privilege,
[illegible]

[illegible] 7, article 11, of the Constitution
[illegible] State of Missouri, in that it is giving the [illegible] proceeds of the penalty, to wit: the [illegible] over and above the value of the stock
[illegible] killed or injured, to the plaintiff, and not to the [illegible] fund, as provided by said section, and [illegible] the Legislature has provided no remedy,
[illegible] plaintiff, for the recovery of such pen-
[illegible] of said school fund.

But the court overruled the objections in [illegible] instance, as they were made, and the de-[illegible] below excepted to the rulings. A mo-[illegible] for a new trial, and also in arrest of judg-[illegible] was made on similar grounds, and was [illegible] of in the same way against the excep-[illegible] of the defendant.

The case being taken to the Court of Appeals
of St. Louis, the judgment was there affirmed [illegible] without prejudice to either party in the appellate court, both parties waiving any error in such affirmance. The case was then carried to the Supreme Cour
where the judgment of the lov
firmed after full consideration
and thereupon this writ of er

Messrs. A. B. Browne, A.
Thos. J. Portis, for plaintif Railroad corporations are "
the meaning of the term as use
tution, who cannot "be depriv
ty, or property without due p
and who are entitled to "the eq
the laws."

R. R. Tax Case, 8 Saw. 263
v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch, 86 (9 U.
44); Society, etc. v. New Haven
(21 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 662); Ma
O. R. R. Co. 16 How. 314 (57 U.
953); Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U
L. ed. 501).

This "double damage" Act
Missouri requires the railroad
tion to individuals.

It deprives this Corporation
without due process of law, an equal protection of the laws.

Cole v. La Grange, 113 U. S.
898); St. Louis Co. Ct. v. Gris

The statute is not a penal which stand upon the police po
are not necessarily penal.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 596. S
Dwarris, 74; Reed v. Northfield

Mr. T. K. Skinker, for def
The Fourteenth Amendment
tion to this case, since no quest nation against the negro race is

Slaughter House Cases, 16 W
bk. 21, L. ed. 394); Strauder v
100 U. S. 303 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 664
ware, 103 U. S. 370, 386 (Bk. 26,

The statute in question does plaintiff in error the equal protec

Tredway v. R. R. Co. 43 Iow
v. R. R. Co. 29 Minn. 425; F
Trust Co. 77 Mo. 475; State v. M
529; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113
28, L. ed. 1145); Barbier v. Con
27 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 923); R. R. C
96 U. S. 521 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 734
v. Dubarry, 33 La. An. 481; S.
273; Cincinnati, etc. R.R. Co. v.
91 Ky. 492.

It does not deprive the plai
his property without due proce

Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S.
ed. 678); Davidson v. New Orle
(Bk. 24, L. ed. 616).

The statute in question is a p
Its object is, by compelling rail
to fence their lines, to keep liv
the way of trains, and thus af
curity to the traveling public,
transit and to the stock itself.

State v. Matthews, 44 Mo. 52
v. R. R. Co. 73 Mo. 143; Revelle
Mo. 438, 441.

In the exercise of the police islature may impose upon a w bility, recoverable in a civil ac
of the party injured, beyond th
merely to the amount of the done.

to determine whether
d in this way or in h crime is ordinarily

v. Harry, 18 Am. &
v. R. R. Co. 49 Mo.
v. Duggan, 109 Ill.
29 Minn. 425.
ll be found to sustain
r legislation:
. Warrington, 92 Ill.
v. Peoples, 92 Ill. 97;
owa, 527; Jones v. R.
Rock, etc. R. Co. v.
ria, etc. R. R. Co. v.
nsas Pacific R R. Co.

3 N. H. 513, and in New Eng. Rep. 58, a ry of double damages
o be penal, and, for tutional.
Co. v. Haley, 25 Kan.
rd, 44 Wis. 282, 287;
28 Am. Rep. 582; Le
ss. 110.
dment does not inter-
r of the States.
3 U. S. 27, 31 (Bk. 28,
yer v. Iowa, 18 Wall.
21, L. ed. 929, 932);
. R. Co. 17 Fed. Rep.

police power over all
been strongly asserted

01 U. S. 814 (Bk. 25,
Co. v. Hyde Park, 97
036); Beer Co. v. Mas-
2 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 989,
. v. Crescent City Co.
ed. 585).

ving stated the case,
he court:
the objections to the
f Missouri, so far as asserted conflict with State, is not open to se comes from a state limited to the objec-
ates the 1st section of
of the Constitution of it deprives the defend-due process of law, so y of damages for stock
s of its value, and also efendant the equal pro-

ing that no State shall ife, liberty or property
aw," differs from simitution of every State,
nerely to the state auaning, however, must due process of law,"

nd perhaps impossible
definition, at once ac-
h to cover every case.
aps impossibility was ce Miller in Davidson
the opinion was expressed that it is wiser to ascertain their intent and application by the "gradual process of judicial inclusion and exclusion, as the cases presented for decision shall require, with the reasoning on which such decisions may be founded." 96 U. S. 97–104 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 616–620].

In England the requirement of due process of law, in cases where life, liberty and property were affected, was originally designed to secure the subject against the arbitrary action of the Crown, and to place him under the protection of the law. The words were held to be the equivalent of "law of the land." And a similar purpose must be ascribed to them when applied to a legislative body in this country; that is, that they are intended, in addition to other guaranties of private rights, to give increased security against the arbitrary deprivation of life or liberty, and the arbitrary spoliation of property. But, from the number of instances in which these words are invoked to set aside the legislation of the States, there is abundant evidence, as observed by Mr. Justice Miller in the case referred to, "that there exists some strange misconception of the scope of this provision, as found in the XIVth Amendment." [520] It seems, as he states, to be looked upon "as a means of bringing to the test of the decision of this court the abstract opinions of every unsuccessful litigant in a state court, of the justice of the decision against him, and of the merits of the legislation on which such a decision may be founded." This language was used in 1877, and now, after the lapse of eight years, it may be repeated with an expression of increased surprise at the continued misconception of the purpose of the provision.

If the laws enacted by a State be within the legitimate sphere of legislative power, and their enforcement be attended with the observance of those general rules which our system of jurisprudence prescribes for the security of private rights, the harshness, injustice and oppressive character of such laws will not invalidate them as affecting life, liberty or property without due process of law. Within the present century, the punishment of death or long imprisonment was inflicted in England for many offenses which are not now visited with any severer penalty than a fine or a short confinement, yet no one has ever pretended that life or liberty was taken thereby without due process of law. And it often happens that heavy and oppressive burdens are imposed by statute upon residents of cities and counties, not merely to meet the necessary expenses of government, but for buildings and improvements of doubtful advantage, which sometimes, as in changing the grade of streets, seriously depreciate the value of property. Yet if no rule of justice is violated in the provisions for the enforcement of such a statute, its operation, in lessening the value of the property affected, does not bring it under the objection of depriving a person of property without due process of law. It is hardly necessary to say that the hardship, impolicy, or injustice of state laws is not necessarily an objection to their constitutional validity; and that the remedy for evils of that character is to be sought from State Legislatures. Our jurisdiction cannot be invoked unless some right claimed under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States is invaded.

[521] This court is not a harbor where refuge can be found from every act of ill advised and oppressive state legislation.

It is the duty of every State to provide, in the administration of justice, for the redress of private wrongs; yet the damages which should be awarded to the injured party are not always readily ascertainable. They are in many cases a matter of conjectural estimate, in relation to which there may be great differences of opinion. The general rule undoubtedly is that they should be precisely commensurate with the injury. Yet, in England and in this country, they have been allowed in excess of compensation, whenever malice, gross neglect, or oppression has caused or accompanied the commission of the injury complained of. "The law," says Sedgwick in his excellent treatise on Damages, "permits the jury to give what it terms punitory, vindictive, or exemplary damages; in other words, blends together the interests of society and of the aggrieved individual, and gives damages, not only to recompense the sufferer but to punish the offender." The discretion of the jury in such cases is not controlled by any very definite rules; yet the wisdom of allowing such additional damages to be given is attested by the long continuance of the practice. "We are aware," said Mr. Justice Grier, in Day v. Woodworth, speaking for this court, "that the propriety of this doctrine has been questioned by some writers; but if repeated judicial decisions for more than a century are to be received as the best exposition of what the law is, the question will not admit of argument. By the common as well as by statute law, men are often punished for aggravated misconduct or lawless acts by means of a civil action, and the damages, inflicted by way of penalty or punishment, given to the party injured." 13 How. 371 [54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 185]. See also Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Co. v. Arms, 91 U S. 489 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 374].

For injuries resulting from a neglect of duties, in the discharge of which the public is interested, juries are also permitted to assess exemplary damages. These may perhaps be considered as falling under the head of cases of gross negligence, for any neglect of duties imposed for the protection of life or property is culpable, and deserves punishment.

The law of Missouri, in requiring railroad [522] corporations to erect fences where their roads pass through, along or adjoining inclosed or cultivated fields or uninclosed lands, with openings or gates at farm crossings, and to construct and maintain cattle guards, where fences are required, sufficient to keep horses, cattle and other animals from going on the roads, imposes a duty in the performance of which the public is largely interested. Authority for exacting it is found in the general police power of the State to provide against accidents to life and property in any business or employment, whether under the charge of private persons or of corporations. Under this power the State, or the municipality exercising a delegated authority, prescribes the manner in which buildings in cities shall be constructed, and the thickness and height of their walls; excludes the use of all inflammable materials; forbids the storage

therein of powder, nitro-glycerin
plosive substances, and compels
decayed vegetable and animal would otherwise infect the air an ease. In few instances could the wisely or beneficently exercise
pelling railroad corporations t
roads with fences, having gates a cattle guards. The speed and the locomotive render such pro
accident in thickly settled portio try absolutely essential. The o and maintain such fences and
the face of the law would jus
gross negligence, and if, in suc
injuries to property are commi
beyond compensatory damages r
to the owner by way of punishm
pany's negligence, the Legislatu
amount or prescribe the limit w
jury may exercise their discre
ditional damages being by way
it is clear that the amount ma
and it is not a valid objection t
instead of the State receives th
matter on which the company
say. And there can be no ratio contending that the statute dep
erty without due process of lav
only fixes the amount of the pen
proportionate to the injury inflic
for the injury the company is af
cility for presenting its defense.
the State to impose fines and pe
lation of its statutory require
with government; and the mode
shall be enforced, whether at private party, or at the suit of what disposition shall be made collected, are merely matters of cretion. The statutes of nearly the Union provide for the incre
where the injury complained
the neglect of duties imposed f curity of life and property, an crease in many cases double, in s and even quadruple the actual experience favors this legislati
efficient mode of preventing, w convenience, the commission of decisions of the highest courts h
validity of such legislation. T ally received is often so small th
no effort would be made by th
tain redress, if the private inter
ported by the imposition of pu

The objection that the statu
violates the clause of the XIVt
which prohibits a State to den
within its jurisdiction the equ
the laws, is as untenable as that considered. The statute makes tion against any railroad compa
ments. Each company is subj liability, and from each the sa
the erection of fences, gates, an
is exacted, when its road passes
or adjoining inclosed or cultiva
inclosed lands. There is no ev
of equality where all companie
to the same duties and liabilitie
circumstances. See on this p

. 28, L. ed. 923], and 703 [Bk. 28, L. ed.

lerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

AY COMPANY, Plff.

ERRY.
]
ne Court of the State
A. T. Britton and
intiff in error.
ackson and G. G.
rror.
same questions pre-Missouri Pacific Rail-
nte, 463]. The judg-

lerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

AL., Plffs. in Err.,

LEWS.
's ed., 528-543.)
—fraud—limitation
bankrupt of property
ce.
on of a controversy inalidity of a transfer by a question involving
the Bankrupt Act.
se the transfer of cerankruptcy to the plain-een procured through ation of the action, the der the Bankrupt Act
absence of negligence
til the discovery of the
of a mere right to file
upon the assignor is rty is not void because ng suit to enforce his red.
cated a bankrupt may
red by him prior to his
.]
Decided Nov. 23, 1885.
reme Court of the
Mr. Justice Woods:
dant in error, on Jan-
is suit in the Circuit

connection with the s, see Lewis v. Bell, 58
203, note. See also Mc-
How.), 507, bk. 15, 504,
ud; when statute begins
8 U. S. (7 How.), 819, bk.
Townsend v. Jemison,
194, note.

Court of Linn County Iowa, against John W Traer and others, to recover the value of fifty shares, of $1,000 each, of capital stock in the Cedar Rapids Northwestern Construction Company, and the dividends which had been declared thereon. The stock had been originally subscribed and owned by Clews. The construction company was organized in 1870. The dividends sued for were declared $10,000 in December, 1873, and $500 in January, 1874, and were in the treasury of the company ready to be paid out to the holder of the stock. On November 28, 1874, Clews was adjudicated a bankrupt, and his stock in the construction company, with the dividends which had been declared thereon, passed to J. Nelson Tappan, trustee of his bankrupt estate. In February, 1875, the construction company went into voluntary dissolution and liquidation, and John [529] W. Traer, John F. Ely and William Green were appointed trustees to settle up its affairs and divide its assets among its stockholders, according to their interest therein. Traer, knowing that the dividends above mentioned had been declared, and the same being unknown to Clews and Tappan, his trustee in bankruptcy, on March 4, 1876, for the consideration of $1,200, through the intervention of one Armstrong, who did not disclose his agency, purchased of Tappan, the trustee, the fifty shares of stock above mentioned. Traer alleged, and it appeared, that the purchase was made by him for his wife, Mrs. Ella D. Traer.

Afterwards, on December 6, 1877, Tappan, the trustee in bankruptcy, assuming, as it may be supposed, that the sale of the stock made at the instance of Armstrong was void for fraud, sold all his claims and demands on account of the stock to Clews, who, on January 17, 1878, brought this suit. John W. Traer and others, who had been officers and trustees of the construction company, were made defendants to the original petition. The defendants demurred to the petition on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to the relief demanded. The court overruled the demurrer. Afterwards, the plaintiff having discovered that, on March 4, 1876, the stock in the construction company had been assigned to Ella D. Traer, on October 28, 1879, amended his petition by making her a party defendant to his suit. Upon final hearing in the Circuit Court for Linn County, the suit was dismissed as to all the defendants except John W. Traer and Ella D. Traer, and judgment was rendered against them for $15,000. Traer and his wife appealed from this judgment to the Supreme Court of Iowa, which affirmed the judgment of the Circuit Court. By the present writ of error, Traer and wife ask a review of the judgment of the Supreme Court of Iowa.

Messrs. Charles A. Clark and N. M. Hubbard, for plaintiffs in error:

The decisions fully sustain the jurisdiction of this court.

New Orleans R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 244); Factors, etc. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 741 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 583); Ray v. Norseworthy, 23 Wall. 128 (90 U. S. bk. 23, L. ed. 116); see also Orapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. 611 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 430); Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. 314 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed 601); Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 688 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 278).

The bar was complete as to Mrs. Traer when the suit against her was commenced.

Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 346 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 638); Gifford v. Helms, 98 U. S. 248 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 57).

Where fraud and concealment are relied upon to take a case out of the Statute of Limitations, this court lays down the rule as follows:

"The plaintiff is held to stringent rules of pleading and evidence, and especially must there be distinct averments as to the time when the fraud, mistake, concealment or misrepresentation was discovered, and what the discovery is, so that the court may clearly see whether by ordinary diligence the discovery may not have been made before."

Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 807).

The Statute of Limitations continued to run until the new cause of action was pleaded.

Holmes v. Trout, 7 Pet. 213 (32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 662); Gorman v. Circuit Judge, 27 Mich. 139; People v. Judge Cir. Ct. 35 Mich. 229; I. C. R. R. Co. v. Cobb, 64 Ill. 140; Comrs. etc, v. Andrews, 18 Ohio St. 49; Skowhegan Bank v. Cutler, 49 Me. 315; Woodward v. Ware, 37 Me. 564; Woodbridge v. Hathaway, 45 Texas, 380; Lanford v Scott, 51 Ala. 557; Marble v. Hinds, 67 Me. 203; Hawthorn v. State, 57 Ind. 286; Selma R. R. Co. v. Lacey, 49 Ga. 106.

Does the instrument under which Clews claims give him any right to set aside the assignment under which Mrs. Traer claims, for fraud in its procurement?

"Where an equitable interest has been assigned in order to give the assignee a locus standi judicio in a court of equity, the party assigning such rights must have some substantial possession, some capability of personal enjoyment, and not a mere naked right to overset a legal instrument, to maintain a suit."

Brace v. Reid, 3 G. Greene, 423.

This decision has never been denied or overruled by the Supreme Court of Iowa.

Sustaining the same view in New York are: French v. Shotwell, 5 Johns. Ch. 566; Same Case affirmed, 20 Johns. 668; Shufelt v. Shufelt, 9 Paige, Ch. 144, 148.

The English cases are the same way.

In De Hoghton v. Money, L. R. 2 Ch. App. 169, it was said: "The right to complain of fraud is not a marketable commodity."

White v. Hill, L. R. 4 Eq. Cas. 265; Prosser v. Edmonds, 1 Y. & C. (Ex. Eq.) 481; see also Brush v. Sweet, 38 Mich. 578; Dickinson v. Seaver, 44 Mich. 631; Crocker v. Bellanges, 6 Wis. 642; M. & M. R. Co. v. R. Co. 20 Wis. 174.

This rule has been upheld in this court upon a full review of the authorities.

Graham v. R. Co. 102 U. S. 148 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 106).

That the assignment of the stock and dividends in blank passed title to Mrs. Traer does not admit of question.

Johnston v. Laflin, 103 U. S. 800 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 532); Nat. Bank v. Watsontown Bank, 105 U. S. 217 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1039); Courtright v. Deeds, 37 Iowa, 510.

The court below declared the assignment to Mrs. Traer of the stock and dividends void. At most it was voidable.

Twin Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 9
23, L. ed. 328); Thomas v. Bro
R. Co. 109 U. S. 524 (Bk. 27, L.
dell v. R. R. Co. 103 U. S. 651 509); Pneumatic Gas Co. v. B
327 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 1005).

"When a party desires to ground of mistake or fraud he covery of the facts at once ann
tion and adhere to it."

Grimes v. Sanders, 93 U. S.
ed. 802), and many authorities

"The party who would diss
lent contract must return wha ceived upon it. This is a pla ciple. He cannot hold on to such tract as may be desirable on his
the residue, but must rescind i

Masson v. Bovet, 1 Denio, 74

"If he be silent and continue
erty as his own he will be held
the objection, and will be con
by the contract, as if the fraud
not occurred."

Grymes v. Sanders, 93 U. S.
ed. 802); see also Coolidge v.
547; Perley v. Balch, 23 Pick.
Turner, 8 Met. 552; Bowen v.
195; Ayres v. Hewitt, 19 Me. 2
Horney, 12 Ill. 338; Cooley v.
456; Moore v. Bare, 11 Iowa, 2
v. Gibbs, 40 Iowa, 656; Rynea
Greene (Iowa), 315; Baker v.
138; Bisbee v. Ham, 47 Me. 54
mouth Ins. Co. 63 Me. 442.

Messrs. Frank G. Clark
Deane, for defendant in erro

The right to bring an action
tee to account, or to set aside
able, a purchase made by a tru
que trust, or to set aside any d
with trust property, or to have purchase shall be held to have the beneficiary, is not a per passes to heirs, or a receiver,

Iddings v. Bruen, 4 Sandf. C
Moore, 5 N. Y. 256; S. C. 4 San
v. Smith, 3 Sandf. Ch. 592; Jo
N. Y. 402; Conger v. Ring, 11
hon v. Allen, 35 N. Y. 403.

A claim for money or prope
false or fraudulent representati
so as to vest in the assignee th
such as the assignor had befor

Zogbaum v. Parker, 66 Barb Vasse, 1 Pet. 209 (26 U. S. bk.
Gray v. McCallister, 50 Iow
Haight v. Hayt, 19 N. Y. 464
v. Allen, 35 N. Y. 403; Stewa
10 Kan. 131; Lazard v. Wheel
Couillard v. Johnson, 24 Wis
McGuineas, 25 Wis. 656; Fi
Mich. 318.

"It is the settled doctrine of
that the Statute of Limitation
run, in case of fraud, from th
covery of the fraud, and not b

7 Wait, Act. & Def. 243 and win v. Tuttle, 23 Iowa, 66.

Mr. Justice Woods deliver
the court:

The defendant in error ques

he record shows that spute the validity of a
in error of the prop-
e to him by a trustee
l under and deriving Bankrupt Act, and as ther the suit is barred bed by the same Act,
he jurisdiction of the estions is clear. Fac-
111 U. S. 738 [Bk. 28,
R. R. Co. v. Delamore,
ed. 244].
eave it in doubt that
from Tappan of the
ck in the construction
he bankrupt estate of ut by the fraudulent stated by the Supreme
a stockholder, officer
ruction company, and
, actively engaged in affairs. As trustee he
h the custody of the
rs of the corporation,
lete knowledge of all assets and business of
that the plaintiff or entitled to dividends $10,500, received by n the discharge of his assets of the company,
money, he held as a ders, being so consti-
olution of the corporal the value of these asl Clews, and induced
e sum to which they eatly exceed $1,200 in e consideration of the
by Tappan. He emgents to negotiate for x, who concealed from e was made for Traer
ts knew that they were Traer or his wife, and
time was a good faith
transactions connected e stock Traer acted as ho knew that her hus-
ing the assets for the struction company and
as guided in her pur-direction. She knew nt of the value of the wledge of the devices
secure the purchase of

raudulent devices she
for the price of $1,200,
e circuit court found $15,000. The charge
etition was, therefore,

s pleaded by Ella D.
g: "That plaintiff's
herein accrued in fa-
, J. Nelson Tappan, as plaintiff's estate, more
the commencement of endant, and more than
s made a party defend-action is fully barred

as to her by the provisions of the Act of Congress in that behalf, and was so barred before she was made a party defendant herein."

This plea sets up the bar prescribed by the second section of the Bankrupt Act, now forming section 5057 of the Revised Statutes, which declares: "No suit, either at law or in equity, shall be maintained in any court between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest touching any property or rights of property transferable to or vested in such assignee, unless brought within two years from the time the cause of action accrued for or against such assignee."

The suit was brought against John D. Traer within two years after the fraudulent purchase and transfer of the stock and dividends, but Mrs. Traer was not made a party to the suit until after the lapse of three years and a half from the time of the purchase and transfer. The question is presented by one of the assignments of error whether, upon the circumstances of this case, the suit was barred as to Mrs. Traer.

The amended petition filed in the case on October 28, 1879, the day after Mrs. Traer had been made a defendant, averred that John W. Traer, while holding the office of trustee of the construction company, falsely represented to Tappan that there were no dividends due the estate of Clews from the stock held by him in the construction company, and falsely and fraudulently concealed from him the true condition of the company with the intent of undervaluing the stock and dividends declared thereon; that Traer and his wife employed one Armstrong to purchase for Mrs. Traer the said stock and dividends; that Armstrong took from Tappan an assignment of the certificate of stock to Mrs. Traer; that he forwarded the certificate to one Howard, whom Traer and his wife had previously employed, and Howard, following the instructions of Traer and his wife, carried the certificate to the headquarters of the construction company at Cedar Rapids, and demanded of Traer, as trustee, the dividends and interest thereon; whereupon Traer paid over to Howard, his own and his wife's attorney, the sum of $11,913.75 on account of said dividends and interest, and Howard, while pretending to act for Armstrong, "carefully concealed, from those who might inform the said plaintiff's trustee in bankruptcy, and from the papers and receipts, that he was acting as the attorney for John W. Traer and Ella D. Traer, his wife," and that after receiving said sum of money and receipting the vouchers prepared by Traer, as trustee, he paid back the money to Traer and his wife, less the amount of his own share as co-conspirator and attorney. Afterwards, it was alleged, Traer transferred the stock to his wife upon the books of the company.

These averments show not only a fraudulent concealment of the value of the stock and dividends from Tappan by Traer, acting as agent for his wife, but a carefully devised plan by which the payment of the dividends to Mrs. Traer was concealed from Tappan, and no trace of such payment left upon the books and vouchers of the Construction Company. Subsequently, and before the trial of the case, the following amendment was made to the petition:

[536]

"That as to the matters and things herein set forth as a cause of action against the said Ella D. Traer, the said fraudulent transactions with which she was connected and her part therein were studiously concealed from the plaintiff and his assignor, and he had no means of discovering the same, nor had his assignor any means of discovering the same until the same were disclosed upon the examination of John W. Traer, as witness in this action, on the 24th day of September, 1879; that the plaintiff and his assignor did not know of the said fraud and the fraudulent acts of the defendant, Ella D. Traer, until the same were made known on the said examination." No issue was taken on this amendment.

The state court having entered a general finding and judgment against the defendants, [537] John W. Traer and Ella D. Traer, his wife, the facts set out in the pleadings of the plaintiff, so far as they are necessary to support the judgment, must be taken as established by the evidence. The question is, therefore, do the facts alleged constitute a good reply to the plea of the two years' limitation filed by Mrs. Traer. We think they do. The fraud by which Mrs. Traer succeeded in purchasing from Tappan for $1,200 property to which he had the title worth $15,000 must necessarily have been a fraud carried on by concealment from Tappan of the true value of the property purchased. Such is the averment of the plaintiff's pleadings. But not only was fraudulent concealment in accomplishing the fraudulent purpose averred, but also a studious concealment from the plaintiff Clews, and Tappan, the trustee, of the connection of Mrs. Traer with the fraud, and their want of means to discover the fraud, until it was revealed by the examination of John W. Traer on September 24, 1879. The case is substantially the same, so far as the question now in hand is concerned, as that of Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342 [88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 636]. The averment of fraudulent concealment in that case was, as shown by the report, as follows: "The bill alleged that the defendants kept secret their said fraudulent acts, and endeavored to conceal them from the knowledge, both of the assignees and of the said Winston & Co., creditors of the bankrupt, whereby both were prevented from obtaining any sufficient knowledge or information thereof until within the last two years, and that, even up to the present time, they have not been able to obtain full and particular information as to the fraudulent disposition made by the bankrupt of a large part of his property."

The court in that case, upon demurrer, held in effect that these averments were sufficient to take the case from the operation of the same limitation which is set up in the present case. In delivering the judgment of the court, Mr. Justice Miller said. "We hold that where there has been no negligence or laches on the part of the plaintiff in coming to a knowledge [538] of the fraud, which is the foundation of the suit, and when the fraud has been concealed, or is of such a character as to conceal itself, the statute does not begin to run until the fraud has been discovered or becomes known to the party suing or those in privity with him."

So in the case of Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 395], the plaintiff averred that "both the said Carney and kept concealed from him, the sai fact of the said payment and t aggregate sum of $30,000, * * of the sale, transfer and conveya goods, * * * and, that he, the did not obtain knowledge and i said matter until the 29th day 1879, and then, for the first time ters were disclosed to him, and knowledge." These averments ficient on exception to the petiti case out of the bar prescribed b of the Revised Statutes. The v. Glover has never been overr or modified by this court. On in Rosenthal v. Walker it w and was distinguished from Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 135 807], relied on by the appellants. ities cited are in point and full conclusion that, upon the plea dence, the suit of the plaintiff by the limitation prescribed by the Revised Statutes.

The next contention of the ap the transfer executed by Tappa not a sale to him of a right of stock of the construction comp dividends, but merely a transfe sue Traer and his wife for a fr therefore, void. The assignme lows:

"In consideration of the sum paid by Henry Clews, the rece hereby acknowledged, and for valuable considerations, I here transfer, and set over unto t Clews any and all claims and ery name, nature and descripti now have or be entitled to on fifty shares of the capital stock Rapids & Northwestern Constr ny, which was subscribed f Clews."

This paper will not, in our o construction put upon it by Treating the transfer to Mrs. T evident purpose is to assign to property and rights were incide ership of the stock.

When this paper was execute tion known as the construction been dissolved and its affairs we of liquidation. The ownership simply entitled the holder to a interest in the unpaid divide been declared before the dissolut pany, and to a pro rata share of the company's assets, and in its sole value. The language of t by which Tappan undertook Clews all claims and demands then had or might be entitled to the fifty shares of stock in the c had been subscribed by Henry ly chosen to convey the divide been declared, and an interest of the company in proportion to of stock. It did not transfer a sue Traer and his wife. That ri an incident to the transfer of tangible property.

gnment of a mere right fraud committed upon
l as contrary to public aintenance. But when
e fact that the grantee ng a suit to enforce his es not render the con-tinction is taken in the rell, Law Rep. 1 Eq.
ase were that a convey-estate had been fraud-Dickinson, by his own
for the solicitor's ben-
lequate consideration.
he fraud, by a convey-
facts, and that he dis-
irst conveyance, trans-
e estate to trustees for d children. The trus-le the fraudulent cont of the consideration
to establish the trust.
Lord Romilly, in sus-
The distinction is this:
sold or conveyed the
the indenture of De-onveying the property
erty, which is the sub-
at would not have en-
, to maintain this bill;
the whole interest of
roperty, then it would.
ight incidental to the
he Master of the Rolls
of Cockell v. Taylor,
n v. Radcliffe, Ell. Bl.
s the same distinction

d by Mr. Justice Story
t. 193 [26 U. S. bk. 7,
"In general it may be
sonal torts, which die
ot survive to his pere not capable of pas-
that vested rights ad
ties coupled with an ring out of and adher-
pass by assignment."
ates, 97 U. S. 392 [Bk.
stice Field, who deliv-court, said: "Claims possession, use, or aproperty constitute per-
the property out of
gh the validity of such
d their value may de-ties of litigation or the al to the Legislature."
n, 55 N. Y. 403, decided ssignment in question
e City of Davenport, McCallister, 50 Iowa,
e where the suit was cussion of the subject
102 U. S. 148 [Bk. 26,

ablished by these au-
on that, so far as the
tion is concerned, the Clews was the trans-
d right to bring a suit,
of property, and was,
tual

It is next insisted by the plaintiffs in error, that Clews acquired no title to the dividends and other property which Tappan attempted to transfer to him, because (1) he had not been discharged as a bankrupt at the time of the transfer, and (2) because Tappan had no authority to sell the stock and its dividends for a bond or obligation to pay, as the evidence shows was the case, but only for cash.

Whether Clews had been discharged at the date of the transfer to him is immaterial. After his adjudication as a bankrupt, and the surrender of his property to be administered in bankruptcy, he was just as much at liberty to purchase, if he had the means, any of the property so surrendered, as any other person. The policy of the Bankrupt Act was, after taking from the bankrupt all his property not exempt by law, to discharge him from his debts and liabilities, and enable him to take a fresh start. His subsequent earnings were his own. A bankrupt might often desire, out of the proceeds of his exempted property, or out of his means earned since his bankruptcy, to purchase property which he has surrendered to the assignee. This he might do, and there is nothing in the letter or policy of the Bankrupt Act which forbids his doing so until after his discharge. For, having complied with the law, as it must be presumed he has, he is, after the lapse of six months, entitled, as a matter of course, to his discharge. His right to purchase property surrendered cannot, therefore, depend on his actual discharge; and, in this respect, he stands upon the same footing as any other person.

As to the second ground, upon which the validity of the title of Clews is questioned, it is sufficient to say that, by the bankrupt law, section 5062 Revised Statutes, it is provided: "The assignee shall sell all such unincumbered estate, real and personal, which comes to his hands, on such terms as he thinks most for the interest of the creditors."

If, therefore, the plaintiffs in error occupied the position of guardians for the creditors of the bankrupt estate, and had the right, in this [542] suit, to question the administration of the trustee, the section referred to would be a sufficient answer to the exception taken to the sale by Tappan to Clews of the property which is the subject of this controversy. We think, therefore, that no ground is shown on which the title of Clews can be successfully assailed.

Other points have been raised and argued by counsel, but as these do not present any federal question, it is not our province or duty to pass upon them. Murdock v. City of Memphis, 20 Wall. 590 [87 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 429]. All the federal questions presented by the record were, in our judgment, rightly decided by the Supreme Court of Iowa.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

T. W. THOMPSON, Appt., v. ALLEN COUNTY et al.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., [illegible])

Jurisdiction—equity has no authority to collect taxes or appoint a collector—inadequacy of remedy at law—mandamus.

*1. The proposition that the levy and collection of taxes, though they are to be raised for the satisfaction of judgments against counties or towns, is not within the jurisdiction of a court of equity, reviewed and reaffirmed.

2. The fact that the remedy at law by mandamus has proved ineffectual and that no officers can be found to perform the duty of levying and collecting taxes, is no sufficient ground of equity jurisdiction.

3. The principle is the same where the proper officers of the county or town have levied the tax and no one can be found to accept the office of collector of taxes. This gives no jurisdiction to a court of equity to fill that office or to appoint a receiver to perform its functions.

4. The inadequacy of the remedy at law, which sometimes justifies the interference of a court of equity, does not consist merely in its failure to produce the money, a misfortune often attendant upon all remedies, but that in its nature or character it is not fitted or adapted to the end in view; for, in this sense, the remedy at law is adequate, as much so, at least, as any remedy which chancery can give.

[No. 60.]

Argued Nov. 13, 1885. Decided Nov. 23, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Charles Eginton and W. O. Dodd, for appellant:

The question plainly presented by this record is, whether a tax levied under judicial directions for the payment of judgments of this court can be collected by the process of the court, either through a receiver or otherwise, where there is no public officer charged with authority to collect the same.

This question was left open by the supreme court in Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 197).

The moneys to be raised here to meet the principal and interest on bonds are in no sense public revenue. The object and purpose of the tax, as well as the powers authorizing it, are private.

Claxton v. R. R. Co. 13 Bush, 638; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Board of Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 338; Western Sav.-Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 31 Pa. St. 183; Bailey v. New York, 3 Hill, 531; Oliver v. Worcester, 102 Mass. 489· Cooley, Tax. 482.

The tax has been levied. Its collection is purely a ministerial act.

These taxes are set apart for a specific purpose and cannot be used for any other. The order directing the levy specified to whom the taxes should be paid when collected. A trust was therefore created. The cou[illegible] tee, and complainant is cestui que [illegible]

Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 W[illegible] S. bk. 18, L. ed. 403).

If the trust or power can by a[illegible] be exercised by the court, the no[illegible] the party intrusted shall not preju[illegible] beneficially interested, or the cest[illegible]

Brown v. Higgs, 5 Ves. 505; [illegible] sec. 349; Batesville Inst. v Kauf[illegible] 154 (85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 776).

It is a well recognized principl[illegible] a contract cannot be impaired, th[illegible] is any fund to which the credit[illegible] to resort for the enforcement or p[illegible] contract, it will be followed b[illegible] equity.

Beckwith v. Racine, 7 Biss. 146 [illegible] ras v. Arkansas, 15 How. 304 (5[illegible] L. ed. 705); Montpelier v. East [illegible] Vt. 12.

A tax is not a debt, and taxes [illegible] covered by an action at law or in [illegible]

Johnston v. Louisville, 11 Bush[illegible]

The taxes here levied are by [illegible] the property against which they [illegible] They are made so by express pro[illegible] ute. It is the peculiar province [illegible] equity to enforce liens where no [illegible] enforcing them exists. We do [illegible] such a lien exists until the levy i[illegible] distinguishes this case from Rees [illegible] 19 Wall. 107 (86 U. S. bk 22, L[illegible] Heine v. Levee Comrs. 19 Wall. [illegible] bk. 22, L. ed. 223).

Messrs. John Mason Brow[illegible] P. Humphrey and George M. Da[illegible] lees.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered [illegible] the court:

This is an appeal from a decree [illegible] Court of the United States for t[illegible] Kentucky, dismissing the bill of [illegible] who was plaintiff in that court.

The case was tried on bill, a[illegible] tions to the answer, and a stipul[illegible] facts.

The substance of the bill is, tha[illegible] obtained against Allen County, [illegible] two judgments at law, amou[illegible] $27,000, on coupons for interest o[illegible] by the county to pay for subsc[illegible] stock of the Cumberland and [illegible] Company. That, after executi[illegible] judgments had been duly return[illegible] erty found," the court, at the in[illegible] plaintiff, issued writs of mandam[illegible] tices of the Allen County Court [illegible] they levied a tax of $2.08 on e[illegible] dollars' worth of taxable property [illegible] to pay said judgments. That, at t[illegible] they elected one J. T. Stork collec[illegible] levy, and made an order that he g[illegible] good security as such collector, a[illegible] collect the levy and pay it over [illegible] of the judgments. That Stork r[illegible] bond as required, and refused [illegible] qualify as such collector; and th[illegible] of the hostility of the citizens a[illegible] of Allen County, no one can be [illegible] county who will perform the dut[illegible]

The bill then gives the names o[illegible]

*Head notes by Mr. Justice MILLER.

NOTE.—Mandamus to compel the levy or collection of taxes to satisfy judgments against municipalities. In addition to the authorities cited by the court and counsel in the above case of Thompson v. Allen Co., see Mayor v. United States, (9 Wall.) 76 U. S., bk. 19, 704, note.

ers of the County, with
d property of each, and from him under said
taxpayers are too nupraying that these may representing all others
and be required, with
the bill
ll for relief is, that, in-nant is without remedy
g in chancery, will ap-
hall collect these taxes,
sing therefrom be from
in satisfaction of plain-
t the several taxpayers of endants, be required to ke effect, the sums due
he bill.
filed by Allen County
ts who were served with
he recovery of the judg-
the executions "nulla
writs of mandamus, and he county court. They n of Stork as collector
e, and they deny every-hat the bonds were pro-hout consideration, the
he tax is unjust and op-
y the jurisdiction of the rt of equity, to collect
only be done by a cold County, appointed act otherwise. Exceptions
r, which were not passed
heard on bill, answer,
lowing stipulation:
urt the parties now stipu-
use:
court of Allen County diligently endeavored to
erson to act as collector
said county, and of the
in the bill of complaint

and proper person can ertake and perform the collector.
inant 's without remedy
its debt herein, except
s court in the appoint-prayed for in the bill, or
of the court."
had before the circuit
judge, who certified that pinion on the following
the progress of the case:
ied under judicial direc-
through a receiver apchancery, if there is no
hority from the Legisla-
y.
levied by state officers
can be collected through
by the United States
alature has provided an ere is a vacancy in office
nd who is willing to ac-

of chancery can grant
nt, upon the facts recited
stipulation, as presented

A decree was rendered in accordance with the view of Presiding Justice Matthews, whose opinion is found in the record, by which the bill was dismissed.

The questions on which the judges of the circuit court divided are not new in this court, for, while the subject, in the precise form presented in the first and second questions, may not have been decided, the whole subject has been often before us, and the principles which govern it have been well considered.

The cases in which it has been held that a court of equity cannot enforce the levy and collection of taxes to pay the debts of municipal corporations began with Walkley v. City of Muscatine, 6 Wall. 481 [78 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 930].

In that case, the complainant Walkley had procured judgments against the City of Muscatine for interest on bonds of the city, executions had been returned "nulla bona," the mayor and aldermen had refused to levy a tax for the payment of the judgments, and had used the annual tax for other purposes and paid nothing to plaintiff.

Walkley then filed his bill in equity praying a decree that the mayor and aldermen be compelled to levy a tax and appropriate so much of its proceeds as might be necessary to pay his judgments.

This court said, by Mr. Justice Nelson, that the remedy was by mandamus at law, and "We have been furnished with no authority for the substitution of a bill in equity and injunction for the writ of mandamus;" and he adds, that "a court of equity is invoked as auxiliary to a court of law in the enforcement of its judgment only where the latter is inadequate to afford the proper remedy."

By inadequacy of the remedy at law is here meant, not that it fails to produce the money [554]
(that is a very usual result in the use of all remedies) but that in its nature or character it is not fitted or adapted to the end in view. This is clearly stated in the next case in this court on the same subject, namely: Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107 [86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 72].

In that case, as in this, execution on a judgment against the City of Watertown had been returned "no property found." Writs of mandamus had been issued requiring the levy of a tax to pay the judgment. These writs had failed by reason of resignations of the officers of the city to whom they were directed, and this had occurred more than once. The court was pressed with the doctrine that the writ of mandamus having proved inadequate, a court of equity should provide some other remedy. To this it replied: "We apprehend that there is some confusion in the plaintiff's proposition, upon which the present jurisdiction is claimed. It is conceded, and the authorities are too abundant to admit a question, that there is no chancery jurisdiction where there is an adequate remedy at law. The writ of mandamus is, no doubt, the regular remedy in a case like the present, and ordinarily it is adequate and its results satisfactory. The plaintiff alleges, however, in the present case, that he has issued such a writ on three different occasions; that by means of the aid afforded by the Legislature, and by the devices and contrivances set forth in the bill, the writs have been fruitless; that, in fact, they afford him no remedy. The remedy is in law and in theory adequate. The difficulty is in its execution only. The want of a remedy, and the inability to obtain the fruits of a remedy, are quite distinct, and yet they are confounded in the present proceeding. To illustrate: the writ of habere facias possessionem is the established remedy to obtain the fruits of a judgment for the plaintiff in ejectment. It is a full, adequate and complete remedy. Not many years since there existed in central New York confederations of settlers and tenants disguised as Indians, and calling themselves such, who resisted the execution of this process in their counties, and so effectually that for some years no landlord could gain possession [555] of his land. There was a perfect remedy at law, but through fraud, violence or crime its execution was prevented. It will hardly be argued that this state of things gave authority to invoke the extraordinary aid of a court of chancery. The enforcement of the legal remedy was temporarily suspended by means of illegal violence, but the remedy remained as before. It was the case of a miniature revolution. The courts of law lost no power; the court of chancery gained none. The present case stands upon the same principle. The legal remedy is adequate and complete, and time and the law must perfect its execution."

The language here used is not only applicable to the case under consideration, but in regard to the facts they are the same.

In that case the court said: "The plaintiff further invokes the aid of the principle that, all legal remedies having failed, the court of chancery must give him a remedy, and that there is a wrong which cannot be righted elsewhere, and hence the right must be sustained in chancery. The difficulty arises from too broad an application of the general principle. * * * Generally its jurisdiction (chancery) is as well defined and limited as is that of a court of law. * * * Lord Talbot says there are cases, indeed, in which a court of equity gives remedy where the law gives none; but where a particular remedy is given by law, and that remedy bounded and circumscribed by particular rules, it would be very improper for this court (chancery) to take it up where the law leaves it, and extend it further than the law allows." "Generally its jurisdiction depends on legal obligations, and its decrees can only enforce remedies to the extent and in the mode established by law. A court of equity cannot, by averring there is a right but no remedy known to the law, create a remedy in violation of law, or even without the authority of law. It acts upon established principles not only, but through established channels."

The court also said the power to direct a tax to be levied is the highest attribute of sovereignty, and is exercised by legislative authority only. It is a power that has not been extended to the judiciary. "Especially," says the opinion, "is it beyond the power of the federal ju- [556] diciary to assume the place of a State in the exercise of this authority at once so delicate and so important."

These propositions are reasserted in a later case of the same term of the court—Heine v. The Levee Commissioners, 19 Wall. 655 [86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 223].

It was, like the present, a bill in chancery to enforce collection of taxes where ficers could be found whose duty co enforced by mandamus. "There doe said the court, "appear to be any aut founded on recognized principles, of of equity on which the bill can be sustain sustained at all, it must be on the broad that, because the plaintiff finds himself to collect his debt by proceedings at la the duty of a court of equity to devis mode by which it can be done. It is, ho the experience of every day and of that debts are created which are neve though the creditor has exhausted all sources of the law. It is a misfortune in the imperfection of human nature, ad no redress. The holder of a corporatio must, in common with other men, sul this calamity when the law affords no

The court added that the exercise power of taxation belonged to the ture and not to the judiciary, and case it had delegated the power to th commissioners. "If that body has ce exist, the remedy is in the Legislature to assess the tax by special statute, or the power in some other tribunal. It c is not invested as in the exercise of an jurisdiction in any federal court." "I only not one of the inherent powers of t to levy and collect taxes, but it is an i by the judiciary of the Federal Govern the legislative functions of the State ment." And it cites Walkley v. Muscati Rees v. Watertown as in point.

Mr. Justice Bradley, who decided this the circuit, had there elaborately discus whole subject. See Heine v. Levee sioners, 1 Woods, 246. This languag peated and approved in State Railro Case, 92 U. S. 615 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 674.]

The same principles are laid down in v. Levee Commissioners, 93 U. S. 258 L. ed. 893], in which the whole subjec viewed. It is said there that the power pel, by mandamus, municipal officers form the ministerial duty of levying taxes is a distinct power from the levy lection of taxes by a court of chancery, a truth is, that a party situated like p (where there were no such officers) is f rely on the public faith of the Legisl supply him a proper remedy. The remedy having failed by lapse of time operation of unavoidable contingencies be presumed that the Legislature will is equitable and just, and, in this case, tive action seems to be absolutely requi

In the case of Meriwether v. Garrett S. 501 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 200], the Legisl Tennessee had repealed the charter of of Memphis and abolished the city o tion, at a time when there were taxes and uncollected amounting to several of dollars, and debts of the city to a muc amount. Some of these taxes had bee under compulsion of writs of mandam the Circuit Court of the United States in chancery was filed in that court by these creditors praying the appointm receiver, who should take charge of a sets of the City of Memphis, collect th and pay them over to the creditors, an

inances of the extinct
y might administer the
d man.
cuit court, granting re-
ayer of the bill, was re-
l the bill dismissed.
the court no elaborate
he whole court was ustice announced eight
the majority were ositions the following

ation is legislative and erwise than under the
ture.
rding to law before the ther than such as are e special requirements
o under the authority
e levied under judicial
t of judgments recov-
cannot be collected
talities of a court of
of creditors of the city.
e collected under auature. If no such au-ly is by appeal to the
ne can grant relief.
obedience to contract
dicial direction, can be ceiver appointed by a ere be no public officer
from the Legislature
not decided, as the case

tion was not then de-
on us now, we see no
the collection of taxes
nction of a court of r assessment of such possesses no power to o compel officers who
for that purpose, in a
do so is clear, and is upon a ground very
h narrower than that
f chancery would act
ficer either to assess or

icers exist, the duty is a legal right to have
at duty for his benefit,
pel this performance,
damus, has been a well
ands of the courts of
In the other there ex-
to levy the tax or to The power to enforce
is levied, or to cause officers, is a common-
ed and limited to cases
, and is not one of the ancery. It would re-
he compulsory process
icer to make him per-
, but the appointment
fficer and a decree di-

wer proceeds from the
to exercise it; in the
the court which first nd makes an officer to wer has ever yet been exercised by a court of chancery. The appointment of its own officer to collect taxes levied by order of a common-law court is as much without authority as to appoint the same officer to levy and collect the tax. They are parts of the same proceeding, and relate to the same matter. If the common-law court can compel the assessment of a tax, it is quite as competent to enforce its collection as a court of chancery. Having jurisdiction to compel the assessment, there is no reason why it should stop short, if any further judicial power exists under the law, and turn the case over to a court of equity. Its sheriff or marshal is as well qualified to collect the tax as a receiver appointed by the court of chancery.

The difficulty is that no power exists in either court to fill the vacancy in the office of tax collector; and the case of Lee County v. Rogers, 7 Wall. 175 [74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 162], where the laws of the State of Iowa expressly authorize the court to enforce its writ of mandamus by making such appointment, the only case in which it has ever been done, shows that without such legislative authority it cannot be done.

It is the duty of the marshals of the federal courts and the sheriffs of state courts to levy executions issuing from these courts on the property of defendants, and sell it, to raise money to pay their judgments. Let us suppose that, for some reason or other, the office of marshal or sheriff became vacant for a while. Would that authorize the court of equity of the Federal or State Government to appoint a sheriff or marshal? or to appoint a receiver to levy the execution? or, if it had been levied, to sell the property, collect the purchase money and pay it to plaintiff? If this cannot be done, if it never has been done, why can it do a much more unjudicial act, by appointing a collector to collect the taxes, or what is still less appropriate, appointing a receiver and endowing him with that power?

To appoint a marshal or a sheriff to execute the process of a court to enforce the judgment of that court is not such a wide departure from the judicial function as to appoint a receiver to collect taxes; but no case has been cited of the exercise of even the former power by the court, much less the appointment, by a court of chancery, of an officer to execute the processes of a court of law. The appointment of special masters or commissioners, to make sales under decrees in chancery, is the ordinary mode of that court to enforce its decrees in cases where the court has jurisdiction of the subject matter of the suit. [560]

Not only are the decisions here reviewed of our own court clearly opposed to the exercise of this power by the court of equity, but the decisions of the highest court of the State of Kentucky are equally emphatic. It is the powers derived from the statute law of that State under which alone this tax can be collected. The issue of the bonds on which the judgment was obtained was by virtue of a special statute, and that statute prescribed the mode of levying and collecting this tax.

It enacted that its collection should not be by the sheriff who collected the ordinary taxes for the State and county, but that a special tax collector should be appointed for that purpose by the justices of the county court who levied the tax. The court of appeals, construing this statute, which was in existence when the bonds were issued, holds that no other officers but these can collect the taxes, and has decided, both in reference to this law and the Constitution of the State, that a court of chancery cannot appoint such an officer or exercise this function of tax collector. McLean County Precinct v. Deposit Bank, 81 Ky. 254.

This decision, if not conclusive, is entitled to great weight as construing the statute under which alone this tax can be levied and collected.

These considerations require that the answer to each of the three questions certified to us by the judges of the circuit court be in the negative, and that the decree of that court dismissing the bill be affirmed; and it is so ordered.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

[561] The present case presents a question not heretofore decided by this court.

The appellant has judgments against the County of Allen, in the Commonwealth of Kentucky, which was rendered in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Kentucky District, for the amount of unpaid interest on bonds issued by that County in payment of its subscription to the capital stock of a railroad company, the subscription having been made and the bonds issued under express legislative authority. The county court refused to levy a tax to satisfy such judgments, although it was authorized and required by the Act, in virtue of which the bonds were issued, to levy "as listed and taxed under the revenue laws of the State, a sum sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds as it accrues, together with the costs of collecting the same." It was further provided, by the same Act, that the county court "may appoint collectors for said tax," or may require the sheriff to collect the tax.

In 1876 the General Assembly of Kentucky passed a special Act releasing the sheriff of Allen County from the duty of giving bond for the collection of any railroad tax, and providing that the "county court shall, at the instance or motion of any person, or by request, appoint a special collector to collect all taxes or levies on said county for railroad purposes; and shall require bonds, with security, to be approved by the court, for the faithful discharge of all duties incumbent on him."

Execution upon Thompson's judgments having been returned "no property," and the county court having refused to levy a tax to pay them, the circuit court, upon Thompson's application, issued a mandamus against the judge and justices constituting the county court, commanding them to perform the duty, enjoined by statute, of levying and causing to be collected, from the taxable property of the county, a sum sufficient to satisfy the before mentioned judgments, and the cost of collecting the same. Subsequently, on May 28, 1881, the county court, in conformity with the foregoing order, made a levy upon the taxable property of the taxpayers of the county "to pay the judgments in favor of T. W. Thompson against said [562] county." It was further ordered by the county court "that J. T. Stork be, and is hereby appointed collector of said levy, upon his executing bond, with approved secu
county court, and he will proc
collect said levy, and pay the s isfaction of the judgments he
in favor of T. W. Thompson o
Stork declined to accept the offi
It is alleged in the bill, and adm
swer, "that the sentiments an large majority of the citizens a
the said Allen County are very spoken against the collection or said tax." The county court hav that it was unable to find any p
willing to accept the appointm
and undertake the collection o
Thompson being unable, as he
any person within the County w
to qualify as collector, the prese
was commenced against the Cou
number of its taxpayers, whose
in the bill, together with the a taxable property, as assessed county authorities, with the t each, as shown by the public county. The bill sets out the f
and asks that the several taxp
made defendants, be required to the several sums due from the
the levy made by the county
other taxpayers, not specifically fendants, be required to pay i
some person appointed by it amount due from them respectiv
to be applied in satisfaction judgments. There is, also, a pr relief.

The parties, by their counse
the hearing of the cause, and i
as true, that the county court
faith and diligently endeavored proper person to act as collector taxes in said County, and the taxes in the bill of complaint s
"no such fit and proper perso
who will undertake and perfor
duty of such collector;" and plainant is without remedy for t
the debt herein, except through court in the appointment of a rec
for in the bill, or other approp
the court."

Under this state of facts my b
ing the decree below, hold t
court, sitting in equity, was e authority, in any way, to cause
of Allen County to bring into due from them respectively, tha
be applied in satisfaction of Th
ments.

In my judgment, there is not
mer decisions which prevents a
from giving substantial relief t
ant. In Walkley v. City of Muscat [73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 930], the
to a court of equity to compel th
The only point decided was, th
nicipal corporation refused to le isfy a judgment against it, the creditor was a mandamus to co
and that "a court of equity is i iliary to a court of law in the
its judgments in cases only whe inadequate to afford the proper

, 19 Wall. 107 [86 U.
federal court, sitting
the absence of a levy,
of the taxpayers of a nplainant's judgments
narshal of the district
d sell so much of their essary for the satisfac-
In other words, the
a levy of taxes. And ssioners, 19 Wall. 655
228], it appears that
by the levee commis-
law having been re-
r any attempt made to suit in a common-law
equity, and prayed
be required to assess
ary to pay the bonds reasonable time, they district judge of the
ite authorized to levy
sioners failed to do so,
evy. It was decided n belonged to the legis-
branch of the govern-
the power must be dere of the State; if the ommissioners had, by
bers, ceased to exist,
islature either to assess
, or to vest the power
that, in any event, a
it power to levy and y a state law. That e decision in that case
nd Tax Cases, 92 U. S.
], where, referring to
nissioners, it was said:
ot a judicial function.
nstitutions of all the
of our English origin,
"
mmissioners, 93 U. S.
the court was asked
of mandamus, a board
the members of which
d collect a tax for the ndgment against the
not be done, that the
be required to make ction; or, if that could nited States Marshal
sess at once or by in-
year, and collect suffi-
rty subject to taxation
the judgment. It was uld not issue, because issioners had become
t the court had no gen-
n the marshal to levy
atisfying a judgment.
lish the doctrine that
t a judicial function.
e granting of relief to ny degree, disturb the
the foregoing cases.
court to usurp the func-
hat duty has been perunal authorized to do
urt of Allen County.
done, except to collect
sums of money which they are under legal obligation to pay. The collection of these sums will not interfere with any discretion with which the Allen County Court is invested by law; for, by its own order, [565] made in conformity with the law of the State, and by the judgment in the mandamus proceedings, the sums due from the individual defendants, and from other taxpayers, have been set apart for the payment of Thompson's judgments. Those sums, when collected, cannot be otherwise used. As the county court cannot find anyone who will accept the office of special collector, and as the parties agree that there is no mode of collecting the sums set apart in the hands of the individual defendants and other taxpayers, for the payment of Thompson, I am unable to perceive why the circuit court, sitting in equity, may not cause these sums to be applied in satisfaction of its judgments at law. The plaintiff has no remedy at law; for, the common-law court in rendering judgment has all that it can do, and the local tribunal, by levying the required tax and seeking the aid of a special collector to collect it, has done all that it can do. There is no suggestion, or even pretense, that the taxpayers who are sued dispute the regularity of the assessment made against them by the county court. Admitting their legal liability for the specific amounts assessed against them, and conceding that what they owe must, when paid, go in satisfaction of Thompson's judgments, they dispute the authority of any judicial tribunal to compel them to pay it over. With money in their hands, equitably belonging to the judgment creditor, they walk out of the court whose judgments remain unsatisfied, announcing, in effect, that they will hold negotiations only with a "special collector," who has no existence.

That the court below, sitting in equity—after it has given a judgment at law for money, and after a return of nulla bona against the debtor—may not lay hold of moneys, set apart, by the act of the debtor, in the hands of individuals exclusively for the payment of that judgment, and which money, the parties agree, cannot be otherwise reached than by being brought into that court, under its orders, is a confession of helplessness on the part of the courts of the United States that I am unwilling to make. I, therefore, dissent from the opinion and judgment in this case.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. CO., Appt., [600]

v.

IVER L. ROCKNE, County Treasurer of Traill County.

(See S. C., "Northern Pac. R. R. Co. v. Traill Co." Reporter's ed., 600-611.)

Public lands—grant to Northern Pacific Railroad Company—right of Territory to tax.

1. The lands granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company are not subject to taxation by the local authorities while the legal title remains in the United States as security for the payment of the cost of surveying them.

2. The Act of 1870 requiring the payment of these costs by the Company, is valid, though the original grant imposed no such condition.

[No. 690.]

Submitted, Nov. 17, 1885. Decided Dec. 7, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Dakota.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. W. P. Clough, for appellant:

The lands taxed had not become part of the taxable property within the Territory when the taxes in dispute were levied, and the court below erred in not so deciding, and reversing the decree of the district court.

Kan. Pac. R. Co. v. Prescott, 16 Wall. 603 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 373); U. P. R. Co. v. McShane, 22 Wall. 444 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 747).

A legislative Act tending to violate a contract can only be objected to by the injured party to the contract.

Hagar v. Rec. Dist. 111 U. S. 701 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 569].

Since every statute must be presumed to have been constitutionally enacted, until the contrary has been clearly shown, the presumption of legislative power to pass a given statute includes the presumption of assent by all parties to be affected thereby, whenever such assent is requisite to the existence of such power.

Ames v. L. S. & M. R. Co. 21 Minn. 241.

So long as the legal title to lands is actually retained by the government, in pursuance of an Act of Congress especially requiring it to be done, as security for a payment of money to the government, such lands remain outside the body of property liable to taxation by a State or Territory.

Messrs. M. S. Wilkinson and Miller & Greene, for appellee:

The appellant derives its interest in and title to the lands in question solely through an Act of Congress, approved July 2, A. D. 1864.

The words "that there be and hereby is granted" are words of absolute donation, and import a grant in præsenti.

Leavenworth, etc. R. R. Co. v. U. S. 92 U. S. 741 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 637); H. & St. J. R. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. 95 (76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 599); Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 60 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 554); 1 Lester, 513–8, opinion 257.

Such words vest a present title in the grantee, though a survey of the lands and a location of the roads are necessary to give precision to it, and attach it to any particular tract.

Leavenworth, etc. R. R. Co. v. U. S. 92 U. S. 741 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 637); Lessieur v. Price, 12 How. 72 (53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 898); Blair T. L. & Land Co. v. Kitteringham, 43 Ia. 462; Lee v. Summers, 2 Oreg. 260. See also Northern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Peronto, 14 N. W. Rep. 103.

Again, the title of the United States may pass as well by an Act of Congress in the words of a present grant, as by patent.

Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 499 (38 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 264); Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. 285 (43 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 270).

And the position that the grant in question conveyed a present existing title to the N. P. R. R. Co. of all the lands granted is supported by the clear weight of authority.

Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 60 (88 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 554); Cent. Pac. R. Dyer, 1 Sawy. 641; Ballance v. For How. 18 (54 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 32); M Boyle, 19 How. 132. 145 (60 U S. bk. 1 577); R. R. Co. v. Smith, 9 Wall. 95 (bk. 19, L. ed. 599).

But even if the grant in question di vest the appellant with the legal tit lands, still such lands may be taxed b government has parted with the le when the right to the title is complet

Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. 441 (44 11, L. ed. 671); Kan. Pac. R. Co. v. Pr Wall. 603 (83 U. S. bk. 21 L. ed. 373); Co. v. McShane 22 Wall. 444 (89 U. S. ed. 747).

The Company owned these lands of a present grant, six years before th of the Act of 1870.

What is this Act for which this Co now, for the first time in all these yea some degree of respect?

It is a fair and rational constructio Act to say that the law-making tended thereby, not to devest the Co persons interested in these lands, of given by the original grant, but simp clare that neither the Company no claiming under it should receive United States the evidences of their p acquired title to particular tracts of the costs of the survey should be pa

If, however, this construction be rect, then the Act of 1870 must be either as one by which the governme to reinvest itself with the title to lan ceased to own, an Act of forfeiture o tion, and therefore absolutely void, impairing the obligation of the origi and therefore void not only as to th tion not assenting thereto, but as t sons interested in asserting its validi

See Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 65 bk. 7, L. ed. 553); Ham v. McClaws, Cooley, Const. Lim. 155, 166; Potte ris, Stat. & Const. 46.

The appellant in this case founds upon no statute, but upon the viol statute whose aid it invokes. It c this forum as into a court of equity, hinting at the validity of the statu protection it claims, it bases its righ table relief upon its refusal to compl requirements of that statute. It does into court with clean hands. Forge equity it asks equity. Refusing to General Government what, for the p argument, it admits to be due, it at time refuses to pay the assessments o government, and alleges its default in as a justification for its default in the

It is now too late for this Corpora sert the validity of the Act of 187 presumed acquiescence in its provisi

Cass Co. v. Morrison, 28 Minn. 257; Pacific R. R. Co. v. Peronto, 14 N. 103.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the the court:

This is an appeal from a decree preme Court of the Territory of Dak

A suit was brought by the appella

ll County, for the pur-ıthorities of that coun-collection of taxes asompany, on the ground
cts of Congress to be ey were not subject to court made a finding on which it declared
fendant, and dismissed
the supreme court of
was twice argued, and,
ip of that court was
tion of two new judges
between the two hear-
each instance, equally
nt it rendered of affirm-
t of two judges out of it argued.
ny claims that the lands
ble under the decisions
s of the Railway Co. v.
83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed.
Shane, 22 Wall. 444 [89

evied on lands granted
uilding the roads were eason of the fact that
nor anyone for them,
States the costs of sur-
the government. The ad been levied by au-nder the laws of Kan-
y like authorities of the inally been granted to ad Company and other

lding a road from the Pacific Ocean, by an ed July 1, 1862. The grant was made for
in Kansas was already mpany which received
main road, namely:
lroad Company, was
nd the corporators im-er it. In the year 1864
an amendatory Act,
to the companies, and
the charter or original nd in section 21, reads

d granted by this Act
said company or party
here shall first be paid
United States the cost
, and conveying the
or party in interest, as red by said company."

o. v. Prescott, which
the Supreme Court of these lands could not taxes under state laws
ying them was paid to se the government re-
he same to compel this
s decided in 1872.
the R. Co. v. McShane,
ng the same question,
ved some other points
escott, which the court
uled, it necessarily re-
, the result of which was to reaffim the proposition that, until the United States was reimbursed for the expenses of the survey of those lands, they were not subject to state taxation.

By an Act approved also July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365), Congress passed a law chartering the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to construct a road from Lake Superior to Puget's Sound, on the Pacific Coast, by the northern route, and made a munificent grant of the public lands to aid in this construction. The terms of the grant and its conditions were much the same as the original grant of 1862 to the Union Pacific Company and its branches. It contained the following provision: [608]

"Sec. 20 And be it further enacted, That the better to accomplish the object of this Act, namely: to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the government at all times (but particularly in time of war) the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said Northern Pacific Railroad Company, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this Act."

And in 1870, when making the appropriation for the survey of these lands within the limit of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, Congress added this proviso: "That before any land granted to said Company by the United States shall be conveyed to any party entitled thereto under any of the Acts incorporating or relating to said Company, there shall first be paid into the Treasury of the United States the cost of surveying, selecting, and conveying the same by the company or party in interest." 16 Stat. at L., p. 305. It will be seen that this language is almost identical with section 21 of the Act of 1864 concerning the lands granted to the Union Pacific Company which was construed in R. Co. v. Prescott and in R. Co. v. McShane. As the principle of the exemption of these lands from taxation until the costs of surveying them was paid received the full consideration of the court in two cases argued and decided two years apart, and as it received the unanimous approval of the court, it must govern the present case, unless a distinction can be shown.

Such distinction is relied on, and has received the support of a decision of the Supreme Court of Minnesota in the case of Cass Co. v. Morrison, 28 Minn. 257. It is there held that the company, having built its road and earned the lands, had thereby acquired a complete equitable title, with right to demand a patent, though the costs of survey had not been paid, and this equitable title was subject to taxation. [609]

It was also held that because the requirement to pay these costs was made in 1870, six years after the original grant, it was void as an unconstitutional exercise of power by Congress.

But we think that the clause authorizing Congress to add to, alter, amend, or repeal the Act of 1864, clearly conferred this power on Congress, especially when exercised, as in this instance, before the Company had built a mile of road, or earned an acre of land, or in any other manner secured an equitable right to the lands. Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 719 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 501].

But this very question, in a little different form, was raised and decided in R. Co. v. Prescott, 16 Wall. 608 [83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 374]. In that case the original grant, made in 1862, contained no provision about the payment of the costs of survey. The Act of 1864, which did contain this provision, added very largely to the area of the land granted by the Act of 1862, and the opening sentences of the opinion state the proposition whether the requirement that the costs of surveying must be paid before the patent shall issue, covers all of both grants or only that of 1864, and it is held that it covers both. We think this governs the present case. Independently of the clause of the Act of 1864 authorizing amendments, additions and repeals, we think that, until the lands were earned, and other acts that the law demanded that the Company should do had been done, it had no such right in the lands as would prevent Congress from passing a remedial provision so eminently just as the one under consideration.

Again, it is said that, since the road was built before this tax was levied and the Company had earned the land, its equitable title was complete, and according to the decisions of this court, it was subject to taxation.

The same point was urged in R. Co. v. Prescott. But the court said that "this doctrine was only applicable to cases where the right to the patent is complete, the equitable title fully vested, without anything more to be paid or [61C] any act to be done going to the foundation of the right." But it added, in that case, that two important acts remained to be done, the failure to do which might wholly defeat the company's title. One of these was payment of the costs of surveying.

It may be well to restate the grounds on which this decision rests.

The United States made a magnificent grant to this Company, of lands equal in quantity to forty or fifty thousand square miles, an area as large as an average State of the Union. It thought proper to require of the grantee the payment of the costs of making the surveys necessary to the location and ascertainment of these lands. To secure the payment of those expenses, it decided to retain the legal title in its own hands until they were paid. The government was, as to these costs, in the condition of a trustee in a conveyance to secure payment of money. But, if the land was liable to be sold for taxes due to state, territorial or county organizations, this security would be easily lost.

No sale of land for taxes, no taxes can be assessed on any property, but by virtue of the sovereign authority in whose jurisdiction it is done. If not assessed by direct Act of the Legislature itself, it must, to be valid, be done under authority of a law enacted by such Legislature. A valid sale, therefore, for taxes, being the highest exercise of sovereign power of the State, must carry the title to the property sold, and if it does not do this, it is because the assessment is void.

It follows that if the assessment of these taxes is valid and the proceedings well conducted, the sale confers a title paramount to all others, and thereby destroys the lien of the United States for the costs of surveying these lands. If, on the other hand, the sale would not confer such a title, it is because th thority to make it.

At all events, the holder of t
to these lands has a right to which would have the effect
United States in the assertion them until these costs are paid

We are aware of the use bei principle by the companies, wh
the lands, neglect to pay these prevent taxation. The remed
gress and is of easy applicatio
will take steps to enforce its li
of survey, by sale of the lands of title, the Treasury of the Uni
soon be reimbursed for its exp
the surveys, and the States an which the lands lie, be remit
propriate rights of taxation.
do no more than declare the la

The decree of the Supreme Co
tory of Dakota is reversed a manded, with directions to ca
entered perpetually enjoining
Traill County from any furt
collect the taxes in the bill ment

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk.

Cited—117 U. S. 160.

DAVIS SEWING MACHIN
OF WATERTOWN, N. Y

v.

ALMARIN C. RICHARDS
ANDREW ROTHWELL, Dec
MARIN C. RICHARDS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed.

Guaranty—when acceptance

1. A guaranty, signed by the g any previous request of the othe
absence, for no consideration mov
except future advances to be ma
debtor, is in legal effect an offer
part of the guarantor, which re
ance to complete the contract.

The rules stated in Davis v. V
bk. 26, 686, applied.

[No. 49.]

Argued Nov. 10, 11, 1885. Deci

IN ERROR to the Supreme trict of Columbia.

The history and facts of the opinion of the court.

NOTE.—Guaranty; notice of
necessary to render guarantor li Wells, Fargo & Co., 104 U. S., 159,
the subject is fully considered. Se
v. Drake, 30 U. S. (5 Pet.), 624

Some of the recent cases in th
King v. Batterson, 13 R. I., 117;
ver, 78 Ky., 193; Taylor v. Shouse
ter v. Green, 26 Kan., 252; Wilcox 138; Crittenden v. Fiske, 46 Mich.,
ler, 13 S. C., 94; Milroy v. Quinn,
v. Raymond, 70 Ind., 271; Newbur
60 N. H., 100.

Continuing guaranties, what mond v. Prestman, 25 U. S. (12 Wh
note.

"If one proposes to lend his c
for the benefit of another, and wi liability to a particular transacti

ae, for plaintiff in er-

otance of the guaranty

Wend. 82; Smith v. n Bank v. Coster, 8 N. Prestman, 12 Wheat. 712); Mitchell v. Mo-lon v. Shaw, 2 Har. & 17 Md. 288; Cass v. Carman v. Elledge, 40 urch, 15 Conn. 406; see ne Co. v. Jones, 61 Mo. s, 8 Grattan, 174–178; Sm. & M. 595; *Sand-*04.

ice of the guaranty is guaranty expresses a

S. 165 (Bk. 26, L. ed.

o the extent or charac-ideration. One merely

t, 2 How. 426–452 (43 26–336); Dutchman v. 7.

and C. C. Cole, for

livered the opinion of

ought in the Supreme Columbia, upon a guar-by one John W. Poler , dated December 17, the plaintiff Corpora-reed that all sales of ch the Corporation ould be upon certain e principal of which e all reasonable efforts sell the machines of ess than its regular re-he District of Colum-f Prince George and te of Maryland, and ness by account, note, e, which should arise ion under the contract, the sale of sewing ma-ufacture; and that the continuance of the chines to him at a cer-e payment therefor in at either party might pleasure.

The guaranty was upon the same paper with the above contract, and was as follows:

"For value received, we hereby guarantee to the Davis Sewing Machine Company of Watertown, N. Y., the full performance of the foregoing contract on the part of John W. Poler, and the payment by said John W. Poler of all indebtedness, by account, note, indorsement of notes (including renewals and extensions) or otherwise, to the said Davis Sewing Machine Company, for property sold to said John W. Poler, under this contract, to the amount of three thousand ($3,000) dollars.

"Dated Washington, D. C., this 17th day of December, 1872. "A. Rothwell.

"A. C. Richards."

Under the guaranty were these words: "I consider the above sureties entirely responsible. Washington, December 19, 1872. J. T. Stevens."

At the trial the above papers, signed by the parties, were given in evidence by the plaintiff, and there was proof of the following facts: on December 17, 1872, at Washington, the contract was executed by Poler, and the guaranty was signed by the defendants, and the contract and guaranty, after being so signed, were delivered by the defendants to Poler, and by Poler to Stevens, the plaintiff's attorney, and by Stevens afterwards forwarded, with his recommendation of the sureties, to the plaintiff at Watertown in the State of New York, and the contract there executed by the plaintiff. The plaintiff afterwards delivered goods to Poler under the contract, and he did not pay for them. The defendants had no notice of the plaintiff's execution of the contract or acceptance of the guaranty, and no notice or knowledge that the plaintiff had furnished any goods to Poler under the contract or upon the faith of the guaranty, until January, 1875, when payment therefor was demanded by the plaintiff of the defendants, and refused. At the time of the signing of the guaranty, the plaintiff had furnished no goods to Poler, and the negotiations then pending between the plaintiff and Poler related to prospective transactions between them. [526]

The court instructed the jury as follows: "It appearing that, at the time the defendant signed the guaranty on the back of the contract between the plaintiff and Poler, the plaintiff had not executed the contract or assented thereto, and that the contract and guaranty related to prospective dealings between the plaintiff and Poler, and that subsequently to the signing thereof by the defendants the attorney for the

---

istinctly in his proposi-y. What form of words guaranty' is a question xpressions as 'We hold he payment of any sum y receive of you' or a liabilities to said bank y hereafter arise, to the e the guarantors agreed any time not exceeding to pay 'unconditionally ss of B to the extent and f $10,000 for any over hereafter shall be made,' uing guaranties; but 'I r the amount of $2,500,' at. Sec., p. 186, § 269, citing v. Phelps, 16 Hun, 158; Rindge v. Judson, 24 N. Y., 64; Clark v. Burdett, 2 Hall, 197; Mayer v. Isaac, 6 M. & W., 605; Coles v. Pack, L. R., 5 C. P., 65; Merle v. Wells, 2 Campb., 413; Lazear v. Union Bank, 52 Md., 78; Reynolds v. Douglass, 37 U. S. (12 Pet.), 497, bk. 9, 1171; Davis v. Wells, Gerson v. Hamilton, 30 La. Ann., pt. 1, 737.

See also Cutler v. Ballou, 136 Mass., 337; Pratt v. Matthews, 24 Hun, 386; Young v. Brown, 53 Wis., 339; Crittenden v. Fiske, 46 Mich., 70; Tootle v. Elgutter, 14 Neb., 158; Morgan v. Boyer, 39 Ohio St., 324.

Notice of default; when guarantor entitled to. See Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Welch, 51 U. S. (10 How.), 461, bk. 13, 497; Mauran v. Bullus, 41 U. S. 16 Pet.), 528, bk. 10, 1056 note; Davis v. Wells, Fargo & Co., supra; Dearborn v. Sawyer, 59 N. H., 95; Davis S. M. Co. v. Mills, 55 Ia., 543; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Littler, 56 Ia., 601; Kline v. Raymond, supra; Milroy v. Quinn, supra.

plaintiff approved the responsibility of the guarantors and sent the contract to Watertown, N. Y., to the plaintiff, which subsequently signed it, and no notice having been given by the plaintiff to the defendants of the acceptance of such contract and guaranty, and that it intended to furnish goods thereon and hold the defendants responsible, the plaintiff cannot recover, and the jury should find for the defendants."

A verdict was returned for the defendants, and judgment rendered thereon, which on exceptions by the plaintiff was affirmed at the general term, and the plaintiff sued out this writ of error, pending which one of the defendants died and his executor was summoned in.

[527] The decision of this case depends upon the application of the rules of law stated in the opinion in the recent case of Davis v. Wells, 104 U. S. 159 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 686], in which the earlier decisions of this court upon the subject are reviewed.

Those rules may be summed up as follows: A contract of guaranty, like every other contract, can only be made by the mutual assent of the parties. If the guaranty is signed by the guarantor at the request of the other party, or if the latter's agreement to accept is contemporaneous with the guaranty, or if the receipt from him of a valuable consideration, however small, is acknowledged in the guaranty, the mutual assent is proved, and the delivery of the guaranty to him or for his use completes the contract. But if the guaranty is signed by the guarantor without any previous request of the other party, and in his absence, for no consideration moving between them except future advances to be made to the principal debtor, the guaranty is, in legal effect, an offer or proposal on the part of the guarantor, needing an acceptance by the other party to complete the contract.

The case at bar belongs to the latter class. There is no evidence of any request from the plaintiff Corporation to the guarantors, or of any consideration moving from it and received or acknowledged by them at the time of their signing the guaranty. The general words at the beginning of the guaranty, "value received," without stating from whom, are quite as consistent with a consideration received by the guarantors from the principal debtor only. The certificate of the sufficiency of the guarantors, written by the plaintiff's attorney under the guaranty, bears date two days later than the guaranty itself. The plaintiff's original contract with the principal debtor was not executed by the plaintiff until after that. The guarantors had no notice that their sufficiency had been approved, or that their guaranty had been accepted, or even that the original contract had been executed or assented to by the plaintiff, until long afterwards, when payment was demanded of them for goods supplied by the plaintiff to the principal debtor.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. M[illegible]enney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

CLAY COUNTY, IOWA, v.

UNITED STATES, ex rel. H[illegible]EER, SR., AND HUGH Mc[illegible]

Admrs. of MICHAEL MCALEER

(See S. C., "Clay Co. v. McAleer" [illegible] 616-612.)

Mandamus to compel tax levy—[illegible]rent expenses of county—[illegible]

Upon a petition for a mandamu[illegible] levy of a tax for the payment [illegible] against a county, the answer stat[illegible] ceeds of the maximum levy allow[illegible] insufficient to meet the ordinary c[illegible] of the county government. It is he[illegible] demurrer to the answer, that the pe[illegible] entitled to the writ.

[No. 66.]

Argued Nov. 18, 1885. Decide[illegible]

IN ERROR to the Circuit Cou[illegible] States for the District of Iow[illegible]

The history and facts of the c[illegible] appear in the opinion of the cou[illegible]

Mr. George G. Wright, [illegible] error.

Mr. John Mitchell, for def[illegible]

Mr. Chief Justice Waite del[illegible] ion of the court:

This record shows that Mich[illegible] covered a judgment on the 2[illegible] 1864, in the Circuit Court of th[illegible] for the District of Iowa, agains[illegible] for $9,172.50. Upon this ju[illegible] payments have been made, bu[illegible] mains due more than $5,000. [illegible] in judgment was contracted, th[illegible] county to levy a tax for ordin[illegible] enue was limited to four mills [illegible] dollar of the assessed value of ta[illegible] afterwards this was increase[illegible] which is the authorized rate n[illegible] of May, 1881, the administrato[illegible] ment creditor, he being dead [illegible] circuit court for a mandamu[illegible] county "to set apart of the funds [illegible] and of the revenues collected an[illegible] for and during the year 1881, [illegible] the same in an amount sufficien[illegible] judgment, interest and costs, an[illegible] shall not be sufficient, that then [illegible] be compelled to levy for the [illegible] amount sufficient to pay the sai[illegible] interest and costs, and for such [illegible] may be proper in the premises [illegible] states that the full amount of [illegible] by law for the ordinary revenu[illegible] was levied for the years 1880 [illegible] that these levies were all requ[illegible] too, for the proper maintenance [illegible] government. It is also stated [illegible] the revenues for these years c[illegible] devoted to the payment of the ju[illegible] out seriously impairing the ef[illegible] government." The answer co[illegible] lows: "That the maximum le[illegible] pose for the year 1882 will not be [illegible] the ordinary current expenses [illegible] and that no part thereof can be [illegible] payment of said judgment wi[illegible] impairing the efficiency of said [illegible]

the relators demurred, ie court ordered "that mandamus issue com- pervisors * * * forth- e mill on the dollar of f the property of said 882, and to be collected rent year, 1882, and to judgment of relator, collect, and pay over a llar each year until re- st and costs are fully judgment the present it.

he court cannot order to levy a tax in excess by statute in a case like tion." Such was the f this court in United U. S. 582 [Bk. 25, L. f Iowa have uniformly offin v. Davenport, 26 ett, 37 Iowa, 34; Iowa ty of Sac, 39 Iowa, 134. that the court might of the six-mills tax au- ied separately from the ially for the payment as said in Beaulieu v. y, 554, that this might levy was not required enses chargeable upon und, and such is the yons, 17 Iowa, 1. But affirmatively that the y of 1882 will not be inary current expenses ort was made to have and certain, so as to ount of the tax would as to be expended, but to go to a hearing upon he answer as it stood. ume the fact to be that evied to pay the judg- ing the County in the rent affairs.

Louis v. United States, L. ed. 162], decided this case below, that penditures are proper unicipal administration lded by law to the mu- court has the right to much less to usurp or in a single year, would he details of every esti- based upon an inquiry municipal service; to s, and in advance, will every contingency and contingency that may he public necessities." of the present contro- was a case in which a payment out of the after the special tax au- ied for his benefit had balance due him was n the ordinary revenue no other provision in s v. Clark Co. 96 U. S. 8]. In Coy v. City of Lyons, supra, the municipal authorities had levied a tax of five mills only, when by the charter they could have levied ten mills. In this way they showed that the full tax was not needed for current purposes, and the court was therefore free to require them to proceed with the execution of the power which had been conferred by law until the judgment creditor was paid. But in Coffin v. Davenport, 26 Iowa, 515, the same court held that "when the ordinary expenses of carrying on the government of a municipal corporation require all the proceeds arising from a tax, which is the full limit the corporation is authorized to levy, it cannot be compelled to apply a part of such fund to the payment of a judgment held by a creditor against it." The case of Beaulieu v. Pleasant Hill, supra, is to the same effect, for there the order was to levy the special tax for the payment of the judgment, unless it should be made to appear upon a further return that the power had been already exhausted, and that the fund raised had been properly appropriated.

It follows that the judgment of the court below ordering the levy of a tax of one mill for the benefit of the relators, upon the facts stated in the answer and admitted by the demurrer, was erroneous, and that it must be reversed.

The judgment is consequently reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings according to law.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

MOINA CAMPBELL, Admrx., and J. B. CAMPBELL, Admr. of the Estate of JOHN STAMPS, Deceased, Plffs. in Err., [620]

v.

JAMES H. HOLT.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 620-634.)

Constitutional law—"due process of law"—Statute of Limitations—extension after defense has accrued.

1. The repeal of a statute of limitations does not deprive a debtor in whose favor it had become a defense, of his property without due process of law, in violation of the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment.

2. There is a distinction between the effect of statutes of limitation in vesting rights to real and personal property and their operation as a defense to contracts.

[No. 27.]

Submitted Apr. 17, 1885. Decided Dec. 7, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Texas.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. W. W. Boyce, for plaintiffs in error:

When the period prescribed by the Statute of Limitations has once run, so as to cut off the remedy which one might have had for the recovery of property in the possession of another, the title to the property, irrespective of the original right, is regarded in the law as vested in the possessor, who is entitled to the same protection in that respect as the owner is entitled to in other cases. A subsequent repeal of the limitation law could not be given a retroactive effect so as to disturb this title.

NOTE.—Statute of Limitations. See, in connection with the above case of Campbell v. Holt, Townsend v. Jemison 50 U. S., (9 How.), 407, bk. 13, 194, note.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 449, and numerous authorities cited.

A claim of a pecuniary character, after the statute has run, cannot be treated otherwise than a claim of title to property adversely possessed.

Rockport v. Walden, 54 N. H. 167; McMerty v. Morrison, 62 Mo. 140; Goodman v. Munks, 8 Porter (Ala.), 84; Harrison v. Stacy, 6 Rob. (La.) 15; Baker v. Stonebraker, 36 Mo. 338; Shelby v. Guy, 11 Wheat. 361 (24 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 495).

A right, to have become a vested right, must have become a title, legal or equitable, to the present or future enjoyment of property, or to the present or future enforcement of a demand, or a legal exemption from a demand made by another.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 448; see further Weidenger v. Spruance, 101 Ill., 278; Wanser v. Atkinson, 43 N. J. 571.

[620] Messrs. F. Charles Hume, Seth Shepard and Sayles & Bassett, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the Supreme Court of the State of Texas.

The action was brought in the District Court of Washington County, Texas, May 16, 1874, by Holt, the defendant in error, against the present plaintiffs in error. Holt sued as devisee and legatee of his wife, Malvina, who was the daughter of John Stamps, deceased, of whose estate Moina and J. B. Campbell are administrators.

The action was founded in the allegation that Malvina Stamps, afterwards Holt, inherited from her mother, Henrietta Stamps, the wife of John Stamps, an interest in lands and negroes which her mother owned at the time of her death. That the land was sold by her father, John Stamps, who received the money and converted it to his own use, and that he also received the hire and profits of the negroes so long as they remained slaves under the laws of Texas.

The defendants set up several defenses, among others the Statute of Limitations of the State of Texas, but, on a trial by jury, Holt recovered a judgment for $8,692.93. From this [621] judgment an appeal was taken to the supreme court of the State, and referred, by consent of parties, to the commissioners of appeal, by whom it was confirmed, and this affirmance was made the judgment of the supreme court.

There were several assignments of error in the hearing before the commissioners of appeal, but the only one which we can consider is that growing out of the plea of the Statute of Limitations.

The cause of action in this case accrued before the outbreak of the war, the mother having died in 1857, and Malvina Stamps was a minor during all the time preceding the insurrection. It seems that the Legislature of Texas had passed several Acts suspending the operation of the Statutes of Limitations the war. But in 1866 a law was passed enacted that these statutes, which had b
pended during this time, should agai
mence running on the 2d day of Septe that year. At this time Malvina Stam of age and unmarried, and the statute
gan to run against her in this case, and become a bar in two years. This time without any suit brought on the claim.
therefore, as the commissioners of ap mit, then barred by the statute. But the State of Texas, which had not yet
instated and accepted by the two Houses
gress as in her old relations, made a n
stitution which, it was declared in t
nance submitting it to the vote of the
should take effect when it was accepted
gress, which was afterwards done.

Article 12, section 43, of this Consti
in these words: "The Statutes of Lim
of civil suits were suspended by the s
Act of Secession of the 28th of Januar
and shall be considered as suspended
this State, until the acceptance of this tution by the United States Congress."

The District Court of Washington
and the commissioners of appeal, fo
many previous decisions of the supre
of the State, held that this provision
the bar of the Statute of Limitations,
before its taking effect the time had
necessary to make the bar complete in t

The defendants, both by plea and by
for instruction to the jury, and in argu
fore the commissioners of appeal,
that the bar of the statute, being comp
perfect, could not, as a defense, be tak
by this constitutional provision, and th
so would violate that part of the Fo Amendment to the Constitution of the States which declares that no State sh prive any person of life, liberty or without due process of law."

This writ of error to the state court
ed on that proposition, and we must inq
its soundness.

The action is based on contract.
hire of the negroes used by the father,
the money received for the land of hi ter, sold by him. The allegation is of edness on this account, and the plea is action is barred by the Statute of Lim
It is not a suit to recover possession o
personal property, but to recover for lation of an implied contract to pay
The distinction is clear, and, in the
take of the case, important.

By the long and undisturbed posse
tangible property, real or personal,
acquire a title to it, or ownership, sup
law to that of another, who may be prove an antecedent and, at one tim mount title. This superior or anteced has been lost by the laches of the pers
ing it, in failing within a reasonable assert it effectively; as, by resuming th
sion to which he was entitled, or asse right by suit in the proper court. W primary owner has lost by his laches,
party has gained by continued possessi out question of his right. This is the tion of the doctrine of prescription, a aw, is mainly applied

ents, but which in the es founded on it, is ap-
kinds.
on Limitations of Ac-
l limitation is used in which is prescribed by during which a title
perty by virtue of a n and enjoyment, or hich no action at law maintained;" and in d præscriptio.
re (he says), is of two
r an instrument for the
or an instrument of an servitude of judicial tations, §§ 1, 2.
been a means of ac-
. It was the earliest
kind of the appropria-
by one person to his n of others, and legis-
always acknowledged
or creating title.
rican statutes of limits the same effect, and,
decisions on the subrity is in favor of the one has had the peace-possession of real or an assertion of his
which, under the law,
its recovery by the real cquired a good title—
the latter, whose neg-
is legal rights has lost
ine has been repeatedly Leffingwell v. Warren,
17, L. ed. 261]; Croxall
72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed.
ee, 100 U. S. 583 [Bk.
v. Comstock, 113 U. S.
It is the doctrine of
has been often asserted
of the States of the y well be held that in

or personal property,
to the removal of the itations by a legislative
has become perfect,
party of his property
law. The reason is,
ence before the repeal-
d become the defendle and the real owner-
in him, and to give the rring this title to plain-
him of his property
aw.
that to remove the bar
tations enables a debtor
he payment of his debt ground.
ng this difference in the limitations is found in 364 (Smart v. Baugh),
as delivered by Chief
reputation as a jurist
highest consideration.
for a slave, and the
his undisturbed possession of the slave for a period of time which would bar the action, but having failed to plead the Statute of Limitations, the question was whether he could avail himself of the lapse of time. "The plea (said the court) is non detinet in the present tense, and under this plea anything which will show a better right in the defendant than in the plaintiff may be admitted as competent evidence. The plea puts in issue the plaintiff's right. Five years' uninterrupted adverse possession of a slave not only bars the remedy of the claimant out of possession, but vests the absolute legal right in the possessor. Therefore, proof of such possession may show that the claimant has no right to the slave and cannot recover. Consequently, it would seem to result, from the reason of the case, that the adverse possession may be proved under the general issue." Answering the objection that in assumpsit and other actions the statute to be available must be pleaded, and by analogy should be pleaded in that case, he says: "The same reason does not apply to assumpsit, because the Statute of Limitations does not destroy the right in foro conscientiæ to the benefit of assumpsit, but only bars the remedy if the defendant chooses to rely on the bar. Time does not pay the debt, but time may vest the right of property." Again he says: "This is perfectly true in detinue for a slave, because, in such a case, the lapse of time has devested the plaintiff of his right of property, and vested it in the defendant. * * * But it is not so in debt, because the Statute of Limitations does not destroy nor pay the debt." "This (he says) has been abundantly established by authority. * * * A debt barred by time is a sufficient consideration for a new assumpsit. The Statute of Limitations only disqualifies the plaintiff to recover a debt by suit if the defendant rely on time in his plea. It is a personal privilege, accorded by law for reasons of public expediency; and the privilege can only be asserted by plea." [625]

The distinction between the effect of statutes of limitation in vesting rights to real and personal property, and its operation as a defense to contracts, is well stated in Jones v. Jones, 18 Alabama, 248. See also Langdell's Equity Pleadings, §§ 118, et sequitur.

We are aware that there are to be found, in the opinions of courts of the States of the Union, expressions of the idea that the lapse of time required to bar the action extinguishes the right, and that this is the principle on which the statutes of limitation of actions rest.

But it will be found that many of these are in cases where the suits are for the recovery of specific real or personal property, and where the proposition was true, because the right of the plaintiff in the property was extinguished and had become vested in the defendant. In others, the Constitution of the State forbids retrospective legislation. That the proposition is sound, that, in regard to debt or assumpsit on contract, the remedy alone is gone and not the obligation, is obvious from a class of cases which have never been disputed.

1. It is uniformly conceded that the debt is a sufficient consideration for a new promise to pay, made after the bar has become perfect.

2. It has been held, in all the English courts, that, though the right of action may be barred in the country where the defendant resides or has resided, and where the contract was made, so that the bar in that jurisdiction is complete, it is no defense, if he can be found, to a suit in another country.

In the case of Williams v. Jones, 18 East, 439, the contract sued on was made in India, and by the law of limitations of that jurisdiction the right of action was barred. But the recovery on it was allowed in England on the ground that the bar did not exist in England, and the right itself had not been lost. Lord Ellenborough said: "Here there is only an extinction of the remedy in the foreign court, [626] according to the law stated to be received there, but no extinction of the right." Bayley, Justice, said: "The Statute of Limitations only bars the plaintiff's remedy and not the debt, and the extent of the defendant's argument is only to show that the remedy is barred in India, but that does not show it to be barred here."

The decisions are numerous to the same effect in the American courts. In the case of Le Roy v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason, 151, Judge Story had conceded that the authorities were that way, but intimated that, if the question were res nova, sound principle might require a different decision. But in the case of Townsend v. Jemison, 9 How. 407 [50 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 194], Mr. Justice Wayne says that, in the previous case of McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312 [38 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 177], in which Judge Story participated, he concurred in the doctrine that, on principle as well as authority, the bar of the statute in one State cannot be pleaded as a defense in the courts of another State, though the contract be made in the former.

In this case of Townsend v. Jemison the opinion of the court contains an elaborate examination of the whole question. It explains the difference between statutes whose effect is to vest title to property by adverse possession, and those which merely affect the remedy, as in case of contract. The result of it is summed up in a single sentence: "The rule in the courts of the United States, in respect to pleas of the Statute of Limitations, has always been that they strictly affect the remedy and not the merits." Again: "The rule is that the Statute of Limitations of the country in which the suit is brought, may be pleaded to bar a recovery upon a contract made out of its political jurisdiction, and that the limitation of the lex loci contractus cannot be." And it is said that in the cases decided in England on this subject there has been no fluctuation.

The case before the court was an action brought in Alabama against a citizen of Mississippi, on a contract made in the latter State, and which, by the laws of that State, was barred by the lapse of time. In the case of McElmoyle v. Cohen, the question was "whether the Statute of Limitations of the State of Georgia can be pleaded to an action in that [627] State upon a judgment rendered in the State of South Carolina.

The court, in its opinion, says: "This will be determined by settling what is the nature of a plea of the Statute of Limitations. Is it a plea that settles the right of a party on a contract or judgment, or one that bars the remedy? Whatever diversity of opinion there may be among jurists on this point, v settled to be a plea to the rem quently, that the lex fori mu well is this doctrine establis States of the Union have made statute of limitations, that, v is barred by the law of a Sta fendants had resided, it shall a action in those States.

There are numerous cases v incapable of enforcement for w or because there is some ob remedy, can be so aided by leg come the proper ground of a in the case of a physician, pr license, who was forbidden to for his service by suit. Th repealed which made this pr covered in the court a judgme of his services on the ground t ute only affected the remedy. cox, 1 Metcalf, Mass. 154. O is the effect of a repeal of usury, in enabling parties to tracts in which the law forbad before the repeal. Wood v. E 68; Welch v. Wadsworth, 30 C v. Palmer, 1 Hill, 324; Hamp wealth, 7 Harris, 329; Baugher 304.

In all this class of cases the that there exists a contract, b no remedy having been provid ment, or the remedy ordinari that class having, for reasons been forbidden or withheld, th providing a remedy where no moving the statutory obstructi the remedy, enables the party contract, otherwise unobjectio

Such is the precise case befo plied obligation of defendants his child for the use of her p It was a valid contract, implie fore the statute began to run i ture and character were not lapse of two years, though t that a valid defense to a suit defense, a purely arbitrary cre fell with the repeal of the law pended.

It is much insisted that this is a vested right, and a right o is protected by the provisions o Amendment.

It is to be observed that th right" is nowhere used in t neither in the original instrum the amendments to it.

We understand very well w a vested right to real estate, t erty, or to incorporeal hereditar we get beyond this, although v exist, they are better describe exact term, as the phrase itself in the language of the Constit

We certainly do not unders to defeat a just debt by the St tions is a vested right, so as to lative power in a proper case. limitation, as often asserted, a this court, are founded in p public policy—are arbitrary e

Tioga R. R. Co. v. Blossll. 150 [87 U. S. bk. 22, ther statutes, shortening it longer, which is necessave always been held to ve power until the bar is does not enter into or betract. No man promises y view to being released y lapse of time. It viherefore, when the Legis- be no bar, though such contract was made. The cited, especially in this ght is destroyed when the which had been lost.

e on this subject is that e Essex Bank, 16 Mass. the bank being about to islature of Massachusetts ning the existence of all pace of three years after charters, for the purpose fending suits, and enabl close their concerns and ock. To a suit brought its charter had expired, ears allowed by this statt the Statute of 1819 was pective in its operation, vested rights. The court iscover any principle by d that this statute is void. interfere with any of the the charter, unless it be to be secured from payerformance of contracts, privilege which, we imagvas not intended to proislature which, in its Acts zed by the Constitution, ing mistakes, and provid- furtherance of justice, h violating its duty or ex-

e how a man can be said e bar of the statute as a e to pay. In the most e use of the word propon, to incorporeal rights, fense of lapse of time to money, property. It is s the creation of conven-

l a right to enforce the debt. The Constitution l pass any law impairing we do not understand the ligation by a protracted an see no right which the w which permits him to stead of payment, which islature from repealing fect is to make him fulfill rt of the State of Texas , within two years after new Constitution, in the ausford, 33 Texas, 745, l provision repealing all formerly in existence was was well considered, and er since.

Among the cases, on the subject referred to in the opinion of the Commissioners of Appeal in the present case, are Rivers v. Washington, 34 Texas, 267; Dwight v. Overton, 35 Texas, 390; Mosely v. Lee, 37 Texas, 479; Bentinck v. Franklin, 38 Texas, 458; Wood v. Wilder, 42 Texas, 396; and Lewis v. Davidson, 52 Texas, 257.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Texas is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Mr. Justice Bradley dissenting:

I feel obliged to dissent from the opinion of the court in this case. I think that when the Statute of Limitations gives a man a defense to an action, and that defense has absolutely accrued, he has a right which is protected by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution from legislative aggression. That clause of the amendment which declares that "no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law," was intended to protect every valuable right which a man has. The words life, liberty and property are constitutional terms, and are to be taken in their broadest sense. They indicate the three great subdivisions of all civil right. The term "property," in this clause, embraces all valuable interests which a man may possess outside of himself, that is to say, outside of his life and liberty. It is not confined to mere tangible property, but extends to every species of vested right. In my judgment, it would be a very narrow and technical construction to hold otherwise. In an advanced civilization like ours, a very large proportion of the property of individuals is not visible and tangible, but consists in rights and claims against others, or against the government itself.

Now, an exemption from a demand, or an immunity from prosecution in a suit, is as valuable to the one party as the right to the demand or to prosecute the suit is to the other. The two things are correlative, and to say that the one is protected by constitutional guaranties and that the other is not, seems to me almost an absurdity. One right is as valuable as the other. My property is as much imperiled by an action against me for money as it is by an action against me for my land or my goods. It may involve and sweep away all that I have in the world. Is not a right of defense to such an action of the greatest value to me? If it is not property in the sense of the Constitution, then we need another amendment to that instrument. But it seems to me that there can hardly be a doubt that it is property. [631]

The immunity from suit which arises by operation of the Statute of Limitations is as valuable a right as the right to bring the suit itself. It is a right founded upon a wise and just policy. Statutes of limitation are not only calculated for the repose and peace of society, but to provide against the evils that arise from loss of evidence and the failing memory of witnesses. It is true that a man may plead the statute when he justly owes the debt for which he is sued; and this has led the courts to adopt strict rules of pleading and proof to be observed when the defense of the statutes is interposed. But it is, nevertheless, a right given by a just and politic law, and, when vested, is as much to be protected as any other right that a man has.

The fact that this defense pertains to the remedy does not alter the case. Remedies are the life of rights, and are equally protected by the Constitution. Deprivation of a remedy is equivalent to a deprivation of the right which it is intended to vindicate, unless another remedy exists or is substituted for that which is taken away. This court has frequently held that to deprive a man of a remedy for enforcing a contract is itself a mode of impairing the validity of the contract. And, as before said, the right of defense is just as valuable as the right of action. It is the defendant's remedy. There is really no difference between the one right and the other in this respect.

It is said that the statutory defense acquired and perfected in one State or country is not, or [632] may not be, a good defense in another. This, if it were true, proves nothing to the purpose. It is a vested right in the place where it has accrued, and is an absolute bar to the action there. This is a valuable right, although it may be ineffective elsewhere.

Again, it is said that a debt barred by the statute is a good consideration for a promise to pay it; which shows that the statute does not extinguish the debt. This is no answer to the position that the statutory defense is a valuable and an absolute right. A new promise is an implied admission that the debt has not been paid, and amounts to a voluntary waiver of the statute.

I am unable to yield assent to any of the specious arguments advanced to show that the defense of the statute, when it has once vested, is an imperfect right which the Legislature may, at its mere will, abrogate and take away. I think it is then a vested right, and that vested rights are a species of property which the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution was intended to protect from adverse state legislation. The suggestion that the words "vested rights" are not to be found in the Constitution does not prove that there are no such rights. The name of the Supreme Being does not occur in the Constitution; yet our national being is founded on a tacit recognition of His justice and goodness, and the eternal obligation of His laws.

A few of the authorities sustaining the views which I entertain on this subject will be referred to.

On the purpose and object of statutes of limitation, Chief Justice Marshall, in Clementson v. Williams, 8 Cranch, 74 [12 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 492], says: "The Statute of Limitations was not enacted to protect persons from claims fictitious in their origin, but from ancient claims, whether well or ill founded, which may have been discharged, but the evidence of which has been lost."

In the following cases the general principle is laid down, that, if the time limited by statute for commencing a suit expires whilst the statute is in force, and before the suit is brought, the right to bring the suit is barred, and no subsequent statute can renew the right: McKinney v. Springer, 8 Blackf. 506; Pratt v. Vattier, 1 McLean, 146; Stipp v. Brown, 2 Ind. 647; Davis v. Minor, 2 Miss (1 How.) 183; Bradford v. Brooks, 2 Aik. [illegible] Talmie, 1 Oreg. 176; Girdne[illegible] Heisk. 280; Bigelow v. Bem[illegible] Ryder v. Wilson, 41 N. J. L[illegible] P[illegible]utice v. Dehon, 10 Allen, [illegible] Wyeth, 99 Mass. 339.

In Bigelow v. Bemis, 2 Alle[illegible] an action on contract, the S[illegible] Court of Massachusetts, spe[illegible] Bigelow, says: "It is well [illegible] competent for the Legislatur[illegible] utes prescribing a limitation [illegible] that the one in force at the tim[illegible] is applicable to the cause of a[illegible] restriction on the exercise o[illegible] that the Legislature cannot [illegible] limitation which has alread[illegible] plete, and that no new limitati[illegible] to affect existing claims wit[illegible] reasonable time for parties to [illegible] fore their claims are absolutel[illegible] enactment." In Ryder v. Wil[illegible] J. L. 11), which was a suit on [illegible] the Supreme Court of New Jer[illegible] Chief Justice Beasley, says: "[illegible] the courts, so far as my resear[illegible] are wholly in accord on th[illegible] with one voice, they declare t[illegible] of action has become barre[illegible] laws, the right to rely upon t[illegible] fense is a vested right that can[illegible] or disturbed by subsequent [illegible] Davis v. Minor, 2 Miss. (1 How[illegible] an action on contract, Chief [illegible] says: "A bar created by the [illegible] itations is as effectual as pay[illegible] fendant cannot be deprived [illegible] such payment, nor of the evid[illegible] it; and, having provided hims[illegible] sufficient and legal at the time [illegible] law can change the nature, or [illegible] ciency, of the evidence." J[illegible] cussing this subject, says: "[illegible] circumstances under which a [illegible] to have a vested right to a d[illegible] demand made by another, it is [illegible] cult to lay down a comprehe[illegible] the authorities will justify. [illegible] he who has satisfied a demand [illegible] revived against him, and he [illegible] released from a demand by the [illegible] Statute of Limitations is eq[illegible] In both cases the demand is [illegible] store it would be to create a [illegible] the parties—a thing quite beyo[illegible] the Legislature." Cooley's Co[illegible] 429 (460).

In my opinion the judgment [illegible] Court of Texas should be reverse[illegible]

I am authorized to say that [illegible] lan concurs in this opinion.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk

CO., Plff. in Err.,
v.
STON, JR., Collector of
ISTRICT OF DETROIT.

STON, JR., Collector of DISTRICT OF DETROIT,
v.
RRY & CO.

rter's ed., 542-550.)

n seeds are subject to 20
alorem, or free.

ots by the court below, cer-
eds are held to be "garden
duty of 20 per cent ad val-
gel-wurzel and turnip seeds
duty.
875, 876.]
Decided Dec. 7, 1885.

rcuit Court of the United
ern District of Michigan.
ts of the case sufficiently
of the court.
r, for D. M. Ferry & Co.,

, Solicitor-Gen., for de-

ford delivered the opin-

ved in this suit is as to esent tariff of duties on
, certain mangel-wurzel,
ge seeds are subject to a
valorem, or are free.
tutes, as enacted in 1874
, Schedule M, p. 480, 2d
ollowing provision as to
, shade, lawn and orna-
plants, and flower seeds,
d for; garden seeds, and cultural and horticultural se provided for, twenty
s." In "The Free List,"
d ed.), exempt from duty,
'Seeds: cardamom, cara-reek, fennel, cummin and wise provided for. Seeds:
ry, chia, sesamum, sugar-
est trees."
Act of March 3d, 1883,
t L. 489), new sections,
to 2513, both inclusive,
nd after July 1st, 1883,
evised Statutes, thus re-
to 2516, both inclusive, of
In section 2502, Sched-
883, is the following pro-
): "Garden seeds, except
t, twenty per centum ad
Free List," section 2503,
e the following: "Plants,
s of all kinds, not other-
d seeds of all kinds, ex-
ot specially enumerated Act." (p. 520). "Seed
. 521). In section 2502,

Schedule A, (p. 495), a duty of 10 per centum ad valorem is imposed on "seeds (aromatic, not garden seeds), and seeds of morbid growth * * * which are not edible, but which have been advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, and not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act." In "The Free List," section 2503, exempt from duty, are the following (p. 517): "Seeds aromatic, and seeds of morbid growth * * * which are not edible and are in a crude state, and not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by any other process of manufacture, and not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act." [544]

The question involved depends upon the meaning of the words "garden seeds;" and, with a view to determine whether that designation in the statute includes the seeds covered by this suit, it will be useful to see what was the course of decisions by the Treasury Department, under the Act of 1883, prior to the importation in this case, which was in December, 1884.

On November 2, 1883 (29 Int. Rev. Rec. 410), the Department decided that flower seeds were not to be regarded as "garden seeds," but were free, on the view that the term "garden seeds" was to be "generally confined to those seeds which are produced from edible plants, and does not extend to flower seeds."

Subsequently, a collector exacted a duty of 20 per cent on pease imported as seeds, and not for consumption as vegetables, and, the question being presented whether they were "garden seeds," the Department, on November 27, 1883 (29 Int. Rev. Rec. 419), made this ruling: "The general and not the exceptional use must determine the classification of the article. As a rule, pease, beans and many other vegetable products are more largely sown in the field or farm than in the garden, although some varieties may be specially adapted for garden planting. It is held by the Department that all pease and beans imported for seeds are entitled to free admission under the provision in the free list * * * for seeds of all kinds not specially enumerated or provided for in that Act. * * * I may add, for your further information, that the Department regards seeds such as barley, beans, beets, carrots, cabbage, clover, corn, cane, grass, mangel-wurzel, oats, onions, potatoes, pumpkins, rye, tobacco, turnip, wheat and other like products, as belonging to the category of agricultural seeds which are not garden seeds; and that seeds of the artichoke, asparagus, borecole, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, celery, cucumber, egg-plant, lettuce, leek, okra, parsley, pepper, rhubarb, radish, salsify, and tomato belong to the category of garden seeds. It is impossible to enumerate all the seeds which belong to either of these divisions in detail, and the above is given for information as to the principle upon which collectors of customs must act." [545]

It is thus seen that these instructions classified beet, cabbage, mangel-wurzel, and turnip seeds, as free, because not garden seeds; and as not garden seeds, because they were agricultural seeds, and were more largely sown in the field or farm than in the garden, and because the general use and not the exceptional use must determine the classification.

On December 28, 1883, a collector having exacted a duty on cabbage seeds and beet seeds as garden seeds, the Department (30 Int. Rev. Rec. 24), referring to its decision of November 27, 1883, held that the seeds were free, and directed the duty to be refunded.

On March 8, 1884, the Department (30 Int. Rev. Rec. 77), held that lettuce seeds and spinach seeds were dutiable as "garden seeds;" and, on March 18, 1884 (Id. 95), it held that nasturtium seeds, being generally planted in gardens, and producing not only flowers, but seeds or berries which, when green, are largely used for cooking purposes, and in the manufacture of sauces were dutiable as "garden seeds."

Afterwards, a collector exacted a duty of 2 per cent on certain beans, as "garden seeds." On the view that they were the seeds of the bean plant, and were intended for food or for planting or sowing, the Department, on March 28, 1884 (30 Int. Rev. Rec. 109), reconsidered to some extent its rulings of November 27, 1883. It held that the beans, being edible, were not within the specific provisions as to beans, which made beans not edible free of duty; and that they were not vegetables, but were the seeds of a vegetable. On the question of whether they were "garden seeds," it said: "In common speech, 'garden seeds' are seeds used either for planting or sowing in the gardens adjacent to dwelling-houses, small spaces of land, and in the large spaces of land called market gardens, lying about cities or other large places of numerous and condensed population. The common notion of garden seeds is this, that they are those from which are raised, in the growing season of the year, the vegetable products which, before complete maturity, are used upon the table as part of the customary food of mankind, and in distinction from those seeds which, sowed or planted on a broader scale in the fields, produce the vegetables which are stored for winter use as food. Yet it is to be taken note of, that, by extended field culture, there is produced much of the seed which finds its way to market and to sale as 'garden seeds,' in the common notion thereof above stated. It is not easy, therefore, to say of any importation, on general principles, that it is of garden seeds or of field seeds, nor to frame a rule, on general principles and general knowledge, which will always exactly apply. We are constrained, therefore, to see if we can, by interpretation, get at the purpose of Congress, and if it did not intend to charge the phrase 'garden seeds,' in paragraph 465, with an arbitrary meaning. It has made an exception of the seed of one vegetable from the general expression 'garden seeds.' It must have been thought by Congress that there was need of that exception, or that else the seed excepted would properly and necessarily be treated by the administrative officers of the Government as 'garden seeds.' It follows, then, that Congress thought that seeds like the seed of the sugar beet were 'garden seeds.' We have, then, an idea of what kind of seeds Congress meant when it spoke the phrase 'garden seeds.' Now, the sugar beet is not a plant or a vegetable exclusively, nor mostly, of the growth of gardens. It is, on the contrary, mostly the growth of the field or of the market garden. If the sugar beet is, in the view of Congress, a garden plant or vegetable, as well as, or in contrast with, a
and its seed garden seed as well a trast with, field seed, surely the legislative contemplation, a gard
vegetable, and the bean of the ma
is the seed of the bean plant, is a
as well as, or rather than, a fiel know that, in fact, the bean, as bean plant or vegetable, is planted i
and is largely planted in the field
former case, generally, to be eaten
pod, as a green esculent, though s
with lima beans, in the form of the plant; in the latter case, for th
of seed for subsequent planting,
in the form of the matured seed.
noticed, too, that elsewhere in the 'garden seeds' are mentioned, the contrast or opposition to seeds whi
the character of beans or other se sowing or planting both in field
As, in paragraph 94, where the ph (aromatic, not garden seeds),' a morbid growth;' and so, in paragr seeds put in the free list are 'see
and seeds of morbid growth.'
are garden seeds in some of the u
and as it is to be got, by interpr Congress meant to include such
of the bean in the phrase 'garde paragraph 465, the conclusion mu
article under consideration is prope
under paragraph 465. This ru equally to pease, and the duty o
ad valorem will, therefore, be exac
on entries of such merchandise."

[546] On November 8, 1884, the De Int. Rev. Rec. 357), ruled that beet bage, onion and turnip seeds were 20 per cent ad valorem, as "garden

This reversed the prior rulings o
27, 1883, and, under the new rulin
20 per cent was imposed by Willi
ton, Jr., Collector of Customs at De gan, on importations, by D. M. I a Corporation, of mangel-wurzel,
and cabbage seeds, entered at the c at Detroit, in December, 1884. T claiming that all the seeds were e
duty, brought a suit, in the Circu
the United States for the East of Michigan, against Livingston $560.40, which had been paid as th
case was tried before the court wit
and on special findings of fact, th
that the mangel-wurzel and turni
duty exacted on which amounted were exempt from duty; and that and beet seeds, the duty exacte
amounted to 227.80, were subject t
A judgment having been entered ingston for $332, he and Ferry & C
brought a writ of error.

The facts found by the court, s
need be recited, were these: "That sugar beets, are almost altogether
seeds of the kind in the declaratio
in gardens, for the table, although raised in fields, for cattle, to a lim
That mangel-wurzels are cultivate fields, from seeds of the kind in the
mentioned, and not in gardens;
not used as food for man, but for c

raised from seed of the kind nentioned, in fields, for cat- vely small quantities are also for the table, the proportion nty to one. Most of those table are raised in fields. cultivated from seeds of the ration mentioned, in fields dens. They are used to a od for cattle, but to a much ood for man. That turnip and cabbage seeds generally n catalogued, by prominent rica, England and Germany, nd agricultural seeds." Un rcuit court found, as conclu- that the turnip and mangel- not garden seeds, and were y duty; (2) that the cabbage re garden seeds, and subject d.

, on the part of Ferry & Co. ds which are cultivated in the ltivated in the field, they are s," within the statute, but, be- e free, as being seeds not oth- or, that is, not provided for as and that, otherwise, seeds ated in both garden and field e time be subject to duty and view, it is claimed by Ferry & circuit court has found that seeds are cultivated in fields s, they are exempt from duty. le to concur in this view. In itle 33 of the Revised Statutes, cent was imposed on flower seeds, and all other seeds for l horticultural purposes, not led for," while the free list in- eds "not otherwise provided ct of 1883, the duty of 20 per n seeds, except seed of the s left, while the exemption from ed to cover "seeds of all kinds, l seeds not specially enumerated in this Act." From this change cannot be inferred that seeds for agricultural purposes are om duty because of such use, used for garden purposes. The l rather be that, if they are used purposes, they are subject to y, although they are also used purposes.

of opinion that the conclusion he circuit court, based on the was correct. Beets, other than ing almost altogether raised in gh raised to a limited extent in ds are "garden seeds." Mangel- cultivated wholly in fields, and , their seeds are not "garden ps being largely raised in fields, ely small quantities being also ms, their seeds are not "garden the cabbage seeds, it is found from the seeds in question are oth gardens and fields; and, while which is the larger in proportion, t cabbages are used to a small for cattle, but to a much larger for man; and, in the absence of any finding that the seed in question belongs to a variety which is not intended to raise cabbages to be consumed by man, it must be regarded as a "garden seed."

We are unable to concur in the view that the free list in the Act of 1883 is to be read as including seeds of all kinds, with the exception of medicinal seeds which are not specially enumerated or provided for in the Act. The proper reading is that it includes seeds of all kinds (other than medicinal seeds) which are not specially enumerated or provided for in the Act. Garden seeds are specially provided for. [550]

As this case rests for decision on the facts found, it is not possible for this court to lay down any general rule which will apply to cases differing in their facts from this case.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed, the plaintiff in error in each case to pay the clerk's costs taxed therein, and the plaintiff in error in No. 875 to recover one half of the expense of printing the record, paid by it.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

BERNHARD ARNSON ET AL., Plffs. in Err., [579]

v.

THOMAS MURPHY, Late Collector of the PORT of NEW YORK.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 579–586.)

Duties—illegal exaction of—remedy of importer—sections 2931 and 3011 R. S.—limitation of actions—evidence.

1. Under sections 2931 and 3011, R. S., the importer must show, in order to recover duties alleged to have been illegally exacted, that he has fully complied with the statutory conditions which attach to the statutory action provided for.

2. The conditions imposed by statute cannot, any of them, be regarded as matters a failure to comply with which must be pleaded by the defendant as a statute of limitations.

3. The plaintiffs having failed to show not only due protests and appeals, but that the action was brought within the time required by the statute, it was proper for the court below to direct a verdict for the defendant.

4. It seems that the statute does not require any communication of the decisions on the appeals to the claimant; and that they may be introduced in evidence by the defendant although not thus communicated.

[No. 887.]

Argued Nov. 19, 1885. Decided Dec. 7, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. See also the report of the opinion of this court on a former writ of error, Bk. 27, 920.

Messrs. Lewis Sanders and George N. Sanders, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. John Goode, Solicitor-Gen. for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court: [580]

This suit was commenced in May, 1879, in a State Court of New York, by Bernhard Arn-

son and Ellis Wilzinski, against Thomas Murphy, and removed into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, to recover moneys paid to the defendant, as Collector of the Port of New York, between April 25, 1871, and November 30, 1871, as duties on several importations of nitro-benzole. The defendant set up, in his answer, that the moneys received were for lawful duties, and also pleaded the six years' limitation of the New York Statute. The suit was tried, resulting in a verdict for the defendant, by direction of the court, followed by a judgment, to review which the plaintiff sued out a writ of error. which came before this court at October Term, 1883, and the decision on which is reported in 109 U. S. 238 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 920]. It is there stated that there had been due protests and appeals to the Secretary of the Treasury, but that no decision had been rendered by him thereon prior to the commencement of this action, and that it was not brought until after ninety days had elapsed from the date of the latest appeal, and not until after the lapse of more than six years from the expiration of that period. The circuit court having sustained the bar by the New York Statute, this court reversed that ruling.

The cause of action arose while section 14 of the Act of June 30, 1864, chap. 171 (13 Stat. at L. 214), now embodied in section 2931 of the Revised Statutes, was in force, providing as follows: "On the entry of any vessel, or of any goods, wares, or merchandise, the decision of the collector of customs at the port of importation and entry, as to the rate and amount of duties to be paid on the tonnage of such vessel, or on such goods, wares, or merchandise, and the dutiable cost and charges thereon, shall be final and conclusive against all persons interested therein, unless the owner, master, commander, or consignee of such vessel, in the case of duties levied on tonnage, or the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of the merchandise, in the case of duties levied on goods, wares, or merchandise, or the costs and charges thereon, shall, within ten days after the ascertainment and liquidation of the duties by the proper officers of the customs, as well in cases of merchandise entered in bond, as for consumption, give notice in writing to the collector on each entry, if dissatisfied with his decision, setting forth therein, distinctly and specifically, the grounds of his objection thereto, and shall, within thirty days after the date of such ascertainment and liquidation, appeal therefrom to the Secretary of the Treasury, whose decision on such appeal shall be final and conclusive; and such vessel, goods, wares, or merchandise, or costs and charges, shall be liable to duty accordingly, any Act of Congress to the contrary notwithstanding, unless suit shall be brought within ninety days after the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury on such appeal for any duties which shall have been paid before the date of such decision on such vessel, or on such goods, wares, or merchandise, or costs or charges, or within ninety days after the payment of duties paid after the decision of the Secretary. And no suit shall be maintained in any court for the recovery of any duties alleged to have been erroneously or illegally exacted, until the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury shall have been first had unless the decision of the Secre

[581]

layed more than ninety days f
such appeal in case of an entry
of the Rocky Mountains, or months in case of an entry wes tains." Section 2931 was in suit was brought.

Section 3011 of the Revis
amended by section 1 of the A 27, 1877, chap. 69 (19 Stat. at
in force when this suit was bro
follows: "Any person who s payment under protest, and in possession of merchandise imp
any collector, or person acting
any money as duties, when s duties was not, or was not wh
by law, may maintain an actio
of an action at law, which sha
jury, to ascertain the validity o
and payment of duties, and t
any excess so paid. But no re allowed in such action unless a peal shall have been taken as p
tion 2931."

In view of these provisions,
this court, in this case, that a collector was barred unless ninety days after an adverse Secretary of the Treasury on that, while a suit might be br expiration of ninety days from case there had not been a dec
peal, the claimant was not ob
suit until after such decision
It was further held, that the effe
tion cited had been to convert th
law action into one based wh
tory liability, and regulated, a dents, by express statutory p
among them, "the conditi
the time when the suit m prescribe the period at the
the right to sue shall cease;"
legislation of Congress on th exclusive of state laws. As, peared that this suit had been under the Act of Congress, bec
that no decision had been mad
before this suit was brought,
than seven years had elapsed,
court had applied the New Y
bar, this court reversed the awarded a new trial. That tri resulting in a verdict for th
direction of the court, and cordingly, to review which the
brought this writ of error.

The plaintiffs proved necess
matters and due protests and Secretary of the Treasury. T appeals was taken November
plaintiffs rested their case
given any evidence as to wheth
had not been any decision on peals. The defendant then off decisions made by the Secretary
one on July 12, 1871, and the 1872, affirming the decisions o
The evidence consisted of certi
the Treasury Department, of let dates from that department

'ork, which letters were ment. It was conceded nose letters were the de- on the appeals in ques- was objected to by them that the defense was not arising under a statute object being to show that t within ninety days after als; (2) that it did not ons had been commu- s. The court, without dmissibility of the evi- plaintiffs, in addition to and appeal, must, as a recovery, show either brought within ninety decision on the appeal, or such decision, and the after the expiration of appeal. The plaintiffs g, and then called as a ntiffs, and asked him if otice, before the suit was ons of the Secretary on jection by the defendant immaterial, it was ex- iffs excepted. The de- ered the decisions in evi- ntiffs objected on the d. The objection was iffs excepted, and the idence. The court then the defendant, on the n being a statutory one, complied with the stat- the plaintiffs excepted. the decision of the col- sive as to the rate and ss there is a specific pro- tor within ten days after appeal taken to the Sec- within thirty days after cision of the Secretary on l and conclusive unless n ninety days after such duties paid before the nety days after the pay- ter the decision; and no fore a decision on the ap- n is delayed for the time

nat it is incumbent upon in order to recover, that with the statutory condi- he statutory action pro- how not only due protest ecision on the appeal, and within the time limited by cision, or else that there nd the prescribed time af- sed. The decision on the a matter of record in the , and, as is shown in the municated to the collec- the letter itself being the s a matter of record in Inquiry there or at the would always elicit in- ject; and the importer, ppeal was taken, can al- y bringing his suit after ime named after the appeal, although he has not heard of a decision, being thus certain that he will have brought it within the time prescribed after a possible decision.

The conditions imposed by the statute cannot, any of them, be regarded as matters a failure to comply with which must be pleaded by the defendant as a statute of limitation. The right of action does not exist independently of the statute, but is conferred by it. There is no right of action on showing merely the payment of the money as duties, and that the payment was more than the law allowed, leaving any statute of limitation to be set up in defense, as in an ordinary suit. But the statute sets out with declaring that the decision of the collector shall be final and conclusive against all persons interested unless certain things are done. The mere exaction of the duties is, necessarily, the decision of the collector; and, on this being shown in any suit, it stands as conclusive till the plaintiff shows the proper steps to avoid it. These steps include not only protest and appeal, but the bringing of a suit within the time prescribed. They are all successively grouped together in one section, not only in section 14 of the Act of 1864, but in section 2931 of the Revised Statutes; and the "suit" spoken of in those sections is the "action" given in section 3011 of the Revised Statutes. [585]

The question involved is analogous to the one presented in Cheatham v. United States, 92 U. S. 85 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 561], which arose under section 19 of the Act of July 13, 1866, chap. 184 (14 Stat. at L. 152), in regard to internal revenue taxes. That section provided that no suit should be maintained in any court for the recovery of any tax, until after an appeal to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and his decision thereon, unless the suit should be brought within six months from the decision, provided that, if the decision should be delayed more than six months from the date of the appeal, the suit might be brought within twelve months from the date of the appeal. In that case there was an assessment of a tax, a proper appeal, a setting aside of the assessment on appeal, a second assessment, less in amount, a payment of the second assessment, and a suit to recover back the money paid. But the suit was not brought within six months from the appeal taken, and there was no appeal from the second assessment. The court below having instructed the jury that the statute imposed a condition without which the plaintiffs could not recover, and was not merely a statute of limitation, and that the plaintiffs had no right of action, this court affirmed that ruling. It was urged that the requirement of bringing a suit within six months from the decision was a statute of limitation, and that the time under it could not begin to run till the cause of action accrued, which was not till the money was paid, and that time was, as to a larger part of the money, within six months before the suit was brought; and that the first appeal was the only one necessary to a right of action because the modified assessment was paid under protest. But this court, while holding that an appeal from the second assessment was necessary to warrant a suit, also held, the opinion of the court being delivered by Mr. Justice Miller, that, if the appeal taken could be regarded as sufficient, the suit could not be maintained, because it was not brought within six months after the decision on that appeal. The view taken was, that the government had, by statute, as to both the customs and the internal revenue departments, prescribed the conditions [586] on which it would subject itself to the judgments of the courts in the collection of its revenues; and that the prescription of a time within which a suit must be brought for the purpose, is a condition on which alone the government consents to litigate the lawfulness of the original tax.

We are, therefore, of opinion that the circuit court properly held that it was incumbent on the plaintiffs, as a condition precedent to their recovery, to show not only due protests and appeals, but that the action was brought within the time required by the statute. This they failed to show, and it was proper to direct a verdict for the defendant.

In regard to the point taken, that, when the defendant introduced in evidence the decisions on the appeals, he did not show that they had been communicated to the plaintiffs, although this case is disposed of on the failure of the plaintiffs to make the proof necessary to recover, it is proper to say, as the question has been argued, that we see nothing in the statute which requires that the decision on the appeal shall be communicated to the claimant by any action of the officers of the government. All that the statute requires is that the Secretary shall make the decision. It is to be made in the usual way in which decisions of the department are made. If, in any case, it should appear that, on due inquiry of the proper officers, a party had been misled to his prejudice, in regard to a decision on an appeal, a different question would be presented from any now before us.

We find no error in the record and the judgment is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited: 116 U. S. 547.

---

[577] CHARLES C. HARRISON ET AL., Plfs. in Err.,

v.

EDWIN A. MERRITT, Collector of the PORT OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 577-579.)

Duties—"Bone-Black"—evidence.

1. A certain article of merchandise, used to decolorize sugar, and manufactured from bones, is held to be "bone-black," subject to a duty of 25 per centum ad valorem under section 2504 R. S. and not within the free list under section 2505 R. S.

2. Evidence to show differences in value between an imported article and similar articles, is admissible to show the character of the article in question.

[No. 913.]

Submitted Nov. 18, 1885. Decided Dec. 7, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New York.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Henry E. Davies and Charles C. Suydam, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. A. H. Garland, Atty-
fendant in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford deliv
ion of the court:

This is an action brought in No
by the members of the firm of H
meyer & Co., against Edwin A. M tor of the Port of New York, in State of New York, and removed cuit Court of the United States fo
District of New York, to recove
exacted, in May and June, 1881, 25 per cent. ad valorem, on impo
dise, some of which was invoic
charcoal," some as "calcined bon as "burnt bones." The duty was e view that the article fell under the
of bone, or ivory drop black: 2
ad valorem," in Schedule M of se
the Revised Statutes (p. 473, 2d e fendants contended that it fell Free List" in section 2505, and from duty (p. 483, 2d ed.), as "bo
not manufactured; burned; calc
or steamed." Schedule M of se 474, 2d ed.) imposed a duty of 3
ad valorem on "manufactures o
ivory, or vegetable ivory;" and List," section 2505 (p. 482, 2d e
from duty "bone dust and bone
facture of phosphates and fertili
trial, before a jury, the evidence
the article in question, which w
to be used to decolorize sugar, in manufacturing it; that it was jecting bones, after they were cleaned, to destructive distillati
close vessels, until everything bu
matter was expelled, and then residuum, and assorting the piec
sizes; and that calcined or burn
prepared by subjecting them, in to the direct action of fire, and t
them friable, so that they beca
which was not black. On these held that the article was not burn
bones and free, but had been into bone-black. A refusal by t
rect a verdict for the plaintiffs w
and it directed a verdict for t
which was also excepted to. A dict and a judgment for the d plaintiffs have brought a writ of

We are of opinion that the a free, nor liable to a duty of 35
manufacture of bones, but that black, it was liable, as "black of duty imposed on it; and that it
direct a verdict for the defendar

Objection was made to the ad
dence to show the difference in bone-black and crude bone; and bone-black and white calcined
that between bone-black before i refiners and after it was spent.
objection to the evidence. It we character of the article in questi

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, S

GER, Plf. in Err.,

Trustee of ALLAN C.
AN.

ter's ed. 566-576.)

standard of value—en-
made with reference to—
of contracts—Statute of 28, 1867.

e insurgent States, during residents of those States,
rate notes as a standard
d to aid the insurrection-
enforced in the national
the contracts is to be de-
the confederate notes in ed States at the time when tracts were made.
, of February, 1867, after ion or suit or other pro-
ent of any contract, ex-etween the first day of
of April, 1865, it shall be show, by parol or other
t was the understanding arties, either express or kind of currency in which med, or with reference to lue, it was made, provides ction grows out of a sale
property, whether real or when it is a jury case, the ll the circumstances, the sold, or the fair rent or ost just measure of recov-
f these principles may be the recovery instead of ontract." Held, that the anctions the impairment
, under the Federal Con-
etency of the Legislature
y, in a suit to enforce a money of real estate sold
a note was given payable ave been made with refer-
a decision that the plain-
r the value of the land at d of the value of confed-
as erroneous.
47.]
5. Decided Dec. 7, 188

preme Court of Appeals
nia.

by Mr. Justice Field:
the Supreme Court of
t was brought in one of hat State to enforce a by James Kenney, the
lant in error here, as Bryan, for the unpaid
e money of certain real Effinger, the defendant
rror here. The mate-re these: on the 7th of
, Bryan and wife con-
real and personal, to
t for the benefit of the ryan. The real estate
ham County, Virginia,
isting of about one hun-
as the "Home Farm"
of March, 1863, Ken-

ice FIELD.

le in confederate notes;
on v. Smith, 75 U. S., bk.

ney, the trustee, sold this farm at public auction to the highest bidder, pursuant to the deed of trust; and at that sale Effinger became the purchaser, at $210 per acre, one third to be paid in cash and the balance in one and two years from the date of sale, with the privilege of paying in cash the first of these deferred payments. Effinger made the cash payment and the first of the deferred payments, and executed to the trustee his promissory note, or bond, as it is termed in the record, for the second deferred payment, amounting to $7,067.72, payable on the 30th of March, 1865, with interest from date, stating in the instrument that the amount was the deferred payment on the "Home Farm" of Bryan. The trustee and the purchaser were at the time residents and citizens of Virginia. The first and second payments were made in treasury notes of the Confederate States, but after the maturity of the bond the third payment in such notes was refused by the trustee, and no payment in any other currency being made the present suit was brought. The circuit court was of opinion that the sale was made with reference to notes of the Confederate States as a standard of value; that the fair value of the property on the day of sale "was the most just measure of recovery;" and that such value was $80 an acre in lawful currency of the United States. This conclusion as to value was drawn from the fact that the land was assessed for taxation at that sum before the civil war, and that during the continuance of the war its value had not materially depreciated, the court observing that "whilst the war had a tendency to impair the value of all kinds of property, yet, as to lands, that tendency was counteracted by the fact that they were not liable to be destroyed, and therefore afforded a safer means of investment than any other kind of property." It accordingly awarded judgment for one third the value of the land at the time of sale, estimating it to have been then worth $80 an acre in lawful currency, with interest on the sum thus adjudged to be due, and decreed a sale of the property to pay the amount unless the same was paid within a time designated. [568]

In adopting the rule stated to arrive at what it deemed the "most just measure of recovery," the court acted in conformity with a Statute of Virginia, passed on the 28th of February, 1867, amending and re-enacting sections of an Act of the previous year "providing for the adjustment of liabilities arising under contracts or wills made between the first day of January, 1862, and the tenth day of April, 1865. This Act of 1867 provides:

Sec. 1. That in any action or suit, or other proceedings for the enforcement of any contract, express or implied, made or entered into between the first day of January, 1862, and the tenth day of April, 1865, it shall be lawful for either party to show, by parol or other relevant testimony, what was the true understanding and agreement of the parties thereto, either express or to be implied, in respect to the kind of currency in which the same was to be fulfilled or performed, or with reference to which as a standard of value it was made or entered into; and in any action at law or suit in equity it shall not be necessary to plead the agreement specially in order to admit such evidence; Provided,

That when the cause of action grows out of a sale or renting or hiring of property, whether real or personal, if the court (or when it is a jury case, the jury) think that, under all the circumstances, the fair value of the property sold, or the fair rent or hire of it, would be the most just measure of recovery in the action, either of these principles may be adopted as the measure of the recovery instead of the express terms of the contract.

Sec. 2. Whenever it shall appear that any such contract was, according to the true understanding and agreement of the parties, to be fulfilled or performed in Confederate States treasury notes, or was entered into with reference to such notes as a standard of value, the same shall be liquidated and settled by reducing the nominal amount due or payable under such [569] contract in Confederate States treasury notes to its true value at the time they were respectively made or entered into, or at such other time as may to the court, or if it be a jury case, to the jury, seem right in the particular case.

The judgment of the circuit court was affirmed by the supreme court of appeals of the State, and to review the judgment of the latter court this writ of error was brought.

Mr. Jacob P. Effinger, in person, and W. A. Maury, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. W. B. Compton, for defendant in error.

[569] Mr. Justice Field, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court, as follows:

The contract of sale, which is the subject of consideration in this case, was made in Virginia, between citizens of that State, pending the late civil war, and with reference to notes of the Confederate States as the standard of value. These notes had, at that time, almost entirely superseded the use of coin, and they constituted the principal currency within those States. Not only the ordinary purchases of the necessaries of life, but contracts of every description, which were to be performed there, were made with reference to them. Such contracts were not invalid between the parties because payable in those notes, when not made in aid of the insurrectionary government. It was so held by this court in Thorington v. Smith, where it was declared that they must be regarded as a currency imposed on the community by irresistible force; and that this currency must therefore be considered, in the courts of law, in the same light as if it had been issued by a foreign government temporarily occupying a part of the territory of the United States. "Contracts stipulating for payments in this currency," said Mr. Chief Justice Chase, speaking for the entire court, "cannot be regarded, for that reason only, as made in aid of the foreign invasion in the one case, or of the domestic insurrection in the other. [570] They have no necessary relation to the hostile government, whether invading or insurgent. They are transactions in the ordinary course of civil society, and, though they may indirectly and remotely promote the ends of the unlawful government, are without blame, except when proved to have been entered into with actual intent to further invasion or insurrection We cannot doubt that such contracts should be enforced in the courts of the United States, after the restoration of peace, to the extent of their just obligation [75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 361-
like the present, was a suit t
or's lien for the unpaid pu
real estate. The property wa bama and was sold during t $45,000, of which sum all bu
the execution of the deed, pa
treasury notes. For the re
sory note of the purchaser
parties were both residents a State. The plaintiff sought t
for the full amount in lawf
United States. The defendan
the time of sale, treasury not erate States constituted the ordinary use in Alabama, an exceptions, all business trans
ducted in them; that the land
only $3,000, in lawful mon
contract price of $45,000 wa
to be paid in those notes. W to this court the question wa
the admissibility of evidence promise, for the payment o
qualifying words, was in fa
payment of other than lawf
United States. The court h dence was admissible, observ
is clear that a contract to pay tween citizens of any State o
taining its constitutional re
National Government, is a co
ful money of the United Stat be modified or explained by
"it is equally clear, if in an coins or notes denominated
authorized of different value
notes which are current here
that, in a suit upon a contra
made in that country, eviden
mitted to prove what kind of tended, and, if it should turn dollars were meant, to prove value in lawful money of the
that such evidence does not m contract, but simply explain
which, under the general r
may be removed by parol evi
court added that the people
States under the Confederate G in legal contemplation, sub
same situation as inhabitants
country occupied and control
ing belligerent; that contrac
must be interpreted and enfo
ence to the condition of thing
acts of the ruling power, a light it was hardly less than a
the dollars used in the insurg
be considered identical in kin
the dollars constituting th
United States.

It being thus held that a co
ing the war, in one of the ins
tween parties residing therein
federate notes, is not for the
and that parol evidence is ad
that by "dollars," used wi
words in a contract of tha
made, those notes were inte
important to ascertain and la nite rule, if possible, to deter

of such a contract is court, or damages are

ith the court held that d to recover the actual
e notes at the time and lawful money of the

ldon R. R. Co. v. King,
ed. 186], the contract
a during the war was rms the wood was to be e notes. In an action court below refused to e plaintiff was entitled
e of the currency stip-
d, but stated that he was value of the wood withalue of that currency.
be nothing less than in-
they could put a differ-perty from that placed ne of the purchase. In ferred to contracts made nsurgent States between
e in confederate notes,
e worthless at the close
as manifest that, if these nforced with anything
es, evidence must be ref the notes at the time
ere the contracts were
t "in no other mode ade by the parties be owed any different rule
e of the contracts and
or their breach, would plain departure from parties and to make for contracts." In referorth Carolina which ale their own judgment
ontract, and did not re-
value stipulated by the
"A provision of law
constituting the jury a indiscretions and bad
ing parties, might in them from hard bar-
made, upon an errone-
ne of the articles pur-te an insecurity in busi-
would be intolerable.
, to say that the Con-States interposes an im-
new innovation in the e, and with its conserva-
es contracts, not illegal enforced as made by any State interference
he judgment was ac-

, 94 U. S. 434 [Bk. 24,
eld that the amount in
d by a promissory note,
in the insurgent States,
treasury notes, was to
value of those notes in f the United States at place where the prom-

U. S. 793 [Bk. 26, L. ed.
ed in the decisions mentioned were referred to as settled, although Thorington v. Smith, was alone cited for them. [573] The Chief Justice, after observing that it had long been settled in this court that transactions in confederate money during the late civil war between the inhabitants of the Confederate States, within the confederate lines, not intended to promote the ends of the Confederate Government, could be enforced in the courts of the United States, after the restoration of peace, to the extent of their just obligation, said: "It is equally well settled that, if a contract entered into under such circumstances, payable in dollars, was, according to the understanding of the parties, to be paid in confederate dollars, upon proof of that fact, the party entitled to the payment can only recover the value of confederate dollars in the lawful money of the United States."

In Rives v. Duke, 105 U. S. 132 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1031], the same doctrines were stated and followed. Mr. Justice Gray, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It is settled by the decisions of this court that a contract, made within the so-called Confederate States during the war of the rebellion, to pay a certain sum in dollars, without specifying the kind of currency in which it was to be paid, may be shown, by the nature of the transaction and the attendant circumstances, as well as by the language of the contract itself, to have contemplated payment in confederate currency; and, if that fact is shown, in an action upon the contract, no more can be recovered than the value of that currency in lawful money of the United States;" citing the cases of Thorington v. Smith, supra; The Confederate Note Case, 19 Wall. 548 [86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 196], and Wilmington & Weldon R. R. Co. v. King, supra. In the Confederate Note Case, the doctrines of the previous decisions were also stated and approved, but the bonds there in suit were distinguished from obligations payable in confederate notes.

The several decisions mentioned, with one exception, were rendered by the court with the concurrence of all its members. In the excepted case only one judge dissented. It would seem, therefore, to be no longer open to question, that where contracts were made in the insurgent States during the war between residents [574] of those States, with reference to confederate notes as a standard of value, and were not designed to aid the insurrectionary government, they may be enforced in our courts; and that the value of the contracts is to be determined by the value of the confederate notes in lawful money of the United States.

The measure of valuation adopted by the court below was not in conformity with this rule. It allowed a recovery for the value of the land instead of treasury notes, which was nothing less than substituting for the contract of the parties a new and different one. The statute of the State which permitted this estimate, whenever the court might think that the fair value of the property would be "the most just measure of recovery," and pursuant to which the court acted, sanctions the impairment of contracts, which is not, under the Federal Constitution, within the competency of the State Legislature. It follows that the judgment must be reversed and the case remanded for a new trial, in which the plaintiff will be permitted to recover the value of the confederate notes in lawful money of the United States, and not the value of the land at the time of sale.

There is, however, a further question for consideration which is not free from difficulty. The bond of the defendant, dated March 30, 1863, is payable two years thereafter, that is on the 30th of March, 1865. At these respective dates the value of the confederate notes was materially different. At the date of the bond their purchasing power was in Virginia at least one third less than that of lawful money of the United States of the same nominal amount. At the maturity of the bond it was greatly less, not more than one twentieth of that of lawful money. The Confederacy was then in the throes of dissolution; a few days afterwards it ceased to be an organized power, and the notes lost all appreciable value. The condition upon which their payment was promised—"after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States of America"—had become impossible. It is evident, therefore, that if their value in lawful money is to be estimated at the maturity of the bond, a nominal sum, not more than one twentieth of its amount [575] in confederate currency, can be recovered. In the case of contracts maturing after the overthrow of the Confederacy, no value whatever can be given to that currency.

In some of the cases decided by this court, to which we have referred, it is said that the value of the confederate notes was to be estimated at the date and in the locality of the contract. Such is the language used in Thorington v. Smith, Wilmington & Weldon R. R. Co. v. King, and Stewart v. Salamon. In the first case, the note was payable one day after date. In the second case, it does not appear that the time of payment was fixed. But in the third case, the note was payable one year after date, and the court is careful to state that the value of the confederate currency was to be estimated in lawful money of the United States at the time when and the place where the note was made. And this rule was prescribed in estimating the value of the confederate currency for the balance due on the note after its maturity.

Where a contract is for the delivery of specific articles, the rule undoubtedly is that the damages recoverable for its breach are to be determined by the value of the articles at the time and place of their delivery. Where a contract is payable in a specified currency, the rule is also clear that such currency is demandable and receivable at the maturity of the contract, whatever change in its value by increase or depreciation may have taken place in the meantime. The damages recoverable for a breach of the contract are to be measured by the value of the currency at its maturity. But in these rules it is assumed that the articles to be delivered are lawful property, and that the currency to be paid is a lawful currency, and that, therefore, in the creation and exchange of both no public duty is violated. The treasury notes of the Confederate States constituted, under the laws of the United States, neither lawful property nor lawful currency. They were the promises of an insurgent and revolutionary organization, payable only when its success should be established by a treaty of peace with the United States. Of the value of such promises the national courts will make no inquiry, except as they were rece tracts not designed to further the They were receivable in such con imposed as a currency upon the irresistible force. Their intrin nothing, but their exchangeable son of their enforced circulation mate of them at the time in law the United States. The relation and coin and other lawful mo known in the community, as it coin or other lawful money as value that commerce was cond the insurgents and persons outsi federacy. Persons then parting goods for confederate notes, or f of them, attached to them this value, and expected to receive i wards. They did not intend to suppose they were surrendering, without any consideration, if th should fail, and its notes lose able value. They expected an any event. Therefore, as having given to them at the time and p ceipt, or the promise of them, the will treat them, but not as ha any other time or place. Any o involve considerations of inextri and would be inconsistent with termining the value of contracts where they matured near the c overthrow of the Confederacy.

It follows, therefore, that on the plaintiff will be allowed to exchangeable value of confed which the bond was payable, time and place of its execution i of the United States.

Decree reversed and cause rema proceedings.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk,

JAMES KENNEY, Trustee
BRYAN, Plf. in E
v.
JACOB P. EFFING

(See S. C., Reporter's ed.,

Jurisdiction—federal q

The question whether a bond w reference to confederate notes i the state court, and not a federal for this court.

[No. 216.]

Argued November 10, 11, 1885.
ber 7, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme C of the State of Virginia.

Mr. W. B. Compton, for p
Mr. Jacob P. Effinger,
Wm. A. Maury, for defendant

Mr. Justice Field delivered the court:

The writ of error brought raises no federal question whi

ond of Effinger was or reference to confederate
act for the state court,
this court.

y, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JE CAR COMPANY,
pt.,
.
C RAILWAY COM-
ET AL.

ter's ed., 587-598.)

n—obligation of new come of former companies—
one company by another
l—pleading—equity ju-

Pacific Railway Company
s of Missouri by the dissopanies, including the for-way Company, and the es-mpany to take their place
liabilities.
the former Missouri Pa-
nan's Palace Car Company
"its own line of road, and ontrols, or may hereafter ase, or otherwise," during iting on the new company
d or controlled by the old
he consolidation.
Mountain and Southern controlled by the Missouri
r within the meaning of e controlling interest in company is owned by the

can grant no relief to the
on the nature of its busi-
to the St. Louis Company.
ll facts well pleaded, but
ents of conclusions of law.
24.]
1885. Decided Decem-1885.

rcuit Court of the United
rn District of Missouri.
of the case fully ap-
he court.
aam, for appellant:
securi Pacific Company
rol by ownership, or at
'otherwise," is the aver-
bill.
tual right and power of
e, in a given case they
to act as mere agents of em.
compose the company;
rectors and officers are
for the management of essential to its existence
g an integral part."
3 Watts, 46; Evarts v.

er administered in any ckholders. A court of ith the exercise of this power, whether the usual mode be actually or only colorably followed.

This is the precise status presented by the bill. The ostensible officers of the Iron Mountain are mere agents and employees of the Missouri Pacific. The ostensible independence of the Iron Mountain road is merely colorable. Its separate organization is a mere disguise. All administrative authority is actually exercised by the Missouri Pacific. These are the practical facts to be dealt with on this record.

Messrs. John F. Dillon, Walter H. Smith and A. T. Britton, for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity brought by Pullman's Palace Car Company to injoin the Missouri [587] Pacific Railway Company and the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company from discontinuing the use of the drawing-room cars and sleeping cars of the Pullman Company on the line of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company; from refusing to haul such cars on passenger trains running on such line; and from contracting with any other persons for supplying like cars for that use. The court below dismissed the bill on demurrer, and from a decree to that effect this appeal was taken.

The case made by the bill is in substance this:

On the 8th of March, 1877, the Missouri Pacific Railway Company was a Missouri corporation owning and operating a railroad between St. Louis and Kansas City, and Pullman's Palace Car Company, an Illinois corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing drawing-room cars and sleeping cars, and hiring them to, or otherwise arranging with, railway companies for their use upon railroads under written contracts for a term of years. By a writ- [588] ten contract entered into on that day the Pullman Company agreed to furnish the Missouri Pacific Company, for fifteen years, upon certain specified terms, with drawing-room and sleeping cars sufficient to meet all the requirements of travel, and the Missouri Pacific Company agreed "to haul the same on the passenger trains on its own line of road, and on all roads which it now controls, or may hereafter control, by ownership, lease, or otherwise." The Railway Company also agreed that the Pullman Company "shall have the exclusive right, for a term of fifteen years from the date, * * * to furnish for the use of the Railway Company drawing-room or parlor and sleeping cars on all the passenger trains of the Railway Company, and over its entire line of railway, and on all roads which it controls, or may hereafter control, by ownership, lease, or otherwise, * * * and that it will not contract with any other party to run said class of cars on and over said lines of road during said period of fifteen years."

Sometime during the summer or autumn of 1820, and as early as October 7, the Missouri Pacific Company "consolidated with itself certain other companies, under the laws of Missouri, retaining its former name; and * * * said consolidated company assumed all the obligations of the separate consolidating companies, and continued to use and operate the former road, together with other consolidated lines."

The St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company is, and for many years has been, a corporation owning and operating a railroad from St. Louis, in a southwesterly direction, to Texarkana. On the 20th of November, 1871, that Company entered into a contract with the Pullman Company, similar to the one with the Missouri Pacific Company, for the hauling of the Pullman cars on its line until November 20, 1881.

In or about the month of December, 1880, the Missouri Pacific Company "acquired and became the owner of more than a majority of the stock of said St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company," and this, as the [589] bill alleges, was done "with the intent and purpose of controlling the management and administration of the said St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company, and for the purpose of subordinating, in effect, the said St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company and the Missouri Pacific Railway Company to the same management and control, and of running and operating said roads as one line, and in the interest of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company."

Since that time the Missouri Pacific Company has acquired all but about 1,795 of the 220,682 shares of the capital stock of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company. Five of the directors of the Missouri Pacific are also directors in the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company, and the two roads are operated under the same general management. The general offices of the two Companies are kept together, and both roads are managed substantially by the same persons. All this was brought about and done, as is alleged, in pursuance of an arrangement between the Missouri Pacific Company and persons who were at the time the holders of nearly all the stock of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company "for the transfer of the ownership and control of the franchises, property and business of said last named corporation to the said Missouri Pacific Railway Company," it being part of the arrangement that the "stockholders of the said St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company should not devest themselves altogether of their interest in the franchises, property and business thereof, but that they should place the same under the control and management of the said Missouri Pacific Railway Company, by the method of the transfer of their stock in said St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company to the said Missouri Pacific Railway Company, and retain their interest therein by receiving in exchange therefor the stock of the said Missouri Pacific Railway Company, in the proportion of three shares of the stock of the Missouri Pacific to four shares of said St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern; and it was understood that, as a part of said arrangement, the stock of said Missouri Pacific Railway Company received in exchange for said stock of said St. Louis, Iron Mountain [590] and Southern would represent in the hands of its holders a combined interest in the properties of both of said corporations; and that the stock of said St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern which was by the arrangement aforesaid acquired by the said Missouri P Company should be retained, he
it to control the franchises, pro
ness of the said St. Louis, Iron Southern Railway Company, in execution of the purpose aforesa
authority of the board of direct souri Pacific Railway Company
terest of all persons so holding as of the Missouri Pacific Railway

And this, it is further allege pursuance "of a general purp affairs aforesaid of said St. Lou tain and Southern Railway Com
control of the said Missouri P Company, that they might be op
as one institution as nearly as po
a mode adopted to that end in others methods and modes propo
ered, namely: by consolidation
otherwise, as being least subje
based upon considerations of gality."

At the expiration of the contr
Pullman Company and the Mountain and Southern Comp
ident of the last named Compa
Pullman Company that the furt Company to have its cars haul
of the St. Louis, Iron Mountai road was denied, and that the Rai would cease to operate its road
the Pullman Company.

As a ground of equitable reli
tains the following allegations:

"Your orator further shows
to operate your orator's cars upo Iron Mountain and Southern R
denial of your orator's right a plain and palpable violation o
of the contract between your Missouri Pacific Railway Comp
contract cannot be violated with
and most irreparable damage
that the cars constructed for your orator's business are of a
that your orator has invested a ital in the construction and op cars; that the business of your charter, and for which it is inc
such a nature that it can be through the instrumentality of character herein set forth with nies engaged in the business of passenger trains; that by mea
tracts it can run through cars
points and over distances far length of the separate lines of r convenience of the public; and
ing and enforcement of such co importance and relation to the corporate franchises of your or public convenience; that if sai
be violated as is threatened in t inbefore stated, the facilities of aforesaid will be broken up, a
and estate of your orator, to th
many thousands of dollars, whi
and inheres in such contracts, v
in value, and the corporate fra
orator practically destroyed; th
the magnitude of the investme
and the cost of operating such c

rn, unless it can have said business, as pro-
ith the several compa-
operates; and that the l for, and obtained by acts, as in the contract
is not only reasonable
for the success of your
it which your orator
contracts, and would ent with the said Mis-Company hereinbefore

shows that in making
e set forth with said
in making the pro-
, for the extension of rator's cars upon such
in their control, it has growth and develop-ch, in the performance
years past, it has been ping in the region of
e said lines of railway
run; that said business
and developed by the y of your orator; that,
of its future develop-
rne the burden of sus-
when the business was unremunerative; and ustice and inequity to panies, by violation of remove at the present
or from the line of the ountain and Southern discontinue operating stitute the cars of any

volved in the merits of the contract between Pullman Companies,
dation, binds the con-
ul the Pullman cars
Louis, Iron Mountain
if that road is cond Company within the
; and, 2, whether it is olidated Company.
Pacific Company is a n that which contractmpany. The original erated a railroad besas City. This Com-hat road and others be-oration created by the ones, and the estab-ir place. It has new nd new stockholders.
1 Wall. 42 [68 U. S. ts v. Ohio, 95 U. S.
Railroad Co. v. Maine,
ed. 839]; Railroad Co.
[Bk. 25, L. ed. 187];
R. R. Co. v. Palmes,
. ed. 925]. The bill
Missouri Pacific Com-
itself certain other
ing its former name," der the laws of Missolidation depends on lroad Co. v. Georgia,
ed. 760]. They provide that "any two or more railroad companies in this State, existing under either general or special laws, and owning railroads constructed wholly or in part, which, when completed and connected, will form, in the whole or in the [595] main, one continuous line of railroad, are hereby authorized to consolidate in the whole or in the main, and form one company owning and controlling such continuous line of road, with all the powers, rights, privileges and immunities and subject to all the obligations and liabilities to the State, or otherwise, which belonged to or rested upon either of the companies making such consolidation." In order to accomplish such consolidation an agreement to that effect must be entered into by the companies interested. "A certified copy of such articles of agreement, with the corporate name to be assumed by the new company, shall be filed with the Secretary of State when the consolidation shall be considered duly consummated, and a certified copy from the office of the Secretary of State shall be deemed conclusive evidence thereof." "The board of directors of the several companies may then proceed to carry out such contract according to its provisions, calling in the certificates of stock then outstanding in the several companies or roads, and issuing certificates of stock in the new consolidated company under such corporate name as may have been adopted." Rev. Stat. Mo. 1879, sec. 789. This clearly contemplates the actual dissolution of the old corporations and the creation of a new one to take their place.

The new Company assumed on the consolidation all the obligations of the old Missouri Pacific. This requires it to haul the Pullman cars, under the contract, on all roads owned or controlled by the old company at the time of the consolidation, but it does not extend the operation of the contract to other roads which the new company may afterwards acquire. The power of the old company to get the control of other roads ceased when its corporate existence came to an end, and the new Company into which its capital stock was merged by the consolidation undertook only to assume its obligations as they then stood. It did not bind itself to run the cars of the Pullman Company on all the roads it might from time to time itself control, but only on such as were controlled by the old Missouri Pacific. Contracts thereafter made to get the control of other roads would be the contracts of the new consolidated Com- [596] pany, and not of those on the dissolution of which that Company came into existence. It follows that the present Missouri Pacific Company is not required, by the contract of the old company, to haul the Pullman cars on the road of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company, even if it does now control that road, within the meaning of the contract.

We are also of opinion that the railroad of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company is not controlled by the present Missouri Pacific Company in such a way as to require that Company to haul the Pullman cars over it, if the contract is binding on the new Company to the same extent it would be on the old were that company still in existence and standing in the place of the new. Confessedly the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company keeps up its own corporate organiza tion. It operates its own road. It has its own officers and makes its own bargains. The Missouri Pacific owns all, or nearly all, its stock, and in that way can determine who shall constitute its board of directors; but there the power of that Company over the management stops. The board when elected has controlling authority, and for its doings is not necessarily answerable to the Missouri Pacific Company. The two roads are substantially owned by the same persons and operated in the same interest, but that of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company is in no legal sense controlled by the Missouri Pacific.

It is true the bill avers in many places and in many ways that the purchase of the stock of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company was made by the Missouri Pacific Company for the purpose and with the intent of getting the control of the road of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern, and that the case is before us on demurrer to the bill. A demurrer admits all facts stated in the bill which are well pleaded, but not necessarily all statements of conclusions of law. What was actually done is stated clearly and distinctly. The effect of what was done is a question of law, not of fact. It is a matter of no importance what the purpose of the parties was if what they did was not sufficient in law to accomplish what they wanted. When there is doubt, the purpose and intention of the parties may sometimes aid in explaining what was done, but here [597] there is no need of explanation. The Missouri Pacific Company has bought the stock of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Company, and has effected a satisfactory election of directors, but this is all. It has all the advantages of a control of the road, but that is not in law the control itself. Practically it may control the Company, but the Company alone controls its road. In a sense, the stockholders of a corporation own its property, but they are not the managers of its business or in the immediate control of its affairs. Ordinarily they elect the governing body of the corporation, and that body controls its property. Such is the case here. The Missouri Pacific Company owns enough of the stock of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern to control the election of directors, and this it has done. The directors now control the road through their own agents and executive officers, and these agents and officers are in no way under the direction of the Missouri Pacific Company. If they or the directors act contrary to the wishes of the Missouri Pacific Company, that company has no power to prevent it, except by the election, at the proper time and in the proper way, of other directors, or by some judicial proceeding for the protection of its interest as a stockholder. Its rights and its powers are those of a stockholder only. It is not the corporation, in the sense of that term as applied to the management of the corporate business or the control of the corporate property.

Something was intimated in argument about the duty of the Railway Company to haul the cars of the Pullman Company, because of the nature of the business in which the latter company was engaged, which consisted "of hiring or otherwise arranging with railway companies to use its cars," "under written contracts, for a term of years." The bill al "by reason of the magnitude of "and the cost of operating such man Company "cannot receiv unless it can have the exclusi said business, as provided in sai the several companies over wh rates." It may be, as is also all "become indispensable, in the business of a railroad company senger trains sleeping and drav with the conveniences usually cars for night travel," but it b lows that the railway is, in law range with the Pullman Comp commodations. According to two such car companies can carry on a competing business o and the custom has been for th pany, if possible, to contract f right. The business is always cial written contracts. These necessarily vary, according to cumstances of each particular it cannot be claimed that a co is competent to require these c ter into such a contract, for the hauling of Pullman cars, as the reasonable. A mere statement tion is sufficient to show that i

An objection was raised to of a court of equity to grant asked. This we do not consid agreed that the demurrer was pr upon the other grounds.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk

Cited—117 U. S., 29.

GEORGE A. BOWMAN ET Err.,
v.
CHICAGO & NORTH WE
WAY COMPAN

(See S. C., Reporter's ed.,

Jurisdiction—value of matter tion 699, R. S.—application

1. The jurisdiction of this court, a money demand, is governed b actual matter in dispute, as sho record, and not by the damage prayer for judgment alone.

2. An action against a common damages for a refusal to transp State of Ohio, on the ground that tion is forbidden by a statute of an action brought on account of of a right, privilege or immunit Constitution within the meaning which gives the court jurisdictio to the sum or value in dispute.

3. In the Revised Statutes, se separate from the other parts of t Acts, and is to be construed acco reference to the general rules of i plicable to the revision.

[No. 1168.]

Submitted Nov. 17, 1885. Deci

IN ERROR to the Circuit Cou States for the Northern Dist

ts of the case appear in t.
a, for plaintiffs in error.
r defendant in error.
Atty-Gen. of Iowa, also
: of the position of the

aite delivered the opinght by George A. Bow-ska, and Fred. W. Bow-

, against the Chicago &
y Company, an Illinois
iness as a common car-
etween Chicago, Illinois,
wa, to recover damages
ompany to receive and gs of beer from Chicago
on the line of its road,
There are two counts in same cause of action,
that the damages sus-00. The suit was begun
the declaration was filed
were filed by the Coming up as an excuse for ring the goods, a statute
a penal offense for any nowingly bring within ting liquors for a person
roper certificate author-articles, and that the certificate, and the beer
transportation was an hin the meaning of the May the plaintiffs de-
and on the 11th of the heir declaration, by leave ncrease the damages de-
he demurrer to the pleas
ame day, and on the 23d
ulation was filed in the

ted and agreed by and parties hereto that, in
of this cause to be transe Court of the United
s court shall only trans-
cord the amended decla(quod) damnum to be of the defendant to said
ith the demurrer thereto,
ourt thereon."
the 13th of July, judg-
favor of the defendant.
nt this writ of error was here October 21. At a he cause was submitted
ed briefs.
is record it is apparent
matter in dispute is not isdiction. It is now well ction in an action upon overned by the value of lispute in this court, as record, and not by the e prayer for judgment
1 Wall. 337 [68 U. S. hacker v. Hartford Fire
U. S. 241 [Bk. 23, L.
kard, 97 U. S. 564 [Bk.

24, L. ed. 1108]; Tintsman v. National Bank, 100 U. S. 6 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 530]; Banking Association v. Insurance Association, 102 U. S. 121 [Bk. 26, L ed. 45]; Hilton v. Dickinson, 108 U. S. 174 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 691]; The Jesse Williamson, Jr. Id. 309 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 731]; Jenness v. Citizens' National Bank of Rome, 110 U. S. 52 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 67]; Webster v. Buffalo Insurance Company, Id. 388 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 173]; Bradstreet Co. v. Higgins, 112 U. S. 227 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 715]. As was said in Hilton v. Dickinson, "It is undoubtedly true that until it is in some way shown by the record that the sum demanded is not the matter in dispute, that sum will govern in all questions of jurisdiction, but it is equally true that, when it is shown that the sum demanded is not the real matter in dispute, the sum shown, and not the sum demanded, will prevail." Here the suit is to recover damages for not transporting from Chicago to Marshalltown one thousand kegs of beer. There are no allegations of special damage or malicious conduct. In the original declaration the claim was for only $1,200, and it was not until the case was actually decided, or about to be decided on its merits, that application was made for leave to increase the amount of the demand. Then it was manifestly done, not in the expectation of recovering more than was originally claimed, but to give color to the jurisdiction of this court. As it stands, the case is not materially different in principle from that of Lee v. Watson, supra, where, after a demurrer was sustained, the demand for damages was increased, by leave of the court, so as to be in excess of our jurisdictional limit, although it was apparent from the whole record that in no event could there be a recovery except for a much less sum. Under these circumstances, the court did not hesitate to dismiss the cause, for the reason that it was clear the amendment was made for the sole purpose of giving color of jurisdiction. Here the stipulation which was put on file, taken in connection with the time it was made, shows unmistakably the purpose of the amendment was to make a case for our jurisdiction. In Smith v. Greenhow, 109 U. S. 669 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 1080], the action begun in a state court was trespass for taking and carrying away personal property of the value of $100, but the damages were laid at $6,000. On the removal of the case to the Circuit Court of the United States it was remanded, on the ground that the case was not one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States. This we decided was error, and, therefore, reversed the order to remand, but, in doing so, remarked, that, "if the circuit court had found, as a matter of fact, that the amount of the damages stated in the declaration was colorable, and had been laid beyond the amount of reasonable expectation of recovery, for the purpose of creating a case removable under the Act of Congress, * * * the order remanding it to the state court could have been sustained." This was said in reference to the requirement of the Removal Act of 1875, which limits the jurisdiction of the circuit courts, under such circumstances, to cases "where the matter in dispute exceeds * * * the sum of $500," but it is equally applicable to appeals and writs of error to this court where our jurisdiction depends on the money value of the matter in dispute.

[614]

It is suggested, however, that the case falls within the fourth subdivision of section 699 of the Revised Statutes, which gives this court jurisdiction, "without regard to the sum or value in dispute," for the review of "any final judgment at law or final decree in equity of any circuit court, or of any district court acting [615] as a circuit court, in any case brought on account of the deprivation of any right, privilege or immunity secured by the Constitution of the United States, or any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States."

The authority for making this a part of the Revised Statutes is found in what are known as the "Civil Rights" Acts of April 9, 1866, 14 Stat. 27, chap. 31, secs. 1, 3, 10; May 31, 1870, 16 Stat. 144, chap. 114, secs. 16, 18, and April 20, 1871, 17 Stat. 13, chap. 22, secs. 1, 2. In the original statutes this provision was applicable only to the particular rights, privileges and immunities therein mentioned. In the Revised Statutes it stands separate from the other parts of the old Acts, and is to be construed accordingly, but with reference to the general rules of interpretation applicable to the revision. We deem it unnecessary to consider now whether it has, in its present form, a more extended meaning than it had originally, because, in our opinion, this is not a case to which it can, in any event, be applied. The alleged right of which these plaintiffs have been deprived is one secured to them, if secured at all, not by the Constitution, but by that principle of general law which requires a common carrier of goods for hire to carry, whenever he is asked to do so, within the general scope of his professed business, and for a reasonable reward. It grows out of the duty which in law a common carrier owes to the public at large, and is no more secured by the Constitution than are any other of the ordinary transactions of business. Whether the Railway Company is excused from the performance of that duty by the statute on which it relies may depend on the Constitution. If the statute is constitutional, the plaintiffs are deprived of the right which they would otherwise have had in law, but if not, the Railway Company must carry for them. This, not because the Constitution requires it, but because the statute does not furnish a sufficient excuse for not carrying. The question is not, therefore, whether the plaintiffs have been deprived of a right which the Constitution has secured to them, but whether a right existing without the Constitution has been lawfully taken away. The case may be one arising under the Constitution, within the meaning of that term, as used in [616] other statutes, but it is not one brought on account of the deprivation of a right, privilege or immunity secured by the Constitution, within the meaning of this provision.

The writ of error is dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited—116 U. S., 561.

WILLIAM HASSALL, T

v.

A. W. WILCOX

(See S. C., Reporter's ed.

Jurisdiction—separate judgmen
$5,000 each.

1. In a controversy between the road mortgage and certain credi
perior liens, it is held that the dem itor is separate and distinct, and tion of this court does not extend whose several decrees do not exce
2. The trustee represents all of This appeal is therefore their ap treated as such.

[No. 1008.]

Submitted Nov. 23, 1885. Decid

APPEAL from the Circuit Co
ed States for the Western D
On motion to dismiss.
The case is sufficiently state
Mr. W. Hallett Phillips,
support of motion.
Messrs. George Biddle
Wilkinson, for appellant, con

Mr. Chief Justice Waite de
ion of the court:
The grounds of the motion t
1. That the appeal is impropo name of Hassall, trustee, as it has no interest in the decree;
2. That the amounts involv
ficient to give this court jurisdi
The controversy is between tee in a railroad mortgage, wh
a suit brought by one of the bo foreclosure, and certain credit
road company claiming superi mortgaged property. The tru
the suit by agreement, and, wi
court, "as a party complainant."
as trustee, he represents all th
there being no conflicting interes
The demand of each creditor distinct from all the others.
pends on its own facts, and a
does not necessarily involve a other. The decree is in favor separately. The total amount coveries is $19,043.45, or thereal
the appellee, A. W. Wilcox, gets more than $5,000. The m
erty has been sold, and the quest
the distribution of the proceeds claimants are each severally d
ment of their respective claims,
is resisting them all. If the clai
the trustee gets less for the bo
they are defeated, or either of amount going to the bondholde
respondingly increased.
It is clear that, as to all the c
several decrees do not exceed $ cannot be distinguished from
and Trust Co. v. Waterman, 106
27, L. ed. 115], and that, so far itors are concerned, the motion
be granted. With Wilcox it is han $5,000. In Water-

was between the several rchasers who bought at ubject to their liens. It were a part of the bondntroversy then before us
chasers and not as bond-
t for distribution to the e proceeds of the sale
hether the creditors suc-
r not. In this case, howetween the creditors and ondholders. If the credount realized from the ndingly reduced for the
ion to the bondholders.
place of the bondholders
e it is his duty to do for
they would do for them-
arties instead of himself.
re, their appeal, and is to

to all the parties except dismiss the appeal must
s to him it must be denied.
ng on the appeal from the lcox are not such as ought a motion to affirm. The s denied.

the appellees except Wilcox.

ey, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

LTZER ET AL., Appts.,
v.
AUGUSTA AIR LINE
COMPANY ET AL.

orter's ed., 634–649.)

-contracts—reformation of ion of—evidence.

hn F. Pickrell, having made railroad company to con-rnish the iron therefor, and ds in payment, made a con-
inants for the iron, payment
nds, the contract providing be deposited subject to the
the president of the com-
separate contract whereby ch order when the complain-
d to the bonds by the terms
rith Pickrell. Upon a bill ption that the railroad come contract through Pickrell
: that Pickrell was not the
; that the contracts should
her; that, to entitle the com-
first contract reformed by
of the company in place of ow that it was omitted by that upon the facts the com-
led to the relief sought.
e understanding of the par-
act is inadmissible to vary or r to affect persons not parties

No. 64.]

85. Decided, Dec. 7, 1885.

Circuit Court of the United Western District of North

facts of the case fully ap-
of the court.

Messrs. A. H. Garland and John N. Staples, for appellants.

Messrs. Edmund Randolph Robinson and Thomas C. Fuller, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court: [634]

The bill was filed October 18, 1878, by Herman R. Baltzer and William G. Taaks, the appellants, against the Raleigh and Augusta Air Line Railroad Company, a corporation of the State of North Carolina, and others, for a decree against the Railroad Company for $93,615.62, with interest thereon from November 2, 1868, that sum being the balance due them, as the plaintiffs alleged, for iron furnished the Chatham Railroad Company, whose name, on December 1, 1871, was changed by an Act of the Legislature of North Carolina to the name under which the Company is sued in this case. The Chatham Railroad Company was authorized to build a railroad from Raleigh to the South Carolina state line. To help the company to construct its road, the State of North Carolina, by an ordinance of its convention passed on March 11, 1868, authorized its public treasurer to issue to the company bonds of the State for $1,200,000; and by an Act of its General Assembly, passed August 15 of the same year, authorized the same officer to issue to the company other bonds of the State for the additional sum of $2,000,000. The bonds of both issues were for $1,000 each; were payable in thirty years, and were secured by a like amount of bonds of the company deposited with the public treasurer, and were also secured by statutory liens and by mortgages on the franchises and property of the company. [635]

On September 1, 1868, the company had received the $1,200,000 authorized by the convention, and on October 19, 1868, the company having complied with the conditions prescribed by the Act of the General Assembly, the $2,000,000 in bonds of the State authorized by the General Assembly were delivered to it.

On September 1, 1868, the defendant, John F. Pickrell, who was a resident of the City of New York, doing business in Wall Street as a banker and broker, and being in good credit, made an offer in writing in which he represented himself and John D. Whitford, of North Carolina, to W. J. Hawkins, the president of the Chatham Railroad Company, to do the entire work on the Chatham Railroad, such as grading, superstructure and masonry, and furnish all material for the same, including the iron rails, and to take the state bonds in payment. This proposition was accepted by resolution adopted by the board of directors of the railroad company on September 4, 1868. The firm of Greenleaf, Norris & Co. and Charles Gould, of New York, were interested with Pickrell and Whitford in the performance and profits of the contract.

Having thus bound themselves to build the railroad and furnish the iron, Pickrell and Whitford began negotiations for the purchase of the iron with Schepeler & Co., a firm engaged in the iron trade in New York. This latter firm asked Baltzer & Taaks, the plaintiffs, to join them in a contract to sell the iron, which they agreed to do. [636]

The parties, Pickrell and Whitford on one side, and Schepeler & Co. and Baltzer & Taaks on the other, met at the office of the counsel of Baltzer & Taaks, in New York, and, in the presence of and with the concurrence of the counsel, a draft of the intended contract for the purchase and sale of the iron was made. In the draft the names of Pickrell and Whitford both appeared as parties of the second part. This paper was taken by Pickrell and Whitford, who said, so the plaintiffs alleged, that they must send it to W. J. Hawkins, president of the Chatham Railroad Company. Afterwards the paper was returned to Baltzer & Taaks, with various changes, among which was the dropping of the name of Whitford, because he declined to sign the contract as a party. From this paper the final agreement between the parties, dated September 11, 1868, was drawn up by the counsel of Baltzer & Taaks, and was dated and executed September 11, 1868.

The introduction to this contract was as follows:

"This agreement, made this eleventh day of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, by and between Messieurs Schepeler & Company and Messieurs Baltzer & Taaks, of the City of New York, parties of the first part, and John F. Pickrell, also of the City of New York, party of the second part, witnesseth."

By it the parties of the first part agreed to sell and deliver to the party of the second part, and the party of the second part agreed to purchase and receive of the parties of the first part, ten thousand tons of English or Welsh iron rails, at the price of $79.36 per ton. The contract then proceeded thus:

"The iron is to be paid for as follows: The party of the second part is to deposit with the Continental National Bank, on or before the execution of this agreement, such an amount of the bonds of the State of North Carolina as will, at the market price on the day of deposit, be equal to the whole purchase money for the [637] said ten thousand tons of iron, and 15 per cent in addition thereto, which margin of 15 per cent is to be kept good until the full performance of this contract. The said bonds are to be held by said bank, subject to the joint order of the parties of the first and second parts and William J. Hawkins, or his attorney, or the survivors of said parties respectively. On the presentation of a warehouse receipt or ship's delivery order for any lot of said iron, the party of the second part and said William J. Hawkins, or the survivor of them, are to join with the parties of the first part in drawing an order on said bank, in favor of the parties of the first part, for so many of the said bonds as will, at the market price thereof on the day of drawing, equal the sum payable for such lot of iron at the price of seventy-nine dollars and thirty-six cents per ton as aforesaid, or pay that amount in money.

"Upon presentation of a bill of lading for any lot of such iron placed on shipboard for transportation to the port of New York or Norfolk, Virginia, the party of the second part and the said Hawkins, or the survivor of them, shall join with the parties of the first part in drawing an order on the said bank, in favor of the said parties of the first part, for so many of said bonds as v market price thereof on the day
equal the sum due for the iron
in the bill of lading at forty-nine forty-six cents per ton, the balance
such iron, namely: twenty-nine dolls ty cents per ton, shall be paid in on the arrival of the vessel containi
at the port of New York or the p folk. Notice shall be given to the second part, or his personal represe
the arrival of any ship containing i or they are to be ready to receive the ever ship is ready to discharge."

The contract further provided th
event of the death of said party of part and no appointment of a pers
sentative at the time notice is requ
given," notice might be given to Ha
"if at any time the party of the s
or his personal representative," o
Hawkins or his attorney, or the s
them, should refuse to join in drawi
for the amount due for iron, the pa
first part might retain the warehouse
sell the iron for which payment ha
fused "for and on account of the p
second part, or his personal repres
who should be liable to reimburse th
the first part any loss from such resa tice of intention to sell should be depositing the same in the general po
the City of New York, addressed to
of the second part, or his personal tives, or the said William J. Hawk event of the death of the said party
ond part, and the non-appointment o
sonal representative, in the City of N

The contract also contained the stipulation:

"It is understood that the said deposited as a fund out of which said iron, and that the parties of the
are to have a lien on the same, for th performance of this contract, on the party of the second part, but it is stood that the parties of the first p
look solely to the said bonds for pay
if for any reason they should at any
to constitute a fund for payment, the
the first part are nevertheless to be iron at the same rates and times as her provided.

"The party of the second part res
right to sell any or all of the bonds
with said bank, and, in case of sale, t
realized for the same, or a sufficient s
cover the price of all said iron, an cent in addition thereto, shall be pl
said bank on the same terms, and rep
said bonds for all the purposes of this

"The said bank shall deliver the b
on the presentation and delivery of s order as aforesaid. The parties of part shall have their election to draw ment for iron, bonds, or money, the
of bonds, if any shall have been subs
the place of bonds sold."

The contract concluded, and was si
witnessed, as follows:

"In testimony whereof the said
these presents have hereunto subscr

r first hereinbefore writ-peler & Co.,
By John T. Schepeler.
er & Taaks,
By H. R. Baltzer.
F. Pickrell.
rge H. Sturr."
after its execution, ac-
y of New York, on Sep-
parties who signed it,
rr, a notary public of

on the same day, W. J.
paper bearing the same bove mentioned, which ving recital: "Whereas
. and Baltzer & Taaks
have entered into an te herewith, by which er & Co. and Baltzer & deliver, on certain terms
thousand tons of iron
. Pickrell."
act Hawkins stipulated rteen hundred bonds of
rolina, each for $1,000,
o 3,000 inclusive, which he Continental Bank of subject to my order as am Railroad Company
ll remain on deposit in the joint order of the e said contract, as there-contract is being pere of providing for the
and as security for the ontract as therein pro-nite in drawing the or-
or at the times and in the
th; provided, however,
inctly understood and
y delivery of said bonds
order for such delivery
said contract, I am to ght to pay in money the
d contract for the iron,
h delivery of bonds is t price; * * * and upon being made by me, I withdraw from deposit
rwise would have been ntract, and such bonds
e by said Continental
e presentation of such such option and right to hin five days after being provided in the contract
arties of the first part very of bonds pursuant

pressly provided that in n or any part thereof,
he port of shipment and delivery, all payments
of are to be refunded by nd Baltzer & Taaks as ertained."
gned "W. J. Hawkins,
lroad Company."
were designated in the
"A" and "B."
there were delivered to hepeler & Co. and Baltzer & Taaks, under this contract with him, 630 tons of iron rails, and on November 2 following, in three lots, 2,104 tons. The 630 tons delivered October 12, 1868, were paid for before any North Carolina bonds were issued or received in New York, by the check of Greenleaf, Norris & Co. for $63,593.46. This more than paid for the iron, and left a balance due Pickrell of $11,794.27, which was settled with him afterwards. The three deliveries made on November 2, the price of which was $167,098.73, were paid for in part by the check of Greenleaf, Norris & Co. for $75,000, which was cashed, leaving a balance of $92,098.73. For this balance Baltzer & Taaks received from Pickrell, between November 2 and November 20, one hundred and fifty North Carolina State bonds of $1,000 each.

The validity of the bonds of the State of North Carolina, issued by authority of the ordinance of the Convention of March 11, 1868, and the Act of the General Assembly of August 15, 1868, having been questioned in the latter part of the year 1868, they became discredited, and both the railroad company and Pickrell were embarrassed thereby. The contract between Pickrell and the Railroad Company was changed, and the length of the road to be built by Pickrell was, by contract dated March 6, 1869, reduced. Under the contract as amended he built the railroad from Raleigh to Haw River, a distance of thirty miles, furnishing therefor the iron rails. The Company paid him in full for the rails and for constructing the road. [641]

In consequence of the embarrassment resulting to Pickrell from the discrediting of the North Carolina bonds, no iron was received by him after November 2, 1868, from Baltzer & Taaks on the contract of September 11, 1868; and on August 11, 1869, Baltzer and Taaks, by a letter of that date addressed to Pickrell, released him, as far as they were concerned, "from obligations of receiving any more iron under contract dated 11th September, 1868, and," they added, "we consider the same as closed." The balance sued for was, therefore, for iron delivered on November 2, 1868.

The bill in this case was based on the assumption and averment that the Chatham Railroad Company was a party to the contract of September 11, 1868, designated "A," and that all the stipulations therein made by Pickrell were made by him for the Railroad Company, acting by its authority and in its behalf, and that the Chatham Railroad Company was the party of the second part to the contract, and not Pickrell; that the contract was to be construed together with and as a part of the agreement of the same date, signed by W. J. Hawkins, President Chatham Railroad Company, and designated "B;" and that, under the terms of these contracts, the Railroad Company had purchased, and received from plaintiffs, and used twenty-seven hundred and thirty-four tons of iron rails, on which there remained unpaid and due to the plaintiffs the sum of $93,615.57, with interest from November 2, 1868.

The bill prayed that the contract "A" might be reformed and corrected by the substitution of the name of the Raleigh and Augusta Air Line Railroad Company, formerly called the Chatham Railroad Company, for the name of

John F. Pickrell, who, it was alleged, as the [642] agent of said Company, nominally signed such agreement, at its procurement and request, and for its benefit and advantage, and that said agreement, when so reformed, might be enforced as the agreement and undertaking of the Railroad Company, the same as if its name had been signed thereto and its corporate seal affixed.

The bill further prayed for a decree against the Raleigh and Augusta Air Line Railroad Company for the said sum of $93,615.57, and interest thereon for November 2, 1868, with the right to enforce a first lien therefor on all the franchises, estate and property of the Railroad Company. The answers of the defendants, under oath, were called for.

The Railroad Company answered under its corporate seal, and Hawkins and Whitford under oath. Pickrell failed to answer, and a decree pro confesso was taken against him. The Railroad Company averred in its answer that it was not a party to the contract of September 11, 1868, designated "A;" that Pickrell was not its agent and had no power or authority to enter into said contract, or any other contract for it; that the contract "B" was signed by the defendant Hawkins to enable Pickrell to carry out the contract "A," which he had previously made with the plaintiffs, by which he expected to procure the iron for the defendant Company's road, and with no purpose to become a party to the contract "A" or to bind the Railroad Company thereby.

The answer of the Railroad Company further averred that Pickrell had paid the plaintiffs for all iron delivered by them under their contract "A," and that the Company had paid Pickrell for all work done and materials furnished by him, including iron, under his construction contract with the Company, and pleaded the North Carolina Statute of Limitation of three years in bar of the plaintiffs' suit.

Whitford answered that when the contract "A" was made and executed he was not the agent of the defendant Company to make or execute the same, or for any purpose, and did not represent himself to be so to the plaintiff; and that he was not a party to said contract or interested therein.

Hawkins, in his answer, denied that Pickrell was the agent of the defendant Company, or that he had any authority to make any contract
[642] in behalf of the Company for the purchase of iron, and averred that Pickrell made the contract for himself to procure iron to perform his own contract with the Railroad Company. He denied that the contract "B," signed by himself, as president of the Chatham Railroad Company, was a part of the contract "A," but averred that it was a separate and independent contract, made by him to enable Pickrell to pay for the iron which he had purchased from Baltzer & Tsaks and Schepeler & Co., and that the two contracts were not, at the time of their execution, regarded by any of the parties thereto as forming parts of the same contract, but as distinct, each binding upon the party or parties signing the same, and upon him or them alone, and that he had fully performed every part of the agreement "B" signed by him.

To these answers replications were filed by the plaintiffs. Upon final hearing the circuit court dismissed the bill, and pealed.

It is plain that the relief pra
tiffs in their bill of complaint
unless they establish the fact Railroad Company contracted purchase of iron rails, and t
delivered by them to the Railro
have not been paid for.

The agreements set out in show upon their face any co
the Railroad Company agreed rails of the plaintiffs. The pl insist that taking contracts "
gether and construing them as agreement of the Railroad Co
thousand tons of iron from th
made out. We think otherwi tracts had been written on t
paper and executed at the sam
would not have changed the c
the parties assumed. Readin
it appears that the plaintiffs,
first part, sold and agreed to d
ten thousand tons of iron rails
to receive the rails and pay f
tain price in bonds of the Stat
lina, and Hawkins, as agent Railroad Company, agreed t
other parties in an order for th
the bonds from their place
handed over to Pickrell, and over to the plaintiffs. In this
of the Company to Pickrell, Pickrell to the plaintiffs for th
paid. There is nothing in eith tracts, considered separately discloses any contract between the Railroad Company for the
of iron. On the contrary, c contract for the sale and pur
which the plaintiffs and Sch
one part, and Pickrell, on th
only parties, and Exhibit "B"
cital of the fact that, by co
plaintiffs and Schepeler & Co
sell and deliver to Pickrell t of iron rails. The Railroad not mentioned in contract "
it agreed to do by contra unite in an order for the bonds
tiffs contend that the two cont
read that Pickrell, who, acco
"A," agreed to buy and pay tons of iron, is not to buy th
it, or do anything which the
him to do, but that the Rai
which is not named as a party
do everything which the con
Pickrell.

On the theory that the two c
contract, to which the Railroa
not Pickrell was a party, the nent: What was the necessity o Pickrell at all, when it was sig
the president of the Company,
the Railroad Company, having authorized to make the entire
one part of it by one agent, a
by the other?

In the light of the surro
stances, the meaning of the

o construction, especially
h relieves one party of all
ed by him and puts them
ad not assumed them at
made a contract with the construct its road and
for, and to take his pay in bonds, makes another
r the iron and agrees to ne class of bonds which
the Railroad Company.
ire to the plaintiffs their
and Pickrell pay for his ials furnished, and to pro-
pany from a misappropri-ls, the contract "A" pro-
sentation of a warehouse
ery order for any lot of
, the plaintiffs, Pickrell,
resident of the Railroad
in an order for the with-k of so many bonds as lot of iron. It was bempany was not a party to e contract "B" was exe-
s president, whereby he der for the withdrawal of iffs were entitled to them contract "A" with Pick-
efore, that, as they stand,
what their language im-
ntracted with the plaint-
of the iron, and the Rail-
t.
ntend that contract "A"
y substituting therein the t Railroad Company, the nd part, for the name of
d, being thus reformed,
ed to the further relief

ntiffs to this relief, they ame of Pickrell, as the art, was inserted, and the Company left out of the r fraud. In such a case, equity would reform the
it, as reformed, if the re shown. Bradford v.
. 66 [54 U. S. bk. 14, L.
gue, 8 Ala. 845. But the ly shown. If the proofs satisfactory, and if the ntirely plain, equity will elburne v. Inchiquin, 1
v. Royal Assurance Co.
v. Moon, 2 Johns. Ch.
d Ins. Co. 2 Johns. Ch.
tin, 11 Ala. 187; Stock- Co. 107 Mass. 290. Even n of this strict rule the ails.
ere is no averment in the Pickrell was inserted in e or fraud for that of the nd, as far as the record
ever asserted in any way
until after the bringing ten years subsequently the contract. The facts disputed show that there
ke in drafting the con-
ginal draft and the final contract were drawn under the supervision of counsel for the plaintiffs, and the latter was signed by the parties on September 11, 1868, and nearly two weeks later was acknowledged by them before a notary public. The record shows that the plaintiffs, so far as the contract was carried out, performed it precisely as its terms required. The iron delivered was delivered to Pickrell, the payments made were made by Pickrell and receipted for to him, the accounts in reference to the business were kept in his name on the books of the plaintiffs, an overpayment made on the iron delivered was returned to him, and a final settlement and adjustment of the business, and a statement of the account of the plaintiffs with him arising out of the contract, was made nearly a year after the last delivery of iron.

It is necessary, in order to sustain their contention that the name of Pickrell was inserted in the contract when that of the Railroad Company should have been, for the plaintiffs to show that Pickrell was the agent of the Railroad Company, authorized by it to make the contract, and that he used his own name in the contract instead of the name of his principal. There is no proof in the record to show that the defendant Company ever authorized Pickrell to act as its agent in any matter whatever; on the contrary, it is established beyond question that Pickrell was not the agent of the Railroad Company. The Company denies it in its answer; Hawkins, the president of the Company, denies it; Whitford, the associate of Pickrell, denies it; and Pickrell himself does not assert the contrary, and he swears he did not, in purchasing the iron of the plaintiffs, represent himself or Whitford to be the agent of the Railroad Company. There is no proof [647] in the record which tends to rebut this evidence; on the contrary, all the dealings of the plaintiffs with Pickrell, the letters, accounts, payments, and settlements relating to the contract "A," show that Pickrell was acting for himself, and the plaintiffs so understood it, and that the contract was what it purports on its face and in all its provisions to be, namely: the contract of Pickrell, and not of the Railroad Company.

If John F. Pickrell, party of the second part in contract "A," means the Chatham Railroad Company, then the execution of contract "B" was a vain and futile act. It is only on the theory that Pickrell, and not the Railroad Company, was the party of the second part in contract "A" that the necessity for contract "B" becomes apparent. For the Railroad Company having, according to the contention of plaintiffs, consented to the method for the withdrawal of the bonds provided in contract "A," it was bound and protected thereby, and there was no necessity for the preparation and execution of another contract, whereby the Railroad Company bound itself to substantially the same thing.

It is also apparent upon the most cursory reading of contract "A" that the substitution of the name of the Railroad Company for that of Pickrell would render several of its provisions nugatory and impossible of execution, and the paper generally incongruous and absurd.

But if anything further were needed to show how baseless is the contention of the plaintiffs that the name of Pickrell was inserted in the contract "A" in place of that of the Railroad Company by mistake or fraud, it is found in the deposition of Baltzer, one of the plaintiffs, who testifies that contract "A" was prepared by the counsel of the plaintiffs, and that the contracts "A" and "B" express in exact words the final agreement of the parties with reference to the matters embraced therein.

As, therefore, the contract expressed the agreement of the parties, no court has power to change it. Courts of equity may compel parties to execute their agreements, but have [648] no power to make agreements for them. Hunt v. Rousmaniere, 1 Pet. 1 [26 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 27].

The evidence which was offered of the understanding between Baltzer and Pickrell that the covenants of Pickrell were the covenants of the Railroad Company was inadmissible, first, because it is a general rule that when a contract has been reduced to the form of a document or series of documents, no evidence can be given of the terms of such contract, except the document itself; and, second, the Railroad Company could not be bound by the understanding of other persons to which it was not a party. The only covenant of the Railroad Company appearing upon the face of the papers was that contained in contract "B," and that covenant Baltzer, one of the plaintiffs, and Hawkins, who signed it as president of the Railroad Company, both testified had been fully performed.

The plaintiffs, therefore, fail in the first step necessary to entitle them to the relief prayed by their bill; they show no contract between themselves and the Railroad Company.

But their case must fail for another reason. The evidence in the record shows conclusively that the plaintiffs were paid by Pickrell, in accordance with the terms of their contract with him, for all the iron bought by Pickrell and used by him in the construction of the road of the defendant Company.

It is not disputed that for the balance now sued for Baltzer & Taaks received from Pickrell, between November 2 and November 20, 1868, one hundred and fifty North Carolina bonds of $1,000 each. On November 20, they reported in writing to Pickrell that they had sold one hundred of the bonds at 64 cents on the dollar, amounting to $62,493.40, and on November 21, that they had sold the remaining fifty bonds for 63¼ cents on the dollar, amounting to $30,996.82, "producing to" his "credit," $93,490.22. The proceeds of the bonds, with the overpayment made by Pickrell on the first lot of iron delivered, more than paid the amount due on the lots delivered November 2, 1868. On November 23, 1868, Baltzer & Taaks stated their account with [649] Pickrell, which showed there was due to him on account of overpayment for the iron delivered $937.44, and this sum they paid him on December 28, 1868. By a final balance sheet, made out by themselves in September, 1869, more than ten months after the bonds were received by them, and nine months after the North Carolina bonds had, according to the averments of their bill, become discredited and of little value, they credited Pickrell with the amounts for which, on November 20 and 21, 1868, they reported that the bo sold by them, and such balance that they had been paid in full f furnished by them. There is in the bill that the plaintiffs did r hundred and fifty bonds as they rep rell they had done, or that they s in their possession, and there is turn them either to Pickrell or Company. These facts, consider tion with the further fact that th the sale of the iron provided therefor should be made in N State bonds, leave no ground fo tion that there is anything due from anyone for the iron furnish tract "A."

Therefore, without considering the plaintiffs have never, either at any time, tendered back the and fifty bonds of the State of N which they admit they received of the iron furnished, or the fac eler & Company, who were part tract on which the suit is based, parties plaintiff, and without co Statute of Limitations of No which is pleaded by the Railroad are of opinion that the plaintif to maintain their suit, and their b e ly dismissed.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Su

LOUISVILLE GAS COMPA

Err.,

v.

CITIZENS GAS LIGHT C

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 6

Constitutional law—obligation of c pairment—exclusive privileges Gas Company—construction of junction.

*1. The grant by the Legislature o 1869, to the Louisville Gas Company of twenty years, of "the exclusiv erecting and establishing gas works Louisville, and of vending coal gas plying the city and citizens with ga public works," that is, by means of p streets and public ways of that city, contract, within the meaning of the stitution, and was not forbidden by the Bill of Rights of Kentucky whic "all freemen, when they form a socie equal, and that no man or set of men exclusive, separate public emolum leges from the community, but in co public services." Within the meanin the services which the Company und form were public services, affectin and rights of the public generally.

2. By a general statute of Kentucky it was declared that "all charters an

*Head notes by Mr. Justice HARLA

NOTE.—Constitutional law; obligati impairment of. See Fletcher v. Pe Cranch), 87, bk. 3, 162, note.

Same; legislative grant of exclusive lidity of. See the two following c Cooley, Const. Lim., 5th ed., 339–345.

mendments thereof, shall be or repeal at the will of the ontrary intent be plainly ex-
at whilst privileges and fran-
be changed or repealed, no
shall impair other rights pre-
that the provisions of that ly to charters and Acts of innted hereafter." By an Act
latory of the charter of the ny of 1867, and granting the efore mentioned, it was proation or amendment to the npany shall be made without
e city council and the direc-
ny." Held, that the last Act
an intent that the charter of
not be subject to amendment
will of the Legislature, but rence of the city council and rs.

principles announced in N. O.
siana Light and Heat Produc-
ng Company, the Citizens Gas
rporated in 1872, and endowed manufacturing and distribut-Louisville, by means of pipes streets and public ways, is not tion restraining the Louisville
laiming and exercising the ex-
nted by its charter.

No. 489.]

885. Decided Dec. 7, 1885.

Court of Appeals of the State

facts of the case appear in court.

arlisle, John K. Good-
. Harris and Alex. P.
plaintiff in error:

he Louisville Gas Company,
cts of January 30, 1867, and is a contract between the said Company, and the City
ch is under the protection of
of the United States and also entucky, both of which de-impairing the obligation of made.

reight Co. 105 U. S. 20 (Bk. 26,
. Wisconsin, 94 U. S. 181, 183
3, 103); Farrington v. Tennes- Bk. 24, L. ed. 558); Wilming-
13 Wall. 266 (80 U. S. bk.
Gordon v. Appeal, Tax Ct. 3
S. bk. 11, L. ed. 529); New
U. S. 113 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 354);
18 How. 331 (59 U. S. bk. 15,
e Bk. v. Knoop, 16 How. 369
ed. 977); Cooley, Const. Lim.
ge Proprietors v. Hoboken Co.
. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 571); Bank
Edwards, 5 Ired. 516; Union
Yerg. (Tenn.) 490; Boston, etc.
etc., R. R. Co. 2 Gray, 1; John- alth, 7 Dana, 342; Hamilton
458; Louisville v. University
3. Mon. 642.

he State of Wisconsin v. Mil-
. 29 Wis. 454, it was held that
f that State might confer upon ation the exclusive right to
to sell gas, and to erect works erefor, within the limits of a ation.

ard v. Milwaukee Gas Co. 6
. Cincinnati Gas Co. 18 Ohio
. Carondelet, 22 Mo. 110; Cres.
V. Orleans Gas Co. 27 La. Ann.
138; Gas Light Co. v. Colliday, 25 Md. 1; People v. Manhattan Gas Co. 45 Barb. 136.

The undertaking of the Company to furnish gas to all the citizens who should apply therefor was a valuable and sufficient consideration for the grant of the exclusive privilege of making and vending gas to the City and citizens of Louisville.

Gas Light Co. v. Colliday, 25 Md. 1; People v. Manhattan Gas Co. 45 Barb. 136; Shepard v. Milwaukee Gas Co. 6 Wis. 546; Weymouth v. Penobscot Driving Co. 71 Me. 29, 38.

Messrs. John Mason Brown, George M. Davie and Wm. Lindsay, for defendant in error:

To prohibit all but one favored individual from engaging in a business which is lawful is, unless under legitimate exercise of the police power, a "denying to others of equal privileges," and a "depriving of them of their rights of property," and of their "liberty," in the meaning of the American Constitution.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 343-5, 486, 745; Re Jacobs, 40 N. Y. Sup. Ct. (33 Hun), 378; S. C. 98 N. Y. 98; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377; Commonwealth v. Bacon, 13 Bush, 212; Norwich Gas Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co. 25 Conn. 19; Smith v. Burlingame, 4 McLean, 121; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509; Butchers Union Co. v. Crescent City Co. 111 U. S. 746 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 585).

Some courts have held that the making and selling of gas is not an unwholesome and dangerous occupation, and an exclusive privilege to make it cannot be sustained, even under the police power.

Norwich Gas Light Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co. 25 Conn. 37; St. Louis Gas Co. case 19, Central Law Journal, 201; Paterson Gas Co. v. Brady (27 N. J. L.), 3 Dutch, 248; Jersey City Gas Co. v. Dwight, 29 N. J. Eq. 248.

The grant of an easement, franchise or privilege, with respect to the use of streets or other highways, will be construed strictly and will not be treated as exclusive, unless words of exclusion are explicit and "unequivocal."

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420 (36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 773); High, Injunctions, sec. 901; Lehigh Water Co's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 527; Holyoke Co. v. Lyman, 15 Wall. 512 (82 U. S. bk. 26, L. ed. 137); Fertilizer Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 666 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1038); Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 796 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 923); State v. Cincinnati Gas Co. 18 Ohio St. 290; Norwich Gas Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co. 25 Conn. 19.

The "exclusive privilege," if valid, could be, and was, pro tanto, repealed, under the right reserved to the Legislature, by the Kentucky Act of 1856, to amend, alter or repeal all legislative grants and franchises.

Griffin v. Kentucky Ins. Co. 3 Bush, 592; Cumberland & Ohio R. R. v. Barren Co. 10 Bush, (Ky.) 608, 609; Greenwood v. Freight Co. 105 U. S. 20 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 964); see also Newton v. Comrs. 100 U. S. 561 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 712); Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 796 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 923).

The grant of the exclusive privilege herein, if a contract at all, was without any consideration, and, therefore, could be repealed at any time.

Johnson v. Crow, 87 Pa. St. 184; Philadelphia R. R. Co's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 129; Norwich

Gas Light Co. v. City Gas Co. 25 Conn. 36; Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. 574 (89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 816).

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

[684] This is a writ of error to the highest court of Kentucky. The general question to be determined is whether certain legislation of that Commonwealth is in conflict with the clause of the National Constitution which forbids a State to pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts. The appellant, the Louisville Gas Company, contends that its charter, granting certain exclusive rights and privileges, constituted, within the meaning of that Constitution, a contract, the obligation of which has been impaired by the charter subsequently granted to the appellee, the Citizens Gas Light Company. The Court of Appeals of Kentucky sustained as constitutional the legislation under the authority of which the latter Company is exercising the rights, privileges and franchises conferred by its charter.

By an Act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, approved February 15, 1838 (Sess. Acts, 1837-8, p. 206), the Louisville Gas and Water Company was created a corporation to continue for the term of thirty years from January 1, 1839. It was made its duty, within three years after its organization, to establish in Louisville a gas manufactory of sufficient extent and capacity to supply that city and its people with such public and private lights as might, from time to time, be required; and, within five years after the establishment of its gas works, to erect and establish water works sufficient to supply the city with water for the extinguishment of fires, for the cleansing and sprinkling of streets and alleys, and for all manufacturing and do-[685] mestic purposes; to which end, it might lay down and extend pipes through any of the streets and alleys of the city, the Company being responsible to the city for any damages resulting therefrom. The Act imposed a limit upon the price to be charged for gas lights used by the city; and gave the latter the right to subscribe for four thousand shares in the Company, payment for one half of which could be made in city coupon bonds for $200,000, redeemable at any time within three years after the expiration of the Company's charter. It was made a fundamental condition that, upon the termination of the Company's charter, the city at its election could take the gas and water works at a fair estimate of what they would cost and be worth at that time, to be ascertained by the judgment of competent engineers, selected by the parties, or, in case they disagreed, by the Louisville Chancery Court.

Under this charter the Company proceeded at once to erect gas works, including suitable buildings and machinery. It supplied itself with all necessary apparatus, laid down mains and pipes, and erected lamp-posts, for the purpose of lighting the streets. It supplied gas for the public buildings, and for street lights, as well as for domestic purposes. And it continued so to do during the term of its original charter.

By an Act passed in 1842, the authority to erect water works was withdrawn by the Legislature.

By an Act, entitled "An Act to Extend the Charter of the Louisville Gas Company," approved January 30, 1867, a n granted, to take effect January continue in force for twenty date, unless the City of Louisv
cise its privilege of purchasing tablished under the authority charter. That Act created a co
name of the Louisville Gas C
capital stock of $1,500,000. It p
other things, that such stock
"first, of the stock of the pr Gas Company, on the 31st of
at par value; secondly, of the
and undivided profits that the
own at the expiration of the said fund to be capitalized pro r
fit of the present stockholders, e
shares which shall be paid in ca
new stock may be issued and Company, when required, to th
capital stock, the sales to be auction, after ten days' notice in should said stock be sold abov
such excess shall not be capita among the stockholders, but the first extensions made by the
the sale of said stock;" that the Company should be to make an
the City of Louisville and its within two years after its char
it should extend gas distributi
lay down mains, and erect stre tain named streets in that part of extend mains wherever the pri
lights would pay 8 per cent on t sion, until its entire capital was gas works and extensions—cont
the pipes and conductors already with the consent of the city co
the pipes and conductors throu
and alleys of the city. It was that the Company should put certain distances apart on the str
were mains, supply the same light and extinguish the same,
city only the actual cost thereo
not to exceed the average cha work or service in the Cities
Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago
and the charges against other con greater than the average price in the stockholders, exclusive of t
ville, should elect five directors
eral council of the city should the city might, upon the ter
charter, purchase the gas wor
mate of what they would be t
that the charter should be va
when accepted by those who h
of stock in the old Company, a
erty should belong to the new
When the Act of 1867 was owned 4,985 shares of the stock
pany. All the gas with which then lighted, or which was people, was supplied by that C
On the 22d of January, 18
passed amending that of Janua
preamble recites that the City o
the stockholders of the old Comp
ed the extended charter, and amendments embodied in that come part of that charter.

ch of the Act of 1867 as er cent on the cost of other things, provides
l extend its main pipes
and private lights, im-
said extension, will pay cost thereof; that the
mp-posts, fixtures, etc.,
as they are extended, at
out two hundred feet;
order, furnish gas, and
he same, each light to power of about twelve nish public lights to the ch shall in no event ex-lamp; that the charges
hall be so graded that shall not exceed 12
the par value of the hich may be drawn by nual dividends, and the
to be laid out for ex-alized except at the end

ections of the last Act

ompany shall have the recting and establishing f Louisville during the arter, and of vending
upplying the city and
eans of public works;
shall not interfere with erect, or cause to be their own premises, for ith light.
n or amendment to the
any shall be made with-the city council and the mpany."
March 21, 1872, the
npany of Louisville was rm of fifty years, with
and distribute gas for g public and private alleys, parks and other ty and its vicinity. It
eral council consenting,
her public ways of the laying gas pipes, sub-
ns as the city council
rotection of the lives,
f citizens. That body
ance passed December

ompany having claimed on of the Act of Janu-
he exclusive privileges
uted a contract, the ob-mpaired by the charter
the latter's charter was nt suit was brought by Company in the Louis-
r the purpose of obtain-
on against the assertion privileges, and against
e plaintiff's rights as de-
ong the rights asserted
charter was "to make,
for lighting the public
es, public and private,"
adjoining localities, by the public ways and

streets. The court of original jurisdiction dismissed the suit. Upon appeal to the Court of Appeals, the decree was reversed, with directions to issue a perpetual injunction restraining the Louisville Gas Company from claiming and exercising the exclusive right of manufacturing and supplying gas to the City of Louisville and its inhabitants. This writ of error was sued out to review that judgment.

Two of the judges of the state court held that the clause of the Bill of Rights of Kentucky, which declares that "all freemen, when they form a social compact, are equal, and that no man or set of men are entitled to exclusive, separate public emoluments or privileges from the community, but in consideration of public services" (Const. Ky. 1799, art. 10, § 1; 1850, art. 13, § 1), forbade the General Assembly of that Commonwealth to grant to a private corporation the exclusive privilege of manufacturing and distributing gas, for public and private use, in the City of Louisville, by means of pipes and mains laid under the streets and other public ways of that municipality. The other judges were of opinion that that clause did not prohibit a grant by the State to a private corporation, whereby certain privileges were conferred upon the latter in consideration of its discharging a public duty, or of rendering a public service; that the municipality of Louisville being a part of the State Government, there was a public necessity for gas lights upon its streets and in its public buildings, almost as urgent as the establishment of the streets themselves; that the services thus to be performed by the corporation were, in the judgment of the legislative department, an adequate consideration for the grant to it of exclusive privileges; and, consequently, that the grant was a contract, the rights of the parties under it to be determined by the rules applicable to contracts between individuals. [691] [692]

While the judgment below, in view of the equal division in opinion of the judges of the state court, does not rest upon any final determination of this question by that tribunal, it cannot be ignored by us; for, at the threshold of all cases of this kind, this court must ascertain whether there is any such agreement on the part of the State as constitutes a contract, within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States. If the services which the Gas Company undertook to perform, in consideration of the exclusive privileges granted to it, were public services, within the meaning of the Bill of Rights of Kentucky, then the grant of such privileges was not forbidden by the State Constitution. In N. O. Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Heat and Light Producing and Manufacturing Co. [post, 516], just decided, it was held that the supplying of gas to a city and its inhabitants, by means of pipes and mains laid under its public ways, was a franchise belonging to the State, and that the services performed, as the consideration for the grant of such a franchise, are of a public nature. Such a business is not like that of an ordinary corporation engaged in the manufacture of articles that may be quite as indispensable to some persons as are gas lights. The former articles may be supplied by individual effort, and with their supply the government has no such concern that it can grant an exclusive right to engage in their manufacture and [693] sale. But as the distribution of gas in thickly populated districts is, for the reasons stated in the other case, a matter of which the public may assume control, services rendered in supplying it for public and private use constitute, in our opinion, such public services as, under the Constitution of Kentucky, authorized the Legislature to grant to the defendant the exclusive privileges in question. This conclusion is justified, we think, by the decisions of the Court of Appeals of that State. In O'Hara v. Lexington & Ohio Railroad Co. 1 Dana, 232, the point was made, that an inquisition for the assessment of damages for the taking of land by a railroad corporation was void upon certain grounds, one of which was that the company's charter granted exclusive privileges, without any consideration of public services. Chief Justice Robertson, speaking for the court, said that in the true sense of the Constitution, no exclusive privileges were granted to the corporation, observing that "if the charter be on that ground unconstitutional, it would be difficult to maintain the validity of any statute for incorporating any bridge company, or any bank, or even for granting a ferry franchise."

But the principles announced in Gordon v. Winchester, etc., Asso. 12 Bush, 114, seem mor directly applicable to the present case. Judge Cofer, speaking for the whole court, after observing that there were unquestionably cases in which the State may, without violating the Constitution, grant privileges to specified individuals, which, from the nature of the case, could not be enjoyed by all, and in respect of which the State could designate the grantee, said: "But in all such cases the person, whether natural or artificial, to whom the privilege is granted, is bound, upon accepting it, to render to the public that service, the performance of which was the inducement to the grant; and it is because of such obligation to render service to the public that the Legislature has power to make the grant." In illustration of this principle he proceeds to say: "Permission to keep a tavern or a ferry, to erect a toll-bridge over a stream where it is crossed by a public highway, to [694] build a mill-dam across a navigable stream, and the like, are special privileges, and, being matters in which the public have an interest, may be granted by the Legislature to individuals or corporations; but the grantee, upon accepting the grant, at once becomes bound to render that service, to secure which the grant was made; and such obligation, on the part of the grantee, is just as necessary to the validity of a legislative grant of an exclusive privilege, as a consideration, either good or valuable, is to the validity of an ordinary contract. Whenever, by accepting such privilege, the grantee becomes bound, by an express or implied undertaking, to render service to the public, such undertaking will uphold the grant, no matter how inadequate it may be; for, the Legislature being vested with power to make grants of that character, when the public convenience demands it, the legislative judgment is conclusive, both as to the necessity for making the grant and the amount of service to be rendered; and the courts have no power to interfere, however inadequate the consideration or unreasonable the grant may appear to them to be. But when they can see that the grantee of an exclusive privilege has come under no obligation whate public in any manner in any

with the enjoyment of the gr
duty to pronounce the grant v
vening that provision of the
which prohibits the granting privileges, except in consider services." These observations case in which it was held that a building association the rig greater rate of interest than was general law was unconstitutiona ferred exclusive privileges not i
of any public services to be per

In Commonwealth v. Bacon,
the question was as to the con
an Act giving a strictly priva
which owed no duty to the pub
of an ordinary business in whi
was entitled to engage upon ter
Its validity was attempted to b
the same principle upon whic ferry privileges was upheld. B
held to be unconstitutional, th
other things, saying: "Ferrie
highways, and the government
its duty in establishing and ma
through the agency of private corporations, and such agencies
tives of government and perfor
of its functions. And in consi service thus performed for the ernment may prohibit altogethe keeping ferries and competing has licensed. The establishm highways being a function of person has a right to establish without the consent of the gov
hence, in prohibiting unlicense
keeping a ferry, the governme
vade the right of even those wh
on both sides of the stream."

In the later case of Commonw
80 Ky. 272, where the validity
Kentucky authorizing a partic
dispose of his property by lotte
as a violation of the before men
the Bill of Rights, Pryor, J.
Lewis concurring), said: "Thi
inhibition was intended to prev
of some public function, or an lege affecting the interests an public generally, when not in c
public service, and, if made t
exercise of mere private rights
leges, it nullifies almost innu
ments that are to be found statutes, sanctioned in many ins
department of the State Govern

The precise question here p
not to have been directly adju highest court of the State. Bu sive privileges granted to the Company affected the rights a
the public generally, and relate
which the public might assume not prepared to say that the gr
consideration of public servic
meaning of the Constitution of perceive nothing in the languag ment, or in the decisions of the
that Commonwealth, that wou
holding that her Legislature,

in question, exceeded its

Citizens' Gas Light Com-
that the charter of the
any, granted January 30,
y the Act of January 22,
s subject to alteration or
of the Legislature. As-of 1867 was not a prolon-
e existence of the original pany, but created a new me name, it is clear that nted subject to the pro-
l statute of Kentucky,
f February, 1856, entitled ower to Amend or Repeal aws." That statute is as rters and grants of or to dments thereof, and all

be subject to amendment
f the Legislature, unless herein plainly expressed;
t privileges and franchises
changed or repealed, no
shall impair other rights

any corporation shall ex-
r its corporate rights and
by reason of a repeal of se, and no different pro-
, all its works and prop-yable to it, shall be sub-
f debts owing by it, and among the members acective interests; and such
and be sued as before, for ment and distribution as visions of this Act shall

s and Acts of incorpora-eafter; and that this Act
its passage."

is statute is too plain to
It formed a part of the Louisville Gas Company
1867, and the right of subsequent Act, passed in another gas company to tribute gas in Louisville,
d, at its own cost, in the
ity, so far from impairing endant's contract with the
by its reserved power of
, unless it be that the Act
"plainly expressed" the er of the new Louisville
not be subject to amend-mere will of the Legisla-
the state court all con-
that no such intent was s this question is at the e inquiry whether the de-ontract with the State, the
as been impaired by sub-
e cannot avoid its deter-
an alleged contract arises
, or by agreement with
, by its authority, or by individuals exclusively,
our own judgment and adjudication of the state
her there exists a contract

within the protection of the Constitution of the United States. Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436 [66 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 73]; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 794 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 922]; R. R. Co. v. Palmes, 109 Id. 257 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 926]. After carefully considering the grounds upon which the state court rests its conclusion, we have felt constrained to reach a different result. We are of opinion that the Act of 1869 plainly expresses the intention that the Company should enjoy the rights, privileges and franchises conferred by the Act of 1867, as modified and extended by that of 1869, without its charter being subject to amendment or repeal at the will of the Legislature. In ascertaining the legislative intent, we attach no consequence to the negotiations between the Louisville Gas Company and the city council of Louisville as to the provisions to be embodied in an amended charter giving the Company exclusive privileges after January 1, 1869; for, the words of the Act of 1869 being, in our opinion, clear and unambiguous, effect must be given to them according to their ordinary signification. The clause in that Act declaring that "no alteration or amendment to the charter of the Gas Company shall be made without the concurrence of the city council and the directors of the Gas Company," plainly expresses, as we think, the intention that the Company's charter should not be amended or repealed "at the will of the [698] Legislature." When the Legislature declared that there shall be no alteration or amendment without the concurrence of the city council and the directors of the Company, it must have intended to waive, with respect to that Company, her absolute power reserved by the Act of 1856, of amending or repealing charters of incorporations thereafter granted. The language used is wholly inconsistent with any other purpose than to withdraw its charter from the operation of that Act, so far as to make the right of amendment or repeal subject, not to the mere will of the Legislature, but in the first instance to the concurrence of the city council and the directors of the Gas Company. If there can be no amendment or repeal without the concurrence of the city council and the directors of the Company, then it cannot be said that such amendment or repeal depends entirely upon the will of the Legislature, as declared in the Act of 1856. It was as if the Legislature had said: "As the municipal government of Louisville and the Company are agreed, the latter may enjoy the rights, privileges and franchises granted by its charter for the whole term of twenty years, unless before the expiration of that period the city council and its directors concur in asking alterations or amendments, which will be made if, in the judgment of the General Assembly, the public interests will be thereby promoted."

3. But it is argued that, as the defendant's charter of 1867 conferred upon it no exclusive privileges, the granting of such privileges in the Act of 1869 was without consideration, and is to be deemed a mere gratuity. To this it is sufficient to answer that, apart from the public services to be performed, the obligations of the Company were enlarged by the Act of 1869, and its rights under that of 1867 materially lessened and burdened in the following particulars: The amended charter limited the profits of the Company to 12 per cent per annum on the par value of its stock, 2 per cent of [699] which was required to be used for extensions and not to be capitalized, except at the end of each five years, while, under the original charter, the only limitation upon the prices to be charged private consumers was that they should not exceed the average charges in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis; the amended charter limited the amount to be annually charged the city per lamp to $35, no matter what its actual cost was, while, under the original charter, the Company was entitled to charge the city for the actual cost of supplying, lighting and extinguishing lamps, not, however, exceeding the average charges in the before mentioned cities; and, by the amended charter, the Company was required to extend its mains when its income from lights would amount to 7 per cent on such extensions, while under the original charter such extensions were not required unless its income therefrom would pay 8 per cent. These concessions upon the part of the Company seem to be of a substantial character, and constituted a sufficient consideration to uphold the grant of exclusive privileges. If the consideration appears now to be inadequate, upon a money basis, that was a matter for legislative determination, behind which the courts should not attempt to go.

4. These preliminary matters being disposed of, and without referring to some matters discussed by counsel but not fairly arising on the pleadings, or in any evidence in the cause, it is clear that, upon the main issue, this case is determined by the principles announced in New Orleans Gas Light Company v. The Louisiana Light and Heat Producing and Manufacturing Company [post], just decided. For the reasons there stated, and which need not be repeated here, we are of opinion that the grant to the Louisville Gas Company, by the Act of January 22, 1869, amendatory of the Act of January 30, 1867, of the exclusive privilege of erecting and establishing gas works in the city of Louisville during the continuance of its charter, and of vending coal gas lights, and supplying that municipality and its people with gas by means of public works, that is, by means of pipes, mains and conduits placed in and under its streets and public ways, constitutes a contract between the State and that Company the obligation of which was impaired by the charter of the Citizens' Gas Light Company. The charter of the latter Company is, therefore, inoperative, in respect of these matters, until, at least, the exclusive privileges granted the [700] Louisville Gas Company cease, according to the provisions of its charter. As the object of the plaintiff's suit was to obtain a decree enjoining the defendant from claiming and exercising the exclusive privileges so granted to it, the judgment of the Louisville Chancery Court dismissing the bill should have been affirmed by the Court of Appeals.

The judgment of the latter court, reversing that of the court of original jurisdiction, is itself reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

NEW ORLEANS GAS LI
PANY, Appt.,
v.
LOUISIANA LIGHT AND
DUCING AND MANUFACT
PANY ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed.,

Constitutional law—obligation o
pairment of — the New Orl Company—exclusive privileges
—Constitution of Louisiana monopoly features of existin
consolidation of corporations.

*1. The New Orleans Gas Light
poration of Louisiana, formed b
corporation of the same name w
City Gas Light Company, has, b exclusive privilege of supplying g
people of New Orleans, by mean
and conduits laid, at its own cost,
other public ways of that city.

2. Before the adoption of the pre of that State the Legislature had a
to a private corporation an exclu
that character, and such grant c tract, the obligation of which can
by a state law.

3. The manufacture and distrib
means of pipes, mains, and condui
legislative authority, in the publi
nicipality, is not an ordinary bus
everyone may engage, as of com
terms of equality; but is a fran matters of which the public may and, when not forbidden by the o
State, may be granted by the means of accomplishing public ob
ever, and upon what terms, it plea

4. The grant of the exclusive tion is none the less a contract be facture and distribution of gas, w
to proper supervision, may work i lic; for such a grant does not re
of the State to establish and enf
not inconsistent with the essential
the company by its charter, whic
sary for the protection of the publ
whether arising from the want o conduct of the business, or from
of streets in laying gas pipes, or
of the grantee to furnish gas of th
ity and amount.

5. The constitutional prohibition impairing the obligation of contr
strict the power of the State to p health, the public morals, or the
the one or the other may be involv
tion of such contracts.

6. The provision in the present
Louisiana abrogating the monopo
isting corporations, other than r
tions, is inoperative in respect of t
New Orleans Gas Light Company
no more impair the obligation of organic law than by legislative en obligation of her contracts are as
by the National Constitution aga
by legislation as are contracts bet exclusively.

[No. 18.]

Argued Mar. 27, 30, 1885. Deci

APPEAL from the Circuit Co
States for the Eastern Distri

*Head notes by Mr. Justice HA

NOTE.—Constitutional law; oblig
impairment of. See Fletcher v.
Cranch, 87, bk. 3, 162, note.
Same; legislative grant of exclus lidity of. See the preceding and See also Cooley, Const. Lim., 5th e

of the case appear in mpbell and W. D.

Caleb, for appellee:
ale of illuminating gas
eans comes within its nt of the exclusive
that power.
. Orleans Gas Co. 27
y No. One v. Gas Light
rleans v. Clark, 95 U.
; see, also, Beer Co. v.
L. ed. 989); Bloomfield
rdson, 63 Barb. 437.
ect to modification,
any time, is the only er into with reference
n its police power.
Crescent City Co. 111
585); Stone v. Missis-
5, L. ed. 1079).
tion, exclusive privi-
ntained in the charter
ass to its successor, or consolidation out of
nies, even though one
ed such extraordinary
and powers.
. 319 (Bk. 24, L. ed.
97 U. S. 697 (Bk. 24,
Georgia, 98 U. S. 359
v. R. R. Co. 99 U. S.
. R. Co. v. Maine, 96 10).

elivered the opinion

and Heat Producing any, a corporation in
in the year 1881, by Benthusen, and their
al law providing for ions for certain pur-
the construction and r supplying cities or associates and their
d assigns had prey an ordinance of the Orleans passed Jan-
od of fifty years, and
to lay mains, pipes,
ts, alleys, sidewalks,
gardens, and other
purpose of supply-
Among the condi-
that the rights and dinance were granted
ility upon the part of
s company to which
ed by legislative en-
on to be paid for these $20,000.
nicipal grant having Louisiana Light and
ufacturing Company,
ng about to proceed
its mains, pipes, and it was commenced
in the Civil District
New Orleans, by the Company, which had essently explained, by the consolidation of other corporations. The plaintiff claims to be entitled, for the term of fifty years from April 1, 1875, to the sole and exclusive privilege of manufacturing and distributing gas in that city by means of pipes, mains, and conduits laid in its streets, to such persons or corporate bodies as may choose to contract for the same. The relief asked is a decree perpetually enjoining defendant from digging up the streets, and other public ways or places of the city for the purpose of laying pipes, conduits, or mains for supplying illuminating gas, and from asserting any right to do so until after the lapse of fifty years from the latter date.

An application for an injunction having been denied, the suit was thereafter removed by the plaintiff into the Circuit Court of the United States, upon the ground that it was one arising under the Constitution of the United States. In the latter court a bill was filed, so as to conform to the general rules of equity practice.

A statement of the history of the corporations concerned in the before mentioned consolidation is necessary to a clear understanding as well of the grounds upon which the court below proceeded, as of the questions argued in this court.

By an Act of the Legislature of Louisiana, passed April 1, 1835, the New Orleans Gas Light and Banking Company was incorporated and was given "the sole and exclusive privilege of vending gas lights in the City of New Orleans and its faubourgs and the City of Lafayette, to such persons or bodies corporate who may voluntarily choose to contract for the same;" to which end it was authorized to lay pipes or conduits at its own expense in any of the public ways or streets of those localities, having due regard to the public convenience. The right was reserved to the city, after the expiration of forty years, to buy such gas works as the company constructed, and pay for the same in city bonds. If the city declined to purchase, then its bonds which the company had received in payment of its subscription of stock were to be renewed for twenty years. [652]

By amendments of its charter made in 1845 and 1854, the company's right to engage in banking was, by its consent, withdrawn, and the remaining rights granted by the original Act were continued to the corporation under the name of the New Orleans Gas Light Company, to be enjoyed until April 1, 1875, when its corporate privileges were to expire. This change was made subject to the condition that the Company should assume all the debts and engagements of the original company, release its claims against the Charity Hospital, and, during the continuance of its charter, furnish that institution with necessary gas and fixtures free of charge. By amendments made in 1860 its charter was extended to April 1, 1895, the exclusive privileges granted by the original charter not, however, to exist beyond the time fixed in the Act of incorporation.

By an Act approved April 20, 1870, another company, under the name of the Crescent City Gas Light Company, was incorporated. The charter provided that that company, its successors and assigns, should, for fifty years from the expiration of the charter of the New Orleans Gas Light Company have the sole and exclusive privilege of making and supplying gas lights in the City of New Orleans, by means of pipes or conduits laid in the streets, to such persons or bodies corporate as might voluntarily choose to contract for it. By a subsequent enactment, in 1873, it was given authority to issue bonds to an amount not exceeding $1,000,000, secured by mortgage of its works and property; and it [653] was declared that the charter of the New Orleans Gas Light Company should expire on April 1, 1875, from which latter date, and for the term fixed in the Act of 1870, the franchise and privileges granted to the Crescent City Gas Light Company were confirmed.

By a judgment rendered February 1, 1875, in a suit brought by the Crescent City Gas Light Company against the New Orleans Gas Light Company, and which involved their respective rights to manufacture and sell gas in New Orleans, the Supreme Court of the State held that the former company "has the sole and exclusive privilege to make and sell illuminating gas in the City of New Orleans for fifty years from 1st April, 1875;" also, that the Act of March 1, 1860, extending the charter of the New Orleans Gas Light Company from April 1, 1875, until April 1, 1895, "is unconstitutional and void," as having a title that did not declare the object of the Act. The latter Company was also enjoined from conducting business after April 1, 1875, while the other company was confirmed in its exclusive right, after that date, to manufacture and distribute gas in New Orleans. Crescent City Gas Light Co. v. New Orleans Gas Light Co. 27 La. Ann. 188.

The bill sets out the foregoing facts, and alleges that during February and March, 1875, the directors of the two Companies, by means of conferences with each other and with their respective stockholders, concluded to consolidate the two corporations under the name of the New Orleans Gas Light Company, which should hold and enjoy the rights, privileges, franchises and property of each; that they determined the amount of its capital, the number of directors, and the persons to compose a board before an election; that the two boards made an agreement, in writing, to which the owners of all the stock of either company have assented; that there has been no contestation by any stockholder of either of the two corporations of the consolidation or consolidation agreement; that "there was a formal vote, comprising more than three fifths of all owners of stock, ratifying and confirming the articles, and the agreement and certificate of consolida- [654] tion have been filed and recorded in the office of the Secretary of State;" that "the Corporation thus organized and conducting business, from the 29th of March, 1875, has manufactured and sold gas throughout New Orleans without question or opposition," supplying the city, its officers, the officers of the State, and the public generally, and collecting its monthly bills; that there has been no suit by the State or the city questioning its capacity as a corporation, or its title to all the franchises, privileges, rights, or property in its possession; that its possession of "the sole and exclusive right aforesaid has existed from the agreement of the 29th of March, 1875;" that the State regularly assessed the property of the corporation and its franchise for taxation, it by suit to pay such taxe amounting to $3,750,000, of chise is charged to be worth that the City of New Orlean ner, assessed the consolidated C quired from it the performanc tions of its charter in supplyi out the city and on the publi public buildings ever since tioned consolidation.

The defendants filed a demu the bill. The case was deter demurrer, which was sustained missed, without any mention the plea.

The circuit court was of o consolidation was entirely wi thority, and consequently tha no such Corporation as the one this suit. Upon that ground a dismissed.

The effect of the consolidati 1875, is the first question to be

By an Act of the General Ass ana of December 12, 1874, e to Authorize the Consolidation Manufacturing Corporations it is provided: "That any tw manufacturing corporations or existing under general or spe objects and business are in same nature, may amalgamate, solidate said corporations or form one consolidated compa enjoying all the rights, priv franchises and property belo and under such corporate na adopt or agree upon. Such co be made by agreement in writi the authority of the board of di assent of the owners of at lea the capital stock of each of said companies, and a certificate of consolidation, with the name o ed company, shall be filed and office of the Secretary of Stat such consolidation shall in an or impair the right of any c of said companies. In the ag solidation the number of direc solidated company shall be s capital stock may be any amou by the companies or corporatio in the articles of consolidation.

It will be observed that a co pany formed under this Act rights, privileges and franchis its constituent companies.

It is contended—and such taken by the circuit court—th nal New Orleans Gas Light Co til April 1, 1875, the exclusive facture and distribute gas in N as the like exclusive right of t Gas Light Company did not ence until that day, the latte not, when the Act of 1874 was isting" business or manufactu entitled to the privilege of co another company.

In this interpretation of the concur. The original and ame ight Company invested mportant character, ca- ly exerted prior to the tatute of 1874. By the it was authorized, after s or conduits in any of he City of New Orleans. , it was entitled to ac- ty for all the objects of ct works, purchase ma- erials, and make such quired to put it in readi- sive privilege of supply- nhabitants with gas on . After its incorpora- ade contracts, obtained ey upon bonds secured ks and property then or At the passage of the as entitled to exert the rter, except that it could 75, encroach upon the anted to the other Com- t of the latter Company, hat date have manufact- e city and to its inhabit- in the Civil Code of n all cases in which it pliedly prohibited, they nce what the law has es- , when the renunciation ts of others, and is not good." Without such ity Gas Light Company zation have engaged in stribution of gas in those w Orleans not included d company. Pontchar- yette & P. R. R. Co. 10 ese reasons, we are of ssage of the Act of 1874, le interpretation of its City Gas Light Company siness or manufacturing o "amalgamate, unite, ny like corporation hav- s in general of the same , it is not perceived that considerations of public upposed to have prompt- the legislation relating ct to the decision of the State in Fee v. The New pany, 35 La. Ann. 418, after the decree in the n passed. One of the e's rights in the consoli- tue of his ownership of ty Gas Light Company. shows that the articles efore the court, and that nsidered with reference Act of 1874. Mr. Jus- or the court, said: "On , the New Orleans Gas the Crescent City Gas rporations chartered un- te, amalgamated, united selves into one consoli- uance of the provisions al Assembly, No. 157 of t to Authorize the Con- solidation of Business or Manufacturing Corporations or Companies.' * * * All requirements of the Act were fully complied with. * * * The articles of consolidation, and the legislative Act by the authority of which they were executed, evidently present a case of complete and perfect amalgamation, the effect of which was, under American authorities, to terminate the existence of the original corporations, to create a new corporation, to transmute the members of the former into members of the latter and to operate a transfer of the property, rights, and liability of each old company to the new one. * * * These authorities, and the reason of the matter, satisfy us that plaintiff can and must look to the defendant company for the satisfaction of whatever rights he had against the Crescent City Gas Light Company, in the mode and on the terms provided in the articles of consolidation." Again: "The law conferred upon three fifths of his fellow stockholders the power to effect a consolidation without his consent, and even against his will; and he is bound by that consolidation, and by the legal effects thereof, which we have heretofore stated." If the view taken by the circuit court be correct, then the consolidation between these [658] companies could not, as adjudged by the Supreme Court of Louisiana, have affected Fee's rights, and compelled him to look to the consolidated Company for the satisfaction of his claims as a stockholder in the Crescent City Gas Light Company.

This brings us to the consideration of questions more difficult. It is contended that the right granted to the Crescent City Gas Light Company, of manufacturing and distributing illuminating gas, and now enjoyed by the consolidated Company, was abrogated to the extent that it was made exclusive by that article of the Constitution of Louisiana of 1879 which, while preserving rights, claims and contracts then existing, provided that "the monopoly features in the charter of any corporation now existing in this State, save such as may be contained in the charter of railroad companies, are hereby abolished;" and that such article is not in violation of the provision of the Constitution of the United States, which forbids a State to pass a law impairing the obligation of contracts.

These propositions have received the careful consideration which their importance demands.

It is true, as suggested in argument, that the manufacture and distribution of illuminating gas, by means of pipes or conduits placed, under legislative authority, in the streets of a town or city, is a business of a public character. Under proper management the business contributes very materially to the public convenience, while, in the absence of efficient supervision, it may disturb the comfort and endanger the health and property of the community. It also holds important relations to the public, through the facilities furnished, by the lighting of streets with gas, for the detection and prevention of crime. An English historian, contrasting the London of his day with the London of the time when its streets, supplied only with oil lamps, were scenes of nightly robberies, says that "the adventurers in gas lights did more for the prevention of crime than the government had done since the days of Alfred."

Knight, vol. 7, chap. 21, Macaulay, chap. 8. Municipal corporations constitute a part of the civil government of the State, and their streets are highways which it is the province of government by appropriate means to render safe. To that end the lighting of streets is a matter
[659] of which the public may assume control. For these reasons, and the necessity of uniform regulations for the manufacture and distribution of gas for use by the community, we are of opinion that the supplying of it to the City of New Orleans, and to its inhabitants, by the means designated in the legislation of Louisiana, was an object for which the State could rightfully make provision. Authority for the position that the supplying of gas to a city and its people may become a public purpose is found in New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 652 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 522]. That case involved the liability of a municipal corporation upon coupon bonds issued to the company which had undertaken, for a valuable consideration, to light its streets with gas. Mr. Justice Field, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "A private corporation, as well as individuals, may be employed by a city in the construction of works needed for the health, comfort, and convenience of its citizens; and though such works may be used by the corporation for its own gain, yet, as they advance the public good, the corporation may be properly aided in their construction by the city; and for that purpose its obligations may be issued, unless some constitutional or legislative provision stands in the way." Legislation of that character is not liable to the objection that it is a mere monopoly, preventing citizens from engaging in an ordinary pursuit or business open as of common right to all, upon terms of equality; for, the right to dig up the streets and other public ways of New Orleans, and place therein pipes and mains for the distribution of gas for public and private use, is a franchise, the privilege of exercising which could only be granted by the State, or by the municipal government of that city acting under legislative authority. Dillon's Municipal Corp. 3d ed. § 691; State v. Cincinnati Gas Co. 18 Ohio St. 262. See also Boston v. Richardson, 13 Allen, 146.

To the same effect is the decision of the Supreme Court of Louisiana, in Crescent City Gas Light Co. v. N. O. Gas Light Co. 27 La. Ann. 147, in which it was said: "The right to operate gas works, and to illuminate a city, is not an ancient or usual occupation of citizens generally.
[660] No one has the right to dig up the streets, and lay down gas pipes, erect lamp-posts, and carry on the business of lighting the streets and the houses of the City of New Orleans, without special authority from the sovereign. It is a franchise belonging to the State, and, in the exercise of the police power, the State could carry on the business itself or select one or several agents to do so."

It will therefore be assumed, in the further consideration of this case, that the charter of the Crescent City Gas Light Company—to whose rights and franchises the present plaintiff has succeeded—so far as it created a corporation with authority to manufacture gas and to distribute the same by means of pipes, mains and conduits, laid in the streets and other public ways of New Orleans, constituted, to use the language of this court in t aware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall.

21, L. ed. 888], "a contract
and its corporators, and withi
the Constitution prohibiting pairing the obligation of con
fore "equally protected from ference, whether the public b
exercise of its franchise, o
granted for the sole benefit o
See also Greenwood v. Freigh
[Bk. 26, L. ed. 964]; New Jer
S. 113 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 354].

But it is earnestly insisted plying of New Orleans and its gas has relation to the public
some sense, to the public heal safety, and, for that reason,
which the police power ex
competent for one Legislatu
strict the power of a subseque respect to those subjects. It claimed that the State may
the grant of exclusive privile iff; and that no agreement by ever consideration, in refer connected in any degree with fort, the public health or the constitute a contract the oblig
protected against impairmen Constitution. And this positi counsel to be justified by rec
of this court, in which the na
the police power has been con

In the Slaughter House Cas
U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 404], it police power is, from its na
any exact definition or limitat
v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 818 1079], that it is "easier to d particular cases come within
of the power than to give an
of the power itself, which wil accurate." That there is a called the police power, whic surrendered by the States, i they may, within certain lim
thing within their respectiv
upon the proper exercise
some circumstances, may d
health, the public morals, or
is conceded in all the cases.
9 Wheat. 203 [22 U. S. bk.
its broadest sense, as sometin
cludes all legislation and alm
of civil government. Barbie
U. S. 31 [Bk 28, L. ed. 924].
we may, not improperly, refer authority of the State to creat charitable institutions, and p tablishment, maintenance an
lic highways, turnpike roads,
ferries and telegraph lines, a swamps. Definitions of the p however, be taken subject to the State cannot, in its exer
pose whatever, encroach up the General Government, or secured by the supreme law

Illustrations of interference authority of the General Go legislation—which was def
ground that it was enacted

cases where enactments uction of foreign paupers, l persons, were held to be conflicting, by their necesffect, with the paramount ss to regulate commerce , and among the several etc. v. Mayor of New York, 3, L. ed. 543], the court, ice Miller, while declining the absence of action by an, or how far they may, lation protect themselves rs, vagrants, criminals and iving from foreign counnition of the police power, r its use can authorize a regard to a subject matter ded exclusively to the disy the Constitution." City U. S. 276 [Bk. 23, L. ed. ad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 1], Mr. Justice Strong, decf the court, said that "the te cannot obstruct foreign ate commerce beyond the rcise; and, under color of n its scope cannot be seof the protection afforded itution."

er, according to its largest ed in its exercise by the ,is further shown by those of exclusive privileges reays and bridges over navseen sustained as contracts which are fully protected y state enactments.

lors v. The Hoboken Co., 1 bk. 17, L. ed. 571], it was of New Jersey empowerners to contract for the ver the Hackensack River, ly that the "said contract he parties contracting as of New Jersey," but that ul "for any person or perect any other bridge over er for ninety-nine years," obligation could not be f the State. Mr. Justice opinion of the court (after rties who built the bridge ctment of the Legislature hich authorized the con- no other bridge should be ohibition against the erecvas the necessary and only them the benefit of their t this they would not have in building the bridges, h needed, and which could ithout some such security sufficient return for the On the faith of this enact- e money necessary to erect acts and promises on the er are wanting in no elestitute a contract."

Bridge, 3 Wall. 51 [70 U. the question was, whether a company authorizing it a bridge across a river in New York for the accommodation of the public in consideration for which it was given a right to take certain tolls, and providing that it should be unlawful for anyone to erect a bridge, or establish a ferry, within a distance of two miles on that river, either above or below that bridge, constituted a contract within the meaning of the Constitution Under authority of a subsequent statute, another company erected a bridge across the same river, within a few rods above the old one, to the injury of the business of the latter. The argument was strenuously pressed that while the Legislature could dispose of all matters properly the subject of bargain, it had no authority to dispose of the right of passing a great river for four miles. The court held that the first company's charter was a contract between it and the State, within the protection of the Constitution of the United States, and that the charter to the last company was, therefore, null and void. Mr. Justice Davis, delivering the opinion of the court, said that if anything was settled by an unbroken chain of decisions in the federal courts, it was, that an Act of incorporation was a contract between the State and the stockholders, "a departure from which now would involve dangers to society that cannot be foreseen, would shock the sense of justice of the country, unhinge its business interests, and weaken, if not destroy, that respect which has always been felt for the judicial department of the government." It was also observed, in language applicable to the present case, in some respects: "The purposes to be attained are generally beyond the ability of individual enterprise, and can only be accomplished through the aid of associated wealth. This will not be risked unless privileges are given and securities furnished in an Act of incorporation. The wants of the public are often so imperative that a duty is imposed on the government to provide for them; and, as experience has proved that a State should not directly attempt to do this, it is necessary to confer on others the faculty of doing what the sovereign power is unwilling to undertake. The Legislature, therefore, says to public spirited citizens: 'If you will embark, with your time, money and skill, in an enterprise which will accommodate the public necessities, we will grant to you for a limited period, or in perpetuity, privileges that will justify the expenditure of your money, and the employment of your time and skill.' Such a grant is a contract, with mutual considerations; and justice and good policy alike require that the protection of the law should be assured to it." See also West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 531 [47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 544]. [664]

The same principle was declared by the Supreme Court of Louisiana in Pontchartrain R. R. Co. v. Orleans Navigation Co. 15 La. 413, where Chief Justice Martin said: "In the same manner as Congress may reward the discoverer of a new invention or mode of constructing roads, by an exclusive privilege, the Legislature may reward those who employ their capital and industry in doubtful enterprises, for the construction of a railway between two points, which may be of great utility to the public, though the success of the enterprise may be precarious." See also Pontchartrain R. R. Co. v. N. O., etc., R. Co. 11 La. Ann. 253; Pontchartrain R. R.

Co. v. Lafayette & P. R.R. Co. ubi supra. And in Crescent City Gas Light Co. v. N. O. Gas Light Co. the court said: "As the Legislature had the right in 1835 to grant the sole and exclusive privilege to the defendant company to make and vend gas in New Orleans for forty years, the Legislature of 1870 had the same power to confer on the plaintiff the same privilege for fifty years from the termination of the grant to defendant. We, therefore, conclude that the grant of the monopoly complained of does not violate the Constitution and is valid."

Numerous other cases could be cited as establishing the doctrine that the State may by contract restrict the exercise of some of its most important powers. We particularly refer to those in which it is held that an exemption from [665] taxation, for a valuable consideration at the time advanced, or for services to be thereafter performed, constitutes a contract within the meaning of the Constitution. Asylum v. New Orleans, 105 U. S. 368 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1130]; Home of the Friendless, 8 Wall. 430 [75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 495]; New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 166 [11 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 303]; Bank of Ohio v. Knoop, 16 How. 376 [57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 980]; Gordon v. Appeal Tax Court, 3 How. 133 [44 U. S. bk. 11, L. ed. 529]; Wilmington R. R. v. Reid, 13 Wall. 266 [80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 569]; Humphrey v. Pegues, 16 Wall. 248, 249 [83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 327]; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 689 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 561].

If the State can, by contract, restrict the exercise of her power to construct and maintain highways, bridges and ferries, by granting to a particular corporation the exclusive right to construct and operate a railroad within certain lines and between given points, or to maintain a bridge or operate a ferry over one of her navigable streams within designated limits; if she may restrict the exercise of the power of taxation, by granting exemption from taxation to particular individuals and corporations, it is difficult to perceive upon what ground we can deny her authority—when not forbidden by her own organic law—in consideration of money to be expended and important services to be rendered for the promotion of the public comfort, the public health, or the public safety, to grant a franchise, to be exercised exclusively by those who thus do for the public what the State might undertake to perform either herself or by subordinate municipal agencies.

The former adjudications of this court, upon which counsel mainly rely, do not declare any different doctrine, or justify the conclusion for which the defendant contends.

In Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 32 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 991], one of the questions considered was, whether the charter of a private corporation, authorizing it to engage in the manufacture of malt liquors, and, as incidental thereto, to dispose of the product, constituted a contract protected against subsequent legislation prohibiting the manufacture of liquors within the State. The beer company claimed the right, under its charter, to manufacture and sell beer without limit as to time, and without reference to any exigencies in the health or morals of the community requiring such manufacture to cease. [666] It was decided that while the company acquired by its charter the capacity, as a corporation, to engage in the manuf liquors, its business was at all t
the same governmental control
conducted by individuals; and lature could not devest itself o
such appropriate means, applica porations and individuals, as its d devise, to protect the lives, he
erty of the people, or to prese
and the public morals. The pr
ment of which the beer compe
was held to be a mere police re
the State could establish, even no reservation of authority to a
its charter.

The case of Fertilizing Co. v.
U. S. 663 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1037],
on by counsel. But a careful e
show that it does not militate ag
here expressed. A fertilizing c
been authorized by its charter t
maintain south of a specified County, Illinois, chemical and manufacturing and converting into an agricultural fertilizer a ical products, claimed that its tuted a contract the obligation o
paired by an ordinance of the V
Park, where its works were e
hibiting under penalties the ca
through its streets from Chica pany's place of business. The based upon a statute passed a
the company's charter, investing thorities with power to define sances injurious to the public regulate, prohibit or license
trades or callings, and "all esta places where nauseous, offensi
some business was carried on."
proof that the company's factory
durable nuisance to the inhabi
miles around its location; that th
tolerable, producing nausea, di sickness to the people; that it value of the property, and was mense annoyance;" and that th
of putrid animal matter by
through the streets of Hyde P
sive in a high degree both to si
The decision was, that the St
power to protect the public hea
the nuisance created by the c
ness, notwithstanding its works
lished within the general localit
its charter; and, consequently,
could, at its discretion, amend Hyde Park and remove the rest
authority to abate nuisances, o
power to regulate or prohibit sarily injurious to the public he

The same principles underlie
Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S.
ed. 1079], in which it was held cepting a grant of a lottery do implied understanding that the sovereign capacity and throug constituted agencies, may resun
when the public good shall req
be paid for or not," the only ri
the grantee being "a suspension
ernmental rights in his favor,
drawal at will." The business, f

ct clause of the Constitu-
s declared by the court to bling, wrong in its influ-
"disturb the checks and ered community." Touching the privilege of engag-
at character, the Chief Jus-
opinion of the court, said:
n bargain away the public morals. The people them-much less their servants.
both these subjects of gov-
continuing, in its nature;
with as the special exigen-
may require. Government
view to their preservation,
elf of the power to provide purpose the largest legis-llowed, and the discretion
with any more than the

to Butchers Union Co. v.
U. S. 746 [Bk. 28, L. ed.
for the proposition that
e of making a contract pro-
l Constitution, in reference
n the reach of her police sense. But no such prinished. In that case the r a grant in 1869 to a pri-
he exclusive privilege of ck landing and slaughter
in part of the territory of the City of New Orleans—
ers in that city to be done
erected by that corpora-State, or the municipal ty, acting under her aur opening to general com-
aintain slaughter houses
a. The majority of the House Cases, having dent was merely a police
remove from the thickly New Orleans "noxious
arge and offensive collecessarily incident to the
of a large city," and that at rested upon the same interdict in the midst of wholesome trades, opera-
enses, building with com-
the burial of the dead,
case that the obligations
t arise out of such a por from the court saying ot make a valid contract
tter whatever within the power, according to its nguage was: "While we
that the Legislature can on no subject embraced
n of the police power, we
to two subjects so em-
contract, limit the exer-
to the prejudice of the y are the public health
s. The preservation of the best interests of so-
a wise policy forbids the est itself of the power to servation of health and ne." In that case, four members of this court, while assenting to the doctrine that the State cannot limit the exercise of her powers to the prejudice of the public health and the public morals, concurred in the judgment, upon the general ground, among others, that the Act of 1869, giving exclusive privileges to the company, the validity of whose charter in that respect was the matter determined in the Slaughter House Cases, was not, [669] in any just or legal sense, an exercise of the police power for the preservation of the public health, but under the pretense simply of exerting that power, was an invasion of the right of citizens, other than those interested in that particular company, to engage in an ordinary business, open to everyone upon terms of perfect equality, although, at all times, it was subject to such regulations in respect of the locality and the mode in which it should be conducted as the State might establish.

The principle upon which the decisions in Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, Stone v. Mississippi, and Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Live-Stock Landing Co. rest is that one Legislature cannot so limit the discretion of its successors that they may not enact such laws as are necessary to protect the public health or the public morals. That principle, it may be observed, was announced with reference to particular kinds of private business which, in whatever manner conducted, were detrimental to the public health or the public morals. It is fairly the result of those cases that statutory authority given by the State, to corporations or individuals to engage in a particular private business attended by such results, while it protects them for the time against public prosecution, does not constitute a contract preventing the withdrawal of such authority, or the granting of it to others.

The present case involves no such considerations. We have seen, the manufacture of gas, and its distribution for public and private use by means of pipes laid, under legislative authority, in the streets and ways of a city, is not an ordinary business in which everyone may engage, but is a franchise belonging to the government, to be granted, for the accomplishment of public objects, to whomsoever, and upon what terms, it pleases. It is a business of a public nature, and meets a public necessity for which the State may make provision. It is one which, so far from affecting the public injuriously, has become one of the most important [670] agencies of civilization for the promotion of the public convenience and the public safety.

It is to be presumed that the Legislature of Louisiana, when granting the exclusive privileges in question, deemed it unwise to burden the public with the cost of erecting and maintaining gas works sufficient to meet the necessities of the municipal government and the people of New Orleans, and that the public would be best protected, as well as best served, through a single corporation invested with the power, and charged with the duty, of supplying gas of the requisite quality and in such quantity as the public needs demanded. In order to accomplish what, in its judgment, the public welfare required, the Legislature deemed it necessary that some inducement be offered to private capitalists to undertake, at their own cost, that work. That inducement was furnished in the grant of an exclusive privilege of manufacturing and distributing gas by means of pipes laid in the streets of New Orleans for a fixed period, during which the company would be protected against competition from corporations or companies engaged in like business. Without that grant it was inevitable, either that the cost of supplying the city and its people would have been made, in some form, a charge upon the public, or that the public would have been deprived of the security in person, property and business which comes from well-lighted streets.

It is not our province to declare that the Legislature unwisely exercised the discretion with which it was invested. Nor are we prepared to hold that the State was incapable—her authority in the premises not being, at the time, limited by her own organic law—of providing for supplying gas to one of her municipalities and its inhabitants, by means of a valid contract with a private corporation of her own creation. We may repeat here what was said by Chief Justice Taney in Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 428 [57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 1002], in reference to the authority of a State to limit the exercise of its power of taxation: "But whether such contract should be made or not is exclusively for the consideration of the State. It is the exercise of an undoubted power of sovereignty which has not been surrendered by the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, and over which this court has no control. For it can never be maintained in any tribunal in this country that the people of a State, in the exercise of the powers of sovereignty, can be restrained within narrower limits than that fixed by the Constitution of the United States, upon the ground that they make contracts ruinous or injurious to themselves. The principle that they are the best judges of what is for their own interest is the foundation of our political institutions. It is equally clear, upon the same principle, that [671] the people of a State may, by the form of government they adopt, confer on their public servants and representatives all the power and rights of sovereignty which they themselves possess; or may restrict them within such limits as they deem best and safest for the public interest." After observing that the power of the State to make contracts may be indiscreetly and, for the public, injuriously exercised, he proceeds: "Yet if the contract was within the scope of the authority conferred by the Constitution of the State, it is, like any other contract made by competent authority, binding upon the parties. Nor can the people or their representatives, by any act of theirs afterwards, impair its obligation. When the contract is made the Constitution of the United States acts upon it and declares that it shall not be impaired, and makes it the duty of this court to carry it into execution. That duty must be performed."

With reference to the contract in this case, it may be said that it is not, in any legal sense, to the prejudice of the public health or the public safety. It is none the less a contract because the manufacture and distribution of gas, when not subjected to proper supervision, may possibly work injury to the public; for the grant of exclusive privileges to the plaintiff does not restrict the power of the State, or of t ipal government of New Orleans ac authority for that purpose, to establi force regulations which are not in with the essential rights granted by charter, which may be necessary fo tection of the public against injur arising from the want of due care i duct of its business, or from an im of the streets in laying gas pipes, o failure of the grantee to furnish gas quired quality and amount. The con prohibition upon state laws impairi ligation of contracts does not restrict of the State to protect the public public morals, or the public safety, or the other may be involved in the of such contracts. Rights and priv ing from contracts with a State are regulations for the protection of t health, the public morals and the pul in the same sense, and to the same ex all contracts and all property, whetl by natural persons or corporations.

Whatever therefore in the manu distribution of gas in the City of Ne proves to be injurious to the public public comfort, or the public safety, withstanding the exclusive grant to be prohibited by legislation, or by ordinance passed under legislative It cannot be said with propriety that that grant is to obstruct the State in cise of her power to provide for the tection, health and safety. The art State Constitution of 1879 in relati nopolies is not, in any legal sense, of the police power for the preserva public health, or the promotion of safety; for, the exclusiveness of a gr relation whatever to the public healt public safety. These consideratio upon the nature of the business which the grant relates, and not at al inquiry whether a franchise is exerci rather than by many. The monop only evinces a purpose to reverse previously pursued of granting to p porations franchises accompanied by privileges, as a means of accomplish objects. That change of policy, manifested by constitutional enact not affect contracts which, when en were within the power of the Stat and which, consequently, were against impairment, in respect of th tion, by the Constitution of the Uni A State can no more impair the oblig contract by her organic laws than by enactment; for her Constitution is a the meaning of the contract clause tional Constitution. Railroad Co. v 10 Wall. 511 [77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 Ho U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 1002]; Sedgw & Const. Law, 637. And the obliga contracts is as fully protected by that i against impairment by legislation a tracts between individuals exclusiv Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164 [11 U L. ed. 302]; Providence Bank v. Billi 514 [29 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 939]; Green 8 Wheat. 1 [21 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 5

How. 190 [51 U. S. bk. 13,
New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358

t of the State, the public subserved by an abandon-of giving exclusive privi-
, other than railroad com-ion of services to be per-
the public, the way is open ent of that result, with re-
whose contracts with the
by that change in her ghts and franchises which upon the faith of such con-
by the public, upon just company, under the State's main. West River Bridge
; Richmond, etc. R. R. Co.
13 How. 71, 83 [54 U. S.
; Boston Water-Power Co.
R. Corp. 23 Pick. 360, 393;
R. Co. v. Salem & Lowell R.
In that way the plighted
ill be kept with those who vestments upon the assur-
at the contract with them

he bill of complaint should
. Upon its averments the itled to a decree perpetual-
fendants, and each of them,
s and employees, from the istribution of gas in New pipes, mains and conduits
e streets and other public hat city.
ing the bill is reversed, and
for further proceedings in opinion.

nney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.
97.

WATER WORKS COM-NY, Appt.,
v.
T C. RIVERS.

porter's ed., 674-683.)

—obligation of contracts—
charter of New Orleans
pany—monopoly feature of.

he New Orleans Water Works
that corporation the exclu-lying New Orleans and its inand wholesome water from
by means of mains and pipes
, public places, and lands of
o the city council authority to contiguous to that stream, the pes to the river, exclusively utes a contract within the tract clause of the Constituates.
e present Constitution of Lou-Justice HARLAN.

---

al law; obligation of contracts; Fletcher v. Peck, 10 U. S. (6
note.
ant of exclusive privileges; varo preceding cases. See, also,
th ed., 339-345.

isiana abrogating the monopoly features of existing corporations, other than railroad corporations, is inoperative in respect of the charter of this Company, which was granted before the adoption of that instrument.

3. An ordinance of the city council of New Orleans authorizing the lessee of the St. Charles Hotel in that city, distant many blocks from the Mississippi River, to supply that hotel with water by means of pipes and mains laid in the streets of that city, is a violation of the Company's contract with the State, and therefore void.

4. The principles announced in New Orleans Gas Light Company v. Louisiana Light and Heat Producing and Manufacturing Company (ante), held to govern this case.

[No. 539.]

Submitted Nov. 20, 1885. Decided Dec. 7, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. J. R. Beckwith, for appellant.

Mr. G. L. Hall, for appellee.

Mr. A. Goldthwaite, counsel for the appellee in the case of the New Orleans Water Works Company v. Louisiana Sugar Refining Company, leave having been granted, also filed a brief in support of the position of the appellee.

[674]

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was commenced by bill in equity filed by the New Orleans Water Works Company, a corporation of Louisiana, against Robert C. Rivers, a citizen of the same State. A demurrer having been interposed and sustained, the bill was dismissed. The present appeal raises the question whether the plaintiff is entitled, under the allegations of its bill, to the relief asked.

The general object of the suit is to obtain a decree perpetually enjoining the defendant from laying pipes, mains or conduits in the streets or public ways of New Orleans, for the purpose of supplying the St. Charles Hotel in that city, distant six or seven blocks from the Mississippi River, with water from that stream. The plaintiff rests its claim to relief upon the ground that it had, by valid contract with the State and city, the exclusive right, for the full term of fifty years from March 31, 1877, of supplying the City of New Orleans and its inhabitants—other than those contiguous to the Mississippi River—with water from that stream, by means of pipes and conduits placed in the streets of that city; and that the obligation of that contract was protected by the Constitution of the United States against impairment by any enactment of the State. The defendant bases his right to proceed with the construction of pipes, mains and conduits upon an ordinance of the common council of New Orleans, adopted November 15, 1882, enacted, as he contends, in pursuance of authority conferred by the Constitution and laws of Louisiana.

[675]

The case made by the bill, the allegations of which are admitted by the demurrer, is substantially as follows:

By an Act of the Legislature of Louisiana, approved April 1, 1833, the Commercial Bank of Louisiana was incorporated. It is stated by counsel to have been at that time the policy of the State to attach, as a condition of all banking charters, the construction of some work of public utility. At any rate, it appears that this bank was invested with authority to purchase and hold property necessary to carry into complete effect the object of its charter, which was declared to be "the furnishing of the city with good and wholesome water;" that it was given "the exclusive privilege," from and after the date of its charter, of "supplying the city and inhabitants of New Orleans and its faubourgs with water from the Mississippi River, by means of pipes and conduits, and for erecting, constructing, or working of any necessary engine;" that, to that end, it could lay and place any number of conduits, pipes and aqueducts, on or over any of the lands or streets of New Orleans and its faubourgs; that the city might, within a prescribed time, subscribe for five thousand shares of the capital stock of the Company, not subject to deduction, to be [676] paid for by city bonds, redeemable in forty years, and bearing an annual interest not exceeding 5 per centum, payable half yearly; and might, at any time after the expiration of thirty-five years from the passage of the Act, purchase the water works constructed by the bank.

The city made the subscription authorized by the Act, issuing its bonds in payment therefor; and the bank constructed an extended system of water works, which it managed and operated for the full term of thirty-five years, at the end of which period, in 1888, the city, exercising the privilege reserved by the State, took possession of and purchased the water works at the appraised value of $2,000,000, paying, for the bank's interest, in city bonds, redeemable in forty years, the sum of $1,393,400. The balance of the appraised value represented the city's interest by original subscription, and by purchase subsequently from stockholders. Upon such payment being made, the bank, as it was bound to do, transferred to the city an absolute, complete title to the water works property, and to all the rights, privileges and immunities which it possessed.

The city managed and controlled the property for several years, during which period it became seriously embarrassed in its finances. That it might be relieved from such embarrassment, the Legislature of Louisiana, in 1877, passed an Act entitled "An Act to enable the City of New Orleans to promote the public health, and to afford greater security against fire, by the establishment of a corporation to be called the New Orleans Water Works Company, to authorize the said Company to issue bonds for the purpose of extending and improving the said works, and to furnish the inhabitants of the City of New Orleans an adequate supply of pure and wholesome water, and to permit holders of the water works bonds to convert them into stock, and provide for the liquidation of the bonded and floating debt of the City of New Orleans."

By that Act, the New Orleans Water W rks Company was created a corporation, with a capital stock of $2,000,000, to which the mayor of New Orleans was directed, as soon after the election of directors as the city council should determine, to transfer the water works and all the property app
The Company was required, i
its organization, to issue to t
the amount of $606,600, as fu
subject to assessment, and one for every one hundred dollars
bonds which the city had ther
and extinguished by paymen
otherwise—the residue of the ceived and surrendered to the efit of the holders of water w
might elect to exchange them
Company, and the bonds so e canceled.

The Act provided, among o
the Water Works Company sh
sess the privileges acquired b
the bank; that it shall have
from the passage of this Act,
privilege of supplying the City
and its inhabitants with wate
sissippi, or any other stream o
or conduits, and for erecting a
any necessary works or engi
for that purpose;" may purch lands or lots of ground, and dykes, mounds or reservoirs quired for securing and carryi
ply of pure water to said city
ants;" for which purpose i place conduits, pipes or aq
streets, public places and la
taking care not to obstruct co
circulation; that the city migh
the pipes and plugs of the Con
or thereafter to be laid, free
for the extinguishment of fir
the streets, and for the use of ings, public markets and ch
tions; that the Company shou
any charge, for public purpose
of the most approved construc
each square where a main pip
wherever main pipes are lai duty of the Company to supp
the purposes mentioned, at a
the continuance of its charte
tion whereof its franchises an
in accordance with its charter
from taxation, state, municipa
that immediately after its Company shall proceed to the works and pipes, sufficient in nish a full and adequate suppl
drawn from the Mississippi Riv
as might be judged most expe
works and pipes to be con
twelve months from the pass
and be completed within fou
give an adequate supply of w
ple of New Orleans, exclusi District; that, if the work was scribed, the Company should clusive privileges granted to might contract with anyone el
of water, and appropriate the Company; that, after the co
new works and pipes, the C
from time to time, as the war
lation required, and when th
enue on the cost of such extens 10 per centum, extend its w
the entire limits of the city

established; and that any any to comply with these ork a forfeiture of its charct gave the Company the
of charges for water, that the condition that the net exceed 10 per cent per piration of fifty years from the Company, the city was
of buying the works, pipes,
to be fixed by experts; and,
purchase, the Company's pso facto extended for fifty without any exclusive priv-pply water," according to e charter.

thority to increase its capi-
any was empowered to bor-
purpose of improving and
and increasing the supply
which end it might issue
not exceeding $2,000,000,
bearing such rate of inter-
might determine, secured,
st, by a mortgage of all the
and to be acquired, and ompany, including its fran-ation, such mortgage to be ng mortgage until the payecured by it, without reinonds not to be disposed of,
proved by the city council.
vided that the Company
or pay any dividends until works were completed and time, except in cash, and
e net receipts, after pay-operation and interest on

d with the declaration, that hall be so construed as to uncil from granting to any contiguous to the river, the pipes to the river, exclusivewn use."

nended in 1878, but in no t to be here noticed, except of the Company from state
ted.

Orleans accepted the pro-ns of the Act of 1877, and amount of stock authorized
of bonds also subscribed
t of $500,000, and, as re-
their bonds to the city,
d, leaving to the latter, in
, the stock so subscribed by
y, April 9, 1878, the city Water Works Company, its
ns, all of the before men-
bject to its right to repur-
provided in the foregoing
the property was controlled
e Company. In order to imposed by its charter, it ns of money, raised by the bonds, to the amount of $300,000 were sold, and large portion thereof, was ging and improving the
to meet the demand for the city and its inhabitants.
any, according to the allegations of the bill, was executing in good faith the requirements of its charter, a new State Constitution was adopted, commonly known as the Constitution of 1879. It contained, among other clauses, the following: "Art. 258. All rights, actions, prosecutions, claims and contracts, as well of individual as of bodies corporate, and all laws in force at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, and not inconsistent therewith, shall continue as if the said Constitution had not been adopted But the monopoly features in the charter of any corporation now existing in the State, save such as may be contained in the charters of railroad companies, are hereby repealed." Under the sanction of that constitutional provision, the city council of New Orleans passed, on November 15, 1882, an ordinance which provided "that Robert E. Rivers, or the lessee of the St. Charles Hotel, of the City of New Orleans, be allowed the right of way and privilege to lay a water-pipe from the Mississippi River, at any point opposite the head of Common or Gravier Streets, through either of these streets to said hotel, its front and side streets, with all needed attachments and appurtenances, and to distribute said water through said hotel as said Rivers, or lessee, may desire from said pipes, the pipes to be put at a depth of three feet under the surface of said streets, to be of iron, and of not more than — inches in diameter; that the said pipes and all attachments thereto, in said streets, be arranged and placed under the supervision and approval of the city surveyor; the pavement and streets to be relaid to the satisfaction of the administrator of improvements and city surveyor." [680]

The New Orleans Water Works Company was in existence before the adoption of the present Constitution of Louisiana, one of the articles of which, as we have seen, repeals the monopoly features in the charters of all then existing corporations other than railroad companies. This case is, therefore, controlled by the decision just rendered in New Orleans Gas Light Co. v. Louisiana Light and Heat Producing and Manufacturing Co. [ante, 516]. The two are not to be distinguished upon principle; for if it was competent for the State, before the adoption of her present Constitution, as we have held it was, to provide for supplying the City of New Orleans and its people with illuminating gas by means of pipes, mains, and conduits placed, at the cost of a private corporation, in its public ways, it was equally competent for her to make a valid contract with a private corporation for supplying, by the same means, pure and wholesome water for like use in the same city. The right to dig up and use the streets and alleys of New Orleans for the purpose of placing pipes and mains to supply the city and its inhabitants with water is a franchise belonging to the State, which she could grant to such persons or corporations, and upon such terms, as she deemed best for the public interest. And as the object to be attained was a public one, for which the State could make provision by legislative enactment, the grant of the franchise could be accompanied with such exclusive privileges to the grantee, in respect of the subject of the grant, as in the judgment of the legislative department would best promote the public health and the public [681]

comfort, or the protection of public and private property. Such was the nature of the plaintiff's grant, which, not being at the time prohibited by the Constitution of the State, was a contract, the obligation of which cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation, or by a change in her organic law It is as much a contract, within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States, as a grant to a private corporation for a valuable consideration, or in consideration of public services to be rendered by it, of the exclusive right to construct and maintain a railroad within certain lines and between given points, or a bridge over a navigable stream within a prescribed distance above and below a designated point.

It is idle to insist that this contract was prejudicial either to the public health or to the public safety, as might, perhaps, be said to be the case if the State, after making it, was prevented from exercising any control whatever over the matter of supplying the city and its inhabitants with water. But, notwithstanding the exclusive privileges granted to the plaintiff, the power remains with the State, or with the municipal government of New Orleans, acting under legislative authority, to make such regulations as will secure to the public the uninterrupted use of the streets, as well as prevent the distribution of water unfit for use, and provide for such a continuous supply, in quantity, as protection to property, public and private, may require. In the case just decided we said: "The constitutional prohibition upon state laws impairing the obligation of contracts does not restrict the power of the State to protect the public health, the public morals, or the public safety, as the one or the other may be involved in the execution of such contracts. [682] Rights and privileges arising from contracts with a State are subject to regulations for the protection of the public health, the public morals and the public safety, in the same sense as are all contracts and all property, whether owned by natural persons or corporations."

The contract with the Water Works Company does not interfere with, but expressly reserves, the riparian rights of anyone "contiguous to the river." To that class the appellee does not belong; for his hotel is distant many blocks from the Mississippi River, and others own and occupy the intervening property. Nor does the contract assume to interfere with the right of any person or corporation, even when not contiguous to that stream, to supply their places of business or reside therefrom, obtained otherwise mains, or conduits laid in the the city. The restriction, imp tract upon the use by others t the public streets and ways, fo is not one of which the appelle He was not thereby restrained or liberty he had before; for h without the consent of the gov up the streets and alleys of the pose of conveying water to his he question the authority of th to a private corporation the e public streets and alleys for suc means of accomplishing the p supplying one of her municipa habitants with pure and wh The permission given to the city council to lay pipes in the purpose of conveying water plainly in derogation of the Sta appellant; for if that body ca use of the public ways to him, like use to all other citizens and of every kind, thereby material if not destroying, the value o contract, upon the faith of w pended large sums of money, an ices to the public which might been performed by the State o public expense.

Without discussing the aut to in the other case, or repeat considerations there stated, equally applicable here, we are the court below erred in sus murrer to the bill. Under its plaintiff was entitled to a dec restraining the defendant fro conduits, or mains in the publi Orleans for the purpose of c from the Mississippi River to common with all corporations citizens of New Orleans, he m contract which the State made iff; for such is the mandate tion of the United States.

The decree is reversed, and the for further proceedings in conf opinion.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk,

END OF VOL. 115.

1-25, 29 L. 319, PACIFIC RAILWAY REMOVAL CASES.

al of causes.— Corporations of the United States, created ts of Congress, are entitled, as such, to remove to Circuit uits brought against them in State courts, under removal rch 3, 1875, pp. 11-17.

med in Butler v. National Home, 144 U. S. 66, 36 L. 349, 582, Texas, etc., Ry. v. Cox, 145 U. S. 601, 36 L. 832, 12 S. Allen v. Texas, etc., Ry., 25 Fed. 513, People v. Colorado ., 42 Fed. 639, Supreme Lodge v. Hill, 76 Fed. 471, 42 U. 200, United States, etc., Co. v. Gallegos, 89 Fed. 771, 61 U. 8, and Texas, etc., Ry. v. Bloom, 85 Tex. 285, 20 S. W. 135. l in Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 257, 29 L. 390, 6 S. Ct. ng term "suit arising under Constitution or laws of United Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 589, 32 L. 544, 9 S. Ct. holding Federal jurisdiction on ground of diverse citizen- t appear from record; McNulta v. Lochridge, 141 U. S. . 799, 12 S. Ct. 13, holding adverse State court judgment m of Federal receiver, reviewable by Supreme Court; Lux- rth River Bridge Co., 153 U. S. 529, 38 L. 810, 14 S. Ct. 892, Congress may create corporation to build bridge over navi- ters between States; Texas, etc., Ry. v. Cody, 166 U. S. 41 L. 1133, 1134, 17 S. Ct. 704, 705, holding Federal corpo- fendant entitled to removal, although described in com- State corporation; Sonnentheil v. Mœrlein Brewing Co., . 405, 19 S. Ct. 234, holding suit against Federal marshal, ng under United States laws; State v. Bradley, 26 Fed. ing point once decided by Federal Supreme Court presents al question; Hendee v. Connecticut, etc., Ry., 26 Fed. 678, suit in behalf of corporation created by Congress, arises vs of United States; Briscoe v. Southern Kan. Ry., 40 Fed. ing Federal court has jurisdiction over suits by or against authorized by Congress to operate in Indian country; Grant ne Nat. Bank, 47 Fed. 673, holding suit to control official of national bank receiver, arises under Federal laws; . Windsor Nat. Bank, 56 Fed. 80, 5 U. S. App. 423, holding bond of national bank cashier involves Federal question; Drake, 70 Fed. 882, holding action for false imprisonment al marshal removable; Lund v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 78 Fed. ing suit against corporation of plaintiff's State, joined with Federal corporation, removable; State of Arkansas v. Kansas T. Coal Co., 96 Fed. 355, 357, holding cause removable where rec show that either party claims right under Federal Constitutio laws; Austin v. Northern Pac. Ry., 34 Minn. 474, 26 N. W. allowing amendment of complaint in action involving Federal poration by increasing demand to jurisdictional amount for moval; Texas, etc., Ry. v. Gay, 86 Tex. 582, 26 S. W. 601, 25 L. A. 54, holding jurisdiction of Federal court over case to which F eral corporation is party, will be presumed; Texas, etc., Ry. v. W son, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 43 S. W. 1061, holding principles appl ble to diverse citizenship may be applied to Federal corporati Cited generally in Pacific Gas Imp. Co. v. Ellert, 64 Fed. 429, Caples v. Texas, etc., Ry., 67 Fed. 10; arguendo, in California v. cific Ry. Co., 127 U. S. 40, 32 L. 157, 8 S. Ct. 1080, Northern P Ry. v. Austin, 135 U. S. 317, 34 L. 219, 10 S. Ct. 759, and Rob v. Northern Pac. Ry., 158 U. S. 22, 39 L. 881, 15 S. Ct. 763.

Distinguished in Leather, etc., Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 780, L. 818, 7 S. Ct. 778, holding, since act of 1885, suits by or agai national banks not necessarily removable; Petri v. Commercial N Bank, 142 U. S. 648, 35 L. 1145, 12 S. Ct. 326, and Ex parte Jo 164 U. S. 692, 41 L. 601, 17 S. Ct. 223, holding Federal jurisdict over action by and against national banks depends upon dive citizenship; Colorado Cent. Min. Co. v. Turck, 150 U. S. 143, 37 1032, 14 S. Ct. 37, and Tennessee v. Union, etc., Bank, 152 U. 460, 38 L. 514, 14 S. Ct. 656 (but see dissenting opinion in 152 U 468, 38 L. 516, 14 S. Ct. 659), denying Federal jurisdiction of as arising under Federal Constitution, unless it appears from c plaint; Oregon, etc., Ry. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. 496, 40 L. 1050, S. Ct. 870, holding, on application for removal, Federal chara of defendant corporation must appear from complaint; Seattle, e Ry. v. State, 52 Fed. 596, holding Federal corporation joined as fendant cannot remove, where it does not appear concerned in litigation; State of Kansas v. Atchison, etc., Ry., 77 Fed. 343, hold action not removable unless fact that it arises under Federal la appears from plaintiff's statement of his own claim; Follett v. lingbast, 82 Fed. 241, denying right of removal on ground that c arises under Federal laws, where disputed amount did not exc $2,000; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Martin, 59 Kan. 447, 53 Pac. 464, h ing Federal corporation not entitled to removal unless its co fendant joins in petition; Conlon v. Oregon, etc., Ry., 21 Or. 464, Pac. 501, holding rule inapplicable to corporations organized territory and afterwards granted privileges by Congress; State Southern Pac. Ry., 23 Or. 431, 31 Pac. 962, holding defendant a Federal corporation for purposes of removal.

Corporations.— Railroad company formed under acts of C gress, by consolidation of various State and United States corpo tions, is at least a de facto corporation, and its existence will be inquired into collaterally, p. 16.

ed in Oregon Short Line, etc., Ry. v. Skottowe, 162 U. S. . 1049, 16 S. Ct. 869, and Allen v. Texas, etc., Ry., 25 Fed. ling, by consolidation of Federal with State corporation, oses no rights as such; United States v. Stanford, 70 Fed. J. S. App. 68, holding stockholders of Central Pacific rail- individually liable to government for bonds advanced to on; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Commissioners, 36 Kan. 128, 12 , reaffirming holding; dissenting opinion in Central Pac. alifornia, 162 U. S. 165, 40 L. 928, 16 S. Ct. 794, majority property of Federal corporation taxable by State through hise.

al of causes.— Objection that removal petition was unveri- o delay in filing it, is waived if not made at the time, p. 17. ed in Martin v. Baltimore, etc., Ry., 151 U. S. 683, 38 L. . Ct. 537, holding objection to Federal jurisdiction because petition was filed too late, waived if not taken until trial al court.

al of causes.— Missouri proceeding before mayor and jury, ain value of land condemned for widening street, is not a in meaning of removal acts; hence, petition for removal, ling appeal therefrom to State court, is not too late, p. 18. ed in Delaware County v. Diebold Safe Co., 133 U. S. 487, , 10 S. Ct. 403, holding claim against county, appealed from oners to County Court, removable before trial in latter; County v. Rich, 135 U. S. 474, 34 L. 199, 10 S. Ct. 653, hold- al from tax assessment, to court acting as non-judicial on, not a suit for removal purposes; In re Chicago, 64 , 901, 903, holding assessment proceedings for municipal nent, not a suit; Sugar Creek, etc., Ry. v. McKell, 75 Fed. ng proceeding to enforce, between parties, right to con- nds, not a suit for removal purposes; Hartford, etc., Ry. ng proceeding to enforce, between parties, right to con- eminent domain, not a suit for removal purposes. uished in Searl v. School Dist., 124 U. S. 199, 31 L. 416, 8 , holding Colorado proceeding to condemn land for schools, law; Mineral, etc., Ry. v. Lake Superior, etc., Co., 25 Fed. ing Michigan condemnation proceedings in Probate Court, r removal purposes; Colorado, etc., Ry. v. Jones, 29 Fed. ing, where only question remaining for determination in ation proceedings is computation of value of land, cause vable; Brodhead v. Shoemaker, 44 Fed. 525, 11 L. R. A. n., holding Georgia proceeding to contest will a suit for purposes; In re The Jarnecke Ditch, 69 Fed. 165, holding proceeding to establish drain a "controversy of civil na- re Stutsman County, 88 Fed. 340, holding North Dakota gs for collection of delinquent taxes, a suit within re- s.

Removal of causes.— Controversies between property-owners city, in Missouri proceeding for widening streets, are distinct separate; hence, Federal corporation, property-owner, may rem its controversy to Federal court, notwithstanding proceedings a other owners may be indirectly affected thereby, p. 23.

Approved in Whelan v. New York, etc., Ry., 35 Fed. 863, 1 L A. 74, and n., holding action by citizen of Ohio against Ohio New York corporations, to enforce joint liability, separable purpose of removal; New York, etc., Ry. v. Cockroft, 46 Fed. holding controversy between railroad and owners of land so to be condemned, separable from that between railroad and to Sugar Creek, etc., Ry. v. McKell, 75 Fed. 36, holding controv between State and non-citizen owner in condemnation proceed in which resident lessee of non-resident is made co-defendant, arable for removal purposes; In re Stutsman County, 88 Fed. holding controversy presented by each owner in North Dak proceeding for collection of delinquent taxes, a separate suit.

Questioned in Mineral Range, etc., Ry. v. Lake Superior, Co., 25 Fed. 518, doubting whether single non-resident owner, wh land, with that of others, is sought to be condemned, may rem Distinguished in Bellaire v. Baltimore, etc., Ry., 146 U. S. 119 L. 911, 13 S. Ct. 17, holding condemnation proceedings against le and non-resident lessee not removable upon ground of separ controversy between city and lessee; In re City of Chicago, 64 902, holding no separable controversy in assessment proceed for municipal improvement, where court determines parties; In The Jarnecke Ditch, 69 Fed. 169, holding all parties to Indiana ceedings for establishment of drains inseparably interested in n issue.

115 U. S. 25-28, 29 L. 333, HADDEN v. MERRITT.

Customs duties.— Value of foreign coins, as ascertained by mate of director of mint and proclaimed by secretary of treas is conclusive upon custom-house officers and importers, p. 27.

Reaffirmed in Heinemann v. Arthur, 120 U. S. 85, 30 L. 606, Ct. 447, Wood v. United States, 72 Fed. 255, 38 U. S. App. 226, United States v. Knauth, 77 Fed. 600. Approved in United St v. Klingenberg, 153 U. S. 95, 97, 38 L. 648, 649, 14 S. Ct. 791, holding action of collector in fixing value of foreign coins not pealable to board of general appraisers; United States v. All Newhall, 91 Fed. 527, 528, 532, affirming rule and holding basis fixing value in pure metal, not exchange value.

115 U. S. 29-40, 29 L. 341, WHEELER v. NEW BRUNSWI ETC., RY.

Appeal and error.— Circuit Court's finding of fact that cer correspondence created contract of sale, is sufficient to estab such contract, p. 34.

cts.— To annul or set aside contract requires meeting of d consent of both parties, p. 34.

ed in The Sappho, 89 Fed. 369, holding substitution of vritten agreement requires same meeting of minds as orig- ract; Lanahan v. Heaver, 77 Md. 609, 26 Atl. 866, 20 L. R. greement to submit case to court without jury; Claes, etc., v. McCord, 65 Mo. App. 509, holding, in absence of fraud, must be mutual; Swift v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 106 N. 2 N. E. 589, holding, in absence of conclusive evidence of e of bills of lading in place of contract, latter controls; opinion in Randolph v. Frick, 57 Mo. App. 406, argu- riger v. Jœst, 22 Ind. App. 645, 52 N. E. 769, arguendo.

- Agreement to accept from two to six hundred tons of agreement to accept any number between two and six tons, at vendor's option, p. 38.

ed in Dingley v. Oler, 117 U. S. 501, 29 L. 987, 6 S. Ct. 853, ne bound to deliver, has choice of time permitted by con- rens, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Hœher, — Ky. —, 51 S. W. 198, offer to sell different sizes at different prices gave pur- ght to name quantity of each size; Dambmann, etc. v. etc., 70 Md. 382, 14 Am. St. Rep. 365 (see 17 Atl. 389), hold- dants agreeing to deliver three to five hundred tons, may lled to deliver five hundred.

41–45, 29 L. 331, PIRIE v. TVEDT.

al of causes.— Joint action in tort against several defend- er of whom could have been sued separately, is not divided rate controversies for purposes of removal by separate an- 43.

ed in Crump v. Thurber, 115 U. S. 61, 29 L. 329, 5 S. Ct. in v. New York, 115 U. S. 259, 29 L. 391, 6 S. Ct. 32, Sloane on, 117 U. S. 278, 29 L. 900, 6 S. Ct. 732, Fidelity Ins. Co. gton, 117 U. S. 281, 29 L. 899, 6 S. Ct. 734, Plymouth Min. nador Canal Co., 118 U. S. 270, 30 L. 234, 6 S. Ct. 1037, Giles, 118 U. S. 601, 30 L. 271, 7 S. Ct. 35, Thorn Wire, v. Fuller, 122 U. S. 543, 30 L. 1237, 7 S. Ct. 1267, Graves , 132 U. S. 588, 33 L. 468, 10 S. Ct. 202, Louisville, etc., angelin, 132 U. S. 601, 33 L. 476, 10 S. Ct. 204, Torrence 144 U. S. 531, 36 L. 531, 12 S. Ct. 727, Powers v. Chesa- e., Ry., 169 U. S. 97, 42 L. 675, 18 S. Ct. 266, Rumsey v. ed. 771, Stanbrough v. Cook, 38 Fed. 373, 3 L. R. A. 402, Chicago, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 883, State v. Columbus, etc., ed. 628, O'Harrow v. Henderson, 52 Fed. 769, and Arrow- Nashville, etc., Ry., 57 Fed. 169, all holding separate de- joint action do not create separate controversies for pur removal.

location entitling him to possession against United States, as as against defendant; hence admission that portion of claim been patented to stranger, justified instructions for defendant,

Approved in Erwin v. Perego, 93 Fed. 612, holding claim upon discovery within limits of another claim, void; Anthon Jillson, 83 Cal. 300, 23 Pac. 420, holding each party must esta claim against government, as well as against adversary; L Stahl, 9 Colo. 211, 11 Pac. 78, holding all rights and equiti premises must be adjusted prior to issuance of patent; Kend San Juan, etc., Co., 9 Colo. 357, 12 Pac. 202, holding location tiously made on Indian reservation, before extinguishment o dian title, will not avail against location made after land is op up; Manning v. Strehlow, 11 Colo. 453, 454, 18 Pac. 626, 627, ho issue in action to determine adverse claims, is whether either was entitled to patent; Girard v. Carson, 22 Colo. 347, 44 Pac. holding defendant may defeat plaintiff by showing better to claim in third party; Miller v. Girard, 3 Colo. App. 279, 33 69, holding locator permitting adjoining claimant to obtain p for portion of territory, including discovery shaft, loses tit claim; Lalande v. McDonald, 2 Idaho, 289, 13 Pac. 349, ho plaintiffs must establish valid location; Burke v. McDonal Idaho, 313, 13 Pac. 358, holding right of possession of claim of the action; Burke v. McDonald, 2 Idaho, 651, 33 Pac. 51, ho verdict not finding defendants are entitled to possession ag government, bad; Deno v. Griffin, 20 Nev. 252, 20 Pac. 309, ho one whose claim has been dismissed, cannot claim that p issued to another, is void, because irregularly issued; Ines Co. v. Kinney, 46 Fed. 835, remanding case, because Federal involved had been settled herein; Upton v. Larkin, 7 Mont. 45 Pac. 732, holding portion of discovery being on adjoining will not render location invalid.

Distinguished in McFeters v. Pierson, 15 Colo. 207, 22 Am Rep. 393, 24 Pac. 1078, holding plaintiff, in civil action for inj to claim, need not allege citizenship; South End Min. Co. v. Ti 22 Nev. 33, 35 Pac. 93 (but see dissenting opinion in 22 Nev. 5 Pac. 103), holding patent fraudulently obtained by locator, abandonment, invalid against relocator; Wills v. Blain, 4 N. 383, 5 N. Mex. 250, 20 Pac. 803, holding plaintiff in action m for possession, need only show better title than defendant's; S City, etc., Co. v. Lowry, 19 Utah, 345, 57 Pac. 12, 13, upho claim developed in good faith, notwithstanding loss of origina covery by allowing adjoining locator to obtain patent cov same.

Mines and minerals.— No one can have benefit of locator' covery for purpose of location adverse to him, except as relo after loss or abandonment of prior right, p. 50.

Approved in Del Monte Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co., S. 78, 18 S. Ct. 904, holding second location ineffectual to app

s.— Where defendants' liability is joint as well as sev-intiff has option to sue individually or jointly, p. 43.

ved in Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 602, 30 L. 271, 7 S. Ct. 36, lefendants cannot object to plaintiffs' election to sue jointly;
n v. Clay, 33 Fed. 898, Kaitel v. Wylie, 38 Fed. 867, Bacon v.
Fed. 871, and Sexton v. Seelye, 39 Fed. 705, all holding, when elects to sue jointly, defendants cannot make action several;
Chicago, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 884, holding right of removal, on
f separable controversy, testable by allegations of complaint;
Bradstreet Co., 46 Fed. 825, holding allegations of complaint letermining whether cause is separable; Fox v. Mackay, 60 olding bringing action against part of tortfeasors only, not o treat it as several; Brown v. Coxe, 75 Fed. 690, and Moore ngeles, etc., Co., 89 Fed. 78, holding, on plaintiffs' election to ly, neither defendant can treat action as several for removal
; Deere, etc., Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 85 Fed. 881, holding may sue jointly, although motive is to prevent removal.

ous prosecution.— Cause of action against several defend-malicious prosecution is several as well as joint, p. 43.

in Anderson v. Appleton, 32 Fed. 859, holding action to will not a separable controversy.

45-51, 29 L. 348, GWILLIN v. DONNELLAN.

and minerals.— Valid location of mineral lands, made and in accordance with statutes, has effect of grant by United right of present and exclusive possession of lands located, ved in Manuel v. Wulff, 152 U. S. 511, 38 L. 534, 14 S. Ct.

ing qualified locator's deed to alien operates as a transfer,
inst all except government; Gillis v. Downey, 85 Fed. 487, App. 575, holding owner of valid claim may maintain action
title prior to issuance of patent; McFeters v. Pierson, 15
, 22 Am. St. Rep. 390, 24 Pac. 1077, holding mining claim
c domain subject of complete ownership as a claim; Sey-Fisher, 16 Colo. 192, 27 Pac. 241, holding owner of valid
entitled to exclusive use thereof as against all the world;
Mix, 24 Or. 268, 33 Pac. 809, holding locator, having merely
y right, may sue for possession in justices' court; Gorman
v. Alexander, 2 S. Dak. 564, 51 N. W. 347, holding alien uire title to location, valid against all but government;
g opinion in South End Min. Co. v. Tinney, 22 Nev. 57, 35
, arguendo.

guished in Mt. Rosa Min., etc., Co. v. Palmer, 26 Colo. 59, 177, holding placer patent confers no possession to known veins within its limit.

and minerals.— In proceedings under R. S., §§ 2325, 2326, oine adverse claims to mineral location, plaintiff must show

32 Fed. 862, holding resident defendants cannot remove, altho plaintiff is citizen of another State; Rogers v. Van Nortwick, Fed. 514, holding resident corporation essential party to action stock in name of non-resident holders; Garner v. Second Nat. B 66 Fed. 371, holding any one of several non-residents sued in S court may remove; Missouri v. New Madrid County, 73 Fed.
holding trustee charged with fraudulent disposition of prope
necessary party in suit against fraudulent grantees to reclaim s Scoutt v. Keck, 73 Fed. 904, 36 U. S. App. 586, holding resi trustee necessary party to suit against non-resident vendee specific performance; Kennedy v. Ehlen, 31 W. Va. 558, 8 S 408, holding, to justify removal, all on one side of controversy be of different citizenship from all on other.

Distinguished in Williamson v. Krohn, 66 Fed. 661, 31 U. S.
325 (but see dissenting opinion in 66 Fed. 663, 31 U. S. App.
holding corporation proper, but not necessary, party to suit
stock owned by individuals.

115 U. S. 61-67, 29 L. 329, STEWART v. DUNHAM.

Removal of causes.— Jurisdiction of Federal court over itor's bill, removed from State court on ground of diverse cit ship, is not ousted by admission, subsequent to removal, of creditors, who were co-citizens of defendants, p. 64.

Approved in Phelps v. Oaks, 117 U. S. 239, 29 L. 890, 6 S. Ct.
holding Federal jurisdiction of action against tenant for land,
ousted by admitting landlord, co-citizen of plaintiff; Rous Letcher, 156 U. S. 50, 39 L. 343, 15 S. Ct. 268, holding, where a
are in course of administration, all parties may come unde cillary proceedings, although original jurisdiction would have lacking; Jarboe v. Templer, 38 Fed. 217, holding Federal jur tion not ousted by subsequent transfer of cause of action t citizen of defendant; Thouron v. East Tennessee, etc., Ry., 38 679, holding coming in of new parties into representative suit, not confer right of removal; Belmont Nail Co. v. Columbia, Co., 46 Fed. 338, a case on all fours; Society of Shakers v. Wa 68 Fed. 736, 37 U. S. App. 141, holding permitting co-citizen of tiff to intervene, does not oust Federal jurisdiction; D. A. T kins Co. v. Catawba Mills, 82 Fed. 785, holding all creditor necessary original parties to creditor's bill; Cross v. Evans, 86 4, 52 U. S. App. 728, holding Federal jurisdiction over action ag receiver, not divested because road passes to co-citizens of tiff; Compton v. Jesup, 68 Fed. 279, 31 U. S. App. 486, argu dissenting opinion in Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 464, 37 L. 810, Ct. 979, majority ordering suit remanded, where Federal c lacked equity jurisdiction.

Distinguished in Mangels v. Donau Brewing Co., 53 Fed.
dismissing foreclosure suit where intervening bondholders of defendants and necessary parties; Tug River Coal, Brigel, 67 Fed. 629, 31 U. S. App. 665, where foreclosure ll interested parties defendants and some proved to be of complainant.

nd error.— Supreme Court has no jurisdiction over ap- several decree by appellants against whom respective did not exceed sum of $5,000, p. 64.

l in Ex parte Phœnix Ins. Co., 117 U. S. 369, 29 L. 924, 2, holding distinct decrees against distinct parties on dis- s cannot be joined to confer appellate jurisdiction; Gib- eldt, 122 U. S. 37, 39, 30 L. 1087, 1088, 7 S. Ct. 1071, 1072, Knight, 123 U. S. 432, 31 L. 192, 8 S. Ct. 194, and Smith . v. McGroarty, 136 U. S. 239, 34 L. 348, 10 S. Ct. 1018, Clay v. Field, 138 U. S. 479, 34 L. 1049, 11 S. Ct. 425, gregation of distinct demands or liabilities cannot confer urisdiction; Walter v. Northeastern Ry., 147 U. S. 373, 13 S. Ct. 350, denying Circuit Court jurisdiction over bill ollection of taxes, when respective assessments in sepa- es did not amount to $2,000; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. L. 296, 15 S. Ct. 243, dismissing appeal as to mortgage jurisdictional amount; Putney v. Whitmire, 66 Fed. 387, creditor's bill by several complainants, each holding emand of less than $2,000; Busey v. Smith, 67 Fed. 16, deral jurisdiction over creditor's suit against heirs, where as several and that of each was under $2,000; Smithson , 81 Fed. 594, holding jurisdiction over creditor's suit tional bank receiver determined by individual claim of nt conveyances.— Fact that debtor had attempted, by invalid under laws of Mississippi, to transfer property to secure debt, does not vitiate subsequent transfer by trustee to same creditor to satisfy debt, p. 66.

l in Jewell v. Knight, 123 U. S. 434, 31 L. 193, 8 S. Ct. g whether sale and delivery of debtor's goods by way of is fraudulent, question of fact; Huntley v. Kingman, 152 38 L. 543, 14 S. Ct. 691, upholding failing debtor's assign- benefit of certain creditors; Davis v. Schwartz, 155 U. S. 294, 15 S. Ct. 240, upholding mortgage given for avowed preferring creditor; Sioux City, etc., Ry. Co. v. Trust Co., 8, 49 U. S. App. 533, holding consolidations and inter- not oust Federal jurisdiction, once attached; Bank of v. Schlotfeldt, 40 Neb. 215, 58 N. W. 728, holding transfer or's property to preferred creditor, not presumed fraudu- wich Mfg. Co. v. Max, 5 S. Dak. 132, 58 N. W. 16, 24 28, holding insolvent debtor may use his property to pay creditors.

[illegible] Reports.

[illegible] v. HOGABOOM.

[illegible] of public land, withou[illegible] of patent therefor, p. 68.

[illegible] McLaughlin, 12 Sawy. 199, [illegible] U. S. 518, 30 [illegible] of swamp lands by secre[illegible] dissenting opinion in Doc[illegible] majority holdi[illegible] provable in action at la[illegible]

[illegible] regular on its face, [illegible] as to any lands covered t[illegible] passed to State under g[illegible]

[illegible] Co., 149 U. S. 90, [illegible] v. Hayes, 159 U. [illegible] United States v. W[illegible] holding land depart[illegible] collaterally conclusive [illegible] U. S. App. 210, [illegible] conclusive, collat[illegible] holding validity of [illegible] government or others; B[illegible] 29 N. E. 4, [illegible] where extrinsic ev[illegible] Winona, etc., Co. v. Eb[illegible]

[illegible] Powell, 116 Mo. 476, 38 A[illegible] holding lack of authority to convey t[illegible] provable by parol; Mendota Club v. [illegible] holding patent purporting to [illegible] void to that extent.

[illegible] on secretary of interior, a[illegible] what lands are of desc[illegible] and his decision is controlling; [illegible] to show that lands covered by [illegible] under pre-emption laws, are such [illegible]

[illegible] Cal. 343, 10 Pac. 724, h[illegible] admissible only where secreta[illegible] Sav. Bank, 106 Ind. 444, 7[illegible] as to what were swamp [illegible] Ry. v. Gilliam, 85 Ala. [illegible]

[illegible] Locomotive Works v. Emigrant C[illegible] denying authority of secret[illegible] under railroad act of 1856, previously granted to rant of 1850; Chism v. Price, 54 Ark. 272, 15 S. W. 1034, eral land department's approval of railroad's selection,

nation that lands had not passed under swamp grants;
edd, 161 Ill. 491, 52 Am. St. Rep. 396, 44 N. E. 296, 33 ), holding grant bordering on meandering lake, extends thereof.

nds.— It is duty of secretary of interior, as head of land to determine whether land patented to settler, is of t to settlement, under pre-emption laws, and his judg-contestable in action at law, by mere intruder without in Noble v. Union River, etc., Ry., 147 U. S. 175, 37 L.

t. 274, holding decision of secretary that designated railitled to right of way over public land, irrevocable by Chandler v. Calumet, etc., Co., 149 U. S. 89, 37 L. 661, 1, holding listing by surveyor-general, and approval by perate as adjudication as to what were swamp lands;
v. Hayes, 159 U. S. 342, 40 L. 174, 16 S. Ct. 41, reaffirm-; Winona, etc., Land Co. v. Ebilcisor, 52 Minn. 323, 54
olding certification of land to State, as being with grant, shed in Lake Superior, etc., Ry. v. Cunningham, 44 Fed.

; land department's approval of land selection, void, as braced in prior grant.

9–78, 29 L. 316, THE CHARLES MORGAN.
— Where record does not show contrary, first signal
n assented to by offending vessel, will be presumed to made at proper distance, p. 75.

y.— Under admiralty rule 24, Circuit Court may, in its permit amendment of libel, so as to include claim for rowing out of original cause of action, and litigated in urt, but rejected because not specified in pleadings, p. 76.
l in Irvine v. The Hesper, 122 U. S. 267, 30 L. 1178, 7 S.
evy v. The Thomas Melville, 37 Fed. 272, and Nelson v.
Fed. 217, 48 U. S. App. 660, all holding appeal in admi-tically trial de novo; Liverpool Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins.
S. 447, 462, 32 L. 794, 799, 9 S. Ct. 474, holding cause
manded with instructions to allow amendment pleading
; The City of New Orleans, 33 Fed. 685, allowing intro-
new allegations and proofs; The J. E. Trudeau, 54 Fed.
S. App. 596, allowing amendment paying interest; The lan, 60 Fed. 425, 426, 21 U. S. App. 90, holding amend-matters of substance, not allowable on appeal, in causes
.
ished in The Beeche Dene, 55 Fed. 527, 13 U. S. App. 211, appeal in fifth circuit, new evidence cannot be taken by deposition de bene esse; The Iona, 80 Fed. 936, 52 U. S. Ap holding amendment, after release on stipulation, setting up not germane to original, not allowable.

Collision.— Findings of board of local inspectors, in inv tions under R. S., § 4450, of facts of collision, as bearing on l officers, are inadmissible, in suit against steamer for damage collision, as evidence that libellants were in proper course, p

Witnesses.— Contradictory declarations of witness, oral o
ten, made at another time, cannot be used for purpose of im ment, until witness has been examined on subject, and his at particularly directed to circumstances, in such a way as t
him full opportunity for explanation or exculpation, p. 77.

Approved in Mattox v. United States, 156 U. S. 246, 39 L.
S. Ct. 341, Nelson v. White, 83 Fed. 217, 48 U. S. App. 660, Mi
Ins. Co. v. Wich, 8 Colo. App. 418, 46 Pac. 690, and Carder v. K
32 Mo. App. 108, all applying rule to various facts; State v.
29 S. C. 227, 7 S. E. 309, holding testimony at trial may be c dicted by testimony at inquest.

115 U. S. 79-87, 29 L. 352, CLARK v. BEECHER MFG. CO.

Patents.— Clark patent for blanks for carriage thill shack
not infringed by Smith patent, p. 87.

Approved in Heine, etc., Co. v. Anheuser, etc., Co., 43 Fed holding inventor merely changing form, should be closely li to specifications; Johnson Co. v. Pacific, etc., Co., 47 Fed. 589, ing, where patent is broader than claim, patentee presum
surrender surplus to public.

115 U. S. 87-96, 29 L. 355, WOLLENSAK v. REIHER.

Patents.— Reference should be made to state of art at time
cation was made, in construing patents, p. 94.

Patents.— Wollensak patent for transom lifters, must be li
to combination described and claimed, p. 94.

Approved in Gage v. Kellogg, 23 Fed. 894, holding reissue, ex
ing original claim, void; Wollensak v. Reiher, 28 Fed. 425, case; Wollensak v. Sargent, 151 U. S. 224, 38 L. 140, 14 S. Ct affirming S. C., Wollensak v. Sargent, 33 Fed. 841, and 41 Fe passing upon like patent; Heine, etc., Co. v. Anheuser, etc., C Fed. 790, holding inventor merely changing form of recep
strictly limited to terms of claim.

115 U. S. 96-102, 29 L. 350, WOLLENSAK v. REIHER.

Notice.— Law imputes knowledge, when opportunity and int
combined with reasonable care, would necessarily impart it; h patentee is presumed to know at date of issuance of patent, wh same covers area of his invention, p. 99.

l in Ives v. Sargent, 119 U. S. 661, 30 L. 547, 7 S. Ct. 441, tentee neglecting to compare patent within invention e years, cannot obtain valid reissue; Arnheim v. Finster, , holding delayed reissue, void.

- Failure to improve opportunity to acquire knowledge ne's interests, constitutes laches, disabling party seeking ight from enforcing it to detriment of those who have act as though it were abandoned, p. 99.

l in Kittle v. Hall, 24 Blatchf. 188, 29 Fed. 511, holding not entertain case, where complainant has delayed suit ement seven years; Buffington's, etc., Co. v. Eustis, 65 7 U. S. App. 693, and Adams, etc., Ry. v. Lindell Ry., 77 0 U. S. App. 482, holding patentee cannot subsequently m to cover device not claimed therein.

– Reissue, for purpose of correcting mistake in original t be granted within reasonable time, otherwise it may void pro tanto, in any suit founded thereon, p. 100.

l in Electric Gas Co. v. Boston Electric Co., 139 U. S 60, 11 S. Ct. 593, holding unexplained delay of eight and ars, rendered reissue invalid; Wollensak v. Sargent, 151 38 L. 140, 14 S. Ct. 293, holding excuse that patentee licitor's advice insufficient to excuse delay; Haines v. ed. 627, holding ignorance of patent laws no excuse for taining reissue; Boland v. Thompson, 23 Blatchf. 442, , holding ignorance of English, and ignorance of omis- m from patent, do not excuse twenty-six months' delay reissue.

shed in Topliff v. Topliff, 145 U. S. 170, 36 L. 664, 12 S. staining reissue to correct palpable mistake, obtained months. See also citations under next syllabus.

– Question whether delay in applying for reissue, to take in original claim, is unreasonable, is for the court, e circumstances, p. 101.

l in Ives v. Sargent, 119 U. S. 662, 30 L. 548, 7 S. Ct. 441, ee years' delay invalidated reissue; Hoskin v. Fisher, 125 l L. 762, 8 S. Ct. 837, holding nine years' delay invalidated llensak v. Sargent, 151 U. S. 228, 38 L. 141, 14 S. Ct. eight years' delay unreasonable; Wollensak v. Sargent, , holding delay of eight years invalidated reissue; Phila- .. Mfg. Co. v. Rouss, 39 Fed. 274, and Peoria Target Co. d. etc., Co., 47 Fed. 735, both holding delays of three ered reissue void. See, also, citations under preceding – Decision of patent office, as to reasonableness of delay for reissue, to correct mistake in original claim, is not p. 101.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Misc.—Mentioned in Hoe v. Kehler, [illegible] Fed. [illegible].

115 U. S. 102-114. 29 L. 311. FRASHER v. O'CONNOR.

Public lands.—Grantee under confirmed Mexican grant [illegible] specific quantity of land in California, lying within larger area, [illegible] until segregation by government, entitled to possession of whole [illegible] as tenant in common, with government, as against strangers, [illegible]

Approved in McCreery v. Haskell, 119 U. S. 333, 30 L. 431, [illegible] Ct. 179.

Distinguished in Northern Pac. Ry. v. Hussey, 61 Fed. [illegible] U. S. App. 291, holding land-grant company not tenant in common with government, in respect to unsurveyed lands within its limits; United States v. Northern Pac. Ry., 6 Mont. 367, [illegible] holding government and railroad, tenants in severalty, under [illegible] to Northern Pacific railway.

Public lands.—Where selections by State, under United [illegible] grant thereto, have been approved by government, land [illegible] have no jurisdiction to review regularity of proceedings be[illegible] State and its grantees, or its locating agents, or to dete[illegible] whether State laws regarding sale of lands, have been com[illegible] with, p. 112.

Approved in Mower v. Fletcher, 116 U. S. 384, 29 L. 594, 6 [illegible] 411, holding questions of irregularity in selection of lieu lan[illegible] issuance to State of certified lists; McCreery v. Haskell, 119 [illegible] 332, 30 L. 409, 7 S. Ct. 179, arguendo.

Public lands.—Under act of July 23, 1866, it was duty o[illegible] veyor-general of California to extend lines of public surveys

l Mexican grants, upon failure of grantees to have same and after setting off quantity confirmed remainder not in grant became subject to general land laws, p. 113.

ed in McCreery v. Haskell, 119 U. S. 334, 30 L. 410, 7 S. holding land without grant as surveyed, subject to State in lieu of lands covered by grant; Durand v. Martin, 120 30 L. 677, 7 S. Ct. 589, reaffirming rule; Horsky v. Moran, 363, 53 Pac. 1070, holding townsite patent not attackable, ly; Mower v. Fletcher, 116 U. S. 385, 29 L. 594, 6 S. Ct. rally.

lands.— Under act of April 23, 1866, surveys of confirmed grants became operative by approval of government sur- eral for State and his filing of township plats in local land d lands thereby excluded from grant were thereafter sub- election by State, or to pre-emption, p. 115.

ed in McCreery v. Haskell, 119 U. S. 330, 30 L. 409, 7 S. holding survey by surveyor-general for State, operative approval of commissioner of general land office; Tubbs v. 138 U. S. 144, 34 L. 890, 11 S. Ct. 282, approving same e, with respect to swamp lands.

uished in Wells County v. McHenry, 7 N. Dak. 251, 74 2, arguendo.

lands.— State's title to lands selected by it under govern- nt, listed thereto by commissioner of general land office, fect as if resting on patent, p. 116.

ed in Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 699, 32 L. 568, 9 S. Ct. ing courts cannot correct surveys of public lands, decisions office being conclusive, collaterally; Williams v. United 38 U. S. 516, 34 L. 1028, 11 S. Ct. 458, Curtner v. United 49 U. S. 675, 37 L. 894, 13 S. Ct. 990, Hough v. Buchanan, 329, and Garrard v. Silver Peak Mines, 94 Fed. 984, all certified list to State transfers title effectively as patent; Union, etc., Ry., 147 U. S. 172, 37 L. 126, 13 S. Ct. 273, determination of secretary of interior, that designated rail- ntitled to right of way over public land, not revocable by ; Chandler v. Calumet, etc., Co., 149 U. S. 92, 37 L. 662, 802, holding such certification, followed by State's con- to grantee, presents evidence of title, not open to parol McCormick v. Hayes, 159 U. S. 346, 40 L. 175, 16 S. Ct. 42, ers, etc., Works v. Emigrant Co., 164 U. S. 573, 41 L. 558, 192, holding parol evidence inadmissible to show that certified was really swamp land; Deweese v. Reinhard, 61 19 U. S. App. 698, and Schieffery v. Tapia, 68 Cal. 186, 79, holding one not in privity with United States, cannot sting to State; Buena Vista, etc., Co. v. Tulare, etc., Co., 228, holding listing to State, lands selected for agricultural conclusive determination that said lands are such as covered by grant; United States v. Winona, etc., Ry., 67 Fed. 9 32 U. S. App. 272, holding certification to State for benefit of r road, has effect of patent; Mower v. Kemp, 42 La. Ann. 1018, 8 832, holding lands so granted, pass into domain of private proper Broussard v. Pharr, 48 La. Ann. 232, 19 So. 273, arguendo.

Distinguished in Michigan, etc., Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 593, 42
592, 18 S. Ct. 209, holding title remains in government, where gra ing act specifically provides for issuance of patent.

115 U. S. 116, 29 L. 316, GOOD v. O'CONNOR.

Adjudged in conformity with Frasher v. O'Connor, supra, q. v

115 U. S. 116–121, 29 L. 309, GRAY v. NATIONAL S. S. CO.

Corporations.— Company organized to continue, and buying bu
ness of, former company, upon same going into liquidation, is chargeable with payment of judgment against former, for dama for collision by vessel, subsequent to its transfer to new compa
p. 121.

Cited in 59 Am. St. Rep. 550, note.

115 U. S. 122–136, 29 L. 305, BUNCOMBE COUNTY v. TOMMEY

Railroads being legal highways, established for convenience public, intent of legislature to subject them to ordinary liens, v not be presumed; hence, North Carolina acts of 1870, creating chanics' liens on "buildings — or any other kind of property, herein enumerated," and of 1873, regulating sales under mortga
by corporations, do not create liens on railroads, for work perform or materials furnished in construction thereof, pp. 127, 129, 130

Approved in Industrial, etc., Co. v. Electrical, etc., Co., 58 F 741, holding general lien law of Ohio, gives no right to lien up railroad; Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. Potts, etc., Co., 63 Fed. 13, 22 U. S. App. 537, similarly construing Michigan lien law, acts 1885; Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Cape Fear, etc., Ry., 73 Fed. 7 holding railroad's mortgage of unbuilt portion, precedes contract lien thereon; Greenwood, etc., Ry. v. Strang, 77 Fed. 500, hold railroad not subject to liens, under South Carolina lien law; Cle land, etc., Ry. v. Knickerbocker, etc., Co., 86 Fed. 74, holding l on railroad bridge in Ohio, obtainable only under railroad lien la Eufaula Water Co. v. Addyston, etc., Co., 89 Ala. 560, 8 So.
doubting whether property of water company is liable to executi
Yellow River Imp. Co. v. Wood County, 81 Wis. 562, 51 N. W. 10
17 L. R. A. 95, and n., holding dam of quasi-public river impro ment company improperly included in assessment of land on wh located; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Forest County, 95 Wis. 89, 70 N.
79, holding property necessary to operation of railroad, not seiza for taxes; dissenting opinion in Pipe, etc., Co. v. Howland, 111 N.

16 S. E. 863, 20 L. R. A. 750, majority holding water com-operty liable to mechanic's lien.
uished in Giant Powder Co. v. Oregon Pac. Ry., 14 Sawy.
ed. 473, 8 L. R. A. 705, and n., holding Oregon lien law
iudes railways; National, etc., Works v. Oconto Water Co., 3, 49, holding plant of water company subject, in Wisconsin,
l courts, and is valid, p. 142.

137–142, 29 L. 834, MAYFIELD v. RICHARDS.

tion of actions.— Federal act of June 11, 1864, suspending of statute during Rebellion, applies to State as well as courts, and is valid, p. 142.

ed in Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 607, 40 L. 824, 16 S.
but see dissenting opinion in 161 U. S. 623, 40 L. 830, 16 1), holding act of 1893, protecting witnesses before inter-merce commission, extends to prosecutions in State courts.

143–150, 29 L. 357, SMITH v. WOOLFOLK.

— Judgments.— After final decree, parties are not bound
otice of subsequent proceedings, unless served with process,
arily appearing, p. 147.

ed in Great Western Tel. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 336, 40
6 S. Ct. 813, holding bill, subsequent to decree beginning ation, requires service. See 23 Am. St. Rep. 116, note.

.— Service on defendants is necessary, where petition is sequent to final decree, instituting new litigation on new nct issues, not raised by original proceedings, or properly
by amendment thereto, and between claimants in original 148.

med in Sheffield, etc., Ry. v. Newman, 77 Fed. 793, 41 U. S.

— If one complainant can, under any circumstances, have ainst another, upon supplemental or amended bill, it must notice to latter, p. 148.

ed in Meyer v. Kuhn, 65 Fed. 711, 25 U. S. App. 174, hold-rance of defendant to cross-bill, as between co-defendants, e enforced by service; Gregory v. Pike, 79 Fed. 522, 30
p. 11, holding proceedings to enjoin defendant from prose-
y suits touching any matters except certain equity suit, ervice; Jewett v. Iowa Land Co., 64 Minn. 538, 58 Am. St.
67 N. W. 641, holding one defendant cannot have decree
o-defendant, upon cross-bill, demanding affirmative relief issues, without notice to co-defendant.

ent against party who has not been heard, and has had
e to be heard, is not a judicial determination of his rights,
d to respect in other courts, p. 149.

Approved in Brooks v. Dun, 51 Fed. 147, holding Tennessee la authorizing service on any agent of non-resident corporation, u constitutional; dissenting opinion in Elsasser v. Haines, 52 N. J. 29, 18 Atl. 1102, majority recognizing foreign judgment, founded o recognizance, on return of two writs scire facias, nil habet. See 9 Am. Dec. 769, extended note.

Adverse possession for period sufficient to bar ejectment, togethe with open and notorious denial of mortgagee's title, are necessar in Arkansas, to bar suit for foreclosure, p. 150.

115 U. S. 151-160, 29 L. 336, PHILLIPI v. PHILLIPE.

Partnership.— Promise to render account of partnership an trust affairs, and to make final settlement thereof, is not acknow edgment that anything is due; hence, bill averring such promise, bu not that on settlement something would be due plaintiff, is insuf cient, p. 156.

Cited in 99 Am. Dec. 392, extended note.

Trusts.— Statute of limitations does not run against expre trust, p. 156.

Reaffirmed in Stimis v. Stimis, 54 N. J. Eq. 23, 33 Atl. 470, an Raymond v. Flavel, 27 Or. 235, 40 Pac. 163. See 99 Am. Dec. 38 note.

Trusts.— When trust is repudiated by trustees, unequivocal word and acts, so brought to beneficiary's notice that he is called upo to assert his equitable rights, statute of limitations begins to ru p. 157.

Reaffirmed in Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 386, 30 L. 719, 7 S. C 611, Naddo v. Bardon, 47 Fed. 790, De Mares v. Gilpin, 15 Colo. 8 24 Pac. 570, Raymond v. Flavel, 27 Or. 237, 40 Pac. 163, and Woo v. Fox, 8 Utah, 401, 32 Pac. 52. Approved in Starkey v. Fox, 5 N. J. Eq. 768, 29 Atl. 215, where open and exclusive possession wa sought to be defeated as a trust. See 99 Am. Dec. 391, note.

Trusts.— It is general rule, prevailing in Alabama, apart fro statute of limitations, that lapse of twenty years from time pr ceedings could have been instituted for settlement of trust, durin which trustee has not admitted trust, creates presumption of settl ment, p. 159.

Approved in Ware v. Galveston City Co., 146 U. S. 116, 36 L. 91 13 S. Ct. 38, where delay was of thirty-five years; Alsop v. Rike 155 U. S. 460, 39 L. 222, 15 S. Ct. 166, holding equity may refu relief for delay of less time than period of limitations; Westenfeld v. Green, 78 Fed. 895, holding rights of liens barred by lapse twenty years, with adverse possession; Girard v. Futterer, 84 Al 324, 4 So. 293, holding presumption of payment of legacies b executor does not arise until lapse of twenty years; Semple v. Glen 262, 24 Am. St. Rep. 901, 9 So. 267, applying rule to suit stockholder, for balance unpaid on stock.

S. 163–185, 29 L. 360, LAMAR v. McCULLOCH.

s.— Under R. S., § 1059, making remedy for unlawful taking erty, under captured and abandoned property act, exclusively rt of Claims, suit against secretary of treasury by alleged other than in Court of Claims, is barred, p. 186.

in National Bank v. Rutledge, 84 Fed. 409, arguendo.

S. 188–212, 29 L. 366, NORRINGTON v. WRIGHT.

acts.— In contracts of merchants, time is of the essence,

oved in Peace River, etc., Co. v. Graffiin, 58 Fed. 551, holding eging that vessels did not sail at times agreed, good in action ract; Foerderer v. Moors, 91 Fed. 479, 62 U. S. App. 546, hold- horization of drafts in payment of merchandise to be shipped t include merchandise already shipped. See 54 Am. Rep. e.

guished in Beck, etc., Co. v. Colorado, etc., Co., 52 Fed. 702, App. 465, holding time not of essence of contract for work or requiring artistic skill; Cent. Appalachian Co. v. Buchanan, 1012, 43 U. S. App. 265, vendee cannot avoid payment of price for installments received and used.

— In mercantile contracts, statements descriptive of sub- tter, or of some material incident, such as time or place of t, is ordinarily to be regarded as a warranty, or condition nt, upon failure or non-performance of which, party ag- may repudiate whole contract, p. 208.

oved in Filley v. Pope, 115 U. S. 219, 29 L. 373, 6 S. Ct. 21, case; Pope v. Allis, 115 U. S. 372, 29 L. 398, 6 S. Ct. 72, undertaking that article to be subsequently made, shall certain qualities, a condition precedent; Crane Co. v. Colum- ., Co., 73 Fed. 993, 46 U. S. App. 52, holding vendee cannot e as to part of goods and enforce as to remainder; Cleve- lling Mill v. Rhodes, 121 U. S. 261, 30 L. 922, 7 S. Ct. 885, nt that iron was to be shipped during navigating season of ray v. Moore, 37 Fed. 267, holding time and situation of naterially essential parts of contract of charter-party: Wil- Myers, 40 Fed. 174, representations as to cubical capacity el; The B. F. Bruce, 50 Fed. 123, holding party charging by charter with obligation, must make it good; Beck, etc., Colorado, etc., Co., 52 Fed. 703, 10 U. S. App. 465, holding nt of time of shipment, condition precedent; Cresswell, etc., Martindale, 63 Fed. 88, 27 U. S. App. 277, holding right to for non-performance, by other party, not dependent on

ANN

," is only to provide against accidental variations from slight important excesses or deficiencies in number, measure, or
p. 205.

oved in United States v. Pine River, etc., Co., 89 Fed. 911, S. App. 80, holding specification of quantity material and inative, although qualified by "about;" Salmon v. Boykin,
., 66 Md. 550, 7 Atl. 703, holding vendor cannot compel vendee
ct stipulated amount from larger quantity.

.— Where goods are to be shipped in certain proportions
y, seller's failure to ship required quantity in first month
uyer right to rescind whole contract, p. 205.

oved in Cleveland Rolling Mill v. Rhodes, 121 U. S. 264, 30 7 S. Ct. 886, where contract was to be "shipped during naviseason of 1881;" Horst v. Rœhm, 84 Fed. 570, holding notice ntion of non-compliance with contract, may be accepted as atory breach; Smith v. Keith, etc., Coal Co., 36 Mo. App.
lding buyer's rejection of two installments justified seller's on; Pope v. Porter, 102 N. Y. 371, 7 N. E. 307, holding vendees npelled to accept part performance in inverse order of con-Bennett v. Shaughnessy, 6 Utah, 277, 22 Pac. 158, holding, on to perform condition precedent to other party's further perce, latter may rescind, suing for work already done. Aparguendo, in Buzby v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 31 Fed. 424, The Assurance v. Companhia, etc., 68 Fed. 250, 28 U. S. App.
guendo; Blake v. Pine Mt., etc., Co., 76 Fed. 640, 43 U. S.
0, as to rescission by court and by parties; Miller v. Moore, 693, 20 Am. St. Rep. 331, 10 S. E. 361, 6 L. R. A. 377, and n.
, but application refused, in Hoffman v. King, 70 Wis. 379,
W. 29, holding agreement to keep lumber from accumulating
s independent of main contract. Distinguished in Clark v.
ng Steel Works, 58 Fed. 498, 3 U. S. App. 358, where vendee, nowledge of defects, continued to retain and use portion of Cresswell, etc., Co. v. Martindale, 63 Fed. 89, 27 U. S. App.
lding vendee refusing to accept and pay for substantial part allment, cannot recover for vendor's refusal to deliver further nents; Cherry Valley, etc., Works v. Florence, etc., Co., 64 72, 22 U. S. App. 655, where vendee failed to make money nt in time; German Sav. Inst. v. De La Vergne, etc., Co., 70 55, 36 U. S. App. 184, where portion of goods were accepted
ed; Crane Co. v. Columbus, etc., Co., 73 Fed. 992, 46 U. S.
2, holding termination by vendee not being justified, he maintain action for breach by vendor; Gerli v. Poidebard,
., 57 N. J. L. 435, 51 Am. St. Rep. 613, 31 Atl. 402, 30 L. R. A.
(but see dissenting opinion in 57 N. J. L. 440, 31 Atl. 404, 30
A. 72), holding vendor's failure to deliver first installment
, does not enable vendee to rescind entire contract.

115 U. S. 213–221, 29 L. 372, FILLEY v. POPE.

Sales.— In mercantile contracts, descriptive statements, time place of shipment, etc., are ordinarily warranties, upon failure non-performance of which, aggrieved party may repudiate contra p. 220.

Approved in Pope v. Allis, 115 U. S. 372, 29 L. 398, 6 S. Ct. 7 holding undertaking that article to be subsequently manufactur shall possess certain qualities, a condition precedent; Clevela Rolling Mill v. Rhodes, 121 U. S. 261, 30 L. 922, 7 S. Ct. 885, stat ment that iron was to be shipped during navigation season of 188 Bank of Brit. N. A. v. Cooper, 137 U. S. 477, 34 L. 761, 11 S. Ct. 16 holding description of place indicated where payment was to made; Gray v. Moore, 37 Fed. 267, holding time and situation vessel materially essential parts of contract of charter-party; T B. F. Bruce, 50 Fed. 123, holding party charging himself by chart with obligation, bound to make it good; Peace River, etc., Co. Graffiin, 58 Fed. 551, holding contract for sale broken by failure vessels to sail at times agreed upon; Cresswell, etc., Co. v. Marti dale, 63 Fed. 88, 27 U. S. App. 277, holding right to rescind for oth party's non-performance not dependent on latter's good faith; Sa ders v. Munson, 74 Fed. 651, 45 U. S. App. 32, holding recital time of vessel's departure, a warranty.

Distinguished in Culliford v. Gomila, 128 U. S. 158, 32 L. 389, S. Ct. 57, holding court not bound to give effect to provisions omitt by parties; Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 63, 40 L. 618, 16 S. C 489, holding provision for shipment on certain vessel does not quire arrival on same.

Sales.— Under contract for sale of 500 tons of iron, "to be shipp from Glasgow," shipment from any other port gives buyer right rescind contract, p. 220.

Approved in Pierson v. Crooks, 115 N. Y. 555, 12 Am. St. Re 842, 22 N. E. 354, a similar case; Reid, etc. v. Field, 83 Va. 32, S. E. 399, but holding party entitled to strict performance waiv same by accepting substitution.

Distinguished in Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 65, 40 L. 619, S. Ct. 490, where contract called for shipment, but not for arriv on certain steamer.

115 U. S. 221, 29 L. 392, BOSTON, ETC., CO. v. EAGLE, ETC., C

Appeal and error.— Where assignment of errors are wanting, a appearance of counsel for plaintiffs in error has been withdraw judgment will be affirmed without opening record, p. 221.

Not cited.

115 U. S. 222–227. 29 L. 373. LANCASTER v. COLLINS.

Appeal and error.— No judgment should be reversed, on appe for unprejudicial error, p. 227.

Approved in West v. Camden, 135 U. S. 522, 34 L. 258, 10 S. Ct. 841, refusing reversal for erroneous instruction, where plaintiff could not have recovered in any event; Lazarus v. Phelps, 156 U. S. 206, 39 L. 398, 15 S. Ct. 273, holding party not prejudiced by erroneous ruling, cannot complain thereof on appeal; United States v. Shapleigh, 54 Fed. 137, 12 U. S. App. 26, refusing reversal for technical error in rulings; Connecticut, etc., Ins. Co. v. McWhirter, 73 Fed. 451, 44 U. S. App. 492, holding instruction that entire theory of defense is based upon contention as to one issue, harmless, where upon other, evidence wholly fails to support contention; Sipes v. Seymour, 76 Fed. 118, 40 U. S. App. 185, holding rejection of admissible, but insufficient, testimony harmless error; Creswell v. Wilmington, etc., Ry., — Del. —, 43 Atl. 633, affirming rule; Tracewell v. Farnsley, 104 Ind. 497, 4 N. E. 163, holding error in overruling demurrer to bad paragraph, harmless, where judgment rests on good paragraph; McFadden v. Schroeder, 9 Ind. App. 52, 35 N. E. 131, holding overruling demurrer harmless error, where allegation demurred to was found false.

Distinguished in Cahill v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 74 Fed. 289, 46 U. S. App. 85 (but see dissenting opinion in 74 Fed. 296, 46 U. S. App. 85), reversing for erroneous instruction.

Trial.— Question as to which party shall make closing argument to jury, is one of practice, and is not subject of a bill of exception or writ of error, p. 225.

Reaffirmed in May v. International, etc., Co., 92 Fed. 447, 63 U. S. App. 776.

Appeal and error.— Supreme Court cannot, on error, review weight of evidence, and can look into it only to see whether there was error in not directing verdict for plaintiff, on question of variance, or because there was no evidence to sustain verdict, p. 225.

Approved in Bank of Brit. N. A. v. Cooper, 137 U. S. 474, 34 L. 760, 11 S. Ct. 160, holding appellate court must regard contested facts as established by verdict; Crumpton v. United States, 138 U. S. 363, 34 L. 959, 11 S. Ct. 356, holding granting or refusing new trial, because evidence does not support verdict, discretionary; New York, etc., Ry. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 617, 37 L. 305, 13 S. Ct. 454, refusing to review findings; Lehnen v. Dickson, 148 U. S. 72, 37 L. 373, 13 S. Ct. 482, holding general finding of court trying case without jury, conclusive; Hahn v. Billings Bros., 18 R. I. 553, 28 Atl. 1028, holding findings of fact in trial by court, not reviewable; dissenting opinion in Searcy County v. Thompson, 66 Fed. 99, 27 U. S. App. 715, arguendo.

115 U. S. 228-247, 29 L. 384, VAN WEEL v. WINSTON.

Equity.— Mere words, even as qualifying adjectives of specific charges, are not sufficient grounds of equity jurisdiction for breach of trust, unless transactions to which they refer in their ess nature, constitute fraud or breach of trust, p. 238.

Approved in St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Johnston, 133 U. S. 577, 687, 10 S. Ct. 393, holding it insufficient to charge fraud in ge terms; Horsford v. Gudger, 35 Fed. 389, holding allegations of must be connected with specific acts; Heller v. Dyerville Mfg 116 Cal. 135, 47 Pac. 1017, holding general averments of fraud
purpose were conclusions, not admitted by demurrer; Warr Para Rubber-Shoe Co., 166 Mass. 103, 44 N. E. 114, holding ments of fraud must be certain; Wood v. Amory, 105 N. Y. 281 11 N. E. 637, 638, holding mere allegations of fraud or consp of no avail; Leasure v. Forquer, 27 Or. 339, 41 Pac. 666, h allegations that deed was made to defraud, insufficient to su decree.

Corporations.— President of railroad is not personally liab losses resulting from purchases of bonds thereof induced by fr
lent representations in circular signed by him as president, p.

Railroads.— Representations in circulars issued by railro
advertise bonds for branch, are superseded by mortgage giv
company and accompanying bonds when offered for sale, p. 2

Railroads.— Mortgage of branch to secure bonds for its struction, providing that it shall not exceed fifty miles, doe require it to be of that length, especially as bondholders wer given second mortgage on main line, p. 243.

Corporations.— No privity exists between president of ra and purchasers of its bonds, and president is liable for fraudule propriation of proceeds of bonds only to company, p. 245.

Approved in Banque Franco-Egyptienne v. Brown, 34 Fed denying fiduciary relation between promoters of corporatio bondholders; Kittel v. Augusta, etc., Ry., 65 Fed. 863, holdi turn of unsatisfied execution necessary to charge officers perso Middletown v. Boston, etc., Ry., 53 Conn. 359, 5 Atl. 707, gene Mellen v. Moline Iron Works, 131 U. S. 367, 33 L. 183, 9 S. C and Atlanta, etc., Ry. v. Western Ry., 50 Fed. 794, 2 U. S.
227, arguendo.

115 U. S. 248-259, 29 L. 388, STARIN v. NEW YORK.

Removal of causes.— If it appears that some title, right,
lege, or immunity, on which recovery depends, will be defeat
one construction of Federal Constitution or laws, or sustain opposite construction, case will be one arising under Federal stitution or laws, and reviewable, p. 257.

Reaffirmed in Gibbs v. Crandall, 120 U. S. 106, 30 L. 590, 7 497, Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S. 41, 32 L. 591, 9 S. Ct. 212, ards v. Rock Rapids, 31 Fed. 506. Approved in Robinson v

derson, 121 U. S. 524, 30 L. 1021, 7 S. Ct. 1012, holding Circuit Court should dismiss where averments giving jurisdiction are immaterial in determination of matter; Central Nat. Bank v. Haseltine, 73 Mo. App. 61, holding appellate jurisdiction over such questions in State Supreme Court. Upon authority of the principal case, following have been held to involve Federal questions; Southern Pac. Ry. v. California, 118 U. S. 112, 30 L. 104, 6 S. Ct. 994, whether State may tax franchises of corporation derived from acts of Congress; Cooke v. Avery, 147 U. S. 385, 37 L. 212, 13 S. Ct. 344, where plaintiff's title rested upon validity of lien claimed under Federal judgment; In re Lennon, 166 U. S. 554, 41 L. 1113, 17 S. Ct. 660, bill to enforce compliance with interstate commerce act; Leonard v. Shreveport, 28 Fed. 257, State constitutional provision limiting taxation rate so low as to necessitate breach of contract; Illinois v. Illinois Cent. Ry., 33 Fed. 725, quo warranto against railroad for exercising possessory rights over submerged land, defense being legislation impairing contract; Cheesman v. Shreve, 37 Fed. 37, right to enter beneath surface, where depending upon construction of Federal mining laws; Briscoe v. Southern Kan. Ry., 40 Fed. 277, action for damages against railroad running through Indian country; Smith v. Bivens, 56 Fed. 355, bill charging that defendants damaged him under color of act violative of Federal Constitution; Wood v. Drake, 70 Fed. 882, action for damages for false imprisonment, based on acts done as Federal marshal; National Bank v. Wade, 84 Fed. 12, suit by national bank against former managers for loss by reason of loans made in violation of banking act; Nashville, etc., Ry. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 176, 182, suit involving validity of taxation statute, alleged to be violative of State Constitution and hence deprivation of property without due process; Minnesota v. Duluth, etc., Ry., 87 Fed. 498, where complainant's right of recovery depended on validity of statute when tested by Federal Constitution; Arkansas v. Kansas, etc., Coal Co., 96 Fed. 357, suit to enjoin railroad from bringing certain class of meat into State; Fleitas v. Meraux, 47 La. Ann. 240, 16 So. 851, question involving effect of Federal bankrupt act.

Approved in following, holding no Federal question involved: Germania Ins. Co. v. Wisconsin, 119 U. S. 476, 30 L. 461, 7 S. Ct. 261, suit to recover statutory penalty for doing insurance business in State without complying with laws thereof; New Orleans v. Benjamin, 153 U. S. 424, 38 L. 769, 14 S. Ct. 909, where construction of Constitution was not essential to determination of suit; Pratt v. Paris Gas, etc., Co., 168 U. S. 259, 42 L. 460, 18 S. Ct. 64, assumpsit for use of patent, not involving construction of patent laws; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 177, 19 S. Ct. 647, where allegation of existence of Federal question was unsupported by facts found in bill; State v. Bradley, 26 Fed. 289, point once decided by Federal Supreme Court; Iowa v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 33 Fed. 895, where record did not show determination of Federal question necessary to disposal of case; Murray v. Bluebird Min. Co

Fed. 386, action to try title to mining property; Inez Min. C
Kinney, 46 Fed. 834, question of abandonment of mining cl Pacific Gas, etc., Co. v. Ellert, 64 Fed. 429, suggestion in bill defendant will claim that plaintiff's acts violate Constitution;
gus Falls v. Fergus Falls Water Co., 72 Fed. 876, 36 U. S. App
(but see dissenting opinion in 72 Fed. 882, 883, 36 U. S. App.
allegation that certain resolution was law impairing obligatio contract; Wise v. Nixon, 76 Fed. 5, complaint seeking to quiet to mining claims, alleging defendants claimed under relocat Crystal Springs, etc., Co. v. Los Angeles, 76 Fed. 151, and Cr Springs, etc., Co. v. Los Angeles, 82 Fed. 123, where both pa claimed under confirmed Mexican grants, and controversy is what rights were granted thereunder; King v. Lawson, 84 Fed.
bill to protect homestead entrymen in making required imp
ments, against claimant whose claim was rejected; McCain v.
Moines, 84 Fed. 728, question whether statute enlarging corp limits is invalid under State Constitution: Dewey Min. Co. v. M 96 Fed. 2, suit to determine conflicting claims to mining location raising question of construction or effect of mining laws; Calif Oil & Gas Co. v. Miller, 96 Fed. 21, bill to quiet title to m claim, though complainant's claim is based on Federal mining l State v. Southern Pac. Ry., 23 Or. 432, 31 Pac. 962, where pet showed that plaintiff was not Federal corporation, and action to settle tariff rates fixed by State; dissenting opinion in Tenn
v. Union, etc., Bank, 152 U. S. 468, 38 L. 516, 14 S. Ct. 659, maj denying jurisdiction, unless existence of Federal question ap
by plaintiff's own statement of his claim.

Distinguished in Carson v. Dunham, 121 U. S. 427, 30 L. 9
S. Ct. 1033, distinguishing between jurisdiction to review Stat cisions adverse to right claimed under Federal laws, and to rev

Removal of causes.— Whether New York city has, by cha exclusive right to establish ferries between Manhattan and S islands, is not a Federal question, p. 258.

Pleading.— Prayer for judgment must be construed in conne with the cause of action as stated in complaint, and limited ac ingly, p. 258.

Removal of causes.— Separate defense by one defendant in or joint and several action creates no separate controversy
to entitle him, if possessing necessary citizenship, to removal u act of 1875; e. g., action for violation of exclusive ferry right united efforts of defendants, p. 259.

Approved in Fidelity Ins. Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 28
L. 899, 6 S. Ct. 734, holding creditor's bill presents no sepa controversy as to respondent lienholders; Little v. Giles, 118 601, 30 L. 271, 7 S. Ct. 35, Rumsey v. Call, 28 Fed. 771, Wood

v. Clay, 33 Fed. 899, and Patchin v. Hunter, 38 Fed. 52, all holding separate answers by joint defendants, creating separable issues, do not render cause separable; Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 511, 30 L. 485, 7 S. Ct. 303, and Graves v. Corbin, 132 U. S. 588, 33 L. 468, 10 S. Ct. 202, holding separate defenses do not create separate controversies within act; Weller v. Pace Tobacco Co., 32 Fed. 862, remanding where controversy of non-resident intervenor was inseparable from that of resident defendant; State v. Columbus, etc., Ry., 48 Fed. 628, holding mandamus proceeding to compel railroads to lower joint street crossing not separable as between State and one road; Ryder v. Bateman, 93 Fed. 22, holding non-resident wife, sued jointly with resident husband, not entitled to removal on ground of separate controversy and diverse citizenship.

Distinguished in Beuttel v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 26 Fed. 52, and Fergason v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 63 Fed. 178, holding petition for damages against railroad for injuries from defective engine, and employees for negligence, contained separable causes of action; Rich v. Gross, 29 Neb. 340, 45 N. W. 468, holding controversy separate as to non-resident creditor filing answer in nature of creditor's bill in foreclosure suit.

115 U. S. 260-263, 29 L. 375, CLAY v. FIELD.

Executors and administrators.— Mississippi code provision, specifying limitation of actions to set aside administrator's sale, construed, p. 262.

Ejectment.— Under Mississippi code of 1880, tenant in common ousted by co-tenant may maintain ejectment and recover rents and profits in same action, p. 263.

Approved generally in Clay v. Freeman, 118 U. S. 105, 30 L. 107, 6 S. Ct. 968.

115 U. S. 264-284, 29 L. 377, HENDERSON v. WADSWORTH.

Appeal and error.— Where judgment against defendant, pleading no counterclaim or set-off, and not asking affirmative relief, is appealed, amount in dispute is amount of judgment sought to be reversed, p. 276.

Approved in New York Elevated Ry. v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 118 U. S. 609, 30 L. 260, 7 S. Ct. 24, holding value of matter in dispute determined by judgment, irrespective of verdict; Gibson v. Shufeldt, 122 U. S. 33, 30 L. 1067, 7 S. Ct. 1072, holding defendant can appeal only as to several plaintiffs decreed $5,000; Decker v. Williams, 73 Fed. 311, applying rule to appeals from commissioner to District Court.

Appeal and error.— Neither co-defendants nor co-plaintiffs can unite their separate and distinct interests for purpose of making up amount essential to appellate jurisdiction of Supreme Court;

hence, where heirs are sued on ancestor's note, and separate
ments rendered against each, appellate jurisdiction extend to judgments exceeding $5,000, p. 276.

Reaffirmed in Clay v. Field, 138 U. S. 479, 34 L. 1049, 11 425, and Busey v. Smith, 67 Fed. 15. Approved in Walter v. eastern Ry., 147 U. S. 374, 37 L. 208, 13 S. Ct. 350, where bi to enjoin assessments in separate counties, each under Wheless v. St. Louis, 96 Fed. 867, holding owners in severa lots abutting on streets cannot, by joining, confer Federal ju
tion to enjoin assessment, no single assessment equalling $2,0

Husband and wife.— In Louisiana, widow having accepte cession of husband without benefit of inventory, is not lia solido with surviving partners for note of husband's firm; an ments by surviving partners are inadmissible to show interr of prescription running in her favor, p. 284.

115 U. S. 285–288, 29 L. 391, MOSES v. WOOSTER.

Appeal and error.— Appeal of defendants from joint decree joint cause of action, may, upon death of an appellant and f
of his representatives to appear, proceed at suit of survivors, al
as to deceased, p. 288.

Cited in Martin v. Baltimore, etc., Ry., 151 U. S. 703, 38 L. 3
S. Ct. 545, holding question whether action survives defenda law of State.

115 U. S. 288–289, 29 L. 392, JACKS v. HELENA.

Courts.— Where State court's opinion, which is, by State
part of the record, shows decision properly went upon other Federal ground, Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to review
ment, p. 289.

Approved in Kreiger v. Shelby Ry., 125 U. S. 44, 31 L. 678, Ct. 755, holding opinion of highest State court examinable to
tain grounds for judgment.

115 U. S. 290, 29 L. 406, WATERVILLE v. VAN SLYKE.

Appeal and error.— To obtain dismissal before printing re motion papers must present case so as to enable Supreme Cou act understandingly without referring to transcript, p. 290.

Followed in Maag v. Hyde, 122 U. S. 632 (Appendix).

115 U. S. 291–299, 29 L. 382, HAZLETT v. UNITED STATES.

Contracts for transportation of soldiers and supplies, const
p. 299.

Not cited.

115 U. S. 300-307, 29 L. 406, MERRICK'S EXECUTOR v. GIDDINGS.

Appeal and error.— Instructions to find verdict for defendant must be held by rules applying in case of demurrer to evidence, p. 305.

Reaffirmed in Meyer v. Manhattan L. Ins. Co., 144 Ind. 447, 43 N. E. 451.

Miscellaneous.— Miscited in Mower v. Kemp, 42 La. Ann. 1018, 8 So. 832.

Attorney and client.— Agents of State, to recover bonds, are not liable to attorneys previously appointed for same purpose, upon promise to latter to withhold amount recovered until attorneys should be paid, where attorneys, before money was paid over, compromised for less sum, p. 307.

115 U. S. 308-321, 29 L. 398, SMITH v. BLACK.

Mortgages.— Absence from sale advertised by both trustees, of one of them, is not sufficient reason to set same aside as against former owner, p. 315.

Approved in Loveland v. Clark, 11 Colo. 270, 18 Pac. 547, upholding sale by one trustee; Monroe v. Fuchtler, 121 N. C. 103, 28 S. E. 64, arguendo.

Mortgages.— In absence of disqualifying circumstances, creditor may purchase at sale under deed of trust, p. 315.

Approved in Pewabic Min. Co. v. Mason, 145 U. S. 362, 36 L. 736, 12 S. Ct. 890, holding permission unnecessary to enable litigating stockholder to bid at judicial sale; Black v. Caldwell, 83 Fed. 884, holding denying foreign corporation mortgagor right to buy at foreclosure, denial of equal protection of laws; Deck v. Whitman, 96 Fed. 879, holding American rule allows either party to suit to bid at judicial sale; Monroe v. Fuchtler, 121 N. C. 104, 28 S. E. 64, holding cestui que trust may buy at trust sale.

Mortgages.— Settlement with trustee for cash, by purchaser at sale under trust deed providing for credit, violates no rights of former owner, p. 320.

115 U. S. 321-339, 29 L. 414, KENTUCKY RY. TAX CASES.

Taxation proceedings are not necessarily judicial, and "due process of law," as applied to that subject, does not imply right to such notice and hearing as are regarded essential to validity of judicial proceedings. Tax law requiring owners to send lists to designated official and fixing time for protests against assessment, is valid, p. 331.

Approved in Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 328, 35 L. 425, 11 S. Ct. 830, affirming S. C., 72 Cal. 413, 419, 14 Pac. 74, 76, denying right of parties affected by proposed improvement to be heard before ass ment; Pittsburgh, etc., Ry. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 426, 38 L. 1036

S. Ct. 1116, holding personal notice unnecessary, statute fixing t and place for meeting of board; San Diego, etc., Co. v. Natio City, 174 U. S. 753, 19 S. Ct. 809, holding water company not enti to formal notice of precise day for fixing rates; Board of Equal tion Cases, 49 Ark. 528, 6 S. W. 5, holding provision for appeal fore assessment becomes final, sufficient; St. Louis, etc., Ry.
Worthen, 52 Ark. 538, 13 S. W. 256, 7 L. R. A. 376, holding fai to provide appeal from board's valuation, not fatal to law; S
v. Weyerhauser, 68 Minn. 363, 71 N. W. 267, upholding law of 1
providing for taxation of property unlawfully omitted from ass ment; Board of Assessors v. Central Ry., 48 N. J. L. 284, 4 Atl.
upholding law providing for assessment and taxation of railro and canals; State v. Sponangle, 45 W. Va. 424, 32 S. E. 287, 43
R. A. 732, upholding constitutional provision for forfeiture of l not entered for taxation; Meggett v. Eau Claire, 81 Wis. 332, 51
W. 569, holding provision for issuance of certificate, stating amo of street assessment, sufficient notice; Hennessy v. Douglas Cou 99 Wis. 151, 74 N. W. 990, upholding assessments for sidewalks, though only notice was entry on tax-rolls; dissenting opinion Water Works v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 334, 22 Pac. 1051, as notice to water company of intention to fix rates. Cited also Louisville, etc., Ry. v. Louisville, 166 U. S. 714, 41 L. 1175, 17 S.
727, Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 684, 42 L. 626, 18 S. Ct.
Scott v. Toledo, 36 Fed. 394, 1 L. R. A. 694, and Wade v. Kimber
5 Ohio C. C. 44, arguendo. See 16 Am. St. Rep. 136, note.

Distinguished in Hood River, etc., Co. v. Wasco County, 35
510, 57 Pac. 1020, holding river improvement law void, as provid
for taking property without notice.

Taxation.— Kentucky act of 1878, providing for notice of posed assessment to property-owner, by requiring him to pre estimate of value to designated officer, providing for public sess
of board, at which party may appear and be heard, and wh allows opportunity to contest validity of proceedings in suit to lect tax, does not deprive taxpayer of property without "due p ess," p. 336.

Approved in Winona, etc., Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S.
40 L. 251, 16 S. Ct. 87, upholding Minnesota law of 1881, provid for assessment of property omitted from roll of preceding ye Sanford v. Poe, 69 Fed. 553, 37 U. S. App. 378, holding right to present and be heard in assessment proceedings, due process; I
v. Tillson, 72 Cal. 420, 421, 14 Pac. 77, upholding act of 1876, widening of street in city; Ames v. People, 26 Colo. 99, 56 Pac.
upholding power of legislature to fix situs of real and general p erty for taxation purposes; Ball v. Ridge Copper Co., 12 Mich.
76 N. W. 132, upholding act of 1893, providing for sale of land taxes; St. Louis v. Ranken, 96 Mo. 506, 9 S. W. 914, holding defendant having received notice of proposed assessment, it was not necessary that he be made party to condemnation proceedings to open street; State v. Jones, 51 Ohio St. 514, 37 N. E. 951, upholding 90 Ohio Laws, 330, providing for taxation of telephone, telegraph and express companies; Baldwin v. Ely, 66 Wis. 188, 28 N. W. 399, upholding provision that title to land sold for taxes for five successive years shall vest in county; dissenting opinion in Water Works v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 333, 22 Pac. 1051, arguendo; Mallory et al. v. La Crosse, etc., Co., 80 Wis. 184, 49 N. W. 1076, majority upholding labor lien law of 1889; Board of Assessors v. Central Ry., 48 N. J. L. 278, 4 Atl. 584, arguendo.

Distinguished in Scott v. Toledo, 36 Fed. 398, 1 L. R. A. 696, holding street assessment without notice, invalid; Meyers v. Shields, 61 Fed. 721, holding proceeding to enter assessment for back taxes, without notice or hearing, unconstitutional; Baker v. Norwood Village, 74 Fed. 1000, holding condemnation of street through private land, and assessment thereon of expenses therefor, unconstitutional; Power v. Larabee, 2 N. Dak. 153, 49 N. W. 727, holding tax invalid, where board did not meet at time and place designated.

Taxation.— Rule of equal taxation only requires same method for all constituents of each class of property, so that law shall operate uniformly upon all in similar circumstances; hence, Kentucky law, providing different methods for assessment of railroads than for other real property, is not denial of "equal protection of laws" within fourteenth amendment, p. 338.

Approved in Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 354, 35 L. 1040, 12 S. Ct. 254, holding diversity of taxation allowable if all of a class are taxed uniformly; Chamberlain v. Walter, 60 Fed. 793, holding assessment of railroads at higher percentage of value than other property, not unconstitutional; Brown's case, 91 Va. 767, 21 S. E. 359, 28 L. R. A. 111, holding tax, to be uniform, need not be assessed on all property by same agency; Bridge Co. v. County Court, 41 W. Va. 668, 24 S. E. 1005, holding legislature may provide different manner for assessment of different classes of property; State v. Mann, 76 Wis. 477, 45 N. W. 529, sanctioning reasonable classification for purposes of taxation. On authority of principal case, following have been upheld: Columbus, etc., Ry. v. Wright, 151 U. S. 482, 38 L. 243, 14 S. Ct. 400, Georgia law of 1889, distributing rolling-stock of railroads among counties for taxation; Pittsburgh, etc., Ry. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 425, 38 L. 1036, 14 S. Ct. 1116, provision for different method of assessing railroads; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 228, 41 L. 698, 17 S. Ct. 312, classification of express companies with railroad and telegraph companies, for taxation; Magoun v. Illinois Trust, etc., Bank, 170 U. S. 293, 42 L. 1042, 18 S. Ct. 598, Illinois inheritance tax law of 1895; Wallace v. Myers, 38 Fed. 185, 4 L. R. A. 172, and n., New York inheritance tax; St.

Louis, etc., Ry. v. Worthen, 52 Ark. 536, 13 S. W. 256, 7 L.
375, classification of railroads for taxation; People v. Hend 12 Colo. 375, 376, 21 Pac. 146, 147, classification of mines for poses of taxation; Ames v. People, 26 Colo. 107, 56 Pac. 664 Northern Pac. Ry. v. Barnes, 2 N. Dak. 339, 346, 51 N. W. 393 separate classification of railroads for purposes of taxation; Br case, 173 Mass. 499, 53 N. E. 998, act providing for examinati judgment debtors, owing for necessaries; Sawyer v. Dooley, 21 399, 32 Pac. 440, statute providing summary process for sa property for delinquent taxes amounting to less than $300; Bos Assessors v. Central Ry., 48 N. J. L. 289, 313, 319, 4 Atl. 598, 60
(but see dissenting opinion in 48 N. J. L. 346, 4 Atl. 627), holdin of 1884, "for taxation of railroad and canal property." See 25
St. Rep. 885, monographic note on fourteenth amendment.

Distinguished in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Poe, 61 Fed. 467, ing assessment on corporation determined by aggregate val
shares of stock, not uniform taxation.

115 U. S. 339–348, 29 L. 432, KNICKERBOCKER, ETC., INS
v. PENDLETON.

Appeal and error.— It appearing after reversal of judgmen
low for plaintiffs, that writ and citation were served on bu plaintiff, although supersedeas bond was executed to all, ar
ment of writ and new citation were allowed, p. 342.

Approved in Dolan v. Jennings, 139 U. S. 387, 35 L. 218, 11
585, Walton v. Marietta Chair Co., 157 U. S. 347, 39 L. 727, Ct. 628, and Dunlop v. United States, 165 U. S. 495, 41 L. 80
S. Ct. 378, holding proof of custom to deliver papers at home presumption that paper was delivered; Cotter v. Alabama, etc., 61 Fed. 750, 22 U. S. App. 372, as to practice in allowing ar ments of writ.

Banks are quasi-public institutions, p. 344.

Evidence of bank's customs and usages is admissible to cor
rate cashier's conviction and belief of presentation of draft, p.

Evidence.— After long lapse of time it will be presumed duties have been performed and business done in accordance custom and course of business of bank, p. 344.

Approved in The City of Naples, 69 Fed. 795, 32 U. S. App.
holding presumption is against disregard of one's safety; Spu United States, 87 Fed. 705, 59 U. S. App. 677, holding bank off legal duty to be informed of condition of account, prima facie dence of his information.

115 U. S. 348–352, 29 L. 412, SARGENT v. HELTON.

Courts.— Where sale of lands of bankrupt estate has been
and confirmed by Bankruptcy Court, and assignee has conv

Circuit Court cannot, at suit of purchaser, enjoin sale of same lands upon order of State court, p. 351.

Approved in In re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 220, 31 L. 409, 8 S. Ct. 493, denying Federal power to enjoin mayor from removing city officer; Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 73 Fed. 734, refusing to enjoin party from enforcing State court judgment; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. St. Joseph, etc., Co., 92 Fed. 26, refusing to enjoin maintenance of action in State court on ground of its prior adjudication of question: Sullivan v. Rabb, 86 Ala. 439, 5 So. 748, incidentally; Harrison v. Powers, 76 Ga. 243, arguendo.

115 U. S. 353-363, 29 L. 406, WATTS v. CAMORS.

Shipping.— In charter-party describing ship by name and as of certain tonnage, or thereabouts, and in which owner agrees to receive cargo of 11,500 quarters of wheat, statement of tonnage is not warranty of condition precedent, and if her actual carrying capacity equals 11,500 quarters, charterer is bound to accept her, p. 360.

Approved in Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 63, 40 L. 618, 16 S. Ct. 489, holding agreement to ship on designated vessel, not broken by arrival on other; E. A. Packer v. New Jersey Lighterage Co., 140 U. S. 363, 35 L. 456, 11 S. Ct. 795, The City of New York, 147 U. S. 76, 37 L. 87, 13 S. Ct. 213, and Warehouse, etc., Supply Co. v. Galvin, 96 Wis. 530, 65 Am. St. Rep. 60, 71 N. W. 806, arguendo.

Admiralty.— United States courts will enforce general admiralty law as construed in United States, rather than that of loci contractu, p. 361.

Approved in Liverpool Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 453, 32 L. 796, 9 S. Ct. 476, and The Brantford City, 29 Fed. 387, holding carrier's stipulations exempting himself from liability, construable irrespective of law of the flags; The Scotia, 35 Fed. 912, holding lien for supplies depends on law of place, not of flag.

Shipping.— Charter-party clause, whereby parties mutually bind themselves, ship, freight, etc., "in penal sum of estimated freight," to performance of agreements, is not stipulation for liquidated damages, but a penalty to secure payment of amount of damage that either party may actually suffer from breach of contract, p. 361.

Approved in Bignall v. Gould, 119 U. S. 498, 30 L. 492, 7 S. Ct. 295, construing specified damages as penalty; Dalbeattie S. S. Co. v. Card, 59 Fed. 160, holding net freight earned by taking another cargo deductable from damages for refusing vessel; The Oscoda, 70 Fed. 112, arguendo.

Distinguished in Nilson v. Jonesboro, 57 Ark. 175, 20 S. W. 1094, holding, where damages from breach would be uncertain, sum named presumed liquidated damages.

Shipping.— It is not duty of master to seek another cargo mediately upon tender and refusal of ship, where charter-p allows fifteen days for loading, when negotiations are pending tween parties thereafter, p. 363.

115 U. S. 363–373, 29 L. 393, POPE v. ALLIS.

Pleading.— Where complaint alleges contract for delivery at place, and answer at another, plaintiff's evidence tending to port answer is admissible under Wisconsin statute, providing no variance shall be material unless actually misleading, p. 3

Approved in Kuhn v. McKay, 7 Wyo. 56, 49 Pac. 476, w proof sustained answer.

Appeal and error.— Party failing to prove at trial that he been misled by variance between complaint and proof, cannot plain thereof upon appeal, p. 368.

Approved in Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U. S. 479, 41 L. 234, 16 S 1069, holding variance immaterial unless of character to mis adversary.

Evidence.— Bill or answer in equity, or pleading in law, s to by party, is competent evidence against him in another su a solemn admission of facts stated, p. 370.

Distinguished in Deleware County v. Diebold Safe Co., 133 487, 33 L. 680, 10 S. Ct. 403, holding unverified complaint, si by attorney, incompetent as admission of facts; Cleveland v. C land, etc., Ry., 93 Fed. 129, holding allegation that defendants lawfully keep plaintiff out of possession, not admission of adv possession.

Evidence.— Averment upon information and belief, in ve pleading, is admissible, although not conclusive evidence in an suit, of facts stated, p. 370.

Approved in Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Ohle, 117 U. S. 129, 29 L. 6 S. Ct. 635, holding affidavit on information, etc., as to citizen admissible against affiant on motion to remand.

Sales.— When subject-matter of sale is not in existence, o ascertained at time of contract, undertaking that it shall, whe isting, or ascertained, possess certain qualities, is not a mere ranty, but a condition, performance of which is precedent to obligation upon vendee under contract, p. 371.

Approved in Peace River, etc., Co. v. Graffiin, 58 Fed. 551, up ing defense that vessels did not sail at times specified in cont Rubin v. Sturtevant, 80 Fed. 932, 51 U. S. App. 289, holding ve on breach of express warranty in executory contract, may rejec rescind, or accept and sue on warranty; Alden v. Hart, 161 580, 37 N. E. 743, holding vendee may reject unmerchantable American Bronze Co. v. Gillette, 88 Mich. 235, 26 Am. St. Rep.

50 N. W. 138, holding omission of age from monument gives orderer right to reject; Henry Gaus, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Magee, etc., Mfg. Co., 42 Mo. App. 313, holding vendee not bound to accept chattel different from article sold, as long as contract remains executory; Charter, etc., Co. v. Coleridge, etc., Bank, 54 Neb. 746, 74 N. W. 1071, holding development of specified power, condition precedent to completion of sale of engine; Pierson v. Crooks, 115 N. Y. 553, 12 Am. St. Rep. 840, 22 N. E. 354, holding quality part of description of goods, and vendee may inspect; Wadhams v. Balfour, 32 Or. 324, 51 Pac. 645, sale by sample.

Distinguished in Crane Co. v. Columbus Const. Co., 73 Fed. 992, 993, 994, 46 U. S. App. 52, holding vendee, under entire executory contract of sale, cannot repudiate in respect to part of goods and enforce as to remainder.

Sale by sample amounts to undertaking that all the goods are similar in nature and quality to those exhibited, and if not, buyer may refuse to receive, or if received, may return in reasonable time allowed for examination, p. 372.

Reaffirmed in Wadhams v. Balfour, 32 Or. 325, 326, 327, 51 Pac. 645, 646.

Sales.— When vendor sells goods of specified quality, but not in existence or ascertained, and undertakes to ship to distant buyer, when in existence or ascertained, and delivers them to carrier for buyer, latter has right of inspection on arrival, and to reject them if not of specified quality, p. 373.

Approved in Pierson v. Crooks, 115 N. Y. 549, 12 Am. St. Rep. 837, 22 N. E. 352, holding carrier not vendee's agent to accept goods as corresponding with contract; Albion, etc., Min. Co. v. Wyllie, 77 Fed. 549, 42 U. S. App. 214, generally; McLane v. Creditors, 47 La. Ann. 142, 16 So. 768, arguendo.

115 U. S. 373-383, 29 L. 409, BELL v. FIRST NAT. BANK.

Bill dated March 4th, payable in London sixty days after sight, drawn in Illinois on person in Liverpool, and accepted thereby, "due 21 May," without date of acceptance, was prematurely protested on May 21st, it not appearing that days of grace were allowed, p. 383.

Bills and notes.— As to bills not payable on demand, day on which payment is to be made to prevent dishonor is to be determined by adding three days of grace, where bill itself does not otherwise provide, p. 383.

Not cited.

115 U. S. 384-392, 29 L. 430, MERCHANTS' BANK v. BERGEN COUNTY.

Municipal corporations.— Purchasers of municipal securities risk genuineness of official signature of those executing paper, including not only that of signature itself, but of official charact maker thereof, p. 390.

Approved in Coler v. Cleburne, 131 U. S. 174, 33 L. 150, 9 S
724, holding recitals do not estop municipality from allegin validity of signature; Ennis v. Bank, 94 Tenn. 68, 28 S. W.
holding seller of municipal bonds does not incur liability of
antor of genuineness and solvency.

Municipal corporations.— Purchasers of securities having special power to issue same for specified purpose, must see that conditions prescribed for exercise of power exist, p. 391.

Approved in Burnett v. Denison, 145 U. S. 139, 36 L. 653, 12 S 829, where recital of ordinance was incomplete; Myers v. Jeffe ville, 145 Ind. 437, 44 N. E. 454, holding purchasers chargeable notice of irregularity of issue; Keehn v. Wooster, 13 Ohio C. C.
holding purchasers of bonds chargeable with requirements of thorizing act; Brown v. Bon Homme County, 1 S. Dak. 225, 4
W. 175, affirming rule; dissenting opinion in West Plains Twp
Sage, 69 Fed. 352, 32 U. S. App. 725, majority holding municipa estopped by recitals from setting up illegality. See 98 Am.
688, note on municipal bonds and defenses.

Bills and notes.— Doctrine of bona fide purchaser does not ply to commercial paper, purporting to be issued under deleg authority, until delegation is established, p. 391.

Approved in Brown v. Bon Homme County, 1 S. Dak. 228,
N. W. 176, arguendo.

Municipal corporation is not estopped to deny validity of bo issued in excess of authority, where bonds contain no recit
p. 392.

Approved in Daviess County v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 665, 29
1030, 6 S. Ct. 902, holding bonds issued in excess of number thorized, void; Mercer County v. Provident, etc., Co., 72 Fed.
43 U. S. App. 21, where validity of bonds depended on complet of railroad; Brown v. Bon Homme County, 1 S. Dak. 227, 46 N.
176, holding county must have legislative authority to issue bon
and officers participating in issue must perform respective dut Edinburgh, etc., Co. v. City of Mitchell, 1 S. Dak. 607, 48 N. W. 1
arguendo.

Distinguished in Note Holders v. Funding Board, 16 Lea, 59,
Am. Rep. 213, arguendo.

115 U. S. 392-407, 29 L. 423, DEFFEBACK v. HAWKE.

Statutes.— Reference to original statutes cannot be had to c trol revised statutes, when meaning thereof is plain, p. 402.

Approved in Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S.
39 L. 612, 15 S. Ct. 517, holding courts cannot look to statutes see if Congress erred in revision; Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 420, 20 S. Ct. 158, holding prior acts may be examined only to solve ambiguity.

Mines and minerals.— No title from government to land known, at time of sale, to be valuable for minerals of gold, silver, cinnabar or copper, can be obtained under pre-emption, homestead or townsite laws, or otherwise than by laws specially authorizing sale of such lands, except in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri and Kansas, p. 404.

Approved in Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 411, 29 L. 429, 6 S. Ct. 104, holding one without title, making improvements on public mineral land without claim for same; Davis's Administrator v. Wiebold, 139 U. S. 515, 517, 35 L. 241, 242, 11 S. Ct. 631, 632, reaffirming rule; Barden v. Northern Pac. Ry., 154 U. S. 322, 38 L. 1000, 14 S. Ct. 1036, United States v. Cent. Pac. Ry., 84 Fed. 220, cancelling patent conveying mineral lands knowingly purchased as agricultural; Butte City Smoke-House Lode Cases, 6 Mont. 405, 12 Pac. 863, holding mining claim owner not required to file adverse claim to townsite patent covering claim; King v. Thomas, 6 Mont. 411, 12 Pac. 866, holding townsite patent to Butte City does not cover mineral ground included therein; United States v. San Pedro, etc., Co., 4 N. Mex. 294, 296, 17 Pac. 406, 408, holding act confirming title under Mexican grant, conveys no title to mineral lands therein included; dissenting opinions in Northern Pac. Ry. v. Barden, 46 Fed. 615, 616, arguendo; Shreve v. Copper Bell Min. Co., 11 Mont. 339, 28 Pac. 321, majority defining "valuable mineral deposit;" Horsky v. Moran, 21 Mont. 364, 53 Pac. 1071, arguendo.

Distinguished in New Dunderberg Min. Co. v. Old, 79 Fed. 602, 49 U. S. App. 208, holding judgment of land department in issuing patent to mineral lands, conclusive collaterally; McCormick v. Sutton, 97 Cal. 376, 32 Pac. 445, holding patent to townsite conveys perfect title in fee, except as to lands known to contain mines.

Mines and minerals.— Term "mineral lands" does not include lands in which minerals are found, but not in sufficient quantity to justify expenditure in effort to extract them, p. 404.

Approved in Davis's Administrator v. Weibold, 139 U. S. 524, 35 L. 244, 11 S. Ct. 634, holding grant carries with it determination of proper authorities that land is not subject to exception; Richards v. Dower, 81 Cal. 51, 22 Pac. 306, denying presumption that ledge, once profitably worked, continues valuable; Hermocilla v. Hubbell, 89 Cal. 9, 26 Pac. 612, holding proof sufficient that lands in question were mineral; Smith v. Hill, 89 Cal. 129, 26 Pac. 646, holding paying mine must be known or believed to exist at time of townsite grant in order to render same invalid; Brownfield v. Bier, 15 Mont. 414, 415, 39 Pac. 464, 465, holding lode or vein exempted from placer [illegible] under § 2333, R. S., must be clearly ascertained, and of extent to justify exploration; dissenting opinions in Iron Silver C Mike, etc., Co., 143 U. S. 424, 36 L. 211, 12 S. Ct. 553, ma question whether sufficient gold existed in vein to justify ex tion, for jury; Shreve v. Copper Bell Min. Co., 11 Mont. 336, 3

Pac. 320, 322, majority holding discovery of deposits suffic
valuable to justify exploration, sufficient as condition of rec notice.

Mines and minerals.— Subsequent discovery of valuable mi
upon land settled for agricultural purposes, and patented
pre-emption laws, does not invalidate title thereto, p. 405.

Approved in Davis's Administrator v. Weibold, 139 U. S. 5
L. 245, 11 S. Ct. 635, holding exception includes only lands kno date of grant to be of mineral value; Dower v. Richards, 151 663, 38 L. 307, 14 S. Ct. 454, affirming S. C., 81 Cal. 52, 22 Pa holding land must be known to be more valuable for mineral agricultural purposes, at date of townsite patent; Shaw v. Ke 170 U. S. 333, 42 L. 1058, 18 S. Ct. 641, holding title once p free from conditions of subsequent mineral discoveries; Mig Montana Cent. Ry., 77 Fed. 256, 44 U. S. App. 724 (affirming 68 Fed. 814), United States v. Cent. Pac. Ry., 93 Fed. 873
Hunt v. Steese, 75 Cal. 625, 17 Pac. 922, holding claimant mineral location, as against patentee, must prove known g mineral than agricultural value of land at time of patent; B
v. Meikle, 82 Fed. 704, and McCormick v. Sutton, 97 Cal. 3
Pac. 444, both holding discovery of mine, after issuance of to patent, gives claimant no right as against patentee; Colorado
Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 327, 31 L. 190, 8 S. Ct. 141, h mere fact of surface indications of coal, will not prevent acqu
by patent; Benson Min. Co. v. Alta Min. Co., 145 U. S. 433, 764, 12 S. Ct. 879, holding price of claim being paid, obligat do annual work ceases; dissenting opinion in Northern Pac.
Barden, 46 Fed. 619, majority holding exclusion of mineral from grant to plaintiff, applied only to known mineral lands proved, obiter, in Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U. S. 169, 851, 6 S. Ct. 680.

Distinguished in Barden v. Northern Pac. Ry., 154 U. S. 3
L. 1000, 14 S. Ct. 1036, holding grant to Northern Pacific ra excluded all mineral lands, known or unknown; United Sta San Pedro, etc., Co., 4 N. Mex. 295, 17 Pac. 407, where land pa was notoriously mineral.

Mines and minerals.— Where land is entered as mining cla adverse claim is filed with register and receiver of local land
and entry is not cancelled or disapproved by land departmen tificate of purchase given upon entry is, as to strangers, equi
to patent, and land ceases to be subject to sale by govern which thenceforth holds legal title only in trust for holder o tificate, p. 405.

d in United States v. Freyberg, 32 Fed. 197, holding, t to patent becomes vested, government holds legal title or purchaser; Aurora Hill, etc., Min. Co. v. Eighty-five 2 Sawy. 360, 34 Fed. 518, holding uncancelled entry, and equivalent to patent, as to strangers; Amador, etc., Min. th Spring, etc., Min. Co., 13 Sawy. 525, 36 Fed. 670, hold- ble title vests in purchaser upon entry, payment, and rtificate; Knabe v. Burden, 88 Ala. 438, 7 So. 93, holding certificate of entry vests title sufficient to maintain eject- o v. Griffin, 20 Nev. 253, 20 Pac. 309, completion and pay- rice passed equitable title; Godding v. Decker, 3 Colo. 32 Pac. 834, holding receiver's receipt good title, concern- parties may contract; Horsky v. Moran, 21 Mont. 350, 35, holding government certificate may be collaterally at- want of authority for issuance can be shown; dissenting South End Min. Co. v. Tinney, 22 Nev. 57, 35 Pac. 102, ished in United States v. Steenerson, 50 Fed. 507, 4 U. S. and American Mtge. Co. v. Hopper, 64 Fed. 558, 29 U. S. oth holding issuance of certificate of payment does not partment of right to cancel entry for fraud, before patent nd minerals.— Patent to mineral lands, subsequently tes back to inception of right of patentee, p. 405.

d in Gilkerson, etc., Co. v. Forbes, 54 Ark. 149, 26 Am. , 15 S. W. 191, holding one becoming entitled to patent nestead acts, may mortgage before issuance thereof; City of Butte, 7 Mont. 68, 14 Pac. 657, holding patent location of mine, cutting off subsequent grants; Deno v. Nev. 252, 20 Pac. 309, holding doctrine of relation applies ut off intervening claimants from subsequent locations; ank v. Riley, 29 Or. 292, 54 Am. St. Rep. 795, 45 Pac. 767, d acquired by homesteader on public domain, not liable contracted after final proofs; dissenting opinion in South Co. v. Tinney, 22 Nev. 46, 35 Pac. 98, majority holding upon plaintiff's abandonment, valid, as against patent ly obtained by plaintiff.

nd minerals.— Government land officers have no author- rt in patent to mineral lands, any other terms than those ance, with recitals showing compliance with law and prescribed thereby, p. 406.

d in Davis's Administrator v. Weibold, 139 U. S. 528, 35 S. Ct. 636, holding exception of townsite occupancy and nts, invalid; Sullivan v. Iron Silver, etc., Co., 143 U. S. 218, 12 S. Ct. 559, holding exception from placer patent claimed to exist," too broad; Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 1059, 18 S. Ct. 643, Francœur v. Newhouse, 40 Fed. 622, 14

Sawy. 357, and Northern Pac. Ry. v. Barden, 46 Fed. 603, all hol insertion in patent, of exception not expressly authorized by void; Butte City Smoke-House Lode Cases, 6 Mont. 407, 12 863, holding reservation in mining patent, excluding streets, etc surface, void.

Mines and minerals.— Patent of placer mining claim ca
with it title to surface included within lines of location, as we
to land beneath surface, p. 406.

Approved in South End Min. Co. v. Tinney, 22 Nev. 62, 35
105, majority holding plaintiff's patent void as against party cating after plaintiff's abandonment, prior to patent.

Ejectment.— There can be no color of title in occupant not ing under any instrument, proceeding, or law purporting to t fer title to him, or to give him right of possession; hence, defen
not so holding, denied allowance for improvements under Da statute, allowing value thereof to be set up by defendant hol under color of title, p. 407.

Approved in Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 413, 29 L. 430, 6 S
105, denying right to compensation for improvements made mineral land, by party without title; State v. Portsmouth Bank, 106 Ind. 460, 7 N. E. 395, holding State not estopped asserting title, by permitting improvements, where its title is to notice; Woodruff v. Wallace, 3 Okl. 375, 41 Pac. 364, hol homestead filing does not convey "color of title" within mea
of occupying claimants act of 1874.

Distinguished in Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 308, 3 462, 13 S. Ct. 598, holding color of title exists whenever reason doubt exists regarding title.

Ejectment.— Adverse holding is not in good faith, where p knows that he has no title, and that under law he can acquire by occupation; hence, benefit of Dakota statute allowing defend in ejectment holding adversely to claim of plaintiff, in good f
to set up value of improvements, denied defendant occup
mineral lands claimed by plaintiff, p. 407.

Approved in Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 412, 29 L. 429, 6 S
105, holding mere occupancy of public lands gave no vested ri against government or its grantees; Litchfield v. Sewell, 97 I 251, 66 N. W. 106, holding possession under quitclaim from c pant known to have no title, not adverse; Woodruff v. Wallac Okl. 378, 41 Pac. 365, holding party whose homestead entry been cancelled for fraud, not entitled to benefits of occupying cl ants act of 1874.

115 U. S. 408–413, 29 L. 428, SPARKS v. PIERCE.

Mines and minerals.— Patent for mineral lands is itself evid that all requirements of law, for sale thereof, have been com with, p. 412.

ved in Irvine v. Tarbat, 105 Cal. 243, 38 Pac. 897, holding unattackable collaterally; Butte City Smoke-House Lode Mont. 409, 12 Pac. 864, holding mineral patent evidence of nce with law in all proceedings prior to issuance.

: lands.— Mere occupancy of public lands, and improve- hereon, give no vested right as against government, or its , p. 413.

ved in Hays v. United States, 175 U. S. 260, 20 S. Ct. 84, possession since treaty of Guadaloupe Hidalgo, will not con- ; Southern Pac. Ry. v. Purcell, 77 Cal. 71, 18 Pac. 887, mere possession of public lands gives no right as against ent; King v. Thomas, 6 Mont. 411, 12 Pac. 866, holding of limitations cannot run against mining claim until issu- patent; Mills v. Traver, 35 Neb. 296, 53 N. W. 68, holding f limitations only runs against entryman in favor of adverse , where former's right to patent vests; Parker v. Lynch, 0, 56 Pac. 1091, holding offer to file contest against home- try, gives no right in land; Wilson v. Triumph, etc., Min. Utah, 74, 56 Pac. 302, holding, as against one connecting with government, mere occupancy cannot avail.

guished in Bonner v. Meikle, 82 Fed. 700, holding occupants lots on public lands have possessory right, entitling them to issuance of patent to claimant of mining location therein; . Price, 54 Ark. 258, 15 S. W. 885, holding occupant, with purchase, may attack patent fraudulently issued to another.

: lands.— To entitle party to relief against patent, it is not to show patentee's want of right, but it must affirmatively hat officers of land department should have issued it to instead, p. 413.

rmed in Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 50, 29 L. 571, 6 S. Ct. 240, v. Sanford, 139 U. S. 648, 35 L. 292, 11 S. Ct. 667, Bangs v. son, 63 Mich. 669, 30 N. W. 320, South End Min. Co. v. 22 Nev. 33, 35 Pac. 93 (but see dissenting opinion in 22 35 Pac. 102), and Sanford v. Sanford, 19 Or. 5, 13 Pac. 603. d in Driver v. Evans, 47 Ark. 300, 1 S. W. 519, holding of swamp land from State, provable only by deed.

d in Duluth, etc., Ry. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 590, 19 S. Ct. 550, claimant against patent must so far bring himself within to entitle him to complete claim.

: lands.— Party making improvements on public land, know- he has no title, and of its mineral nature, and making no secure title, cannot claim compensation for his improve- s adverse holder in good faith, when sale is made to an- der mineral patent, p. 413.

Approved in State v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 106 Ind. 460, 7
394, holding permitting improvements to be made, does not
State from asserting title, where its title was open to notice.

115 U. S. 413–429, 29 L. 435, ALABAMA v. BURR.

Corporations.— Liability of railroad officers and stockhold
State, on its loan, under Alabama acts of 1867, 1870, is sta only, and recovery can be had only when facts stated in decla bring them within operation of liability clause in statute, p.

Cited in Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co., 127 U. S. 296, 32 L
8 S. Ct. 1377, arguendo.

Railroads.— Obligation to use State indorsed bonds to buil equip railroad, is satisfied by actual completion thereof, in a ance with statute, at bona fide cost to company of more than a of bonds, p. 427.

Pleadings must state facts, not conclusions of law, p. 429.

Approved in Stutsman County v. Mansfield, 5 Dak. 86, 37 398, holding conclusion in pleading of no legal effect; diss opinion in Fideler v. Norton, 4 Dak. 282, 32 N. W. 59, arguend

115 U. S. 429–439, 29 L. 419, EACHUS v. BROOMALL.

Patents.— Comparison of two patents to determine qu raised, as to identity of inventions therein described, requires pretation of original patent, in light of state of the art when cation was filed, p. 434.

Approved in Grier v. Wilt, 120 U. S. 429, 30 L. 718, 7 S. C holding other patents admissible evidence to show prior state Britton v. White Mfg. Co., 61 Fed. 96, and Martin, etc., Martin, 67 Fed. 787, 33 U. S. App. 157, both holding proof of state of art admissible to aid in construction of patent; Kenn Solar Ref. Co., 69 Fed. 719, holding proof of prior state of a missible without notice in pleadings; Missouri, etc., Mfg.
Stempel, 75 Fed. 584, investigating state of art to determine wh
patent should be construed broadly or narrowly.

Patent No. 142, 154, to Eachus, for cutting paper boards, co only particular organization of machine described, and not pr
p. 436.

Cited obiter in Arnheim v. Finster, 26 Fed. 280.

Patent.— Where original patent is for machine, reissue att
ing to cover process also, is invalid, p. 438.

Approved in Eastern Paper-Bag Co. v. Standard, etc., Co., 3 65, holding claim to process cannot be secured by reissuing ma
patent.

115 U. S. 439–453, 29 L. 440, GIBSON v. LYON.

Mortgagee is under no obligation to accept offer of stranger to pay mortgage debt, in consideration of assignment of mortgage to third party, p. 445.

Ejectment.— In Pennsylvania, former judgment in ejectment is no bar to subsequent action, p. 445.

Approved in Barber v. Pittsburgh, etc., Ry., 166 U. S. 99, 41 L. 933, 17 S. Ct. 491, and Barber v. Pittsburgh, etc., Ry., 69 Fed. 503, both holding single judgment in ejectment in Pennsylvania, not conclusive in Federal courts.

Courts.— Judgment of highest State court, on question of local law, is entitled to greatest respect in Supreme Court, p. 446.

Approved in Miller v. Ammon, 145 U. S. 423, 36 L. 761, 12 S. Ct. 885, following Illinois court's construction of city ordinance; Balkam v. Woodstock Iron Co., 154 U. S. 189, 38 L. 957, 14 S. Ct. 1014, following State construction of State statute of limitations; Buchanan v. Denig, 84 Fed. 865, following State court's construction of will.

Courts.— State court judgment on local law is not conclusive in Federal courts, unless a rule of property, p. 446.

Approved in Barber v. Pittsburgh, etc., Ry., 166 U. S. 100, 41 L. 933, 17 S. Ct. 491, holding single State judgment on construction of will, not conclusive.

Estoppel.— Party cannot be permitted to claim both under and against same deed; hence, purchaser under sale of Probate Court is estopped to deny its authority to sell subject to incumbrances, p. 447.

Approved in Merritt v. Byers, 46 Minn. 78, 48 N. W. 418, holding grantee accepting expressly subject to mortgage, estopped to claim benefit of prior warranty against incumbrances; Scanlon v. Alexander, 71 Minn. 358, 70 Am. St. Rep. 329, 74 N. W. 148, holding vendee assuming mortgage, estopped to claim obligation thereof usurious.

Judicial sales.— Fact that judgment was erroneous, and might have been reversed on error, does not invalidate sale thereunder, before reversal, p. 453.

Approved in Andrews v. National, etc., Works, 77 Fed. 776, 46 U. S. App. 622, 36 L. R. A. 154, and n., holding foreclosure sale not attackable collaterally, in subsequent creditor's bill.

115 U. S. 454–463, 29 L. 449, GAGE v. PUMPELLY.

Courts.— Highest State court decisions, establishing rules of property, will be followed by Federal courts, p. 462.

Approved in Lowndes v. Huntington, 153 U. S. 19, 38 L. 618, 14 S. Ct. 760, holding State decisions on purposes for which submerged land may be granted, controlling; San Diego Flume Co. v. Sout 90 Fed. 168, 61 U. S. App. 142, holding State decision on power irrigating companies, controlling.

Taxation.— In Illinois, tax sale of land is void, when portio tax is illegal, p. 462.

Approved in Baldwin v. Elizabeth, 42 N. J. Eq. 14, 6 Atl.
but holding claimant must pay legal tax before sale can be aside; Morris v. Roseberry, 46 W. Va. 29, 32 S. E. 1021, but hol claimant must reimburse purchaser for taxes paid.

Appellate court cannot consider objection, on part of appellee
decree appealed from, p. 463.

115 U. S. 464, 29 L. 446, JONES v. BENTHUYSEN.

Internal revenue.— Tobacco merchant is not liable to be ta
for revenue stamps required, before removal from bonded w house, unless affixed at time of sale, and part of price paid b
p. 464.

Not cited.

115 U. S. 465-469, 29 L. 445, LEONARD v. OZARK LAND CO.

Injunction ordered by final decree is not vacated by app
p. 468.

Approved in Knox County v. Harshman, 132 U. S. 16, 33 L.
10 S. Ct. 9, and Teasdale v. Jones, 40 Mo. App. 250, both hold appeal from order dissolving injunction does not revive same; S
v. Dillon, 96 Mo. 62, 8 S. W. 783, and Ex parte Whitmore, 9 U 447, 35 Pac. 526, both holding lower court may punish violation injunction, pending appeal.

Distinguished in Neiser v. Thomas, 46 Mo. App. 51, holding app with supersedeas does not keep restraining order in force.

Injunction.— Supreme Court may modify injunction granted decree below, in advance of final hearing of appeal on merits, p.

Injunction.— Under Supreme Court equity rule 93, judge be may, when allowing appeal from final injunction decree, m
order that injunction continue in force, p. 469.

Approved in Ferguson v. Dent, 29 Fed. 9, refusing to dispos receiver, pending appeal; American, etc., Co. v. Indianapolis Ws Co., 81 Fed. 423, 46 U. S. App. 526, refusing to suspend injunct pending appeal, previous to hearing on merits; dissenting opinion Elliot v. Whitmore, 10 Utah, 245, 37 Pac. 461, majority holding fusal of supersedeas to stay injunction against taking water, er

115 U. S. 469-476, 29 L. 446, ST. LOUIS, ETC., RY. v. McGEE.

Public lands granted by Congress, to aid railroad constructi
do not revert, after condition broken, until forfeiture has been

serted by government, either through courts or legislative action, equivalent to office found, p. 474.

Reaffirmed in Houston, etc., Ry. v. Texas, 170 U. S. 260, 42 L. 1029, 18 S. Ct. 616, Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 39 Fed. 149 (overruled, see Angle v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 151 U. S. 27, 36), Northern Pac. Ry. v. Cannon, 46 Fed. 239, Steele v. Walker, 115 Ala. 490, 67 Am. St. Rep. 65, 21 So. 944, Wilson v. Beckwith, 117 Mo. 76, 22 S. W. 642, and United States Trust Co. v. Atlantic, etc., Ry., 8 N. Mex. 685, 47 Pac. 728. Approved in Doe v. Larmore, 116 U. S. 198, 29 L. 598, 6 S. Ct. 365, a like case; Bybee v. Oregon, etc., Ry., 139 U. S. 675, 35 L. 307, 11 S. Ct. 643, construing grant of 1866 to Central Pacific railroad; Lake Superior Ry. v. Cunningham, 44 Fed. 822 (but see dissenting opinion, p. 841), holding subsequent grant to another, without assertion of forfeiture, void; Orr v. State, 56 Ark. 110, 19 S. W. 320, holding only State can take advantage of non-payment of interest on school lands; Wilson v. Beckwith, 140 Mo. 386, 41 S. W. 992, holding grants to State for railroads, grants in præsenti; The Wisconsin Cent. Ry. v. Comstock, 71 Wis. 92, 36 N. W. 845, holding fully-earned railroad lands liable to State taxation, prior to patent; Shepard v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 40 Fed. 353, arguendo.

Public lands.— Legislation, to be a sufficient assertion of forfeiture of railroad lands, for condition broken, must clearly manifest intention by Congress to reassert title, and resume possession; act of July 28, 1866, relating to grants in Arkansas and Missouri, manifests no such intention, p. 474.

Approved in Doe v. Larmore, 116 U. S. 199, 29 L. 598, 6 S. Ct. 366, holding act of April 10, 1869, an extension of time in original grants; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 25, 42 L. 936, 18 S. Ct. 537, holding treaty of 1838 vested legal title to reservation in Indians; United States v. Union Pac. Ry., 37 Fed. 553, holding Congress' intent to work forfeiture must be clear; Lake Superior, etc., Ry. v. Cunningham, 44 Fed. 827, construing joint resolution of July 5, 1862.

Cited, but application denied, in Miller's Executors v. Swann, 150 U. S. 137, 37 L. 1030, 14 S. Ct. 54, and Miller v. Swann et al., 89 Ala. 637, 7 So. 773.

Distinguished in Shepard v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 40 Fed. 352, 354, holding act of July 3, 1866, assertion of forfeiture of Amboy, etc., railway's grant; De Lancey v. Piegras, 138 N. Y. 40, 33 N. E. 825, holding act authorizing sale, sufficient assertion of forfeiture.

115 U. S. 477–481, 29 L. 453, DREW v. GRINNELL.

Customs duties.— Article of silk and cotton, sold as "dotted net," but really a lace, in which silk is component of chief value, is dutiable as silk lace, p. 481.

[illegible] Dates on U. S. Reports.

[illegible] v. [illegible], 145 U. S. 257, 36 L. [illegible] "State Currents," [illegible] general classificat[illegible]

[illegible] v. ABOHURS.

[illegible] replevin agains[illegible]

[illegible]—Where, under agreement to p[illegible] no right to [illegible] If he cuts timb[illegible] he has no such posses[illegible]

[illegible] 39 Fed. 136, incidentally, furt[illegible]

[illegible]—Pennsylvania act of 1871, reg[illegible] does not apply to tenants in common.

[illegible] v. MOFFITT.

[illegible] by one arrested for crime, is [illegible] to assert civil right of pers[illegible] as a criminal, p. [illegible]

[illegible] v. Burke, 146 U. S. 88, 36 L. 898, [illegible] judgments of Supreme Court [illegible] King v. McLean Asyl[illegible] 786, upholding juris[illegible] by citizen of one State see[illegible] by citizen of another.

[illegible]—Federal jurisdiction on rem[illegible] a certain sum or value, inclu[illegible] can be valued in money; h[illegible] under act of March 3, 1875, p. 49[illegible]

[illegible] v. United States, 118 U. S. 354[illegible] Territorial Sup[illegible] with more than [illegible] 32 L. 618, 9 S. C[illegible] Territorial Supreme Court, to [illegible] guilty of misdemeanor; Lau[illegible] 36 L. 344, 12 S. Ct. 520[illegible] Court of Appeals in habeas c[illegible] 38 L. 744, 14 S. Ct. [illegible] mandamus to compel re[illegible] Simms v. Simms, 175 U. S. 1[illegible] from decree of Territorial Su[illegible] v. Board of Supervisors, 1[illegible]

28 Fed. 225, holding mandamus not removable under act of 1875; Chappell v. Chappell, 86 Md. 544, 39 Atl. 989, holding divorce proceeding not removable, although involving alimony; In re Borrego, 8 N. Mex. 657, 46 Pac. 211, holding no appeal lies from Territorial Supreme Court to United States Supreme Court, in habeas corpus proceedings; Huskins v. Cincinnati, etc., Ry., 37 Fed. 508, arguendo.

Distinguished in Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 173, 29 L. 602, 6 S. Ct. 573, sustaining appellate jurisdiction of judgment of Supreme Court, District of Columbia, dismissing petition for prohibition to court-martial, where offense was punishable by deprivation of salary exceeding $5,000; Erwin v. Walsh, 23 Blatchf. 536, 27 Fed. 581, holding mandamus to compel allowance of appeal from probate of will, removable.

Arrest.— At common law, neither civil officer nor private citizen had right, without warrant, to arrest for crime not committed in his presence, except in case of felony, p. 499.

Approved in Mackin v. United States, 117 U. S. 352, 29 L. 911, 6 S. Ct. 779, holding crime punishable by imprisonment in State prison, an infamous crime, within fifth constitutional amendment; United States v. Johannesen, 35 Fed. 413, holding punishment for violation of internal revenue laws, "infamous;" Palmer v. Maine Cent. Ry., 92 Me. 408, 409, 69 Am. St. Rep. 516, 517, 518, 42 Atl. 803, 44 L. R. A. 675, denying right to arrest without warrant, on complaint of "fraudulently evading payment of fare;" Scott v. Eldridge, 154 Mass. 27, 27 N. E. 677, 12 L. R. A. 382, holding officer cannot arrest without warrant, for past misdemeanor, committed in another State.

Army and navy.— Courts-martial form no part of judicial system of United States, and their proceedings, within limits of their jurisdiction, cannot be controlled or revised by civil courts, p. 500.

Approved in Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 177, 29 L. 604, 6 S. Ct. 575, holding prohibition does not lie to court-martial to correct mistakes of law or facts on its decision; Johnson v. Sayre, 158 U. S. 115, 39 L. 917, 15 S. Ct. 776, holding paymaster's clerk in navy subject to trial by court-martial, for embezzlement; In re Kelly, 71 Fed. 553, holding United States criminal laws do not apply upon lands ceded for home for disabled volunteers.

Army and navy.— Desertion is exclusively a military crime, punishable by court-martial only, p. 501.

Army regulations derive their force from power of president, as commander-in-chief, and are binding upon all within sphere of his constitutional authority, p. 503.

Arrests.— Rule that peace officer, or private citizen, may, without warrant, arrest felon, does not extend to offender against military law; e. g., deserter, p. 504.

Approved in Kendall et al. v. Scheve, 3 Ohio C. C. 528, deny power of policeman to arrest deserter.

115 U. S. 505–512, 29 L. 456, SHEPERD v. MAY.

Vendor and purchaser.— Agreement merely to take land, subj to specified incumbrance, is not agreement to assume and pay sa and to raise such liability there must be words in deed from wh agreement to pay may be inferred, p. 510.

Approved in Winters v. Hub Min. Co., 57 Fed. 289, holding m gagee can only recover in equity against grantee assuming inc brance; Chilton v. Brooks, 72 Md. 558, 20 Atl. 127, holding gran does not assume mortgage debt by implication; Pendleton v. C ling, 11 Mont. 50, 27 Pac. 389, reaffirming rule; Lavelle v. Gord 15 Mont. 519, 39 Pac. 741, holding assignee of half interest in c tract to purchase land, not personally liable for payments; Gran v. Roll, 6 S. Dak. 619, 625, 62 N. W. 972, 974, holding grantee property subject to mortgage, not personally liable; Michigan S ings, etc., Co. v. Attebery, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 226, 42 S. W. holding purchaser of incumbered property estopped to deny l but not personally bound to pay debt.

Principal and surety.— There being no mutual agreement tween grantor, grantee and incumbrancer to that effect, relation principal and surety does not exist between grantee and grant hence, latter is not discharged of his liability by agreement extension of mortgage between other parties, p. 511.

Approved in Compton v. Jesup, 68 Fed. 318, 31 U. S. App. holding no novation unless mortgagee releases mortgagor and agr to look to grantee; Campbell v. Clay, 4 Colo. App. 553, 36 Pac. holding agreement between mortgagor and grantee for latter assume debt, does not affect mortgagee; Fish v. Glover, 154 Ill. 39 N. E. 1082, holding conveyance to one assuming mortgage d does not make mortgagor surety as to mortgagee; Chilton v. Bro 72 Md. 559, 20 Atl. 127, holding relation of principal and sur does not arise between grantor and grantee of mortgaged prope Washington Slate Co. v. Burdick, 60 Minn. 271, 62 N. W. 286, Guderian v. Leland, 61 Minn. 71, 63 N. W. 175, but holding bur on surety to prove extension given principal without his conse Shapleigh Hardware Co. v. Wells et al., 90 Tex. 112, 59 Am. St. 784, 37 S. W. 411, holding several debtors cannot, by mutual ag ment, change liability of one from principal to surety; dissent opinions in Hall et al. v. Johnston et al., 6 Tex. Civ. App. 24 S. W. 865, majority holding retiring partners discharged by tension of time to grantee by creditors; Willard v. Wood, 164 U 520, 41 L. 539, 17 S. Ct. 180, arguendo.

Distinguished in Keller v. Ashford, 133 U. S. 625, 33 L. 674, S. Ct. 498, where grantee assumed debts; Union Life Ins. Co. Hanford, 142 U. S. 190, 36 L. 120, 12 S. Ct. 438, holding, in Illin

grantee of mortgaged property becomes principal, and mortgagor surety; Travers v. Dorr, 60 Minn. 177, 62 N. W. 270, holding extension to grantee, without consent of mortgagor, releases latter to extent of value of land; Pratt v. Conway, 148 Mo. 295, 71 Am. St. Rep. 604, 49 S. W. 1029, holding grantee assuming mortgage debt principal, and mortgagor surety; Poe v. Dixon, 60 Ohio St. 130, 71 Am. St. Rep. 715, 54 N. E. 87, where grantee, as part of purchase price, assumed mortgage debt.

Mortgages.— Trust deed clause, providing that terms of sale should be amount due on note, and expenses of sale in cash, does not estop holder from denying payment in full, where he purchased at trust sale for sum less than amount due, p. 511.

Approved in Mallory v. Kessler, 18 Utah, 15, 72 Am. St. Rep. 766, 54 Pac. 892, holding amount realized on trust sale, payment on note, holder having action for deficiency; Granger v. Roll, 6 S. Dak. 623, 62 N. W. 973, arguendo.

115 U. S. 512-523, 29 L. 463, MISSOURI PAC. RY. v. HUMES.

Courts.— Highest State court's ruling on validity of State statute, under State Constitution, is not reviewable in Federal Supreme Court, p. 519.

Constitutional law.— If State laws be within legitimate sphere of legislative power, and enforced according to general rules prescribed for security of private rights, their harshness, injustice and oppressiveness will not invalidate them as affecting life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, p. 520.

Reaffirmed in New York, etc., Ry. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 570, 38 L. 274, 14 S. Ct. 441, Marchant v. Pennsylvania Ry., 153 U. S. 387, 38 L. 755, 14 S. Ct. 896, Fallbrook Irr. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 157, 41 L. 388, 17 S. Ct. 63, and St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 24, 41 L. 620, 17 S. Ct. 252. Approved in Pembina Min. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 125 U. S. 190, 31 L. 654, 8 S. Ct. 741, sustaining exaction of State license fee from foreign corporation maintaining office therein; Kansas v. Bradley, 26 Fed. 291, holding State may absolutely prohibit manufacture or sale of intoxicants; Leep v. Railway Co., 58 Ark. 415, 41 Am. St. Rep. 113, 25 S. W. 77, 23 L. R. A. 268, holding oppressiveness of constitutional law cannot be considered by courts; Waters, etc., Oil Co. v. State, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 14, 44 S. W. 942, upholding laws prohibiting combinations restraining trade; Virginia, etc., Co. v. Crozier, etc., Co., 90 Va. 131, 44 Am. St. Rep. 897, 17 S. E. 808, holding fact that law is special does not invalidate it; Attorney-General v. Jochim, 99 Mich. 373, 41 Am. St. Rep. 618, 58 N. W. 615, 23 L. R. A. 705, arguendo.

Distinguished in State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 312, 22 S. W. 351, 21 L. R. A. 803, and n. (but see dissenting opinion in 115 Mo. 323, 22 S. W. 354, 21 L. R. A. 806, and n.), holding law prohibiting mining or manufacturing corporations from paying in irredeemable "store checks," invalid.

Damages.—Legislature may fix amount of damages beyond c[illegible] pensation, for injuries resulting from gross negligence, or may [illegible] scribe limits within which jury may exercise discretion, p. 522.

Approved in New York, etc., Ry. v. Bennett, 50 Fed. 502, 6 U[illegible] App. [illegible], holding willful misconduct or gross negligence necess[illegible] to warrant punitory damages; Winters v. Cowen, 90 Fed. 103, h[illegible] ing [illegible] jury in awarding exemplary damages, may consider pl[illegible] tiff's expenses; Baker Wire Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 106 Iowa, [illegible] 76 N. W. [illegible], holding action for damages for excessive frei[illegible] charges, within limitations applying to penal actions; Railro[illegible] v. [illegible], [illegible] Tenn. [illegible], [illegible] S. W. 621, upholding provision mak[illegible] unfenced railroads refusing to pay for injured stock, liable [illegible] attorney's fees; Mayer v. Frobe, 40 W. Va. 250, 261, 22 S. E. 59, [illegible] holding exemplary damages may be inflicted in civil suit. See [illegible] Am. St. Rep. [illegible], note.

Distinguished in S. A. & A. P. Ry. v. Wilson, 4 Tex. App. C[illegible] [illegible], holding law penalizing railroads failing to pay employees, [illegible]

Damages.—Power of States to impose fines and penalties for v[illegible] lations of statutory requirements is coeval with government, a[illegible] mode of enforcement, whether at suit of individual or of public, a[illegible] disposition of amounts collected, are within legislative discreti[illegible] hence receipt of punitory damages by sufferer instead of by St[illegible] cannot be objected to by tortfeasor, p. 523.

Approved in Barry v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 564, 29 L. 733, 6 S. [illegible] [illegible], holding exemplary damages recoverable for malicio[illegible] trespass; Denver, etc., Ry. v. Harris, 122 U. S. 610, 30 L. 1148, 7 [illegible] Ct. [illegible], holding punitive damages depend upon malice, gross n[illegible] [illegible] or illegality of act; Minneapolis Ry. v. Beckwith, 129 U. [illegible] [illegible], [illegible] L. [illegible], [illegible] S. Ct. 208, upholding imposition of punitive damag[illegible] for violation of statutory duty; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 1[illegible] [illegible] L. [illegible], [illegible] S. Ct. 234, sustaining enforcement of West Virginia st[illegible] [illegible] prescribing qualifications for practicing medicine, as to pers[illegible] practicing prior to passage thereof; Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 1[illegible] U. S. [illegible], [illegible] L. [illegible], 10 S. Ct. 597, holding validity of State tax up[illegible] domestic corporations, not dependent upon mode adopted in fixi[illegible] annual amount exacted for franchise; St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Mathew[illegible] [illegible] U. S. [illegible], 41 L. 620, 17 S. Ct. 252, upholding law rendering ra[illegible] roads liable for loss from fires communicated by engines; Goodrid[illegible] v. Union Pac. Ry., 35 Fed. 36, holding Colorado act authorizing [illegible] covery of triple damages for freight-rate discrimination, penal; Ma[illegible] shall v. Wabash Ry., 46 Fed. 272, holding action for statutory pe[illegible] alty for death by defendant's negligence penal, and unenforceab[illegible] in Federal court in another State; Atchison, etc., Ry. v. Tanner, [illegible] Colo. 563, 36 Pac. 543, holding act making railroads liable for doub[illegible] value of animals killed, penal; Cameron v. Chicago, etc., Ry., [illegible] Minn. 389, 65 N. W. 654, 31 L. R. A. 556, upholding law allowi[illegible]

attorneys' fees in actions to recover possession of land unlawfully taken by railroads; Briggs v. St. Louis, etc., Ry., 111 Mo. 174, 20 S. W. 33, upholding law including attorneys' fees in judgments against unfenced railroads for injury to stock; In re Roe Chung, 9 N. Mex. 133, 49 Pac. 953, upholding law imposing fine for practicing medicine without certificate, and imprisonment for default; Railroads v. Crider, 91 Tenn. 502, 19 S. W. 621, upholding provision for appraisement by freeholders of stock injured by unfenced railroad; Mayer v. Frobe, 40 W. Va. 252, 254, 22 S. E. 60, 61, sustaining judgment for exemplary damages for selling liquor to plaintiff's husband; dissenting opinion in Atchison, etc., Ry. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 120, 19 S. Ct. 618, arguendo. See also 25 Am. St. Rep. 873, and 62 Am. St. Rep. 169, notes.

Distinguished in Leep v. Railway Co., 58 Ark. 441, 41 Am. St. Rep. 133, 25 S. W. 85, 23 L. R. A. 276, upholding act making wages due by corporation, upon unwarranted discharge by corporation, and penalizing delay.

Constitutional law.— Missouri statute, requiring railroads to fence tracks and maintain cattle-guards, imposing double damages for injuries from failure to do so, does not deprive railroad of property without due process of law, or deny equal protection of laws, p. 523.

Approved in Hartford Ins. Co. v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 175 U. S. 101, 20 S. Ct. 37, holding validity of agreement exempting railroad from statutory liability for fires, question of local law; Savannah, etc., Ry. v. Geiger, 21 Fla. 700, holding fact that owner allowed stock to run at large does not release railroad; Dickson v. Omaha, etc., Ry., 124 Mo. 148, 46 Am. St. Rep. 433, 27 S. W. 478, 25 L. R. A. 324, and n., holding railroad liable for death of engineer caused by collision with bull on track; Northern Pac. Ry. v. Barnes, 2 N. Dak. 346, 51 N. W. 395, holding railroads may be classified by themselves for taxation purposes; Waters, etc., Oil Co. v. State, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 13, 44 S. W. 942, holding legal restraints on use of property do not deprive owner thereof without due process. Under authority of principal case, the following have been upheld: Missouri Ry. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 210, 32 L. 109, 8 S. Ct. 1163, Peirce v. Van Dusen, 78 Fed. 697, 47 U. S. App. 339, Pittsburgh, etc., Ry. v. Montgomery, 152 Ind. 13, 71 Am. St. Rep. 311, 49 N. E. 586, and Atchison, etc., Ry. v. Kœhler, 37 Kan. 469, 15 Pac. 571, laws making railroads liable to employees for injuries by fellow servants; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 687, 32 L. 257, 8 S. Ct. 997, Pennsylvania statute, prohibiting sale of imitation butter; Minneapolis Ry. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 31, 32 L. 587, 9 S. Ct. 208, similar Iowa statute; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 355, 35 L. 1040, 12 S. Ct. 249, Missouri act defining and taxing express companies; Charlotte, etc., Ry. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 394, 35 L. 1055, 12 S. Ct. 257, South Carolina tax on gross income of railroads in proportion to mileage in State;

St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 18, 41 L. 618, 17 S. Ct. 2 and Leavitt v. Canadian Pac. Ry., 90 Me. 159, 37 Atl. 888, 38 L.
A. 153, statutes making railroads liable for losses from fires co municated by locomotives; Atchison, etc., Ry. v. Matthews, 174
S. 98, 19 S. Ct. 610 (but see dissenting opinion in 174 U. S. 109,
S. Ct. 614), Kansas law making railroads liable for damages fro fire, with attorneys' fees; Western Union Tel. Co. v. New Yo 38 Fed. 559, 3 L. R. A. 454, law requiring electric wires to be plac under street surface; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 44 Fed. 317, a taxing express companies on receipts for business done in Sta Jacksonville, etc., Ry. v. Prior, 34 Fla. 284, 285, 15 So. 764, Lou ville, etc., Ry. v. Belcher, 89 Ky. 199, 12 S. W. 197, and Dacres Oregon, etc., Nav. Co., 1 Wash. 531, 20 Pac. 604, acts making ra roads liable for stock killed on unfenced tracks; Missouri Pac. R v. Merrill, 40 Kan. 409, 19 Pac. 795, statutes making occurrence fire caused by operation of railroad prima facie evidence of neg gence thereof; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. State, 47 Neb. 571, 53 Am. S Rep. 568, 66 N. W. 629, 41 L. R. A. 485, requirement that railroa keep in repair viaducts over streets crossed by tracks; McGow
v. Wilmington, etc., Ry., 95 N. C. 428, law imposing penalty f failing for five days to forward freight; Railroads v. Crider, Tenn. 497, 19 S. W. 620, law fixing upon unfenced railroads absolu liability for injuries to live-stock; Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Levy, 12 Te Civ. App. 48, 33 S. W. 993, law applying to all fire insurance co panies alike; Virginia, etc., Co. v. Crozier, etc., Co., 90 Va. 130, Am. St. Rep. 896, 17 S. E. 807, law creating liens on manufacturi corporations, superior to their deeds of trust.

Approved also in dissenting opinion in New York Life Ins. C
v. Smith, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 41 S. W. 689, majority holding la making defaulting insurance companies liable to policy-holders additional damages, invalid; Pennsylvania Ry. v. Miller, 132 U.
83, 33 L. 272, 10 S. Ct. 37, reprinted in 129 Pa. St. 199, arguend See 52 Am. Rep. 375, note, 20 Am. St. Rep. 558, note on "due pro ess," 25 Am. St. Rep. 884, monographic note on fourteenth amen ment, 59 Am. St. Rep. 608, note on liability of corporations for e emplary damages, and 62 Am. St. Rep. 170, note on protection corporations from hostile legislation.

Distinguished in Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 680, 36 L. 113
13 S. Ct. 232, holding courts of one State will not enforce penal sta utes of another; Gulf, etc., Ry. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 158, 41 L. 669, 1
S. Ct. 258, holding provision for recovery of attorneys' fees invali where statute did not compel maintaining fences; Dow v. Beide man, 49 Ark. 456, 5 S. W. 718, upholding act making railroad liab for penalty and attorneys' fees for overcharging passengers; Wad worth v. Union Pac. Ry., 18 Colo. 611, 36 Am. St. Rep. 318, 33 Pa 519, 23 L. R. A. 817, holding Colorado stock-killing statute unco stitutional; S. A. & A. P. Ry. v. Wilson, 4 Tex. App. Civ. 570, hol ing law penalizing failure of railroads to pay employees withi specified time, unconstitutional.

115 U. S. 523-524, 29 L. 467, MISSOURI PAC. RY. v. TERRY.

Argued and decided with preceding case, q. v.

115 U. S. 524-527, 29 L. 480, DAVIS SEWING-MACH. CO. v. RICHARDS.

Guaranty.— If guaranty is signed by guarantor at request of other party, or if latter's agreement to accept is contemporaneous with guaranty, or if receipt from him of any valuable consideration is acknowledged in guaranty, delivery of guaranty to other party completes contract, p. 527.

Approved in Hall v. Weaver, 13 Sawy. 194, 34 Fed. 108, holding one executing bond with another, conditioned for repayment of advance to principal by obligee, not a mere guarantor; Doud v. National Park Bank, 54 Fed. 847, 2 U. S. App. 655, holding personal guaranty by stockholders of bank to another bank, in consideration of loans, requires no notice of acceptance.

Guaranty signed by guarantor without previous request of other party, in his absence, and for no consideration moving between them except future advances to be made to principal debtor, is, in effect, an offer on part of guarantor requiring other party's acceptance to complete contract, p. 527.

Approved in Barnes Cycle Co. v. Reed, 84 Fed. 605, reaffirming rule; Saint v. Wheeler, etc., Mfg. Co., 95 Ala. 373, 36 Am. St. Rep. 213, 10 So. 541, Lennox v. Murphy, 171 Mass. 378, 50 N. E. 646, De Cremer v. Anderson, 113 Mich. 580, 71 N. W. 1091, Winnebago, etc., Mills v. Travis, 56 Minn. 484, 58 N. W. 37, and Deering Harvesting Co. v. Sulser, 78 Mo. App. 675, all holding such proposal requires acceptance by guarantee and notice thereof to guarantor; Page v. White, etc., Mach. Co., 12 Tex. Civ. App. 332, 34 S. W. 991, holding, where guarantor alone contracts with guarantee to stand responsible for acts of third party, rules as to notice obtain.

Limited in Barnes Cycle Co. v. Reed, 91 Fed. 482, 63 U. S. App. 288, holding direct proof of notice not essential, circumstances warranting jury in finding same. Distinguished in Ferst & Co. v. Blackwell, 39 Fla. 625, 22 So. 894, holding offer of continuing guaranty, accepted by guarantee's agent, requires no further notice; Bryant v. Stout, 16 Ind. App. 394, 44 N. E. 72, holding acceptance unnecessary where bond signed by guarantors was delivered to guarantee.

115 U. S. 528-542, 29 L. 467, TRÆR v. CLEWS.

Courts.— Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review judgment of highest State court on validity of transfer by trustee in bankruptcy, and limitations under bankrupt act, p. 534.

Bankruptcy.— Two years' limitation under bankruptcy act does not begin to run against action founded on fraud, plaintiff being innocent of negligence or laches, until discovery of fraud, p. 538.

Approved in Kirby v. Lake Shore, etc., Ry., 120 U. S. 137, 30
572, 7 S. Ct. 434, and McKneely v. Terry, 61 Ark. 544, 33 S. W. 9
both holding statute runs only from notice of fraud; Avery v. Clea 132 U. S. 610, 33 L. 472, 10 S. Ct. 222, holding the assignee must free from laches in discovering fraud; Foster v. Mansfield Ry., Fed. 638, discussing what constitutes concealment of fraud su
cient to keep statute from running; Lant v. Manley, 75 Fed. 635, U. S. App. 623, holding statute does not run against action to aside fraudulent conveyance until discovery thereof; Anderson
Northrop et al., 30 Fla. 643, 12 So. 326, action by remaindermen recover property remaining in executor's possession; Deake, A pellant, 80 Me. 56, 12 Atl. 793, holding bar against action to est lish concealed will does not begin to run until discovery.

Distinguished in Rock v. Dennett, 155 Mass. 503, 30 N. E. 1
holding writ of entry to recover land conveyed to demandant assignee, two years after assignee has been disseized, barred.

Assignment of mere right to file bill for fraud committed up assignor, is void as contrary to public policy, and savoring of ma tenance, p. 539.

Reaffirmed in Gruber v. Baker, 20 Nev. 475, 23 Pac. 865, 9 L.
A. 309.

Distinguished in Edmunds v. Illinois Cent. Ry., 80 Fed. 84, ho
ing claims for damages to recover overcharges, under interst commerce law, assignable.

Vendor and purchaser.— Conveyance of property is not inva dated by fact that grantee may be compelled to sue to enforce right thereto, p. 539.

Approved in Edmunds v. Illinois Cent. Ry., 80 Fed. 80, 81, holdi choses in action, constituting property rights passing to legal r resentative, assignable; Snell v. Harrison, 104 Mo. 191, 16 S. W. 1 holding transfer carries right to have fraudulent deed cancelled.

Bankrupt, after adjudication of bankruptcy, and prior to d charge, may purchase property surrendered to assignee, p. 541.

Approved in Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 14, 35 L. 918, 12
Ct. 106, holding discharged bankrupt may purchase like strang
In re Herdic, 40 Fed. 361, holding discharged bankrupt may p chase at assignee's sale; Harrison v. Powers, 76 Ga. 243, holdi relations of parties to commercial paper, unaffected after dischar

115 U. S. 542-550, 29 L. 489, FERRY v. LIVINGSTON.

Customs duties.— Beet and cabbage seeds held "garden seed and certain mangel-wurzel and turnip seeds, contra, under tariff 1883, p. 549.

Approved in Robertson v. Salomon, 130 U. S. 415, 32 L. 996, 9
Ct. 560, arguendo, beans; Clay v. Magone, 40 Fed. 232, reaffirmi ruling.

115 U. S. 550–565, 29 L. 472, THOMPSON v. ALLEN COUNTY.

Equity.— Inadequacy of law, justifying interference of equity, consists in fact that in its nature or character it is not fitted or adapted to end in view, p. 554.

Approved in Burdon, etc., Co. v. Leverich, 37 Fed. 68, holding legal remedy for breach of contract to have sugar crop refined at certain refinery, adequate; Safe-Deposit, etc., Co. v. Anniston City, 96 Fed. 663, denying equitable relief where legal remedy exists in theory, though inadequate in practice.

Equity — Municipal corporations.— It is not within province of a court of equity to levy and collect taxes through its receiver, to satisfy judgments against municipal corporations, even where remedy at law by mandamus has proved ineffectual, because no municipal officers can be found who will act, p. 558.

Approved in O'Brien v. Wheelock, 78 Fed. 679, holding Federal courts will not act as tax collectors; Safe-Deposit, etc., Co. v. Anniston City, 96 Fed. 662, holding equity cannot subject funds of insolvent municipality to payment of judgment; Baldwin v. Auditor, 88 Ky. 681, 11 S. W. 805, holding, in absence of legislative authority, taxes not recoverable by suit; Grand Rapids, etc., Co. v. Trustees, — Ky. —, 44 S. W. 99, holding failure of trustees to secure tax collector does not justify equity collecting tax; Pierce County v. Merrill, 19 Wash. 178, 52 Pac. 854, denying jurisdiction of equity to collect taxes or appoint receiver to do so; Wilder v. New Orleans, 87 Fed. 849, arguendo.

Distinguished in Boody v. Watson, 64 N. H. 187, 9 Atl. 813 (see dissenting opinion in 64 N. H. 206, 9 Atl. 827), upholding judicial power to correct erroneous exemption by assessing board.

115 U. S. 566–576, 29 L. 495, EFFINGER v. KENNEY.

Contracts made in Confederate States, in Confederate money, but not in aid of insurrectionary government, are enforceable, p. 571.

Contracts.— Value of contracts, payable in Confederate notes, is to be determined by value of Confederate notes in United States money at time and place where contracts were made, p. 574.

Followed in White v. White, 50 La. Ann. 108, 23 So. 97.

Constitutional law.— Virginia statute of 1867, providing that fair value of property sold during Rebellion may be measure of recovery instead of express terms of contract, is an impairment of contract obligations, p. 576.

115 U. S. 577, 29 L. 498, KENNEY v. EFFINGER.

Appeal and error.— Whether or not bond was executed with reference to Confederate notes is question of fact for State court, and not reviewable on writ of error thereto, p. 577.

Approved in Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 671, 38 [illegible] 487, denying power, on error to highest State cou[illegible] judgment on question of fact.

[illegible] HARRISON v. MERRITT.

Customs duties.—Bone-black, for decolorizing sugar, [illegible] under R. S., § 2504, as "black of bone," and not exe[illegible] "burned" or manufactured, p. 579.

Not cited.

[illegible] ARNSON v. MURPHY.

Customs duties.—Under R. S., § 2931, 3011, for rec[illegible] cess duties, importer must show full compliance with st[illegible] difficulties; e. g., due protest, appeal, decision on appeal, a[illegible] of suit within time limited, pp. 584, 586.

Approved in Savings Inst. v. Blair, 116 U. S. 206, 29 [illegible] Ct. 358, and Commissioners v. Buckner, 48 Fed. 535, bo[illegible] rule to suits to recover internal revenue taxes; Auffmo[illegible] den, 137 U. S. 325, 34 L. 679, 11 S. Ct. 107, holding ap[illegible] termination conclusive collaterally; Hager v. Swayne, 14[illegible] 37 L. 720, 13 S. Ct. 842, holding common-law action agai[illegible] superseded by statutory; Saltonstall v. Russell, 152 U. S[illegible] 678, 14 S. Ct. 735, holding protest and appeal prerequisi[illegible] v. Brewster, 46 Fed. 474, 476, holding stipulation of co[illegible] duties on succeeding entries be governed by decision on [illegible] binding.

Customs duties.—Conditions imposed by statute for [illegible] excess duties cannot be regarded as matters failure to c[illegible] which must be pleaded by defendant as a statute of li[illegible] 584.

Approved in Beard v. Porter, 124 U. S. 443, 31 L. 494, [illegible] holding declaration need not show suit to have been bro[illegible] limitation of section; Schoenfeld v. Hendricks, 152 U. S[illegible] 602, 14 S. Ct. 735, holding statutory action exclusive [illegible] Merritt, 24 Blatchf. 217, 29 Fed. 683, arguendo.

Customs duties.—Decision of secretary of treasury [illegible] from protest against excess duties, is not required to b[illegible] cated to claimant, p. 586.

Approved in Tyre, etc., Co. v. Spalding, 116 U. S. 547[illegible] 6 S. Ct. 501, holding decision of secretary conclusive un[illegible] is shown in suit; John Shillito Co. v. McClung, 51 Fed. [illegible] App. 128, affirming S. C., 45 Fed. 780, reaffirming rule; [illegible] Brewster, 46 Fed. 475, arguendo.

115 U. S. 587-598, 29 L. 499, PULLMAN CAR CO. v. MISSOURI PAC. RY.

Corporations.— Consolidation of several railroad companies, under Missouri R. S., § 789, effects dissolution of old corporations and creation of new one, subject to obligations of consolidating companies, p. 595.

Approved in Louisville, etc., Ry. v. Boney, 117 Ind. 505, 20 N. E. 434, 3 L. R. A. 438, and n., holding consolidated company liable for debts of antecedent companies; Hancock, etc., Co. v. Worcester, etc., Ry., 149 Mass. 220, 21 N. E. 364, where bondholder recovered against new corporation; Combes v. Keyes, 89 Wis. 311, 46 Am. St. Rep. 843, 62 N. W. 93, 27 L. R. A. 374, holding corporation, by surrendering charter, ceased to exist; Weidenfeld v. Alleghany, etc., Ry., 47 Fed. 15, and Union Pac. Ry. v. United States, 59 Fed. 827, 19 U. S. App. 531, arguendo. See 59 Am. St. Rep. 555, monographic note.

Railroads.— Agreement of railroad to haul Pullman cars over entire line and all roads which it might thereafter control, does not apply to roads not controlled at time of consolidation, but thereafter acquired by new company formed by such consolidation, p. 596.

Approved in Express Cases, 117 U. S. 29, 29 L. 803, 6 S. Ct. 556, Little Rock, etc., Ry. v. St. Louis, etc., Ry., 41 Fed. 563, Paxton, etc., Co. v. Farmers, etc., Co., 45 Neb. 901, 50 Am. St. Rep. 596, 64 N. W. 346, 29 L. R. A. 858, and State v. Sioux City, etc., Ry., 46 Neb. 699, 701, 65 N. W. 771, 772, 31 L. R. A. 53, 54, holding courts cannot make business arrangements for carriers; St. Louis Drayage Co. v. Louisville, etc., Ry., 65 Fed. 41, and Post v. Southern Ry., 108 Tenn. 207, 52 S. W. 307, arguendo.

Equity.— Demurrer admits all facts in bill well pleaded, but not conclusions of law, p. 596.

Approved in Fogg v. Blair, 139 U. S. 127, 35 L. 107, 11 S. Ct. 478, holding demurrer does not admit allegations of "breach of trust;" Lumley v. Wabash Ry., 71 Fed. 28, holding allegations that things were done "surreptitiously," not admitted by demurrer.

Railroads.— Fact that one railroad acquires controlling interest in stock of another, does not oblige former to haul cars over road of latter, under agreement to haul cars over all roads which it may thereafter control, where latter company maintains and is managed by separate directors, p. 597.

Approved in Porter v. Pittsburgh, etc., Co., 120 U. S. 670, 30 L. 838, 7 S. Ct. 753, holding fact of owning majority of stock does not give legal control of corporation; Jessup v. Illinois Cent. Ry., 36 Fed. 741, holding averment that one corporation has obtained control of another's stock, does not show merger; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Kansas City, etc., Ry., 38 Fed. 61, holding power of street railroad to lay new tracks ceased upon consolidation; American Preservers' Co v. Norris, 43 Fed. 714, holding agreement of majority stockholders with stranger does not bind corporation; Electric Ry. v. Jamaica etc., Ry., 61 Fed. 678, holding ownership of patent by corporation gives individual stockholders no right to use thereof; Exchange Bank v. Macon, etc., Co., 97 Ga. 7, 25 S. E. 328, 33 L. R. A. 803, holding ownership of entire stock by another corporation does not vest title to property in latter; Higgins v. Lansingh, 154 Ill. 358, 40 N. E. 378, holding creditor holding majority of stock as security, not mortgagee in possession; Atchison, etc., Ry. v. Cochran, 43 Kan. 234, 19 Am. St. Rep. 131, 23 Pac. 155, 7 L. R. A. 418, holding one railroad not liable for negligence of another, stock of which it holds; White v. Pecos Land, etc., Co., 18 Tex. Civ. App. 637, 45 S. W. 209, holding corporations organized by same individuals, for same object, not identical. Cited in State v. Sioux City, etc., Ry., 46 Neb. 699, 65 N. W. 771, 31 L. R. A. 513, arguendo. See 61 Am. St. Rep. 458, note.

Distinguished in Jones v. Williams, 139 Mo. 24, 61 Am. St. Rep. 445, 39 S. W. 490, 37 L. R. A. 688 (but see dissenting opinion in 139 Mo. 73, 75, 40 S. W. 364, 37 L. R. A. 702), holding contract made by majority stockholder, ratified by silence of others.

115 U. S. 598-600, 29 L. 504, HASSALL v. WILCOX.

Appeal and error.— Separate judgments in equity being rendered in one decree, for separate creditors on separate claims, Supreme Court has appellate jurisdiction only as to those exceeding $5,000, p. 600.

Approved in Hassall v. Wilcox, 130 U. S. 503, 32 L. 1005, 9 S. Ct. 593, incidentally, further litigation between same parties; Gibson v. Shufeldt, 122 U. S. 37, 30 L. 1087, 7 S. Ct. 1071, holding defendant can appeal only as to plaintiff recovering over $5,000.

Appeal and error.— Trustee of railroad mortgage represents all bondholders; hence, his appeal is theirs, p. 600.

Distinguished in Press v. Woodley, 160 Ill. 436, 43 N. E. 719, holding trustee could not prosecute appeal for other lienholders.

115 U. S. 600-611, 29 L. 477, NORTHERN PAC. RY. v. TRAILL COUNTY.

Public lands.— Until lands granted railroad are earned by construction thereof and by other acts demanded by law, railroad has no such right therein as to prevent Congress from requiring payment of cost of surveying, selecting and conveying land before conveyance to railroad, p. 609.

Approved in New Orleans, etc., Ry. v. United States, 124 U. S. 131, 31 L. 386, 8 S. Ct. 421, holding plaintiff bound to pay cost of survey before receiving patent, although same was incurred before grant; Atlantic, etc., Ry. v. Mingus, 7 N. Mex. 371, 34 Pac. 595, upholding act of 1886, forfeiting lands of Atlantic and Pacific railroad; State v. Central Pac. Ry., 21 Nev. 99, 25 Pac. 443, generally; dissenting opinion in Central Pac. Ry. v. California, 162 U. S. 164, 40 L. 928, 16 S. Ct. 793, arguendo; Barden v. Northern Pac. Ry., 154 U. S. 312, 38 L. 996, 14 S. Ct. 1032, Central Pac. Ry. v. Nevada, 162 U. S. 520, 40 L. 1059, 16 S. Ct. 886, State v. Central Pac. Ry., 20 Nev. 378, 22 Pac. 238, and Jackson v. La Moure County, 1 N. Dak. 243, 46 N. W. 451, arguendo.

Distinguished in Denny v. Dodson, 13 Sawy. 81, 32 Fed. 908, Northern Pac. Ry. v. Cannon, 46 Fed. 226, and Washington, etc., Co. v. Northern Pac. Ry., 2 Idaho, 517, 518, 21 Pac. 659, holding Northern Pacific grant of 1864 one in præsenti, subject to be defeated by non-compliance with terms; Tarpey v. Salt Co., 5 Utah, 499, 17 Pac. 633, holding railroad grant of 1862 one in præsenti.

Public lands.— Although railroad, by completion of road, has earned granted lands, it does not acquire equitable title thereto for purpose of State taxation until it has paid costs of surveying, selecting and conveying same, as provided in act of July 17, 1870, p. 610.

Approved in Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U. S. 169, 29 L. 851, 6 S. Ct. 680, holding land exempt from State taxation while held by United States for Federal taxes; Northern Pac. Ry. v. Cannon, 46 Fed. 227, reaffirming rule; Meldahl v. Dobbin, 8 N. Dak. 117, 77 N. W. 281, holding tax deed invalid, where founded on taxes on Northern Pacific lands prior to 1886; Ankeny v. Clark, 148 U. S. 356, 37 L. 479, 13 S. Ct. 621, affirming S. C., 1 Wash. 557, 20 Pac. 587, holding contract to convey cannot be satisfied by title derived from land-grant railroad which has not paid for survey; Pitts v. Clay, 27 Fed. 636, holding bounty land not taxable during period between filing original and substituted warrants, patent being withheld on former; State v. Central Pac. Ry., 21 Nev. 103, 25 Pac. 445, holding unsurveyed Central Pacific lands exempt; Jackson v. La Moure County, 1 N. Dak. 242, 46 N. W. 450, holding title to Northern Pacific indemnity lands does not pass from government until selection by railroad, with approval of secretary; Northern Pac. Ry. v. McGinnis, 4 N. Dak. 503, 61 N. W. 1035, holding unsurveyed railroad land not taxable; Wells County v. McHenry, 7 N. Dak. 252, 74 N. W. 243, holding Northern Pacific lands not taxable before surveyed; Duncan v. Newcomer, 9 S. Dak. 379, 69 N. W. 581, holding land not subject to State taxation until right to patent vests; Abney v. State, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 105, 47 S. W. 1045, holding title to Confederate scrip lands did not vest until all conditions were complied with; Montgomery v. Cowlitz Co., 14 Wash. 231, 44 Pac. 260, holding railroad lands not taxable prior to payment of cost of surveying, etc.; dissenting opinions in Central Pac. Ry. v. California, 162 U. S. 151, 40 L. 923, 16 S. Ct. 788, majority holding plaintiff's franchise subject to State taxation; Northern Pac. Ry. v. Barnes, 2 N. Dak. 303, 51 N. W. 414, arguendo; Rutland Ry. v. Cent. Vermont Ry., 159 U. S.

641, 40 L. 290, 16 S. Ct. 116, Rushton v. Burke, 6 Dak. 482, 43 N. 815, and Northern Pac. Ry. v. Barnes, 2 N. Dak. 359, 51 N. W. 4 arguendo.

Distinguished in Tyler v. Cass County, 142 U. S. 290, 35 L. 10 12 S. Ct. 226, dismissing writ of error to S. C., 1 N. Dak. 381, N. W. 233, McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 660, 42 L. 617, 18 S. Ct. 2 State v. Central Pac. Ry., 20 Nev. 380, 22 Pac. 239, and State Central Pac. Ry., 21 Nev. 253, 30 Pac. 686, all holding act of July 1886, gave States right to tax surveyed, but unpatented Pacific r road lands; Northern Pac. Ry. v. Myers, 172 U. S. 598, 19 S. Ct. 2 holding Northern Pacific lands, granted in 1864, taxable by St prior to patent; Northern Pac. Ry. v. Wright, 51 Fed. 70, holdi grant of 1864 one in præsenti, and lands subject to State taxati Tyler v. Cass County, 1 N. Dak. 400, 48 N. W. 240, holding cou treasurer not personally liable for tax sales of lands, declared n taxable by principal case, made prior thereto; Northern Pac. I v. McGinnis, 4 N. Dak. 504, 61 N. W. 1035, holding surveyed la taxable, although survey fee is not paid.

115 U. S. 611-616, 29 L. 502, BOWMAN v. CHICAGO, ETC., RY.

Appellate jurisdiction of Supreme Court, in action on mon demand, is governed by value of actual matter in dispute there as shown by whole record, irrespective of damages claimed, prayer; hence, case dismissed where demand was, by stipulati increased, to confer jurisdiction, p. 614.

Approved in The Sydney, 139 U. S. 336, 35 L. 178, 11 S. Ct. 6 holding collateral effect of judgment in another suit, must be d regarded; Horst v. Merkley, 59 Fed. 503, dismissing, where plaintif testimony showed value of disputed matter insufficient to con jurisdiction; Cabot v. McMaster, 61 Fed. 131, reaffirming holdin Bank of Arapahoe v. Bradley, etc., 72 Fed. 870, 871, 36 U. S. Ap 519, holding setting up additional claim, over which court lac jurisdiction, does not confer jurisdiction; Hayward v. Nordbe Mfg. Co., 85 Fed. 7, 54 U. S. App. 646, holding what is colorable e largement of demand, depends on facts; Cowell v. City Water-Supp Co., 96 Fed. 771, in action to set aside conveyance, value of pro erty effected is amount in dispute, irrespective of complainan interest therein.

Distinguished in Barry v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 561, 29 L. 733, 6 Ct. 507, holding Circuit Court cannot dismiss, unless record sho lack of jurisdiction; Schunk v. Moline, etc., Co., 147 U. S. 505, 37 258, 13 S. Ct. 417, where increased demand was not merely speciou Davis v. Kansas City, etc., Ry., 32 Fed. 864, allowing amendme where damages might have exceeded original claim; Pickham Wheeler, etc., Mfg. Co., 77 Fed. 663, 46 U. S. App. 605, holdi jurisdiction not affected by counterclaim, unknown to plaintiff.

Courts.— Action against carrier for damages for refusal to tran port liquor into State on ground that laws thereof forbid suc importation, is not an action brought on account of deprivation of any Federal right, under R. S., § 699, conferring jurisdiction on Supreme Court in such actions, p. 616.

Approved in Cogswell v. Fordyce, 128 U. S. 392, 32 L. 485, 9 S. Ct. 112, holding action on bond, given to supersede judgment of Federal court, not within said section.

115 U. S. 616-619. 29 L. 482, CLAY COUNTY v. McALEER.

Municipal corporations cannot be required, by mandamus, to levy taxes in excess of maximum levy allowed them by law; hence, answer alleging that proceeds of maximum levy are insufficient to meet ordinary current county expenses, held good on demurrer, p. 619.

Approved in Stryker v. Commissioners, 77 Fed. 577, 40 U. S. App. 583, holding creditor can only demand annual levy of full amount until paid; White v. Mayor, etc., of Decatur, 119 Ala. 481, 23 So. 1001, holding courts cannot pass upon necessity of expenditure authorized by charter; Board of Improvement v. McManus, 54 Ark. 449, 15 S. W. 897, denying mandamus to treasurer, where no money was in treasury; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Stanfield, 7 Kan. App. 275, 53 Pac. 773, City of Sherman v. Smith, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 583, 35 S. W. 295, and Portland Sav. Bank v. Montesano, 14 Wash. 573, 45 Pac. 159, like cases; McAleer v. Clay County, 42 Fed. 665, incidentally; Harshman v. Winterbottom, 123 U. S. 222, 31 L. 127, 8 S. Ct. 101, arguendo.

Distinguished in Eidemiller v. Tacoma, 14 Wash. 387, 44 Pac. 881, holding city cannot defeat payment of warrant, upon ground of necessity of using revenue for existence, until exhaustion of all available means of securing revenue.

115 U. S. 620-634, 29 L. 483, CAMPBELL v. HOLT.

Property.— One having peaceable, undisturbed, open possession of real or personal property, with assertion of ownership for period which, by law, bars action for its recovery, by real owner, acquires good title, p. 623.

Approved in Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 544, 36 L. 535, 12 S. Ct. 722, holding owner of title by adverse possession, may maintain bill against original owners, to quiet title; Nonce v. Richmond, etc., Ry., 83 Fed. 432, distinguishing statutes giving title by prescription, and those merely affecting remedies; McClaskey v. Barr, 42 Fed. 613, citing generally; Cleveland v. Cleveland, etc., Ry., 98 Fed. 123, as to defense of equitable estoppel in ejectment; Chapin v. Freeland, 142 Mass. 386, 56 Am. Rep. 702, 8 N. E. 130 (but see dissenting opinion in 142 Mass. 391, 8 N. E. 132), holding one prevented by limitations from suing for property, cannot, after seizing same, defeat replevin; Currier v. Studley, 159 Mass. 22, 33 N. E. 711 (but see dissenting opinion in 159 Mass. 27, 33 N. E. 713), upholding prescriptive title to seat in stock exchange, as against former par ner; Flynn v. Lemieux, 46 Minn. 460, 49 N. W. 239, holding failu to pay occupant for improvements within one year, gives him titl Dean v. Goddard, 55 Minn. 294, 56 N. W. 1061, holding complete title by prescription, not lost by subsequent interruption; Baker Oakwood, 123 N. Y. 28, 25 N. E. 315, 10 L. R. A. 392, holding adver possession for period of limitation, conclusive evidence of titl Busby v. Railroad Co., 45 S. C. 314, 23 S. E. 51, holding adver possession of land for twenty years, gives title; Merrill v. Bullar 59 Vt. 391, 8 Atl. 158, holding absolute title acquired by six year adverse possession; Morris v. Lyon, 84 Va. 334, holding allegati in detinue, that defendant had acknowledged plaintiff's title, aft statute had run, demurrable; Thornburg v. Bowen, 37 W. Va. 54 16 S. E. 827, upholding title by five years' possession, though deriv through conveyance fraudulent on grantor's part. See 56 Am. Re 704, note.

Distinguished in Wilson v. Brookshire, 126 Ind. 506, 25 N. E. 13 9 L. R. A. 798, and n., holding action to have paid judgment d clared satisfied not barred by limitation applying to actions judgments. Departed from in Pate v. Hazell, 107 N. C. 190, 11 S. 1089, holding rule does not obtain in North Carolina.

Constitutional law.— Where property has been acquired by pr scription, removal of bar of statute of limitations by law, pass after bar has become perfect, deprives party of property witho due process of law, p. 623.

Limitations of actions.— Running of statute of limitations abs lutely vests rights in property adversely held, but operates only as defense, which must be specially pleaded, in actions on contracts for debts, p. 625.

Approved in In re Burton, 29 Fed. 639, holding defense of di charge in bankruptcy must be specially pleaded; and Hulbert Clark, 128 N. Y. 298, 28 N. E. 638, 14 L. R. A. 60, holding running statute on debt does not remove lien given as security; dissenti opinion in Currier v. Studley, 159 Mass. 26, 33 N. E. 713, arguend

Limitations of actions.— Original debt is sufficient considerati for new promise to pay, made after bar of statute has become pe fect, p. 625.

Cited in 39 Am. St. Rep. 739, monographic note on moral co sideration.

Limitations of actions.— Plea of statute of limitations affec remedy and not merits, p. 626.

Constitutional law.— Right to defense of statute of limitatio is not property; hence, repeal of statute applying to actions debts, after same had run against debt, does not deprive debtor property, without due process, p. 629.

Approved in Drury v. Henderson, 143 Ill. 320, 32 N. E. 187, holding period of limitation may be altered at will of legislature; Dyer v. Belfast, 88 Me. 142, 33 Atl. 791, holding statute extending time to appeal does not apply where right is already barred; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Pollard, 63 Miss. 663, upholding act permitting removing disabilities for non-payment of license, upon payment of back licenses; Guiterman v. Wishon, 21 Mont. 461, 54 Pac. 567, upholding statute shortening time upon which action for existing debt may be begun; Bates v. Cullum, 177 Pa. St. 637, 55 Am. St. Rep. 756, 35 Atl. 862, 34 L. R. A. 442, upholding act removing protection of non-resident clause from defendants removing from State, after accrual of causes; Landa v. Obert, 78 Tex. 46, 14 S. W. 300, where new Constitution extended period of limitation, already run; dissenting opinions in Oleson v. Wilson, 20 Mont. 553, 63 Am. St. Rep. 644, 52 Pac. 375, majority holding partial payment by one joint maker, does not extend time of action against other; Bettman v. Cowley, 19 Wash. 224, 58 Pac. 59, 40 L. R. A. 822, majority holding act shortening judgment liens unconstitutional as to existing judgments. Approved, arguendo, in Attorney-General v. Jochim, 99 Mich. 373, 41 Am. St. Rep. 618, 58 N. W. 615, 23 L. R. A. 705. See 25 Am. St. Rep. 887, note.

Distinguished in Fuller, etc., Co. v. Johnson, 8 Okl. 604, 58 Pac. 746, holding statute of limitations, repealing former statute, does not revive action barred thereby; Mellinger v. Houston, 68 Tex. 43, 3 S. W. 251, holding, under Texas Constitution, accrued right to defense of statute cannot be removed by retroactive legislation; Seattle v. De Wolfe, 17 Wash. 350, 49 Pac. 553, holding lengthening period of limitation, for actions on street assessments, does not revive actions already barred. Departed from in Board of Education v. Blodgett, 155 Ill. 448, 46 Am. St. Rep. 353, 40 N. E. 1027, 31 L. R. A. 73, holding defense of statute, property within constitutional protection; Eingartner v. Illinois Steel Co., 103 Wis. 378, 74 Am. St. Rep. 874, 79 N. W. 435, holding statute of limitations fully run, a vested property right.

Constitutional law.— Defense of statute of limitations once perfected, is a vested right which cannot be taken away by subsequent alteration of period of limitation, per Bradley, J., dissenting, p. 630.

Followed in Board of Education v. Blodgett, 155 Ill. 448, 46 Am. St. Rep. 353, 40 N. E. 1027, 31 L. R. A. 73, and Eingartner v. Illinois Steel Co., 103 Wis. 380, 74 Am. St. Rep. 874, 79 N. W. 435.

Distinguished in New Orleans v. New Orleans Water Works, 142 U. S. 92, 35 L. 948, 12 S. Ct. 147, holding right to pay for water supply in taxes, not vested right.

115 U. S. 634–649, 29 L. 505, BALTZER v. RALEIGH, ETC., RY.

Reformation of instruments.— Equity will only reform contract for mistake or fraud, when same are clearly shown, p. 645.

Approved in Baldwin v. National, etc., Fence Co., 67 Fed. [illegible] assignment of all patent rights, to include [illegible] Board of Trustees v. Blair, 45 W. Va. 82 [illegible] J. A. Coates & Son v. Buck, 93 Wis. [illegible] holding mere error or misconception, not ground [illegible] See [illegible] Am. St. Rep. 495, note.

Distinguished in Baldwin v. National, etc., Fence Co., 73 [illegible] but see dissenting opinion in 73 Fed. 58 [illegible] holding court may grant relief, though mistal [illegible] and testimony conflicting.

Specific performance.—Equity may compel parties to per[illegible] agreements, but cannot make agreements for them, p. 648.

Reaffirmed in Reynolds v. Louisville, etc., Ry., 143 Ind. 61[illegible]

Evidence.—Contract having been reduced to form of serie[illegible] documents, no evidence, other than itself can be given of its te[illegible] e. g., evidence of understanding between A. and B., that coven[illegible] of B. were covenants of C. is inadmissible, p. 648.

Cited in [illegible] Am. St. Rep. [illegible] note.

Contracts.—One not a party thereto, cannot be bound by un[illegible] standing of other persons, p. 648.

Approved in Reynolds v. Louisville, etc., Ry., 143 Ind. 622 [illegible] holding, one contracting to build railroad, cannot cl[illegible] lease by owner with another company forms part of transact[illegible] And see [illegible] Am. St. Rep. [illegible] note.

[illegible] U. S. [illegible] NEW ORLEANS GAS CO. v. LOU[illegible] ANA LIGHT CO.

Corporations.—Under Louisiana act of 1874, authorizing cons[illegible] dation of corporations "now existing, whose objects and busin[illegible] are, in general, of the same nature," gas company having exclus[illegible] privilege of supplying gas until 1875, may, immediately prior [illegible] expiration of its charter, consolidate with company granted s[illegible] privilege, from and after said expiration, p. 656.

Distinguished in Louisville, etc., Ry. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. [illegible] 40 L. 858, 16 S. Ct. 723, holding charter power to unite with ot[illegible] roads, does not authorize consolidation with competing road.

Gas.—Manufacture and distribution of illuminating gas, [illegible] means of conduits, placed, under legislative authority, in the stre[illegible] of a city, is business of a public character, p. 658.

Approved in Gibbs v. Baltimore Gas Co., 130 U. S. 408, 32 L. 9[illegible] 9 S. Ct. 557, and Chicago Gas Co. v. People's Gas Co., 121 Ill. 5[illegible] 2 Am. St. Rep. 128, 13 N. [illegible] 172, both holding gas company cann[illegible] by contract with another company, disable itself from performa[illegible]

of duty to public; United States v. Freight Assn., 166 U. S. 383, 41 L. 1025, 17 S. Ct. 556, holding railroads public corporations; Mayor of Wilmington v. Addicks, — Del. —, 43 Atl. 304, holding gas company a "corporation for public improvement" within constitutional limitation of period of incorporation for other corporations; Portland Gas, etc., Co. v. State, 135 Ind. 56, 34 N. E. 818, 21 L. R. A. 640, holding duty to furnish gas to all applicants, enforceable by mandamus; Coy v. Indianapolis Gas Co., 146 Ind. 660, 46 N. E. 19, 36 L. R. A. 536, holding natural gas company liable in tort for failure to serve applicant complying with reasonable regulations; David v. Portland Water Com., 14 Or. 123, 12 Pac. 185, holding supplying water to city, a public work, which legislature may undertake; Haugen v. Albina, etc., Co., 21 Or. 418, 28 Pac. 246, 14 L. R. A. 426, holding duty of supplying water to any inhabitant, enforceable by mandamus; Crumley v. Watauga Water Co., 99 Tenn. 426, 41 S. W. 1060, holding water company cannot refuse to supply water because applicant is in its debt.

Distinguished in Watauga Water Co. v. Wolfe, 99 Tenn. 431, 63 Am. St. Rep. 842, 41 S. W. 1061, holding water company, although bound not to discriminate, may refuse to supply applicant refusing to agree to reasonable rules.

Gas.— Right to dig up public streets, and place therein gas mains, is a franchise, privilege of exercising which can only be enjoyed under legislative authority, p. 659.

Approved in Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Co., 115 U. S. 692, 29 L. 513, 6 S. Ct. 268, a similar case; Pensacola Gas Co. v. Pensacola, 33 Fla. 336, 14 So. 830, grant of franchise to lay gas pipes construable strictly against grantees; Western, etc., Supply Co. v. Citizens' St. Ry., 128 Ind. 541, 25 Am. St. Rep. 475, 28 N. E. 88, holding State may contract away right to tax street railroad; Newport v. Newport Light Co., 84 Ky. 180, holding city with power to maintain gas works, may grant corporation exclusive right to supply gas; Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 6 Mont. 532, 13 Pac. 255, Smith v. Westerly, 19 R. I. 445, 35 Atl. 529, and Brenham v. Water Co., 67 Tex. 563, 4 S. W. 154, denying power of city, in absence of legislative permission, to grant exclusive right to supply water; Patterson v. Wollmann, 5 N. Dak. 617, 67 N. W. 1044, 33 L. R. A. 540, upholding acts authorizing counties to grant exclusive ferry privileges; Parkhurst v. Capital City Ry., 23 Or. 474, 32 Pac. 305, holding, without special legislative permission, city cannot grant exclusive privilege; Wheat v. City Council, 88 Va. 744, 14 S. E. 673, holding ordinance making right to open streets dependent on mayor's will, invalid as to previously chartered company; dissenting opinions in Bohan v. Port Jervis Gas Co., 122 N. Y. 35, 25 N. E. 251, 9 L. R. A. 720, and n., majority holding manufacture of gas may be enjoined as nuisance by neighboring property-owner; Bath Gas Co. v. Claffy, 151 N. Y. 42, 45 N. E. 395, 36 L. R. A. 670, and Los Angeles Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 730, arguendo. See 9 Am. St. Rep. 141, note.

Constitutional law.— Charter granting exclusive right of lay pipes and supplying gas to city for certain period, constitutes contract between State and corporation, within constitutional pro tion; hence, charter to another company during said period invalid, p. 660.

Approved in New Orleans Water Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 680, 2 527, 6 S. Ct. 276, a like case, concerning franchise of water c pany; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Co., 115 U. S. 699, 2 516, 6 S. Ct. 276, a very similar case; Walla Walla v. Walla W Water Co., 172 U. S. 9, 19 S. Ct. 81, holding erection of water w by city, an impairment of contract with company; Saginaw Gas v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. 532, holding suits upon conflicting legisla grants cognizable in Federal courts; Santa Ana Water Co. Buenaventura, 56 Fed. 349, holding town may, by contract, render its rights to fix water rates; Citizens' St. Ry. v. City Ry. Fed. 751, holding ordinances granting right to build street railv upon acceptance by company, constitutes contract; Baltimore, Co. v. Baltimore, 64 Fed. 160 (but see dissenting opinion, p. 1 holding municipality may, by ordinance, make irrepealable cont for use of streets by street railway; Africa v. Aldermen, 70 734, holding municipality cannot withdraw consent to use of str actually included in railway's route; Bartholomew v. Austin, Fed. 364, 52 U. S. App. 524, upholding ordinance granting privi of constructing and operating water system for twenty-five ye Los Angeles Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 734, holding cannot reduce water rates below minimum stated in charter; Mountain Ry. v. Memphis, 96 Fed. 129, holding passage of resolu declaring forfeiture of contract with railroad, threatened viola of constitutional rights; Birmingham, etc., Ry. v. Birmingham Ry., 79 Ala. 470, 58 Am. Rep. 616, holding municipal franchise wi protection of constitutional prohibition of laws impairing contra Western, etc., Supply Co. v. Citizens' St. Ry., 128 Ind. 529, 25 St. Rep. 466, 26 N. E. 190, 10 L. R. A. 774, holding charter to struct street railway constitutes contract with city; Indianapoli Consumers' Gas Co., 140 Ind. 117, 49 Am. St. Rep. 190, 39 N. E. 27 L. R. A. 517, holding grant to maintain gas pipes in street legislative contract, which city cannot impair by subsequent c nance; Des Moines St. Ry. v. Des Moines B. G. St. Ry., 73 Iowa, 33 N. W. 614, upholding ordinance granting exclusive right operate street railways for thirty years; Pingree v. Michigan C Ry., 118 Mich. 320, 76 N. W. 637, holding right to regulate fares be granted to railroad, rendering subsequent attempted legisla regulations illegal; dissenting opinion in State v. City of Hamil 47 Ohio St. 81, 23 N. E. 941, majority holding erection of munic gas plant does not deprive company of property; Africa v. Al men, 70 Fed. 737, arguendo. And see 72 Am. Dec. 684, note.

Distinguished in Pearsall v. Great Northern Ry., 161 U. S. 40 L. 844, 16 S. Ct. 709, reversing S. C., 73 Fed. 936, holding executed charter power, unnecessary to main object of grant, revocable; Baltimore v. Baltimore Trust Co., 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. 1164, 17 S. Ct. 701, and Lake Roland, etc., Ry. v. Mayor, 77 Md. 369, 26 Atl. 512, 20 L. R. A. 130, both holding ordinances authorizing laying double tracks, repealable, after laying thereof; Long Island Water Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 690, 41 L. 1167, 17 S. Ct. 720, holding condemnation of water works by eminent domain proceedings not impairment of contract between company and city; Wabash Ry. v. Defiance, 167 U. S. 100, 42 L. 98, 17 S. Ct. 752, holding alteration of grade will override prior license surrendering control of street; Saginaw Gas Co. v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. 534, holding exclusive right to light city with gas, not impaired by subsequent contract to light with electricity; Grand Rapids, etc., Co. v. Grand Rapids, etc., Co., 33 Fed. 669, 673, holding city could not grant exclusive use of streets for wires and poles for fifteen years; Hamilton Gas Co. v. Hamilton, 37 Fed. 838, holding erection of gas works by city authority does not preclude city from building its own; Birmingham, etc., Ry. v. Birmingham St. Ry., 79 Ala. 474, 58 Am. Rep. 618, denying municipal power to grant exclusive perpetual franchise to run railway through designated streets; Indianapolis St. Ry. v. Citizens' St. Ry., 127 Ind. 389, 24 N. E. 1060, 8 L. R. A. 547, holding city cannot grant exclusive right to railway to occupy all its streets; Vincennes v. Citizens' Gas Co., 132 Ind. 127, 31 N. E. 577, 16 L. R. A. 490, holding contract with gas company conferred no exclusive privileges; Rockland Water Co. v. Camden, etc., Water Co., 80 Me. 568, 15 Atl. 790, 1 L. R. A. 396, upholding charter to another company, exclusive privilege not having been expressly granted first; Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 174, 22 N. E. 382, 5 L. R. A. 549, holding grant to water company not exclusive or preventative of grants to others; dissenting opinion in State v. Haworth, 122 Ind. 508, 23 N. E. 960, 7 L. R. A. 253, majority upholding statute providing for furnishing school books to State.

Constitutional law.— State's police power cannot encroach upon powers of general government, or rights secured by Federal Constitution, p. 661.

Approved in Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 460, 29 L. 695, 6 S. Ct. 460, holding Iowa law imposing discriminatory tax on non-resident liquor sellers, unconstitutional; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 299, 38 L. 722, 14 S. Ct. 831, holding municipal tax on drummer representing manufacturer in another State, unconstitutional; Gulf, etc., Ry. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 105, 39 L. 913, 15 S. Ct. 804, holding State statute must yield to conflicting Federal statute; The Stockton Laundry Case, 11 Sawy. 477, 26 Fed. 614, holding ordinance prohibiting carrying on laundries within habitable portion of city, unconstitutional; Leavy v. United States, 92 Fed. 349, denying police power of State to close navigable waters for purpose of reclamation; Pingree v. Michigan Cent. Ry., 118 Mich. 318, 76 N. W. 636, holding attempt of legislature to reduce fares, impairment of contract v railroad; dissenting opinion in New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S.

19 S. Ct. 74, majority upholding New York tax on certain for corporation; Bullard v. Northern Pac. Ry., 10 Mont. 180, 25 122, 11 L. R. A. 250, arguendo. See 47 Am. St. Rep. 537, note quarantine regulations.

Distinguished in Morgan v. Louisiana, 118 U. S. 464, 30 L.
6 S. Ct. 1119, upholding Louisiana State quarantine law; Mugle
Kansas, 123 U. S. 663, 31 L. 211, 8 S. Ct. 298, upholding Kan constitutional prohibition of manufacture and sale of liqu Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 471, 39 L. 227, 15 S. Ct.
upholding Massachusetts law, forbidding sale of oleomargar
Western Union Telegraph Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 654, 40 L. 1
16 S. Ct. 935, upholding statute requiring telegraph compa
to transmit with diligence, as applied to interstate messa Hennington v. Georgia, 163 U. S. 314, 41 L. 173, 16 S. Ct. 1092, Norfolk, etc., Co. v. Commonwealth, 93 Va. 760, 57 Am. St.
835, 24 S. E. 840, 34 L. R. A. 109, upholding laws prohibiting runn trains on Sunday.

See citations under sixth and tenth syllabi.

Constitutional law.— Police power extends only to preserva
of public health, morals, and safety, p. 661.

Approved in Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 182, 41 L. 678, 17 S. Ct.
holding establishment, maintenance and control of public highw within State police power. The following have been held wi
State police power: Jamieson v. Indiana, etc., Co., 128 Ind.
28 N. E. 79, 12 L. R. A. 656, act regulating transportation pressure of natural gas; State v. Roby, 142 Ind. 192, 51 Am. St.
191, 41 N. E. 153, 33 L. R. A. 221, statute prohibiting horse r
during certain months, and with less than thirty days betw meetings; Territory v. Guyott, 9 Mont. 51, 22 Pac. 135, prohibi on selling liquor to Indians; Health Department v. Rector, N. Y. 39, 45 Am. St. Rep. 581, 39 N. E. 835, 27 L. R. A. 713, requiring owners of tenement-houses to furnish adequate su
of water; dissenting opinion in Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 128 L. 139, 10 S. Ct. 691, majority holding act prohibiting sale of toxicants, unconstitutional, as applied to sales in original packs from other States.

Distinguished in Pingree v. Michigan Cent. Ry., 118 Mich. 340
N. W. 644, holding reduction of railroad rates without amendm of charter, illegal; McCandless v. Richmond, etc., Ry., 38 S. C.
16 S. E. 430, 18 L. R. A. 442, holding act making railroads respons for fires communicated by engines, not within police power.
citations under fifth and tenth syllabi of this case.

Constitutional law.— Statutory authority, given by State to porations, or individuals, to engage in particular private busin detrimental to public health or morals, does not constitute tract, preventing withdrawal of such authority, or granting it to others, p. 669.

Approved in Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 253, 41 L. 990, 17 S. Ct. 591, holding railroad lays tracks subject to condition that city may regulate use to insure public safety; Chicago, etc., Ry. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 74, 42 L. 954, 18 S. Ct. 520, holding legislature may vary agreement with railroad, as to viaduct over crossing, as safety of community requires. See 62 Am. St. Rep. 172, note.

Constitutional law.— Charter granting exclusive right for certain period, to supply gas within city, is not a contract to prejudice of public health or safety, and hence, subject to abrogation under the police power, p. 671.

Approved in Stein v. Bienville Water Co., 34 Fed. 153, holding grant of exclusive franchise to supply water, not relinquishment of police power; State v. Laclede Gas Co., 102 Mo. 487, 22 Am. St. Rep. 796, 14 S. W. 980, denying right of city to regulate gas rates, as violative of charter contract; Stehmeyer v. City Council, 53 S. C. 279, 31 S. E. 330, holding city's police power does not authorize entering into contract for purchase of water works, to be paid for by taxing owners of property abutting streets where pipes are laid.

Constitutional law.— A State can no more impair contractual obligations, by her Constitution, than by legislation; hence, amendment repealing monopoly features of corporation charters, does not affect charter granting exclusive right to supply gas for stated period, p. 672.

Approved in Santa Ana Water Co. v. Buenaventura, 56 Fed. 345, holding California constitutional provision for fixing water rates, void as to contract made prior to adoption of Constitution; Columbus Water Co. v. Columbus, 48 Kan. 102, 28 Pac. 1098, 15 L. R. A. 356, upholding ultra vires contract of city with water company, where company had gone to expense and furnished water; State v. Hickman, 9 Mont. 379, 23 Pac. 743, 8 L. R. A. 405, holding appropriation for salaries may be made by Constitution as well as by legislation; generally in People v. Chicago Gas Co., 130 Ill. 296, 17 Am. St. Rep. 335, 22 N. E. 804, 8 L. R. A. 506, and n., holding State's public policy as to special privileges, may be indicated in Constitution; dissenting opinion in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 515, 31 L. 283, 8 S. Ct. 188, arguendo; State v. Haworth, 122 Ind. 505, 26 N. E. 960, 7 L. R. A. 254, and Newport v. Newport Light Co., 84 Ky. 179, arguendo.

Constitutional prohibition upon State laws, impairing obligations of contracts, does not restrict power of State to protect public health, morals or safety, as one or the other may be involved in the execution of such contracts, p. 672.

Approved in Hockett v. State, 105 Ind. 257, 55 Am. Rep. 205, holding fact that telephones are protected by patent, does not prevent State regulation of charges for use thereof; Spriggs v. Ga Park, 89 Md. 411, 43 Atl. 815, holding order abolishing cess-poo deprivation of property without due process; Bullard v. Nort Pac. Ry., 10 Mont. 184, 25 Pac. 124, 11 L. R. A. 251, 252, an as to police power over railroads; Morris, etc., Ry. v. Orang N. J. L. 264, 43 Atl. 734, holding railroad not entitled to damage expense in providing crossing flagman, in accordance with p regulations. Under authority of principal case, following been held within police power, irrespective of contracts: Mugl Kansas, 123 U. S. 665, 31 L. 211, 8 S. Ct. 299, Kansas law forbid manufacture of intoxicants within State; New York v. Squire, U. S. 188, 36 L. 671, 12 S. Ct. 883, act requiring companies inten to operate electrical conductor, to file plans of proposed sys

New York, etc., Ry. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 567, 38 L. 273, 14 S. Ct.
act compelling removal of grade crossings; St. Louis, etc., R Mathews, 165 U. S. 23, 41 L. 620, 17 S. Ct. 251, statute making roads liable for fires communicated by locomotives; Millbur South Orange, 55 N. J. L. 262, 26 Atl. 77, act forbidding us lands for sewage purposes; Newark v. Watson, 56 N. J. L. 67 Atl. 489, 24 L. R. A. 849, act prohibiting interment in lands solely for burial purposes; dissenting opinion in Bowman v. Chic etc., Ry., 125 U. S. 517, 31 L. 718, 8 S. Ct. 711, majority hol Iowa law forbidding common carriers to bring intoxicants
State, unconstitutional.

Distinguished in Attorney-General v. Fitchburg Ry., 142 M
41, 6 N. E. 855, holding State railroad commissioner cannot n order violating contract with railroad. See citations under and ninth syllabi of this case.

115 U. S. 674–683, 29 L. 525, NEW ORLEANS WATER WORK RIVERS.

Water and water-courses.— Right to dig up and use city st
for purpose of placing pipes to supply city with water, is a franc
belonging to State, grantable to such persons or corporations, upon such terms, as she deems best for public interest, p. 681.

Approved in State v. Street Ry., 140 Mo. 549, 62 Am. St. Rep.
41 S. W. 957, 38 L. R. A. 221, holding franchise an executed tract on part of State, forfeitable for condition broken; dissen opinions in Danville v. Danville Water Co., 178 Ill. 317, 53 N. E. majority denying power of city authorizing construction of w works, to bind itself to certain rates for thirty years; Car Louisville Water Co., 90 Ky. 529, 14 S. W. 505, majority hol act exempting water company, unconstitutional, though city ov stock thereof; Los Angeles Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed.
arguendo.

Waters and water-courses.— Business of supplying water to being a public one, grant of franchise therefor may be accompa
by exclusive privileges to grantee, p. 681.

Approved in Santa Ana Water Co. v. Buenaventura, 58 Fed. 349, holding town may contract to surrender right to fix water rates; Mayor of Wilmington v. Addicks, — Del. —, 43 Atl. 304, holding gas company a "corporation for public improvement," within constitutional limitation of period of incorporation; Newport v. Newport Light Co., 84 Ky. 180, holding city with power to maintain gas works, may grant corporation exclusive right to supply gas; Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 6 Mont. 532, 13 Pac. 255, and Brenham v. Water Co., 67 Tex. 564, 4 S. W. 155, denying power of city, in absence of legislative permission, to grant exclusive right to supply water; Patterson v. Wollmann, 5 N. Dak. 617, 67 N. W. 1044, 33 L. R. A. 540, upholding act authorizing counties to grant exclusive ferry privileges; Parkhurst v. Capital City Ry., 23 Or. 474, 32 Pac. 305, holding, without special legislative permission, city cannot grant exclusive privileges.

Distinguished in Birmingham, etc., Ry. v. Birmingham St. Ry., 79 Ala. 474, 58 Am. Rep. 618, denying municipal power to grant exclusive perpetual franchise to run railway on designated streets; Indianapolis St. Ry. v. Citizens' St. Ry., 127 Ind. 389, 24 N. E. 1060, 8 L. R. A. 547, holding city cannot grant exclusive right to railway to occupy its streets.

Constitutional law.— Charter granting exclusive right to lay pipes in streets and to supply city with water for certain period is, when proceeded under, a contract, obligation of which cannot be impaired by subsequent State legislation or change in Constitution; hence, subsequent grant to individual of right to lay pipes to supply his premises, is invalid, p. 681.

Approved in Tammany Water Works v. New Orleans Water Works, 120 U. S. 65, 67, 30 L. 563, 564, 7 S. Ct. 406, 407, case on all fours; City Ry. v. Citizens' Ry., 166 U. S. 563, 41 L. 1116, 17 S. Ct. 655, holding grant of exclusive privileges to street railroad invalidated subsequent franchise to another; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co., 172 U. S. 9, 19 S. Ct. 81, holding erection of water works by city, impairment of contract with company; New Orleans Water Co. v. Ernst, 32 Fed. 6, a like case; Santa Ana Water Co. v. Buenaventura, 56 Fed. 345, holding California constitutional provision for fixing water rates, void as to contract made prior to adoption of Constitution; Citizens' St. Ry. v. City Ry., 56 Fed. 751, holding ordinance granting right to build street railway, after acceptance by company, constitutes contract; Baltimore, etc., Co. v. Baltimore, 64 Fed. 160, holding municipality may, by ordinance, make irrepealable contract for use of streets by railway; Africa v. Aldermen, 70 Fed. 734, holding municipality cannot withdraw consent to use of streets actually included in railway's route; Westerly Water Co. v. Westerly, 75 Fed. 189, holding construction of water works by town, after granting exclusive franchise, impairment of contract; Cleveland City Ry. v. Cleveland, 94 Fed. 395, holding city ordinance granting franchise to street railway, when accepted, a contract; Iron Mountain Ry. v. Memphis, 96 Fed.

129, holding passage of resolution declaring forfeiture of con
with railroad, threatened violation of constitutional rights; Co bus Water Co. v. Columbus, 48 Kan. 102, 28 Pac. 1098, 15 L. R 356, upholding ultra vires municipal contract with water comp
where latter had gone to expense and furnished water; Schust Weiss, 114 Mo. 173, 21 S. W. 443, 19 L. R. A. 187, holding sur contract cannot be changed by change in laws regulating ap Wheat v. City Council, 88 Va. 743, 14 S. E. 673, holding ordin making right to open streets dependent on mayor's will, invali
to previously-chartered company; dissenting opinion in Fergus
v. Fergus Falls Water Co., 72 Fed. 877, 879, 36 U. S. App.
majority holding allegation that city resolution was law impa contract, mere surplusage. See 69 Am. St. Rep. 314, note.

Distinguished in New Orleans Water Works v. Louisiana S
Co., 125 U. S. 32, 31 L. 612, 8 S. Ct. 749, holding court boun Louisiana decision, holding grant to individual within exce in charter; Stein v. Bienville Water Co., 141 U. S. 77, 79, 35 L.
627, 11 S. Ct. 895, 896, holding exclusive grant to supply water designated source, not violated by grant to another to supply different source; Pearsall v. Great Northern Ry., 161 U. S. 66
L. 844, 16 S. Ct. 709, reversing S. C., 73 Fed. 936, holding unexe charter power, unessential to main object of grant, revocable;
Orleans Water Works v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 474, 475, 41 L.
17 S. Ct. 162, 164, holding city council cannot be restrained passing ordinances alleged to impair contracts; Wabash Ry. v.
fiance, 167 U. S. 100, 42 L. 93, 17 S. Ct. 752, upholding muni power to change street grades after authorizing erection of bri
Grand Rapids, etc., Co. v. Grand Rapids, etc., Co., 33 Fed. 669, ing city could not grant exclusive use of streets for poles and for fifteen years; Hamilton Gas Co. v. Hamilton, 37 Fed. 838, ing erection of gas work by city authority, does not preclude from building its own; Water Co. v. Water Co., 80 Me. 568, 15 790, 1 L. R. A. 396, upholding charter to another company, excl privilege not being expressly granted first; Syracuse Water C Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 174, 22 N. E. 382, 5 L. R. A. 549, holding company's grant not exclusive; Allen v. Forrest, 8 Wash. 70 Pac. 972, 24 L. R. A. 608, holding act giving improver of tide preferred right to purchase, not a contract. Departed fro
New Orleans Water Co. v. Brewing Co., 36 Fed. 834, 835 (bu dissenting opinion, p. 836), following subsequent Louisiana deci upholding life grant to individual.

Constitutional prohibition upon State laws impairing cont
does not restrict power of State to protect public health, m or safety; hence, grant of exclusive privilege of supplying does not prevent State from making regulations securing un rupted use of streets to public or preventing distribution of unw some water, p. 681.

Approved in St. Louis, etc., Ry. v. Mathews, 165 U. S. 23, 41 L. 620, 17 S. Ct. 251, upholding statute making railroads liable for fires communicated by locomotives; Stein v. Bienville Water Co., 34 Fed. 152, holding grant of exclusive right to supply water, not relinquishment of police power; Stehmeyer v. City Council, 53 S. C. 279, 31 S. E. 330, arguendo.

Distinguished in McCandless v. Railroad, 38 S. C. 109, 16 S. E. 430, 18 L. R. A. 442, holding act making railroads responsible for fires communicated by locomotives, not within police power.

115 U. S. 683-700, 29 L. 510, LOUISVILLE GAS CO. v. CITIZENS' GAS CO.

Gas.— Services rendered in supplying gas to municipality and inhabitants thereof constitute such public services as, under Kentucky Constitution, authorize legislature to grant exclusive privileges, p. 698.

Approved in Gibbs v. Baltimore Gas Co., 130 U. S. 408, 32 L. 984, 9 S. Ct. 557, and Chicago Gas Co. v. People's Gas Co., 121 Ill. 539, 2 Am. St. Rep. 129, 13 N. E. 172, both holding gas company cannot, by contract with another, disable itself from performing duty to public; United States v. Freight Association, 166 U. S. 333, 41 L. 1025, 17 S. Ct. 556, holding railroads public corporations; Pensacola Gas Co. v. Pensacola, 63 Fla. 336, 14 So. 830, holding grant strictly construable against grantee; Newport v. Newport Light Co., 84 Ky. 180, holding city with power to maintain gas works, may grant corporation exclusive right to supply gas; Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 6 Mont. 532, 13 Pac. 255, denying power of city, in absence of legislative permission, to grant exclusive right to supply water; Haugen v. Albina, etc., Co., 21 Or. 418, 28 Pac. 246, 14 L. R. A. 426, holding duty of supplying water to any inhabitant, enforceable by mandamus; Parkhurst v. Capital City Ry., 23 Or. 474, 32 Pac. 305, holding special legislative permission essential to power of city to grant exclusive rights; Crumley v. Watauga Water Co., 99 Tenn. 426, 41 S. W. 1060, holding water company cannot refuse to supply water because applicant owes it money; dissenting opinion in Clark v. Louisville Water Co., 90 Ky. 529, 14 S. W. 505, majority holding act exempting water company unconstitutional, though city owned stock thereof.

Distinguished in Watauga Water Co. v. Wolfe, 99 Tenn. 431, 63 Am. St. Rep. 842, 41 S. W. 1061, holding water company may refuse to supply applicant refusing to agree to reasonable rules; dissenting opinion in State v. Haworth, 122 Ind. 505, 23 N. E. 960, 7 L. R. A. 254, majority upholding State school-book contract.

Courts.— Whether alleged contract arises from State legislation, by agreement with State's agents, by its authority, or by stipulations between individuals exclusively, Supreme Court must, upon its own judgment, independently of State adjudications, decide whether there exists a contract within constitutional protecti

p. 697.

Reaffirmed in Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 392, 30
1060, 7 S. Ct. 918, Bryan v. Board of Education, 151 U. S. 650, 38
302, 14 S. Ct. 469, and Mobile, etc., Ry. v. Tennessee, 153 U. S. 4
38 L. 797, 14 S. Ct. 971. Approved in Douglas v. Kentucky, 168
S. 502, 42 L. 557, 18 S. Ct. 204, holding lottery grant not a contra Saginaw Gas Co. v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. 532, holding suits upon c flicting legislative grants cognizable in Federal courts; United Sta
v. Union Pac. Ry., 160 U. S. 37, 40 L. 332, 16 S. Ct. 204, genera
See 66 Am. St. Rep. 335, note.

Distinguished in Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 219, 41 L. 137, 16
Ct. 1028, dismissing writ where State court based decision on St question.

Constitutional law.— Act amending charter of gas company un
the reserve power to alter, and providing that charter shall thereafter be altered without concurrence of company and c waives absolute power of State to alter charter, p. 698.

Cited in Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 647, 19 S.
534, mere grant of tax immunity for stated time is not a contract

Distinguished in Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 14, L. 59, 12 S. Ct. 350, holding said act of 1856 part of subsequ charters; Covington v. Kentucky, 173 U. S. 239, 19 S. Ct. 386, h ing provision for exemption of city water works, not irrevocal

Constitutional law.— Charter granting exclusive right of lay pipes and supplying gas to city for certain period, constitutes c tract between State and company within constitutional protecti
hence, charter to another company during said period is inope tive, p. 699.

Approved in Africa v. Aldermen, 70 Fed. 737, holding char granting use of streets to railway, irrevocable when acted on;
Angeles Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 734, holding city can reduce water rates below minimum provided in charter; Water
v. Columbus, 48 Kan. 102, 28 Pac. 1098, 15 L. R. A. 356, uphold ultra vires municipal contract with water company, under wh city had received water; Commonwealth v. Farmers' Bank, 97 626, 31 S. W. 1021, holding banks' acceptance of provisions of l providing for partial exemption, constituted contract; see disse
ing opinion in State v. City of Hamilton, 47 Ohio St. 81, 23 N.
941, majority holding erection of municipal gas-plant does not prive company of property. Cited in Administrators v. Gas 40 La. Ann. 386, 4 So. 436, McCandless v. Richmond, etc., Ry., S. C. 109, 16 S. E. 430, 18 L. R. A. 442, and Stehmeyer v. City Co
cil, 53 S. C. 279, 31 S. E. 330, arguendo.

Distinguished in Pearsall v. Great Northern Ry., 161 U. S.
40 L. 844, 16 S. Ct. 709, holding unexecuted charter power unne sary to main object of grant, revocable; Saginaw Gas Co. v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. 535, holding authority to cause streets to be lighted does not empower city to grant exclusive franchise; Grand Rapids, etc., Co. v. Grand Rapids, etc., Co., 33 Fed. 669, holding city could not grant exclusive use of streets for wires and poles for fifteen years; Hamilton Gas Co. v. Hamilton, 37 Fed. 838, holding erection of gas works by city authority does not preclude city from building its own; Vincennes v. Citizens' Gas Co., 132 Ind. 127, 31 N. E. 577, 16 L. R. A. 490, holding contract with gas company conferred no exclusive privileges; Water Co. v. Water Co., 80 Me. 568, 15 Atl. 790, 1 L. R. A. 396, upholding charter to another company, exclusive privilege not having been expressly granted first; Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 174, 22 N. E. 382, 5 L. R. A. 549, holding grant to water company not exclusive; dissenting opinion in State v. Haworth, 122 Ind. 505, 23 N. E. 960, 7 L. R. A. 254, majority upholding State school-book contract.

The Citations in the foregoing annotations include all fro
the following Reports and all preceding them in each Sta
or series:

U. S.	175	Mo. App.
Law. Ed.	42	Mont.
Fed. Rep.	96	Neb.
U. S. Ap.	63	Nev.
(excepting 58)		N. H.
Ala.	119	N. J. Eq.
Ariz.	1	N. J. L.
Ark.	65	N. M.
Cal.	125	N. Y.	1
Colo.	25	N. C.	1
Colo. Ap.	12	N. D.
Conn.	71	Ohio
Dak.	6	Or.
Del. Pennewill	1	Pa.	1
Fla.	39	R. I.
Ga.	107	S. C.
Ida.	2	S. D.
Ill.	181	Tenn.	1
Ind.	152	Tex.
Ind. Ap.	22	Tex. Civ.
Iowa	107	Tex. Cr.
Kans.	60	Utah
Kans. Ap.	7	Vt.
Ky.	101	Va.
La. Ann.	51	Wash.
Md.	89	W. Va.
Me.	92	Wis.	1
Mass.	173	Wyo.
Mich.	117	Am. Dec.	1
Minn.	73	Am. Rep.
Miss.	76	Am. St. Rep.
Mo.	150	L. R. A.

with duplicate references to the Reporter System and lat cases, including

Sup. Ct.	19	N. E.
Atl.	43	N. W.
Pac.	58	S. E.
So.	25	S. W.

ANN

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

IN

OCTOBER TERM, 1885.

Vol. 116.

ANN

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

IN

OCTOBER TERM, 1885.

Vol. 116.

ANN

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES

DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,

OCTOBER TERM, 1885,

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOL. 116,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN

OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 116 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 116 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Hanley v. Donoghue,	535	99-101	Call v. Palmer,	560
3-4	" "	536	101-103	" "	561
4-7	" "	537	104	United States v. Mooney,	550
7	" "	538	104-107	" " "	551
8-10	Bridgewater Iron Co. v. Lissberger,	557	107-108	" " "	552
10	" " " "	558	108-110	Coyle v. Davis,	583
11-13	Marvel v. Merritt, Coll.,	550	110-113	" "	584
13-15	Saxonville Mills v. Russell, Coll.,	554	113-114	Liverpool & London Ins. Co. v. Gunther,	575
15-18	" " " "	555
18-21	" " " "	556	114-117	" " "	576
21	" " " "	557	117-120	" " "	577
22-23	Miller v. Force,	552	120-122	" " "	578
23-25	" "	553	125-127	" " "	579
25-27	" "	554	127-130	" " "	580
28-30	Utah & Northern Railway v. Fisher,	542	130-131	" " "	581
			131-133	Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury,
30-32	" " "	543	" "	Louisiana, ex rel. Fisk v. Same,	587
32-33	Holgate v. Eaton,	538	133-135	" " " "	588
33-35	" "	539	135	Stewart v. Jefferson Police Jury,	588
35-37	" "	540	135-137	" " " "	589
37	" "	541	138	San Mateo Co. v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co.,	589
38-41	United States v. Price,	541
41	" " "	542	138-141	" " " "	590
42-47	Mackall v. Richards,	558	141-142	" " " "	591
47-49	" "	559	142	Hewitt v. Filbert,	581
49-50	Lee v. Johnson,	570	142-145	" "	582
50-51	" "	571	145-147	McClure v. United States,	572
51-52	" "	572	147-150	" " "	573
52-53	Shoemaker v. Nebraska,	535	150-153	" " "	574
53	Cannon v. United States,	561	153-154	" " "	575
54-55	" " "	562	154	Union P. R. Co. v. United States,	584
55-56	" " "	563	155-157	" " " "	585
56-57	" " "	564	157-158	" " " "	586
57-58	" " "	565	158-160	Burnett v. United States,	586
58-59	" " "	566	160-161	" " "	587
59-61	" " "	567	161-163	Winchester & Partridge Mfg. Co. v. Creary,	591
61-62	" " "	568
62-63	" " "	569	163-166	" " "	592
63-64	" " "	570	166-167	" " "	593
64	Roberts v. Reilly,	544	167-170	Smith v. Whitney,	601
65-66	" "	548	170-173	" "	602
66-67	" "	549	173-176	" "	603
67-68	Call v. Palmer,	559	176-178	" "	604

Off. Rep. 115 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
178–181	Smith v. Whitney,	605
181–184	" "	606
184–186	" "	607
187	Field v. De Comeau,	596
187–190	" "	597
190	" "	598
191	Healy v. Joliet & Chicago R. R. Co.,	607
191–192	" " " "	608
193–194	Webb v. Barrowall,	595
194–197	" "	596
198–200	Doe v. Larmore,	598
200–201	Kings Co. Savings Inst. v. Blair,	657
201–204	" " "	658
204–206	" " "	659
207	Brown v. Grant,	598
207–209	" "	599
209–212	" "	600
213–214	Ford v. United States,	608
214–216	" " "	609
216–218	" " "	610
219	Milwaukee v. Koeffler,	612
219–222	" "	613
222–225	" "	614
225–226	" "	615
227	Coney v. Winchell,	610
227–230	" "	611
230–231	" "	612
231	Southwestern R. R. Co. v. Wright,
	Same v. Georgia,	626
231–234	" " " "	627
234–237	" " " "	628
237	Brown v. Davis,	659
238–239	" "	660
239–243	" "	661
243–247	" "	662
247–250	" "	663
250–252	" "	664
252	Presser v. Illinois,	615
253–254	" "	616
254–262	" "	617
262–264	" "	618
264–267	" "	619
267–269	" "	620
270	United States v. Spiegel,	664
270–273	" " "	665
273–276	" " "	666
276–277	" " "	667
277	Renaud v. Abbott,	629
280–283	" "	630
283–286	" "	631
286–289	" "	632
289	" "	633
289	Mobile v. Watson,
	Same v. U. S. ex rel., Watson,	620
289–292	" " " "	621
292–295	" " " "	622
295–296	" " " "	623
299–301	" " " "	624
301–304	" " " "	625
304–306	" " " "	626
307	Railroad Commission Cases:
	Stone v. Farmers Loan & Tr. Co.,	636
307–310	" " " "	638
310–313	" " " "	639
313–316	" " " "	640
316–319	" " " "	641
319–327	" " " "	642
327–329	" " " "	643
329–332	" " " "	644
332–335	" " " "	645

Off. Rep. 116 U. S.	Title.
335–338	Stone v. Farmers Loan & T
338–341	" " "
341–344	" " "
344–347	" " "
347	" " "
347–351	Stone v. Illinois Central R.
351–352	" " " "
352–354	Stone v. N. O. & Northeast
	R. Co.,
354–356	" " " "
356–358	Anderson v. Santa Anna,
358–361	" " " "
361–364	" " " "
364–366	" " " "
366	Confarr v. Township of
	Anna, Note,
366	Little, Receiver, v. Hacket
366–368	" " " "
368–373	" " " "
373–376	" " " "
376–379	" " " "
379–380	" " " "
380–382	Mower v. Fletcher,
382–385	" " "
385–386	" " "
386–388	Stebbins v. St. Anne,
388–391	" " "
391–392	" " "
392–393	Johnson v. Wilkins,
393–394	Wells v. Wilkins,
394–396	Hunt v. United States,
396–398	" " " "
398	United States v. Wallace,
398–401	" " " "
401	Ex parte Brown,
402	" "
402–404	Union P. R. Co. v. United
404–406	Gibbons v. District of Col
406–408	" " " "
408–410	Fletcher v. Hamlet,
410	" " "
410	Eureka Lake & Yuba Cana
	Superior Court of Yuba
411–412	" " " "
412–417	" " " " "
417–418	" " " " "
418–420	O'Reilly v. Campbell,
420–423	" " "
423	" " "
423–424	Carrick v. Lamar,
424–427	" " " "
427	Coffey v. United States,
428–430	" " " "
430–434	" " " "
434–435	" " " "
436	Coffey v. United States,
436–439	" " " "
439–443	" " " "
443–445	" " " "
445	" " " "
446	Walling v. Michigan,
446–448	" " "
448–454	" " "
454–457	" " "
457–460	" " "
460–461	" " "
461	London Assur. Co. v. Dre
468–469	" " "
469–472	" " "
472	" " "

Off. Rep.	Title.	Here in.
[illegible]	Pennsylvania R. R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. R. Co.
	St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co.	696
[illegible]	" " " "	697
[illegible]	United States v. Redgrave,	697
[illegible]	" " "	698
[illegible]	" " "	699
[illegible]	" " "	700
[illegible]	United States v. Perkins,	700
[illegible]	" " " "	701
[illegible]	Laughlin v. District of Columbia,	701
[illegible]	" " "	702
[illegible]	" " "	703
[illegible]	Dunphy v. Ryan,	703
[illegible]	" "	704
[illegible]	" "	705
[illegible]	Quertemuffer v. Robertson,	706
[illegible]	" "	707
[illegible]	" "	708
[illegible]	" "	709
[illegible]	" "	710
[illegible]	" "	711
[illegible]	" "	712
[illegible]	Cox v. Errol,	715
[illegible]	" "	716
[illegible]	" "	717
[illegible]	" "	718
[illegible]	" "	719
[illegible]	[illegible] Silver Min. Co. v. Cheesman,	712
[illegible]	" " " " "	713
[illegible]	" " " " "	714
[illegible]	" " " " "	715
[illegible]	Central R. R. Co. v. Bourbon County,	735
[illegible]	Tyre & Spring Works Co. v. Spalding,	720
[illegible]	" " " " "	721
[illegible]	" " " " "	722
[illegible]	" " " " "	723
[illegible]	Cox v. Oregon Steamship Co.,	719
[illegible]	" " " "	720
[illegible]	Carey v. Edmunds,	729
[illegible]	" "	730
[illegible]	" "	731
[illegible]	" "	732
[illegible]	" "	733
[illegible]	" "	734
[illegible]	Chaffin v. Taylor,	727
[illegible]	" "	728
[illegible]	" "	729
[illegible]	Royall v. Virginia,	735
[illegible]	" "	736
[illegible]	" "	737
[illegible]	" "	738
[illegible]	" "	739
[illegible]	Sands v. Edmunds,	739

Off. Rep. 116 U. S.	Title	Here in.
587	Sands v. Edmunds,	740
588–589	Hartog v. Memory,	725
589–592	" "	726
592	" "	727
593–595	Shepard v. Carrigan,	728
595–598	" "	724
598	" "	725
599–601	Ming v. Woolfolk,	740
601–604	" "	741
604–605	" "	742
605	Liebke v. Thomas,	744
606–609	" "	745
609	" "	746
609	Liebke v. Thomas, note,	746
609–610	Jones v. Simpson,
	Same v. Holsington,	742
610–613	" "	743
613–615	" "	744
616–618	Boyd v. United States,	746
618–621	" " "	747
621–624	" " "	748
624–627	" " "	749
627–629	" " "	750
629–632	" " "	751
632–635	" " "	752
635–638	" " "	753
638–641	" " "	754
641	" " "	755
642	Northern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Herbert,	755
642–643	" " " " "	757
643–648	" " " " "	758
648–651	" " " " "	759
651–654	" " " " "	760
654–657	" " " " "	761
657–659	" " " " "	762
659–660	" " " " "	763
661–662	Preston v. Manard,	763
662–664	" "	764
665–666	Vicksburg, S. & Pac. R. R. Co. v. Dennis,	770
666–669	" " "	771
669–671	" " "	772
671–672	Higgins v. McCrea,	764
672–675	" "	765
675–677	" "	766
677–680	" "	767
680–683	" "	768
683–686	" "	769
686–687	" "	770
687–688	Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co.,	774
688–691	" " " "	775
691–694	" " " "	776
694–697	" " " "	777
697–699	" " " "	778
699–700	Waterville v. Van Slyke,	772
700–703	" "	773
703–704	" "	774

ANN

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States,

AT OCTOBER TERM, 1885.

MATTHIAS SIMMERMAN, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF NEBRASKA.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 54, 55.)

Jurisdiction—federal question—when it must arise.

1. Where it does not appear from the record that a federal question was actually presented or in any way relied upon before final judgment below, this court is without jurisdiction.

2. This court acts upon the case as made to the court below when the judgment was rendered, and cannot incorporate into the record new matter appearing on a petition for rehearing.

[No. 931.]

Submitted Dec. 3, 1885. Decided Dec. 7, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska.

On motion to dismiss.

Mssrs. Wm. Leese, Atty-Gen. of Nebraska, and Enoch Totten, for defendant in error, in support of motion.

Mr. L. C. Burr, for plaintiff in error, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

It nowhere appears from this record, either in the application for a change of venue or in the objections to the admissibility of evidence, in the charge of the court as given or to the refusals to charge as requested, or in the motion for a new trial, the assignment of errors in the Supreme Court of the State, or the opinion filed in that court, that any federal question was actually presented for consideration or in any way relied on before the final judgment from which the writ of error has been taken. Such being the case, we cannot take jurisdiction. Detroit Railway Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 134 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 118]; Brown v. Colorado, 106 U. S. [illegible] [Bk. 27, L. ed. 132]. The fact that, after the final judgment and in the petition for a writ of error to this court, which seems to have been filed also as a petition for rehearing, a federal question was presented is not enough. It is decided in Susquehanna Boom Co. v. W. Branch Boom Co. 110 U. S. 57 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 4[illegible]]. As was said in that case: "We act on the case made to the court below when the judgment was rendered, and cannot incorporate into the record any new matter which appears for the first time after the judgment on a petition for rehearing. Such a petition is no part of the record on which the judgment rests." [55]

The motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction is granted.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

MICHAEL HANLEY ET AL., Plffs. in Err., [1]

v.

CHARLES DONOGHUE.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 1-7.)

Suit in a state court upon a judgment rendered in another State—judicial notice of state laws by federal and state courts—general rules.

1. State courts do not take judicial notice of the laws of other States, the several States being considered in this respect, foreign to each other.

2. Although this court, in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction from the lower Courts of the United States, takes judicial notice of the laws of all the States; yet, upon error to the highest court of a State it takes judicial notice of the laws of that State only; the laws of other States being only known to the court below as facts, to be proved as such.

3. In an action brought in a state court upon a judgment rendered in another State, an allegation as to the legal effect of the judgment in that State is admitted by demurrer.

4. Where a judgment of a state court in an action against joint defendants, one of whom has not been duly summoned, is by the law of that State valid as to those who were summoned, or who appeared, it will sustain an action against such defendants in another State.

[No. 229.]

Argued Nov. 18, 19, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Frederick J. Brown, for plaintiffs in error.

NOTE.—Evidence; proof of foreign and state laws. See U. S. Bank v. Stearns, 15 Wend., 314, note in Law. ed.

Presumption as to the existence of the common or local law in other States or countries. See Abell v. Douglass, 4 Den., 305, note in Law. ed.

The courts of the United States take judicial notice of the laws of the several States. See M'Niel v. Holbrook, 37 U. S. (12 Pet.), 84, bk. 9, 1009, note. For an important exception to this rule, see the above case of Hanley v. Donoghue.

Mr. Edward C. Eichelberger, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

[1] This was an action brought by Michael Hanley and William F. Welch against Charles Donoghue in the Circuit Court for Baltimore County in the State of Maryland, upon a judgment for $2,000 recovered by the plaintiffs on June 4, 1877, in an action of covenant against the defendant, Charles Donoghue, together with one John Donoghue, in the Court of Common

[2] Pleas of Washington County in the State of Pennsylvania, and there recorded.

The declaration contained three counts. The first count set forth the recovery and record of the judgment as aforesaid in said court of common pleas, and alleged that it was still in force and unreversed. The second count contained similar allegations, and also alleged that in the former action Charles Donoghue was summoned, and property of John Donoghue was attached by process of foreign attachment, but he was never summoned and never appeared, and that the proceedings in that action were duly recorded in that court. The third count repeated the allegations of the second count, and further alleged that "by the law and practice of Pennsylvania the judgment so rendered against the two defendants aforesaid is in that State valid and enforceable against Charles Donoghue and void as against John Donoghue," and that "by the law of Pennsylvania any appeal from the judgment so rendered to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania (which is the only court having jurisdiction of appeals from the said court of common pleas) is required to be made within two years of the rendition of the judgment, nevertheless no appeal has ever been taken from the judgment so rendered against the said defendants, or either of them."

The defendant filed a general demurrer to each and all of the counts, which was sustained, and a general judgment rendered for him. Upon appeal by the plaintiffs to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland, the judgment was affirmed. 59 Md. 239. The plaintiffs thereupon sued out this writ of error, on the ground that the decision was against a right and privilege set up and claimed by them under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

[3] The question presented by this writ of error is, whether the judgment of the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland has denied to the plaintiffs a right and privilege to which they are entitled under the first section of the fourth article of the Constitution of the United States, which declares that "Full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other State; and the Congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such Acts, records and proceedings shall be proved and the effect thereof;" and under section 905 of the Revised Statutes, which re-enacts the Act of May 26, 1790, chap. 11, 1 Stat. at L. 122, and prescribes the manner in which the records and judicial proceedings of the courts of any State shall be authenticated and proved, and enacts that "the said records and judicial proceedings, so authenticated, shall have such faith and credit given to them in every cou United States as they have by law the courts of the State from wh taken."

By the settled construction of ions of the Constitution and sta United States, a judgment of a sta cause within its jurisdiction and fendant lawfully summoned, or fully attached property of an absen is entitled to as much force and e the person summoned or the prope when the question is presented fo a court of another State, as it has i which it was rendered. Maxwell v Wall. 77 [89 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. ance Co. v. Harris, 97 U. S. 331 [B 959]; Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 W U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 109]; Cooper 10 Wall. 308 [77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed it is within the power of the Leg State to enact that judgments wh rendered in its courts in actions defendants, one of whom has no served with process, shall be vali who have been so served, or who ha in the action. Mason v. Eldred, 6 W U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 783]; Eldred Wall. 545 [84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 168 [bk. 2 274]; Sawin v. Kenny, 93 U. S. 28 ed. 926].

Much of the argument at the bar to the discussion of questions wh that we take of this case renders it to consider; such as the proper m peaching or avoiding judgments in which they are rendered, for wan vice of process upon one or all of ants; or the effect which a judgme in one State against two joint def of whom has been duly summo other has not, should be allowed former in the courts of another S allegation or proof of the effect a judgment has against him by th first State.

No court is to be charged with th of foreign laws; but they are wel to be facts which must, like oth proved before they can be receive of justice. Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cran Church v. Hubbart, 2 Cranch, 187, U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 15, 27, 249, 265] Lucas, 6 Pet. 763, 768 [31 U. S. bk. 575]; Dainese v. Hale, 91 U.S. 13, 2 ed. 190, 193]. It is equally well se several States of the Union are to b as in this respect foreign to eac that the courts of one State are not know, and therefore not bound to notice of the laws of another State. v. Finley, in which it was held exchange drawn in one of the S sons living in another were foreign said by Mr. Justice Washington, d unanimous opinion of this court: tional purposes embraced by the stitution, the States and the citizen one, united under the same sover ity, and governed by the same other respects, the States are necess to and independent of each other.

stitutions and forms of government being, although republican, altogether different, as are their laws and institutions." 2 Pet. 590 [27 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 530].

Judgments recovered in one State of the Union, when proved in the courts of another, differ from judgments recovered in a foreign country in no other respect than that of not being re-examinable upon the merits, nor impeachable for fraud in obtaining them, if rendered by a court having jurisdiction of the cause and of the parties. Buckner v. Finley, [supra]; M'Elmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 324 [38 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 177, 183]; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 11 How. 165, 176 [52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 648, 653]; Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 305 [72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 475, 478]; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457 [85 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 897].

Congress, in the execution of the power conferred upon it by the Constitution, having prescribed the mode of attestation of records of the courts of one State to entitle them to be proved in the courts of another State, and having enacted that records so authenticated shall have such faith and credit in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the State from which they are taken, a record of a judgment so authenticated doubtless proves itself without further evidence; and if it appears upon its face to be a record of a court of general jurisdiction, the jurisdiction of the court over the cause and the parties is to be presumed unless disproved by extrinsic evidence or by the record itself. Knowles v. Gas Light & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58 [86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 70]; Settlemier v. Sullivan, 97 U. S. 444 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1110]. But Congress has not undertaken to prescribe in what manner the effect that such judgments have in the courts of the State in which they are rendered shall be ascertained, and has left that to be regulated by the general rules of pleading and evidence applicable to the subject.

Upon principle, therefore, and according to the great preponderance of authority (as is shown by the cases collected in the margin*), whenever it becomes necessary for a court of one State, in order to give full faith and credit to a judgment rendered in another State, to ascertain the effect which it has in that State, the law of that State must be proved, like any other matter of fact. The opposing decisions in Ohio v. Hinchman, 27 Pa. St. 479, and Paine v. Schenectady Ins. Co. 11 R. I. 411, are based upon the misapprehension that this court, on a writ of error to review a decision of the highest court of one State upon the faith and credit to be allowed to a judgment rendered in another State, always takes notice of the laws of the latter State; and upon the consequent misapplication of the postulate that one rule must prevail in the court of original jurisdiction and in the court of last resort.

*Scott v. Coleman, 5 Littell, 349; Thomas v. Robinson, 3 Wend. 267; Sheldon v. Hopkins, 7 Wend. 435; Van Buskirk v. Mulock, 3 Harrison (N. J.) 184; Elliott v. Ray, 2 Blackf. 31; Cone v. Cotton, 2 Blackf. 63; Snyder v. Snyder, 25 Ind. 399; Pelton v. Platner, 13 Ohio, 209; Horton v. Critchfield, 18 Ill. 123; Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 328; Crafts v. Clark, 31 Iowa, 77; Taylor v. Barron, 10 Foster, 73, and 35 N. H. 484; Kemp v. Abell, 10 Allen, 485; Mowry v. Chase, 100 Mass. 79; Wright v. Andrews, 130 Mass. 149; Bank of United States v. Merchants' Bank, 7 Gill, 415, 431; Gaines v. Mackey, 56 Md. 416, 419.

When exercising an original jurisdiction under the Constitution and laws of the United States, this court, as well as every other court of the National Government, doubtless takes notice, without proof, of the laws of each of the United States.

But in this court, exercising an appellate jurisdiction, whatever was matter of law in the court appealed from is matter of law here; and whatever was matter of fact in the court appealed from is matter of fact here.

In the exercise of its general appellate jurisdiction from a lower court of the United States, this court takes judicial notice of the laws of every State of the Union, because those laws are known to the court below as laws alone, needing no averment or proof. Course v. Stead, 4 Dall. 22, 27 [4 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 724, 726]; Hinde v. Vattier, 5 Pet. 398 [30 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 168]; Owings v. Hull, 9 Pet. 607, 625 [34 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 246, 252]; United States v. Turner, 11 How. 663, 668 [52 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 856, 859]; Pennington v. Gibson, 16 How. 65 [57 U. S. bk. 14, L. ed. 846]; Covington Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. 227, 230 [61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 896]; Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. 108 [76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 604]; Junction R. R. Co. v. Bank of Ashland, 12 Wall. 226, 230 [79 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 385, 387]; Lamar v. Micou, 114 U. S. 218, [ante, 94].

But on a writ of error to the highest court of a State, in which the revisory power of this court is limited to determining whether a question of law depending upon the Constitution, laws or treaties of the United States has been erroneously decided by the state court upon the facts before it—while the law of that State, being known to its courts as law, is of course within the judicial notice of this court at the hearing on error—yet, as in the state court the laws of another State are but facts, requiring to be proved in order to be considered, this court does not take judicial notice of them, unless made part of the record sent up, as in Green v. Van Buskirk, [supra]. The case comes, in principle, within the rule laid down long ago by Chief Justice Marshall: "That the laws of a foreign nation, designed only for the direction of its own affairs, are not to be noticed by the courts of other countries, unless proved as facts, and that this court, with respect to facts, is limited to the statement made in the court below, cannot be questioned." Talbot v. Seeman [supra]. [7]

Where by the local law of a State (as in Tennessee, Hobbs v. Memphis & Charleston Railroad, 9 Heisk. 878) its highest court takes judicial notice of the laws of other States, this court also, on writ of error, might take judicial notice of them. But such is not the case in Maryland, where the court of appeals has not only affirmed the general rule that foreign laws are facts which, like other facts, must be proved before they can be received in evidence in courts of justice, but has held that the effect which a judgment rendered in another State has by the law of that State is a matter of fact, not to be judicially noticed without allegation and proof; and consequently that an allegation of the effect which such a judgment has by law in that State is admitted by demurrer. Baptiste v. De Volunbrun, 5 Har. & J. 86, 98; Wernwag v. Pawling, 5 Gill & J. 500, 508; Bank of United States v. Merchants' Bank, 7 Gill, 415, 431; Coates v. Mackey, 56 Md. 416, 419.

From these considerations, it follows that the averment in the third count of the declaration, that by the law of Pennsylvania the judgment rendered in that State against Charles Donoghue and John Donoghue was valid and enforceable against Charles, who had been served with process in that State, and void against John, who had not been so served, must be considered, both in the courts of Maryland and in this court on writ of error to one of those courts, an allegation of fact, admitted by the demurrer.

Upon the record before us, therefore, the plaintiff appears to be entitled, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, to judgment on this count. It having been admitted at the bar that the other counts are for the same cause of action, it is unnecessary to consider them. The general judgment for the defendant is erroneous, and the rights of both parties will be secured by ordering, in the usual form, that the Judgment of the Court of Appeals of Maryland be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[33] WILLIAM C. HOLGATE ET AL., Appts.,
v.
RUFUS J. EATON, Admr. of ELIZABETH R. EATON, Deceased, ET AL.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 33–42.)

Husband and wife—contract by husband affecting wife's equitable estate—specific performance not decreed, when.

1. A wife's equitable estate in property held by her husband as trustee cannot be affected by a conveyance by him; nor can it be made liable for a contract made by him, to which she was not a party and which she has not sanctioned.

2. Upon the facts of this case, it is held that the wife was not bound by her husband's contract affecting her equitable estate; that having repudiated his action in the matter until after a material change in the circumstances, she could not then take advantage of the contract: that no contract had been completed between her and the defendants; and that the bill should be dismissed, but that the cross bill of the defendants should be prosecuted to determine their rights growing out of a tax title and the payment by them of a certain sum on account of the husband.

3. Where time is not expressly or impliedly of the essence of a contract, in case of gross laches or inexcusable negligence on the part of a party who seeks a specific performance, or a material change in the circumstances affecting the rights of the parties, a court of equity will refuse to decree a specific performance.

[No. 75.]

Argued Nov. 24, 25, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Henry Newbegin and William C. Holgate, in person, for appellants.

Messrs. James H. Hoyt and H. S. Sherman, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered t
the court:

This is an appeal from the Circ
the Northern District of Ohio.

The suit was originally brough
equity, in the name of Elizabeth her next friend, Rufus J. Eaton progress Mrs. Eaton died, and he was appointed administrator of h it was revived by him in that cha wards her heirs were made plaint

The case as it was presented t
court for final decree, and as it co
is to be gathered from the pleadir
tary evidence, written correspond ositions which are voluminous.
recapitulate the evidence, but stat
facts as we believe them to be est

John B. Eaton, the husband of ant, who resided with her in Ma
claimed to be the owner in his own
ty-five acres of land near the town
the State of Ohio, lying between th
Erie Canal and the Pittsburgh and Railroad, was in July, 1874, at ing to sell it. Being in pressing w
he made his note for $400, payab
ance National Bank in ninety day
30, 1874, with Holgate and Newb appellants here, as his sureties.
afterwards paid.

On the same day Eaton made a absolute on its face, to Holgate
above mentioned, and at the same Holgate executed the following a

"Defiance, Ohio, Ju

"This memorandum witnesseth
Eaton, of Fryeburg, Maine, has to Wm. C. Holgate, 'that part of
of section twenty-seven (27), T. 4
lying between the Fort Wayne ro & E. Canal, and containing nine more or less, excepting 12 15/100 ac
by Michael Gorman, all more fu
and set forth in a deed this day
said John B. Eaton to said Holg derstood said Holgate is to pay fo sum of six thousand dollars, and claim Adam Wilhelm may hold
ises, one thousand dollars of whic
on or before October 1, next: two lars in six months thereafter; fif dollars ($1,500) in one year there teen hundred dollars in two yea
with interest from and after Octo
is further understood said Eaton
another deed of warranty, his wif
with him as grantor in same, an said deed on to H. Newbegin for which is to be substituted for the executed to said Holgate as afores Eaton agrees to send on to said N
mortgage and notes on which the
taken by which his title was acq
he can find same, which are to be ing to law. It is further understo that if, on or before said Octob
any cause, said Holgate shall pref
said premises on the terms herein Eaton agrees to repurchase same to release any installment that is u Holgate, or portion of same, and to pay said Wilhelm's tax claims;

with interest four hundred dollars ($400) this day advanced on said $1,000 installment to come due October first next, and for any advancements to said Eaton by said Holgate that is or may be made, said Holgate shall have a lien on said premises, and may hold the title for same as security till such advancements shall be adjusted. If, however, said Holgate shall be satisfied with said purchase on account of quality of land and all other particulars, he shall, at any time after sixty days, on demand of said Eaton, execute and deliver his notes for any unpaid part of said installments, secured by mortgage on the premises. It being understood that any amount the railway companies may pay over for the portion of said premises between the two railways shall be credited on the said $6,000 to be paid by said Holgate, or to go to said Eaton, less advancements aforesaid, if said Holgate shall prefer to release and reconvey his interest in the premises aforesaid. Given under our hands and seals the day and year above written.

J. B. Eaton. [Seal.]
Wm. C. Holgate. [Seal.]

"Attest: Henry Newbegin."

Holgate immediately assigned to Newbegin an undivided half interest in this contract, of which Eaton had due notice. He also, within the time limited, notified Eaton of his election to hold the property, and required him to furnish the deed in which Mrs. Eaton was to join, and the mortgage and notes on which the foreclosure proceeding was had, and on which Eaton's title depended.

This deed, however, was not tendered to appellants until December 7, 1876, though the notice and request for it was received before October 1, 1874. As appellants rely upon this delay as a defense to the suit for the purchase money, it is necessary to consider its importance in the contract and the excuses offered for the delay.

It appears sufficiently, we think, on the final hearing, that Mr. Eaton had no other interest in the land at the time he executed this agreement and made his deed to Holgate than that of trustee for his wife. "The mortgage and notes on which judgment was taken, by which his title was acquired," were never produced until the hearing before the master in 1882, and the effect of them as evidence is thus stated by the master:

"It appears that, by the will of William A. Allen, brother of Elizabeth R. Eaton, a share of his estate was given to her. Bartley Campbell, of Cincinnati, her agent, seems to have had possession of this share of the estate, being personal property, and used it as his own. In accounting for the same, he assigned a mortgage which he held on lands in Defiance to John B. Eaton, her husband, in trust for Mrs. Eaton and her children. This mortgage was foreclosed under proceedings at Defiance, in which John B. Eaton appeared to be the only party in interest, and at the sheriff's sale he became the purchaser, and the sheriff's deed was made to him, of about ninety-five acres of land in Defiance."

It should be added that the assignment of this mortgage expressed on its face that it was for the benefit of Mrs. Eaton.

It is said by the master that the deed from Mrs. Eaton required by the contract was unnecessary, because by the sale and purchase under the foreclosure proceedings Eaton had acquired title, and his deed to Holgate was sufficient to convey that title discharged of all equitable rights of Mrs. Eaton.

But we are of opinion that in this the master was in error.

It is quite clear to us that Holgate had full notice of Mrs. Eaton's interest in the land, for he seems to have been aware of the nature of the assignment by Campbell of the notes and mortgage to Eaton, and therefore required that they be delivered up to him, if they could be found, and they were found.

But as a still further security against Mrs. [38]
Eaton's equitable right or interest in the lands, he took from Eaton the covenant that if he elected to hold the land as a purchaser, Mrs. Eaton should join with him as grantor in another deed, with warranty of title. It is idle to say that Holgate did not have a pretty clear idea of Mrs. Eaton's rights in the land, and intended to have full protection against them, and that this part of the covenant had reference to a right of dower. She was to join as grantor in the warranty of title.

That all the parties understood that Mrs. Eaton had the paramount interest and equitable title to the land is seen in the whole subsequent correspondence.

It is argued on the part of the appellants, on the other hand, that the deed of Eaton and the accompanying contract constituted a mortgage for the security of Holgate in regard to the $400 note which he agreed to pay, and for the sum he might have to advance to buy in the tax title of Wilhelm, with the option, on the part of Holgate, to convert it into a purchase before October 1, that is, within sixty days. We do not deem it important to decide whether we call the transaction a mortgage or a conditional purchase. The effect is the same either way, as, if the purchase was perfected, the $400 was to be part of the purchase money. If it was not perfected, it, with the amount paid for the tax title, was to be a lien on the land conveyed.

It seems that when Mrs. Eaton was informed of the transaction between her husband and Holgate she refused to abide by it, and would not make the deed which the contract called for.

In August, Holgate had informed Eaton of his election to hold the land, and in a letter of September 30 he requests him to forward the deed in which his wife was to join. It is quite apparent that Mrs. Eaton had got possession or control of the notes and mortgage, which Mr. Eaton was therefore unable to surrender, and he had to confess his inability to get Mrs. Eaton to join him in the deed. About this time the railroad company, by judicial proceedings, condemned and appropriated thirteen acres of the land for its use; and the sum of $2,600 awarded as damages was matter of contention between Mrs. Eaton and her husband.

Under these circumstances, Holgate and New- [39]
begin entered into correspondence with Mrs. Eaton and her son, who acted for her in the matter. They both denied the binding force of the transaction with Mr. Eaton on Mrs. Eaton.

This correspondence ran through two years, in all of which Holgate and Newbegin urged her to fulfill the contract by making a conveyance of the land, and Mr. Eaton seems to have dropped out of the matter in utter helplessness. Holgate insisted that the price of the land condemned by the railroad company should be deducted from the price he had agreed to pay, and still pressed for his deed. Finally, in June, 1875, Holgate sent to Mrs. Eaton a mortgage executed by him and Newbegin on the land, less the thirteen acres taken by the railroad company, with two notes for $1,500 each, payable directly to her, not negotiable, and requested her to send the deed of herself and Mr. Eaton for the land described in the mortgage; but she declined to do so, though she kept the notes and mortgage.

On the 7th December, 1876, she did, however, tender such a deed, which Holgate and Newbegin refused to receive, and demanded payment of the $400 they had paid the bank on the note for Mr. Eaton and the sum they had paid Wilhelm for his tax title, $424. Shortly after this the present suit was commenced.

We think that the correspondence shows that during all this time, until a few months before Mrs. Eaton sent her conveyance, the appellants showed themselves ready, willing and eager to perform the contract; that Mr. Eaton, with whom they had contracted, proved himself unable to perform his covenant to procure his wife's conveyance; and that she, when appealed to and offered the consideration which the contract provided for, repudiated the husband's action in the matter, and held the notes and mortgage of the appellants for eighteen months, refusing to make the deed, without which she had no right to hold them a day.

This deed was essential to the contract. Without it Holgate would get nothing for the money he had paid and the notes he had tendered. He had a right to prompt action on the [40] part of Mrs. Eaton if she intended to accept the contract. We are bound to hold that while she had a right to refuse to be bound by the contract, she could not play fast and loose with the other parties to suit her pleasure. When, a year and a half after the notes and mortgages were sent to her, she tendered her deed it was too late to bind the appellants without their consent.

An important consideration leading to the same conclusion is, that at the time the contract was made and for a year or more after the value of the property continued to increase, but, for reasons not necessary to discuss, it had decreased so largely that at the time she tendered her deed it was worth far less than when Holgate elected to keep the land as a purchaser and demanded of Eaton the joint deed of himself and Mrs. Eaton. It is reasonable to suppose that this depreciation in value entered into the motives which finally induced her change of mind in the matter. The injustice of permitting her to delay two years her consent under these circumstances is obvious.

The case before us is practically a bill by Mrs. Eaton for specific performance. At law she could sustain no action on the notes, and the circumstances under which she received and held them and the mortgage would be a perfect defense to a mere foreclosure of the mortgage. Her only ground of success in the present suit therefore is in the principles of equity jurisprudence in enforcing a specific
of the agreement to buy the land
purchase money, and the allowa
court of chancery sometimes ma
when time is not of the essence o

In the case of Taylor v. Longu
172 [39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 405
Story uses language which has si
legal maxim in this class of cases
place (he says) there is no doubt
may be of the essence of a contra of property. It may be made so stipulation of the parties, or it ma plication from the very nature of
or the avowed object of the seller
And even where time is not thus ly or impliedly of the essence of
if the party seeking a specific per been guilty of gross laches or h cusably negligent in performing on his part, or if there has been diate period a material change of affecting the rights, interests, or
the parties—in all such cases co
will refuse to decree any specific upon the plain ground that it wo
table and unjust."

It is quite apparent, therefore,
Eaton is seeking to enforce the
with her husband, she has been gent, until altered circumstances
the right to do so; and if she rel tract with herself, no such contr
completed.

Her bill, therefore, should h
missed.

Holgate and Newbegin, howev
bill against Mr. & Mrs. Eaton ass to recover the $400 paid for Eaton paid for the deed of Wilhelm fo and Mrs. Eaton having died whi were pending, her executor and
were made parties in both bills.
presents more difficulty to our mi
main bill, for it seeks to subject t
payment of these sums with i doubtedly, if Mrs. Eaton had acc tract made by her husband she been bound by this part of it a
other, and, failing to perform h
these sums would become a lien
according to the agreement. Bu came bound by that contract. As said, no contract was ever made and Holgate. They never were other at any time. There was ne consent of minds on the subject.

We have also expressed the opi
ton's deed to Holgate did not con
table interest, nor did his contrac
the agreement. It did not bind h in a conveyance, and it did not bi security for the money advance band. The same consideration purchase of the Wilhelm tax titl
see how the equitable estate of her lifetime, or of her heirs no dead, can be made liable for a con
she was no party and which sh
tioned. But appellants have suc
terest in the land as Mr. Eaton ha passed by his conveyance. This estate. It may be a right to hold costs and expenses, or it may be the naked legal title. Whatever it is passed to Holgate by the deed.

As regards the Wilhelm tax title, it may be a perfect title or it may be a lien for the taxes paid by the purchaser at the tax sale. Or it may be that Holgate, holding the legal title as Eaton did, in trust, was bound to protect that title by the purchase from Wilhelm; and if so, it may be a lien on the land, though not a perfect title.

Of all this we are unadvised. But in the cross bill Holgate and Newbegin tender a conveyance of both these rights upon payment of the two sums mentioned, with interest. If the heirs of Mrs. Eaton will pay these sums and accept the conveyance, they should be permitted to do so. If they decline, the plaintiffs in the cross bill may be entitled to a decree against Mr. Eaton in personam, for he is a defendant to that bill, has appeared, but made no answer. As regards the cross bill against the heirs of Mrs. Eaton, if they will not pay these sums, the appellants can dismiss their bill as to them without prejudice to the legal rights of Holgate and Newbegin under the deeds from Eaton and Wilhelm, or they can proceed in it according to the principles of equity.

The decree of the Circuit Court in the original bill is, therefore, reversed, and the decree in the cross bill also. The case is remanded to the Circuit Court, with instructions to dismiss the original bill at the cost of the plaintiffs in that bill, and to take such further proceedings in the cross bill as are not inconsistent with this opinion, and as may be appropriate to enforce the rights of plaintiffs therein.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

UNITED STATES, Plf. in Err., v. BEM PRICE.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 43-45.)

Suit to recover money paid under private Act—Secretary of the Treasury has no discretion.

Where, by Act of Congress, the Secretary of the Treasury is required to pay a certain claim against the United States, no discretion in the premises being vested in him, the claimant is entitled to payment; and a suit to recover back the amount when paid, on the ground of mistake, does not lie, unless Congress abrogates the law under which payment was made, or directs suit to be brought.

[No. 210.]

Submitted Nov. 23, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Mississippi.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. A. H. Garland, Atty-Gen., for plaintiff in error.

Mr. J. Z. George, for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit brought to recover back a sum of money collected by Bem Price from the United States on a claim "for property and supplies taken * * * for the use of the armies of the United States during the war of the rebellion," allowed by the Commissioners of Claims under the Act of March 3, 1871, 16 Stat. at L. 524, chap. 116, § 2, on the ground that "Said sum of money was paid to defendant under Act of Congress, approved March 3, 1875, as heir and legatee of his deceased father's estate, and in mistake that the said sum was due him as only heir and legatee of decedent, when in truth and in fact the property and supplies so taken * * * belonged jointly to defendant and his two brothers;" and "when in truth and in fact the defendant and his said brothers were disloyal to the Government during the war of the rebellion, and not entitled under the law to recover said sum of money or any part thereof." The Act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. at L. pt. 3, 637, 646, Private Laws, chap. 205, is as follows:

"Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the several persons in this Act named, the several sums mentioned therein, the same being in full for and the receipt of the same to be taken and accepted in each case as a full and final discharge of the several claims presented by such persons to the Commissioners of Claims under the Act of March 3, 1871, and reported to the House of Representatives under the said Act, that is to say: * * * Bem Price, $6,306 * * *" [44]

The district court gave judgment for the defendant. To reverse that judgment this writ of error was brought.

We are unable to distinguish this case in principle from that of United States v. Jordan, 113 U. S. 418 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1013], in which it was held that when an Act of Congress directed the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to a certain person a specific sum of money, the amount of taxes assessed upon and collected from him contrary to the provisions of certain treasury regulations, "no discretion was vested in the Secretary or in any court to determine whether the sum specified was or was not the amount of tax assessed contrary to the provisions of such regulations;" and that consequently the payment must be made whether the amount stated by Congress was the true amount collected or not. The court of claims had held that the language of the Act, "taken together, was too clear to admit of doubt, that Congress undertook, as it had the right to do, to determine not only what particular citizens of Tennessee, by name, should have relief, but also the exact amount which should be paid to each of them." In this we fully concurred.

The Act now under consideration "required" the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Price the money he got. It was when the payment was made and is now the law of the land that he was entitled to that sum from the United States on account of his claim. The Secretary of the Treasury could not refuse to pay it, and no authority has been given anyone to sue to recover it back. It may be that Congress required the payment to be made under a mistake, or that the claim was not a just one; but until Congress abrogates the law or directs suit to be brought to recover back the money, the conclusive presumption is that there was no mistake, and that Price is under no obligation to pay back what he has received.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[28] UTAH & NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM F. FISHER, Assessor and ex officio Collector of Territorial and County Taxes in and for ONEIDA COUNTY, IDAHO TERRITORY.

(See S. C., "Utah & Northern Railway v. Fisher," Reporter's ed., 28-33.)

Fort Hill Indian Reservation—subject to jurisdiction of Idaho—taxation of railroad property therein, valid.

1. The Fort Hill Indian Reservation is subject to the general jurisdiction of the Territory of Idaho, as to all matters not interfering with the rights secured to the Indians by treaty.
2. By force of the cession of the land upon which the road and other property of the Utah and Northern Railway Company are situated, it was, so far as necessary for railroad purposes, withdrawn from the reservation. The taxation of such property by the Territory does not impair the treaty rights of the Indians.
3. A stipulation of the parties and finding of the court thereon will be construed, on appeal, with reference to existing laws affecting the subject matter.

[No. 554.]

Submitted Oct. 21, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Idaho

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. John F. Dillon and A. J. Poppleton, for appellant.

Messrs. Joseph K. McCammon and H. W. Smith, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of [28] the court:

The plaintiff became a corporation of Utah under an Act of the Territory of February 12, 1869, for the incorporation of railroad companies; and by the Act of Congress of June 20, 1878, it was made a railway corporation, not only of that Territory but of Idaho and Montana also, with the same rights and privi-[29] leges it had under its original articles of incorporation, with a proviso, however, that it should thereafter be subject to all laws and regulations in relation to railroads of the United States, or of any Territory or State through which it might pass. 20 Stat. at L. chap. 362, § 2. It now owns and operates in Idaho a railroad which, for the distance of sixty-nine miles and a fraction of a mile, passes through a tract of land in the County of Oneida, known as the Fort Hill Indian Reservation, which was, on the 30th of July, 1869, set apart by order of the President for the Bannock Tribe of Indians, pursuant to the provisions of a Treaty between the United States and the Eastern

Band of Shoshonees and the B concluded July 3, 1868. 15 Sta

In 1882 there was levied unde
the Territory, upon the railroad
other property within the Reser
ritorial and county purposes, a t
in the aggregate to $4,478. Th
the assessor and tax collector c
and the tax having become delin
proceeding to enforce it by a sal
erty when the plaintiff commen
the district court of the county t contending that the property be boundaries of the Indian Reser drawn from the jurisdiction of A preliminary injunction was g
the hearing the court held tha
was subject to taxation and th duly levied. The injunction wa dissolved and judgment render fendant. On appeal to the sup
the Territory this judgment was

The contention of the plain Indian Reservation is excluded f
of Idaho by the Act of March 3,
the Territory; or that it is neces
from the jurisdiction of the Te Treaty of July 3, 1868. Neithe
be sustained. The first sectio embraces within the boundarie
tory the Reservation; and the
which the plaintiff relies only nothing shall be construed to in ing rights of the Indians in Ida
they shall remain unextinguishe
to include within its boundaries
any lands which, by treaty w Tribes, were not, without their included within the limits or any State or Territory; or to aff ity of the Government of the U
make any regulations respecti
their lands, property or other ri
law or otherwise, which it wo
competent for the government t Act had not passed. 12 Stat. a proviso excludes from the limi
tion of Idaho only such land
were not to be included without the Indians; and it recognizes th
the United States to make the sa respecting the lands, property a
of the Indians which it would h
petent to make before the pass
There was at that time no treat
dians that the lands which migh
to them should be thus excluded
its and jurisdiction of any State
The clause of the proviso on therefore no application. Harl
98 U. S. 476 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 23
was held that the jurisdiction of
did not extend over the Reserv
cided upon the mistaken belie treaty existed, and that to t
ferred. This error was correcte
v. Monteith, 102 U. S. 147 [Bk.
As no such treaty existed, the p exclude the reservation from th
jurisdiction of the Territory.

By the Treaty it was agreed
the Bannocks desired a reserva
apart for their use, or the Presi

advisable to put them upon a reservation, he should cause a suitable one to be selected in their country. It was under this agreement that the Fort Hill Reservation was subsequently established and the Bannocks placed upon it. The Treaty provided a reservation for the Shoshonees, and declared that they should enjoy various rights and privileges; and that the Bannocks, when their reservation was made, should have the same rights and privileges therein. Among other things, it was stipulated that the reservations should be set apart for their absolute and undisturbed use and occupation, and for such other friendly tribes or individual Indians to whose admission from time to time they and the United States might consent; and that no person should ever be permitted by the United States to pass through, settle upon or reside on the reservation, except those designated in the Treaty, and such officers, agents and employees of the government as might be authorized to enter therein in the discharge of duties enjoined by law. The treaty also provided for the punishment, according to the laws of the United States, of any person among the Indians who should commit a wrong or depredation upon the person or property of anyone, white, black or Indian, subject to the authority of the United States, and at peace therewith; and that no treaty for the cession of any portion of the Reservation held in common should be of any force or validity as against the Indians, unless executed and signed by a majority of the adult male Indians occupying or interested therein; and that no cession should be construed to deprive, without his consent, any member of the tribe of his right to land selected by him under the Treaty.

It is contended by the plaintiff that these stipulations cannot be carried out if the laws of the Territory are enforced on the Reservation; and in support of the position special emphasis is placed upon the clause in regard to persons passing over, settling upon or residing in the Territory; and the clause touching wrongdoers among the Indians. As these treaty provisions have the force and effect of a law, it is insisted that the Reservation is excluded from the general jurisdiction of the Territory, as effectually as if the exclusion was made in specific terms.

To uphold that jurisdiction in all cases and to the fullest extent would undoubtedly interfere with the enforcement of the Treaty stipulations, and might thus defeat provisions designed for the security of the Indians. But it is not necessary to insist upon such general jurisdiction for the Indians to enjoy the full benefit of the stipulations for their protection. The authority of the Territory may rightfully extend to all matters not interfering with that protection. It has therefore been held that process of its courts may run into an Indian reservation of this kind, where the subject matter or controversy is otherwise within their cognizance. If the plaintiff lawfully constructed and now operates a railroad through the Reservation, it is not perceived that any just rights of the Indians under the Treaty can be impaired by taxing the road and property used in operating it. The authority to construct and operate the road appears from the agreement of July 18, 1881, between the United States and the Indians, which was ratified by Act of Congress of July 8, 1882. That agreement recites that the Utah and Northern Railway Company had applied for permission to construct a line of railway through the Reservation; and that the Indians had agreed, for the consideration thereafter mentioned, to surrender to the United States their title to so much of the Reservation as might be necessary for the legitimate and practical uses of the road. A strip of land and several parcels adjoining it forming part of the Reservation, were ceded to the United States for the consideration of $6,000, to be used by the Company and its successors or assigns as a right of way and road bed, and for depots, stations and other structures. By an Act of Congress confirmatory of the agreement the same right of way was relinquished by the United States to the Company for the construction of its road; and the use of the several parcels of land intended for depots, stations and other structures was granted to the Company and its successors or assigns, upon the payment to the United States of the $6,000; and on the condition of paying any damages which the United States or Indians, individuals or in their tribal capacity, might sustain by reason of the acts of the Company, or its agents or employees, or on account of fires originating in the construction or operation of the road. By force of the cession thus made, the land upon which the railroad and other property of the plaintiff are situated was, so far as necessary for the construction and working of the road, and the construction and use of buildings connected therewith, withdrawn from the Reservation. The road and property thereupon became subject to the laws of the Territory relating to railroads, as if the Reservation had never existed. The very terms on which the plaintiff became a corporation in the Territory rendered it subject to all such laws and, of course, to those by which the tax in controversy was imposed.

The only answer of the plaintiff to this view is that, by the stipulation of the parties and the [33] finding of the court thereon, it appears that the railway and property which are taxed are situated within the boundaries of and upon the Reservation. If this be so, it does not follow that the result would be changed. The moment that the road was lawfully constructed it came under the operation of the laws of the Territory. The stipulation and finding must, however, be read with reference to the legislation of Congress; and, therefore, as only establishing that the road and property are within the exterior boundaries of the Reservation. They will not be so construed as to allow the Company to escape taxation by the force of a stipulation as to an alleged fact which that legislation shows does not exist.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[80]

WILLIAM S. ROBERTS, Appt.,

v.

PHILIP REILLY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 80-97.)

Fugitives from justice—requisitions by Governor of one State upon Governor of another—lawfulness tested by habeas corpus—jurisdiction—what must appear before requisition can be complied with.

1. There is nothing in section 763, R. S., which requires that an appeal in cases of habeas corpus to the Circuit Court from the decision of a District Court or judge be to the next term of the Circuit Court thereafter to be held; on the contrary the subject is otherwise regulated by section 765.

2. The objection that the hearing of such appeal was before the Circuit Justice in chambers and not in open court cannot be made here for the first time.

3. Whenever the executive of the State causes the arrest of a person as a fugitive from justice from another State, such person can have the lawfulness of his arrest inquired into upon habeas corpus, issued either by the state or federal courts. The jurisdiction of the state courts is not excluded in such cases.

4. It must appear to the Governor of a State to whom a demand for an alleged fugitive from justice is presented, before he can lawfully comply with the demand: 1, that the person demanded is substantially charged with a crime against the laws of the State from whose justice he is alleged to have fled, by an indictment or an affidavit certified as authentic by the Governor making the demand; 2, that the person demanded is a fugitive from the justice of the State the executive authority of which makes the demand.

5. The first of these prerequisites is a question of law which is open upon the face of the papers to judicial inquiry. The second is a question of fact for the Governor upon whom the demand is made to decide. His decision is sufficient to justify the removal, until the presumption in its favor is overthrown by contrary proof.

6. The objection to the indictment in question, that it does not appear that the company alleged to have been the owner of the property which was the subject of the larceny charged, is a person capable in law of such ownership, is not matter of law arising upon the face of the indictment.

7. The objection that the circumstances set out in the affidavits show that the act of the accused constituted a crime in the State in which he was arrested, as well as in the demanding State, is immaterial.

8. To be a fugitive from justice in the sense of the Act of Congress regulating the subject, it is not necessary that the party charged should have left the State in which the crime is alleged to have been committed, after an indictment found, or for the purpose of avoiding a prosecution anticipated or begun.

[No. 992.]

Argued Nov. 20, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Matthews:

The record in this case shows the following state of facts:

On April 30, 1885, the appellant, Roberts, presented his petition to the Judge of the District Court for the Southern District of Georgia, and filed the same in the office of the clerk, alleging that he was illegally restrained of his liberty by the appellee, Reilly, wh be acting as an agent of the State of
and as such to hold the petitioner,
of the authority of the United Stat
of an arrest made in pursuance c tive warrant issued by the Gover
gia, on a requisition from the New York, reciting that the pe
been indicted in the State of Nev
was a fugitive from the justice
State. He averred that the custo
he was restrained of his liberty
for various reasons assigned, and the writ of habeas corpus. The sued as prayed for, and duly serve upon an amendment to the petition follows:

"And now comes the said Will
erts and, by leave of the court first said petition and says that he is his liberty, in violation of a law o States, viz.: the Act of February 1
tion 5278 of the Revised Statutes o States, in this: that it appears from now here to your honor shown, up executive warrant under which h
strained issued, that the crime wi
is charged was committed in the S gia; that the papers accompanying of the Governor of New York are ticated, as required by that Act;
where appears that the relator w
within the limits of the State of N
the time when said alleged crime
have been committed; that it now that any evidence was before the New York, at the time he issued that relator was personally within
New York State when the crime
have been committed."

The defendant, Reilly, on May
his answer and return, under oath
of habeas corpus which had been served upon him, as follows:

"United States of America,
Southern District of Georgia, Easte

"Pursuant to a writ of habeas c
by the Hon. Emory Speer, Judg
trict Court of the United States fo
ern District of Georgia, served upo with produce the body of William and return as the cause of his d
executive warrant of the Governor of Georgia under which he was del
by authority issued to me by Hon
Governor of the State of New Yo 1885, here to the court shown, co
is annexed, under which I still having, as agent of the State of N
ceived said Roberts from Wilberf Sheriff of the County of Richmon ried to the State of New York, the
with according to law; that a cert
the indictment found for grand la
State of New York, with evidenc
from justice after commission of
were produced by respondent as re
the Governor of New York and the Governor of Georgia, and reta office at the time of the issuing of t
warrant under which the said
placed in possession of the respon
sheriff of Richmond County,

NOTE.—Habeas Corpus; when, by what courts, and to what judge the writ may be issued; what may be inquired into. For a full discussion see U. S. v. Hamilton, 3 U. S. 17, bk. 1, 480, note.

"I further return that on April 26, 1885, after the delivery of the said Roberts to me by the sheriff of Richmond County, I was served with a writ of habeas corpus issued by the Hon. H. C. Roney, Judge of the Superior Court of the Augusta Circuit, of which circuit the County of Richmond is a part; and by his order required to produce the said Roberts before him April 27, 1885; that from that date until May 1, 1885, I held the said Roberts subject to the order of the said judge, who at said time remanded him into my custody, a certified copy of which proceedings, with the judgment thereon dismissing the writ and remanding him into my custody, is here to the court shown.

"Whereupon this respondent prays that the said writ may be dismissed at the costs of the relator."

On the hearing before the district court, documents were put in evidence, and constitute a part of the record, as follows:

1. The authority given by the Governor of New York to the respondent, as agent of the State, to take and receive the prisoner as a fugitive from justice and convey him to the State of New York to be dealt with according to law.

2. A copy of the requisition of the Governor of New York upon the Governor of Georgia, as follows:

"State of New York, Executive Chamber.

"David B. Hill, Governor of the State of New York, to his Excellency, the Governor of the State of Georgia:

"Whereas, it appears by a copy of an indictment which I certify to be authentic and duly authenticated, in accordance with the laws of this State, that William S. Roberts stands charged with the crime of grand larceny in the first degree, committed in the County of New York, in this State, and it has been represented to me that he has fled from justice of this State, and may have taken refuge in the State of Georgia; now, therefore, pursuant to the provisions of the Constitution and laws of the United States in such cases made and provided, I do hereby require that the said William S. Roberts be apprehended and delivered to Philip Reilly, who is authorized to receive and convey him to the State of New York, there to be dealt with according to law.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto signed my name and affixed the privy seal of the State, at the City of Albany, this twenty-second day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five.

[Seal of the State of New York.] David B. Hill.

"By the Governor: William G. Rice, Private Secretary."

3. A copy of the application for this requisition made by the district attorney of the County of New York, accompanied and supported by affidavits of Wm. W. Thurston and others, giving in detail the circumstances of the alleged offense, and averring that the prisoner and one Walton, charged with him, had fled from the justice of the State of New York and were to be found in Georgia.

4. A copy of the indictment, as follows:

"Court of General Sessions of the Peace of the City and County of New York.

The People of the State of New York against William S. Roberts and Edward H. Walton.

"The grand jury of the City and County of New York by this indictment accuse William S. Roberts and Edward H. Walton of the crime of grand larceny in the first degree, committed as follows: the said William S. Roberts and Edward H. Walton, each late of the first ward of the City of New York, in the County of New York aforesaid, on the fourteenth day of February, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four, at the ward, city and county aforesaid, with force and arms, ten written instruments and evidences of debt, to wit: the bonds and written obligations issued by the Georgetown and Lane's Railroad Company, a corporation duly existing under the laws of the State of South Carolina, and called "first mortgage bonds," in and by each of which the said railroad company acknowledged itself indebted to the bearer thereof in the sum of one thousand dollars, and which said sum the said railroad company thereby promised to pay on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord 1913, with interest, the same bearing date on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord 1883, and [85] being then and there each duly signed by the president and secretary of the said railroad company, and sealed with the seal thereof, and numbered nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen, fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen and eighteen, respectively, and being then and there in full force and effect, and wholly unsatisfied, and of the value of one thousand dollars each (a more particular description of which said bonds and written obligations is to the grand jury aforesaid unknown) of the valuable things, evidences of debt, goods, chattels, and personal property of the Bethlehem Iron Company then and there being found, then and there feloniously did steal, take and carry away, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided and against the peace of the People of the State of New York and their dignity.

Randolph B. Martine,
District Attorney."

Indorsed on back of indictment:

"Filed 10 day of April, 1885. The People vs. William S. Roberts and Edward H. Walton. Grand larceny, 1st degree. Sections 528, 530, 540, Penal Code. Randolph B. Martine. District Attorney.

"A true bill.

Henry A. Oakley, Foreman.

"Witnesses: W. W. Thurston.
W. P. St. John."

The foregoing were certified by the Secretary of the Executive Department of Georgia to constitute a true and complete transcript or copy of papers of file in that office in the matter of the requisition for William S. Roberts by the Governor of New York upon the Governor of Georgia.

5. The executive warrant of the Governor of Georgia, with the return of the execution thereof by the sheriff as follows:

"State of Georgia, by Henry D. McDaniel, Governor of said State, to all the sheriffs and constables thereof, greeting:

"Whereas, His Excellency, David B. Hill, Governor of the State of New York, and as the executive authority thereof, has demanded of [86] me as the executive authority of this State, William S. Roberts, as a fugitive from justice from the State of New York, and has moreover produced a copy of indictment charging the said William S. Roberts with having committed in the said State of New York the crime of grand larceny in the first degree, which copy (of) indictment is duly certified as authentic by His Excellency the Governor of the State of New York, and has also appointed and commissioned Philip Reilly, agent, on the part of the State of New York, to receive said fugitive from the civil authorities of this State, to the end that he may be carried to the State of New York, there to be dealt with according to law; and whereas, it is suspected that the said fugitive from justice is now within the jurisdictional limits of this State:

"Now, in accordance with the provisions of an Act of Congress, passed the twelfth day of February, seventeen hundred and ninety-three, respecting 'fugitives from justice,' and in order that the said William S. Roberts may be brought to trial for the offense for which he stands charged, you are hereby commanded to arrest and deliver him to the said Philip Reilly, agent as aforesaid, so that he may be carried to the State of New York, within whose jurisdiction said offense is alleged to have been committed; and I moreover charge and require all officers, both civil and military, in this State, to be vigilant in endeavoring to apprehend the said William S. Roberts, fugitive as aforesaid.

"Given under my hand and the seal of the Executive Department, at the capitol, in Atlanta, this 25th day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five, and of American Independence the one hundred and ninth.

[Seal.] Henry D. McDaniel,
"By the Governor: Governor.
Howard E. W. Palmer,
Secretary, Executive Department."

Sheriff's Return.

"Georgia, Richmond County:

"Executed the within warrant by arresting [87] William S. Roberts and delivering him, pursuant to the mandate of the Governor, to Philip Reilly, agent on the part of the State of New York, at one p. m., April 26, 1885.

W. Daniel, Sheriff, R. C. Ga."

6. A transcript of the record of certain proceedings in the Superior Court of Richmond County in habeas corpus, on a petition therefor presented by the said William S. Roberts on April 26, 1885, the return thereto of the said Philip Reilly, and the order of the court thereon rendered May 1, 1885, remanding the petitioner to the custody of the said Reilly, under the executive warrant of the Governor of Georgia, issued in pursuance of the requisition of the Governor of New York, heretofore set out.

7. An affidavit of W. S. Roberts, setting forth the facts of the transaction imputed to him as a crime and on which the indictment is based, and denying the truth of the charge. It also denies that he was in New York on the day laid in the indictment as the date of the offense, and denies that he was in that State after indictment found or that he fled therefrom. And in support of these averments an affidavit of E. H. Walton was also made and filed.

On May 4, 1885, the matter was heard by the Judge of the District Court on these pleadings and proofs, when it was ordered a
that the writ be disallowed, and tioner be remanded to the custod
spondent.

Thereupon, on May 5, 1885, t
order allowing an appeal was made in the District Court:

"In the District Court of the Unit
the Southern District of Georgia vision.

"In Re Petition of William S. R

"The Judge of the District Cour dered a final decision in said cas
said writ and remanding said pe
said petitioner having prayed that taken in his behalf to the next cir
said district, in which said cause
in accordance with the statute in enacted, after argument had it i
and ordered that an appeal be, an hereby, allowed upon the followi
under the following regulations:

"That the said William S. Rob
into the custody of the United St
for the said Southern District of
by him safely kept, and that the
S. Roberts do execute and deliver sufficient bond in the sum of ten t
lars, with security, to be approved of said District Court, which said approved, shall be filed with the circuit court, and shall be condit lows: that the said William S. R liver himself up to the marshal o
ern district, and do appear befor
court whenever and wherever ord
court, or by the said circuit court,
and there abide by and perform t
of the circuit court in the premise

"And that the said William S
cause to be sent to the said appe
a transcript of the petition, writ of return thereto, and other proceed
ments and affidavits in said cause,
on execution of said bond. And execution and approval of said b
said, and the tender of the same,
iam S. Roberts be discharged fro of said marshal and allowed to go to the terms of this order or the
of said appellate court.

"In open court, May 5, 1885.

"Emory Speer, U.

On May 16, 1885, the relator, W
erts, filed, in the clerk's office
Court for the Eastern Division, S trict of Georgia, at a stated term begun and holden in the City of the second Monday in April, 188
of a record, on appeal from the
of the foregoing proceedings and previously given the bond on ap thereby.

Afterwards an order was made court, the district judge presid
the clerk to transmit a transcript
ceedings in the cause to the circ
Atlanta, Georgia, that the same before him on May 18th, or as s
as the same could be heard. A May 19, the matter was heard be tice Woods, at Atlanta, when a parties appeared, the petitioner

by counsel, his personal presence being excused by reason of physical liability. The following order was thereupon made, and entered on the minutes of the circuit court:

"In the matter of appeal of Wm. S. Roberts from the decision of the District Judge of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia, Eastern Division, under petition for habeas corpus against Philip Reilly:

"This case came on to be heard before me pursuant to the order of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia, Eastern Division, dated May 15, 1885, to which court an appeal was allowed May 5, 1885, and which was perfected upon the execution of a bond approved by the district judge, and filed May 7, 1885.

"After argument heard, it is ordered that the judgment of the district judge of May 4, 1885, 'that the writ is disallowed and the petition of the relator be dismissed, and that he be remanded to the custody of Philip Reilly,' be, and it is hereby, affirmed at the costs of the relator.

"It is further ordered that this order be entered on the minutes of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia, Eastern Division, and a certified copy transmitted to the district judge of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia, Eastern Division, for enforcement by him of his judgment of May 4, 1885.

"It further appearing that sufficient cause was shown before me for the nonappearance of the relator, it is ordered that no liability rest upon the sureties upon the bond filed May 7, 1885, for such nonappearance, but that said bond remain of full force until complied with by the delivery of the relator to the United States Marshal to be turned over to said Philip Reilly, or such other duly constituted agent as may be appointed by the Governor of New York to receive him.

"It is further ordered that the relator have leave to apply to the district judge for stay of his order of May 4, 1885, until physically able to be removed; and that for the cause shown in the affidavit of Henry F Campbell of May 18, 1885, submitted at the hearing, and now ordered to be filed, the delivery of the relator to Philip Reilly to be made by the marshal of Georgia, the obligee in the bond, be stayed until June 19, 1885.

"May 19, 1885. W. B. Woods, Circuit Justice."

Thereupon the relator, Roberts, filed in the circuit court, on June 20, 1885, his petition, praying an appeal from this order and judgment to this court, which was allowed, and it was ordered "that the clerk of the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of Georgia, Eastern Division, do send up to the October Term, 1885, of the Supreme Court of the United States a transcript of the petition, writ of habeas corpus, return thereto, and other proceedings in said cause. Further ordered, that the judgments heretofore had in the cause remanding said Roberts into the custody of said Reilly be, and the same are hereby, superseded until the final decision of the supreme court can be had in the case, and that the bail of said Roberts retain him in their custody and produce him to answer whatever decision the supreme court may render in the cause, or if his bail have surrendered him into the custody of the United States Marshal, that said marshal hold him to be produced to answer said judgment, with liberty to said Roberts to give a new bond in the sum of $10,000, with surety, to be approved by the undersigned (the circuit justice), conditioned for his appearance to answer said judgment."

The appeal to this court having been perfected, the appellant filed the following assignment of errors:

"Afterwards, to wit: on the second Monday of October, in this same term, before the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, at the Capitol, in the City of Washington, came the said William S. Roberts, by W W Montgomery, his attorney, and says that in the record and proceedings aforesaid there is manifest error in this, to wit: that by the record aforesaid it appears that an order was passed referring said cause to Judge Woods, to be heard by him in vacation, said order having been passed at a term of said circuit court which was in session when the appeal from the district judge was allowed, whereas appellant insists that the appeal from the district judge was to the term of said circuit court next after the judgment of the district from which the appeal was taken. Appellant further insists that no hearing could be had in vacation unless the record shows on its face that such hearing was had by consent of parties. Appellant further insists that the judgment of His Honor, Judge Woods, was error, because there was no evidence showing that the relator had ever been in New York since the alleged commission of the crime, or at the time of its commission, which was not fully rebutted; and again, because no copy of the laws of New York was submitted to the Governor of Georgia showing what constituted grand larceny under the laws of New York. [91]

"And again; because no copy of the laws of New York was submitted to the Governor of Georgia showing that by such laws the indictment was sufficient, it manifestly appearing that said indictment did not charge any crime by the rules of the common law.

"And again; because the evidence submitted to the Governor of Georgia showed that if any crime was committed, it was committed in Georgia and not in New York.

"And again; because it nowhere appears that the affidavits accompanying the requisition of the Governor of New York were sworn to before officers authorized to take them.

"And the said Roberts prays that the said several judgments herein complained of may be reversed, annulled and altogether held for naught, and he be discharged from custody and restored to all rights which he has lost by reason of the said executive warrant of the Governor of Georgia and the judgments complained of."

And afterwards, the counsel for the appellant filed additional assignments of error, as follows:

"That the circuit court erred in not discharging appellant, for the reason that the affidavits on which the requisition of the Governor of New York is found are not authenticated by him. [92]

"And again; because the warrant of the Governor of Georgia does not state upon what evidence it is issued, or that the Governor was satisfied from the testimony that a case was made which required him to exercise the power of extradition conferred upon him by the United States Constitution and the Act of Congress.

"And again, because the affidavits on which the indictment and requisition mainly rest are taken before the leading counsel of the prosecution in the case, such counsel acting as a notary public.

"And again; because the facts show a crime under the laws of Georgia, which, even if they show a crime under the laws of New York also, take the case out of the operation of the extradition laws."

Mr. W. W. Montgomery, for the appellant.

Messrs. Frank H. Miller, Daniel Lord, Wm. E. Doster and Randolph B. Martine, Dist. Atty., for appellee.

[92] Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

There is nothing in the Revised Statutes, § 768, providing an appeal in cases of habeas corpus to the circuit court from the final decision of the district court, or the judge thereof, which requires it to be taken, as in ordinary cases at law or suits in equity or admiralty, to the next term of the circuit court thereafter to be held. On the contrary, the subject is regulated otherwise by section 765, R. S., which enacts, that "The appeals allowed by the two preceding sections shall be taken on such terms, and under such regulations and orders, as well for the custody and appearance of the person alleged to be in prison or confined or restrained of his liberty, as for sending up to the appellate tribunal a transcript of the petition, writ of habeas corpus, return thereto and other proceedings as may be prescribed by the supreme court or, in default thereof, by the court or judge hearing the cause." This statutory provision evidently contemplates the summary character of proceedings under the writ of habeas corpus as not admitting, in favor of the liberty of the citizen, the delays usually and necessarily attending ordinary litigations between parties, and confers upon the judicial tribunal, or the judge hearing the application and making the order which is the subject of the appeal, discretion to send up the case to the appellate tribunal, under such regulations and orders as may seem best adapted to secure the speediest and most effective justice. This harmoniously adapts the practice in direct appeals in such cases, under these sections of the Revised Statutes, to that exercised independently of these provisions, by means of the original writ of habeas corpus, with the aid of a writ of certiorari, to bring up the record of the proceedings to be reviewed. This form of appellate jurisdiction was declared by this court in Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. 85 [75 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 332], to exist independently of the provisions for a direct appeal, now incorporated into the sections of the Revised Statutes above referred to; and it was exercised without regard to the beginning and ending of the terms of the appellate court, and in a summary manner. The appeal in the present case, from the judgment of the district court to the circuit court, was therefore not heard prematurely, although it was lodged and disposed of at a term of the latter court, which was current at the time the appeal was taken.

[93]

In regard to the objection now taken that the hearing of the appeal was had before the Circuit Justice at Atlanta at chambers, and not at Savannah in open court, it is sufficient to say that the order to that effect was made without objection taken at the time, or afterwards, in the district or circuit court, or at the hearing before Justice Woods; that the appellant appeared at the time and place by counsel and was heard; that the arrangement was made for the convenience of the parties and to avoid delay; and that it does not seem to have involved any hardship or injustice to the party now complaining. The objection, if it could ever have been properly interposed and insisted on, cannot now be made for the first time. It comes too late.

The other assignments of errors relate to the merits, and require a consideration of the limits of the jurisdiction of judicial tribunals in cases of the extradition of fugitives from justice under the clause of the Constitution by which it is regulated.

That constitutional provision declares that "A person charged in any State with treason, felony or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another State, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime." Art. IV. § 2, clause 2. There is no express grant to Congress of legislative power to execute this provision; and it is not, in its nature, self executing; but a contemporary construction, contained in the Act of 1793, 1 Stat. at L. 302, ever since continued in force, and now embodied in sections 5278 and 5279 of the Revised Statutes, has established the validity of its legislation on the subject. "This duty of providing by law" said Chief Justice Taney, delivering the opinion of the court in Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, 104 [65 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 717, 728] "the regulations necessary to carry this compact into execution, from the nature of the duty and the object in view, was manifestly devolved upon Congress; for if it was left to the States, each State might require different proof to authenticate the judicial proceeding upon which the demand was founded, and as the duty of the Governor of the State where the fugitive was found is, in such cases, merely ministerial, without the right to exercise either executive or judicial discretion, he could not lawfully issue a warrant to arrest an individual without a law of the State or of Congress to authorize it."

It follows, however, that whenever the Executive of the State upon whom such a demand has been made, by virtue of his warrant causes the arrest for delivery of a person charged as a fugitive from the justice of another State the prisoner is held in custody only under color of authority derived from the Constitution and laws of the United States, and is entitled to invoke the judgment of the judicial tribunals whether of the State or the United States, by the writ of habeas corpus, upon the lawfulness of his arrest and imprisonment. The jurisdiction of the courts of the States is not excluded in such cases, as was adjudged by this court in the case of Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 63

[Bk. 28, L. ed. 542]; for although the party is restrained of his liberty under color of authority derived from the laws of the United States, he is not in the custody of or under restraint by an officer of the United States.

The Act of Congress (§ 5278 R. S.) makes it the duty of the executive authority of the State to which such person has fled, to cause the arrest of the alleged fugitive from justice, whenever the executive authority of any State demands such person as a fugitive from justice, and produces a copy of an indictment found or affidavit made before a magistrate of any State, charging the person demanded with having committed a crime therein, certified as authentic by the Governor or Chief Magistrate of the State from whence the person so charged has fled.

It must appear therefore, to the Governor of the State to whom such a demand is presented, before he can lawfully comply with it; first, that the person demanded is substantially charged with a crime against the laws of the State from whose justice he is alleged to have fled, by an indictment or an affidavit, certified as authentic by the Governor of the State making the demand; and second, that the person demanded is a fugitive from the justice of the State the executive authority of which makes the demand.

The first of these prerequisites is a question of law and is always open upon the face of the papers to judicial inquiry, on an application for a discharge under a writ of habeas corpus. The second is a question of fact, which the Governor of the State upon whom the demand is made must decide, upon such evidence as he may deem satisfactory. How far his decision may be reviewed judicially in proceedings in habeas corpus, or whether it is not conclusive, are questions not settled by harmonious judicial decisions, nor by any authoritative judgment of this court. It is conceded that the determination of the fact by the executive of the State in issuing his warrant of arrest, upon a demand made on that ground, whether the writ contains a recital of an express finding to that effect or not, must be regarded as sufficient to justify the removal until the presumption in its favor is overthrown by contrary proof. Ex parte Bogel, 114 U. S. 642 [ante, 250]. Further than that it is not necessary to go in the present case.

The objections taken in this proceeding to the sufficiency of the indictment, which were overruled both in the district and circuit courts and which are still relied on here, are not well founded. The indictment itself is certified by the Governor of New York to be authentic and to be duly authenticated, which is all that is required by the Act of Congress. It charges a crime under and against the laws of that State. It is immaterial that it does not appear that a certified copy of such laws was furnished to the Governor of Georgia. The statute does not require it, and the Governor could have insisted and it is to be presumed did insist upon the production of whatever he deemed necessary or important properly to inform him on the subject. And the courts of the United States, to whose process the relator has appealed, take judicial notice of the laws of all the States.

The indictment in question sufficiently charges the substance of a crime against the laws of New York. The objection to it, that it does not appear that the Bethlehem Iron Company, averred to be the owner of the property the subject of the larceny charged, is a person capable in law of such ownership, is not matter of law arising upon the face of the indictment, but can arise only at the trial upon the evidence, if the question should then be made. The averment in the indictment is the allegation of a fact which does not seem to be impossible in law and is, therefore, traversable. The further objection, that the facts and circumstances, set out in the affidavits as constituting the crime charged in the indictment, show that it is a crime in Georgia, and the possible subject of prosecution in that State under its laws, does not affect the question. These facts are, in brief, that the original taking of the bonds mentioned in the indictment is shown to have been in Georgia, whence they were brought into New York by the appellant and there finally appropriated to his own use. If that be true, it is none the less true that the offense charged is also a crime in New York against its laws; and the State of Georgia may choose to waive the exercise of its jurisdiction [97] by surrendering the fugitive to answer to the laws of New York.

On the question of fact, whether the appellant was a fugitive from the justice of the State of New York, there was direct and positive proof before the Governor of Georgia, forming part of the record in this proceeding. There is no other evidence in the record which contradicts it. The appellant in his affidavit does not deny that he was in the State of New York about the date of the day laid in the indictment when the offense is alleged to have been committed; and states by way of inference only that he was not in that State on that very day; and the fact that he has not been within the State since the finding of the indictment is irrelevant and immaterial. To be a fugitive from justice, in the sense of the Act of Congress regulating the subject under consideration, it is not necessary that the party charged should have left the State in which the crime is alleged to have been committed, after an indictment found, or for the purpose of avoiding a prosecution anticipated or begun, but simply that, having within a State committed that which by its laws constitutes a crime, when he is sought to be subjected to its criminal process to answer for his offense, he has left its jurisdiction and is found within the territory of another.

We find no error in the judgment of the Circuit Court, and the same is affirmed; and it is directed that the order and judgment of the District Court, remanding the appellant to the custody of the respondent as the agent of the State of New York, be executed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

[11]

WILLIAM D. MARVEL, Plff. in Err.,

v.

EDWIN A. MERRITT, Late Collector of the PORT OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed. 11-12.)

Duties—classification of iron ore—interpretation of words.

1. Under the Tariff Act of 1874 iron ore is within Schedule M., Sundries, Section 2504, R. S., and subject to a duty of 20 per centum ad valorem.
2. The interpretation of words of common speech is matter of law.

[No. 72.]

Argued and submitted Nov. 25, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The facts are stated by the court.

Mr. B. F. Lee, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John Goode, Solicitor-Gen., for defendant in error.

[11]

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error brought his action to recover duties paid by him and exacted, as he claims, in excess of those imposed by law, upon certain quantities of iron ore imported by him into the port of New York in 1879.

The single question involved in the suit arose under the Tariff Act of 1874, being title XXXIII., R. S.

The plaintiff was assessed and compelled to pay a duty of 20 per centum ad valorem on his importations, as coming within the provision in Schedule M, Sundries, § 2504, Revised Statutes, for "mineral and bituminous substances in a crude state, not otherwise provided for." He claimed that iron ore was dutiable upon a proper classification as "an unmanufactured article not herein enumerated or provided for," and subject only to a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem, under the provisions of section 2516 of the Revised Statutes.

On the trial below, the plaintiff offered evidence to show that iron ore was known to the trade commercially only under that name, and that scientifically considered it was a metallic and not a mineral substance; but the offer was rejected by the court. It was proven that iron ore was not a bituminous substance.

[12]

The court instructed the jury, there being no disputed question of fact arising upon the evidence as admitted, to return a verdict for the defendant. Judgment was rendered thereon accordingly, to reverse which this writ of error has been brought.

The Tariff Act of 1874, R. S., Title XXXIII, under which this case arises, does not expressly enumerate iron ore as the subject of duty. It is not on the free list and is to be found, if at all, classified under some general description. The language in Schedule M, Sundries, R. S. p. 478, is: "Mineral and bituminous substances in a crude state, not otherwise provided for, 20 per centum ad valorem." This is to be taken distributively, so as to cover all substances within the description, whether mineral or bituminous or both, and is not to be confined to those which combine both characters.

The words used are not technical, either as having a special sense by commercial usage, or as having a scientific meaning different from their popular meaning. They are the words of common speech, and as such their interpretation is within the judicial knowledge, and therefore matter of law. Webster, in his Dictionary, defines the noun mineral as "any inorganic species having a definite chemical composition;" and ore as "the compound of a metal and some other substance, as oxygen, sulphur or arsenic, called its mineralizer, by which its properties are disguised or lost." The word mineral is evidently derived from mine, as being that which is usually obtained from a mine; and accordingly Webster defines the latter as "a pit or excavation in the earth from which metallic ores or other mineral substances are taken by digging, distinguished from the pits from which stones only are taken and which are called quarries."

The importations of iron ore in question, therefore, were properly subjected to a duty of 20 per centum ad valorem, as a mineral substance in its crude state, not otherwise provided for.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is accordingly affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

JOHN H. MOONEY.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 104-108.)

Jurisdiction in actions for penalties and forfeitures—exclusive in district courts—Judiciary Acts construed.

1. Section 9 of the Judiciary Act of 1789, which conferred exclusive jurisdiction on the district courts (of suits for penalties and forfeitures incurred under the customs laws of the United States), still remains in force, there being no conflict between said section and section 1 of the Act of March 3, 1875.
2. The restricted meaning attached for eighty-six years to the language of section 11 of the Act of 1789 is presumed to attach to the same language in the Act of 1875.

[No. 78.]

Argued Nov. 25, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Woods:

This was an action at law brought in the circuit court to recover of the defendant $20,000 the value of certain merchandise imported by him, which it was alleged he had forfeited to the United States, because he had knowingly and with intent to defraud the revenue made an entry of the same by means of false and fraudulent invoices.

The defendant moved the court to dismiss the suit for want of jurisdiction to entertain it. The court sustained the motion, and the plaintiffs brought this writ of error.

Mr. John Goode, Solicitor-Gen., for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Charles Levi Woodbury, for defendant in error.

[104] Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

The ninth section of the Judiciary Act of September 24, 1789 (chap. 20, 1 Stat. at L. 76), provided as follows: "The district courts shall have exclusive cognizance * * * of all suits for penalties and forfeitures incurred under the laws of the United States." Since the passage of that Act several statutes have been enacted giving the circuit courts jurisdiction of suits for penalties and forfeitures (see section 629 R. S. subd. 4, 5, 7, 15); but it is conceded by the counsel for the plaintiffs that the exclusive jurisdiction of all suits for penalties and forfeitures under the customs laws of the United States continued in the district courts until the passage of the Act of March 3, 1875, entitled "An Act to Determine the Jurisdiction of the Circuit Courts of the United States" (chap. 137, 18 Stat. at L. 470), and still continues, unless the Act mentioned gives concurrent jurisdiction of such suits to the circuit courts. The plaintiffs insist that such is the effect of the first section of the Act of March 3, 1875. That section provides that "The Circuit Courts of the United States shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several States, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law and in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of costs, the sum or value of $500, and arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, * * * or in which the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners," etc. The contention is that this section invests the circuit courts with jurisdiction, concurrent with the district courts, of all suits for penalties and forfeitures under the customs laws of the United States. The argument to support the contention is that the section includes within its terms all suits to recover penalties and forfeitures, because such suits are of a civil nature at common law and the United States are plaintiffs; and when the amount in controversy is over $500 all the conditions necessary to give jurisdiction are fulfilled.

Admitting the plausibility of the argument, we are not able to adopt the conclusion to which it leads. For more than three quarters of a century, under the ninth section of the Act of 1789, the exclusive jurisdiction of the district courts in suits for penalties and forfeitures under the customs laws was unquestioned. In The Cassius, 2 Dall. 365 [2 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 417], decided in 1796 by the United States Circuit Court for the District of Pennsylvania, and in Bains v. Bollen, 4 Dall. 342 [4 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 839], decided by this court in 1800, it was held that under the Judiciary Act of 1789 the circuit courts had no jurisdiction of suits for penalties and forfeitures under the laws of the United States. These decisions have never been overruled and the law has remained unchanged, except where jurisdiction of suits for penalties and forfeitures has been given to the circuit courts in special cases by statute. This construction of the ninth section of the Act of 1789 prevailed, notwithstanding the provisions of section 11 of that Act, which were as follows: "The circuit courts shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several States, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, when the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of costs, the sum or value of $500, and the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners." This is substantially the same, in respect of the question before us, as the first section of the Act of 1875, which is relied on to take away the exclusive jurisdiction of the district courts. But it was never supposed that under the Act of 1789 the provisions of section 11 interfered with the exclusive jurisdiction conferred on the district courts by section 9 of the same Act. It was never held that the words "all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity," used in section 11, included suits for penalties and forfeitures of which the district courts had been given exclusive jurisdiction by section 9. How, then, can the substantial reenactment of section 11 by the Act of March 3, 1875, with modifications immaterial, as far as the question in hand is concerned, have an effect which the original section did not? As said by the circuit court in its well considered opinion in this case (11 Fed. Rep. 476), "the restricted meaning attached for eighty-six years to the language of the eleventh section of the Act of 1789 is presumed to attach to the same language in the Act of 1875." It is not to be supposed that Congress, in using in the Act of 1875 the same language, so far as the present question is concerned, as that employed in the Act of 1789, intended to give it a meaning different from that put upon it by this court, and which had remained unchallenged for three quarters of a century.

To sustain the contention of the plaintiffs, we must hold that the purpose of section 1 of the Act of March 3, 1875, was to repeal by implication and supersede all the laws conferring jurisdiction on the circuit courts, and of itself to cover and regulate the whole subject. But this construction would lead to consequences which it is clear Congress did not contemplate. All the laws in force December 1, 1873, prescribing the jurisdiction of the circuit courts were reproduced in section 629 of the Revised Statutes, and the jurisdiction was stated under twenty distinct heads, eighteen of which had reference to the jurisdiction in civil cases. In [107] sixteen of these eighteen heads the jurisdiction is conferred without reference to the amount in controversy. This is the case, among others, in all suits at common law where the United States are plaintiffs; in all suits and proceedings for the enforcement of any penalties provided by laws regulating the carriage in merchant vessels; in all suits by the assignee of any debenture for drawback duties against the person to whom such debenture was originally granted to recover the amount thereof; in all suits at common law or in equity arising under the patent or copyright laws of the United States; in all suits brought by any person to recover damages for an injury to his person or property, on account of any act done by him under any law of the United States for the protection or collection of any of the revenues thereof; and in all suits to recover pecuniary forfeitures under any Act to enforce the right of citizens of the United States to vote in the several States. The Act of 1875 confers jurisdiction on the circuit courts only in cases where the matter in dispute exceeds $500. If that Act is intended to supersede previous Acts conferring jurisdiction on the circuit courts, then those courts are left without jurisdiction in any of the cases above specified where the amount in controversy does not exceed the sum of $500, and in several classes of cases; for instance, suits arising under the patent or copyright laws, neither the Circuit nor District Court of the United States would have jurisdiction when the amount in controversy is less than $500. But by section 711 of the Revised Statutes, par. 5, the jurisdiction of the state courts in cases arising under the patent and copyright laws is excluded. Therefore, when the matter in dispute in a case arising under these laws is less than $500, if we yield to the contention of plaintiffs, it would follow that no court whatever has jurisdiction. A construction which involves such results was clearly not contemplated by Congress.

The Act of 1875, it is clear, was not intended to interfere with the prior statutes conferring jurisdiction upon the circuit or district courts in special cases, and over particular subjects. Third Nat. Bank of St. Louis v. Harrison, 8 McCrary, 162.

Its purpose was to give to the circuit courts a jurisdiction which the federal courts did not then possess, by enlarging their jurisdiction in suits of a civil nature at common law or in equi-[108] ty, and not to take away from the circuit or district courts jurisdiction conferred by prior statutes, or to divide the jurisdiction which had for so long a time been vested exclusively in the district courts. Price v. Abbott, 17 Fed. Rep. 506.

Thus construed, there is no conflict between section 1 of the Act of March 3, 1875, and section 9 of the Act of 1789, which conferred exclusive jurisdiction on the district courts of suits for penalties and forfeitures incurred under the laws of the United States. The latter section, therefore, except as modified by statutes conferring jurisdiction upon the circuit courts in special cases, still remains in force; and the circuit court was right in dismissing the case for want of jurisdiction.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[22] ANTON MILLER AND CHRISTIAN WORLEY, JOHN FINZER ET AL., Partners, as JOHN FINZER & BROTHERS, Appts.,

v.

SAMUEL J. FOREE AND EDWARD J. FOREE.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 22-23.)

Validity of letters patent—application of old process.

1. The application of an old process or machine to a similar or analogous subject, with no change in the manner of applying it and no result substantially distinct in its nature, will not sustain a patent, even if the new form of result has not before been contemplated.

2. Letters patent and the reissue thereof, for an alleged improvement in finishing and marking tobacco plugs, are invalid, as the evidence shows that the invention was anticipated. But irrespective of this, the state of the art at the time of the application for the patent was such as to leave no ground for its issue.

[No. 36]

Argued Nov. 2, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky.

The facts and case are stated by the court.

Messrs. Arthur Stem, George Harding, James A. Beattie and Francis T. Chambers, for appellants.

Mr. Benjamin F. Thurston, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit brought by the appellants against the appellees, complaining of the infringement of a certain patent granted to Anton Miller and Christian Worley, two of the complainants, for an alleged improvement in finishing tobacco plugs and in marking the same. A patent was applied for September 23, 1876, and was granted on the 5th day of December, 1876. It was subsequently surrendered and reissued on the 29th of January, 1878. The improvement, as declared in the specification, consists in pressing in the side of the plug, during the process of manufacture, letters or marks, so as to be ineffaceable. The description contained in the reissued patent, which does not differ materially from that contained in the original, after referring to the illustrative drawings, which are not necessary to the understanding of the invention, proceeds as follows:

"In carrying out our process, the plugs are packed with alternating plates in the finisher, so that they take their permanent set with the impression in them, whereby said impression is preserved ineffaceable.

"We have used the process of finishing tobacco as described in patent No. 181512, issued to Worley and McCabe, on the application of Christian Worley, and dated August 22, 1876; but this system of marking may be used in conjunction with the ordinary finishing process by having the devices in relief on pressure plates used in the last pressing.

"Our preferred manner of forming the letters on the plates A' is by stamping them therein, and then making the letters solid by filling in the concave side of the letters with melted metal, such as solder, so that said letters will withstand the extreme pressure to which they are subjected in the finishing box.

"In constructing said compress plate, however, any projecting surfaces in relief, either formed upon the plate or loose from the same, would secure the same result and may be employed."

From this description it appears that the process consists simply in attaching or placing raised characters on the metallic plates which are interlaid between the layers of tobacco to give it a smooth surface in its final compression, which characters leave their imprint in the sides of the plugs.

The claim of the original patent was for, —

"The mode of simultaneously stamping and finishing tobacco, consisting of tightly compressing the plugs between plates having in re lief letters in alternating series, substantially in the manner described."

The claim of the reissued patent is for,

"1. The described process of marking plug tobacco, which consists in impressing letters or other marks directly into the side of the plug during the process of manufacture, and by the pressure employed in making the plug, substantially as described.

"2. A tobacco plug marked with an impression, substantially as described."

The second claim of the reissue was afterwards abandoned and formally disclaimed in the patent office. The first claim is, in its terms, broader than the claim of the original patent. It is a general claim for the described process of impressing letters or marks directly into the side of the plug during the process of manufacture. This embraces the application of the process at any stage of the manufacture, either in the molding process or the finishing process. But if it should be confined by construction to the latter, as in the claim of the original patent, it would still apply to every kind of finishing process, whether separate from the molding process or not.

The question then will be, whether this claimed invention was anticipated by prior invention or use in the art.

Impressions of letters, figures and other marks have for a long period been made by compression upon plastic substances, such as cakes of soap and chocolate, bars of lead, balls of butter, sealing wax, the leather covers of books, etc. It was not strange, therefore, that the same process for producing a like result should have been applied to tobacco when molded and compressed into solid plugs of definite form. An English patent was granted to Thomas and George Cope in April (specification filed October), 1868, for improvements in machinery for molding, pressing and stamping Cavendish and other tobacco into any desired form by suitable dies. These dies have any desired form and design; and, when filled with tobacco a powerful pressure is applied by means of a metallic die piece, which gives to the tobacco a durable form and solidity, with the impression of the shape and design of the dies. In describing the machine and its operation, the patentees say: "This machine is useful for various purposes in manufacturing tobacco; it can be advantageously employed in stamping or forming devices of various kinds on tobacco."

Another patent was granted to Gibson and others in April (specification filed October), 1871, for a mode of heating, pressing and curing roll and coil tobacco, in the course of which the tobacco (in the case of coil) is alternated with metallic plates, between which and the rolls are placed thin wooden discs of a size to match the plates, and between these and the rolls of tobacco a thin metal plate, bearing the manufacturer's name, abode, trade mark, etc. It is then heated, and afterwards submitted to great pressure. And the inventors add: "When the tobacco has cooled down sufficiently it is removed, and the sheath pipe being withdrawn by gentle pressure, the metallic discs, scale board discs, and name tablets are separated from the tobacco, and the tobacco is found to be impressed with the name or marks from the tablets, the rest of its surface having the impression of the wooden disc, smooth, or showing the grain of the timber. The tobacco, then thoroughly cured and pressed, is fit for sale."

Charles Siedler obtained a patent of the United States, dated January 12, 1875, reissued October 24, 1876, on application filed April 26, 1875, for impressing into the body of the plugs of tobacco metallic labels with raised letters, etc., either covered or not covered by the outside wrapper, whereby he obtained distinct and durable impressions. He says: "Before giving the plug of tobacco its final pressure the metal B b [the label] is placed in proper position upon it by an attendant, and by subsequent powerful pressure the label is sunk into the body of the tobacco so that its face is about flush with the outer surface thereof, and its points sink quite deeply into the most dense mass. It adheres firmly. * * * The plugs thus impressed with the hard labels, presenting the letters in relief, are then wrapped in a large leaf of properly dampened tobacco, and again powerfully compressed. The label appears beneath the wrapper of the finished plug, and is not liable to be removed by any ordinary or extraordinary cause."

In 1867 or 1868 Fisher and Harris of St. Louis fitted into a mold for plug tobacco a metallic plate, having on its face the word "Blackberry" in raised letters, in the form of types, which produced on the surface of the plug, as it was pressed in the mold, the word "Blackberry." Many plugs were made in this mold and received the said impression, from the time of its construction until 1876, and were sold in the market. Boyce and Brothers bought out Fisher and Harris in 1869, and continued to use the same mold. It is true that this mold was only one in a block or frame of fifteen molds; and eleven other frames were used in connection with this frame, without any such types in them, in making up boxes of tobacco. But in view of the fact that the mold having the types continued to be used for many years, and that the word "Blackberry" was invariably printed on the tobacco, the process, though somewhat imperfectly applied, cannot be regarded as an abandoned experiment. The impression, being made in the mold whilst the tobacco was moist, might not remain as clearly defined as if it were made in the finishing process (when a further finishing process was used); but it continued to appear quite distinctly and remained as a permanent mark on the tobacco, as is seen in the specimen which has been preserved and made an exhibit in the cause. [26]

There is also evidence in the case of a zinc plate with raised characters, forming the name of the maker, one "E. F. Smith," being used by him in the summer of 1875, both in the molding and in the finishing process, for the purpose of imprinting the name upon plug tobacco which he was then manufacturing in a small way in Evening Shade, a village in Arkansas. The plate was used in substantially the same way as that described in the patent of the complainants; and if the evidence is to be believed, the fact of prior anticipation is clearly established. The circuit judge who decided this case in the court below, after a careful examination of the testimony on the subject, came to the conclusion that it was to be believed, and based his decision principally upon it. We have come to the same conclusion. It is true that a vigorous effort was made to break down the testimony of the principal witnesses, Smith and his foreman Lee; and it was pretty clearly shown that much could be affirmed derogatory to their general characters. But the complainants failed to show anything substantially affecting their characters for truth and veracity, or that they were not to be believed under oath. Besides, the manner in which their testimony was given and in which they bore the test of a somewhat rigorous cross examination tends to give confidence in the truth of their statements. And they are not without a good deal of corroboration. One of the alleged identical plates was produced; and the jeweler who made it, being called as a witness, recognized it and said that he thought he made two of them; and he corroborated the date, and testified that Smith [27] showed him some tobacco which he said had been marked with the plate, and which appeared to have been so marked. Metcalf, one of the complainants' witnesses, also states on cross examination that he had seen one or two plugs with Smith's name impressed on it, which he (Smith) represented to be his work, and that this was in 1875 or 1876. Huddleston, the sheriff of the county, testified that he had purchased plug tobacco from Smith, about that time, with Smith's name impressed upon it. The fact that the process was not used to a great extent, and not brought into more public notice, is explained by the further facts that Smith's manufacture was not of large extent, and that his establishment was closed by the internal revenue officers in the spring of 1876, in consequence of sales charged to have been made by him without the proper stamp.

We think that the alleged process of Smith is substantiated by the evidence, and that the decision of the case might be rested on his anticipation of the complainants' invention.

But it is not necessary to rely on this branch of the case alone. Leaving the evidence in relation to Smith's process out of the case, the state of the art at the time of Miller and Worley's application for a patent, as already pointed out, was such as to leave no ground for its issue. What more did they do, at most, than to apply a process of stamping tobacco, which was already well known, to the same tobacco at a later stage in the process of manufacture? Did this entitle them to a patent? According to the ruling of this court in Pa. R. R. Co. v. Locomotive, etc. Truck Co. 110 U. S. 490 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 222], this question must be answered in the negative. That case is precisely in point The contrivance for allowing the cars, in rounding a curve, to have a lateral motion so as to counteract the tendency to depart from the track, had been applied to passenger cars but not to locomotives. Smith, the patentee in that case, obtained a patent for applying that same device to locomotives. We decided the patent to be void and held, in general terms, that "The application of an old process or machine to a similar or analogous subject, with no change in the manner of applying it and no result substantially distinct in [28] its nature, will not sustain a patent, even if the new form of result has not before been contemplated." We adhere to that ruling; and the principle involved in it is fatal to the patent now under consideration.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U.S.

SAXONVILLE MILLS, Plf. in Err.,
v.
THOMAS RUSSELL, Late Collector of Customs.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 13-21.)

Duty on wool—invoice—construction of tariff laws.

1. The whole tariff revenue system must be regarded in the construction of each alteration, and no disturbance allowed of existing legislative rules of general application beyond the clear intention of Congress.

2. Where the invoice of wool shipped from Rosario showed the value to be above twelve cents per pound, it is held to be subject under the statutes to a duty of six cents per pound, less 10 per centum, although at the time of shipment the market value was less than twelve cents per pound.

[No. 81.]

Argued Dec. 4, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Matthews:

This is an action brought by the plaintiff in error to recover duties on certain importations of wool, alleged to have been illegally assessed, in which judgment was rendered for the defendant, brought here for review by this writ of error.

In the circuit court judgment was rendered upon an agreed statement of facts, set out in the record, as follows:

The plaintiff, in August, 1873, imported into the Port of Boston from Rosario, by the bark Velox, 324 bales of unwashed Cordova wool and entered it in bond. It subsequently withdrew the same for consumption. The defendant, as Collector of Customs, assessed and exacted of the plaintiff a duty of six cents per pound less 10 per centum on this wool upon the appraisement as hereinafter set forth. The plaintiff claimed that this wool was only legally liable to a duty of three cents per pound less 10 per centum, and paid the extra three cents per pound under due protest, and seasonably appealed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who affirmed the decision and action of the defendant. In due time and in conformity to law plaintiff brought this action to recover the extra three cents per pound less 10 per centum. The pleadings may be referred to. As it appears by the invoice, this wool was bought in Rosario on the 28th day of March, 1873, and was shipped at Rosario on board The Velox for Boston on the 5th day of June, 1873, and the invoice was sworn to before the acting United States Consul on the 9th day of June, 1873. Rosario was the last port from which it was exported to the United States, and it was invoiced there and entered at the custom house in Boston at the price paid for it in the currency and weight in which it was bought, which, upon being reduced to United States currency and weight, showed the cost to be above twelve cents per pound. Between the time of purchase and the time of shipment and exportation to the United States, the market value or wholesale price of this wool fell at Rosario; and at the time and place of shipment and exportation to the United States the market value or wholesale price was less than twelve cents per pound excluding charges in such port or place. The acting United States Consul made under his official seal the following certificate upon the invoice, which is objected to by the defendant as incompetent and immaterial:

"U. S. Consulate, Rosario, June 10, 1873.

"I, Thomas B. Wood, acting United States Consul for Rosario, do hereby certify, after investigation, that the market value of unwashed Cordova wool at this place at the date of shipment of the annexed invoice was thirty-two to thirty-two and one-half Bolivian reals, equivalent to $24\frac{11}{16}$ to $24\frac{13}{100}$ reals fuerta per arroba net weight.

"Given under my hand and seal, this day.

(Signed) Thomas B. Wood,
Acting U. S. Consul."

Which, being reduced to United States weight and currency, shows a value per pound less than twelve cents at Rosario. In conformity with law and treasury regulations, upon entry of this merchandise by the plaintiff, the proper number of designated packages thereof were sent to the public store, and this invoice was sent by the defendant as Collector to the United States Appraiser for his examination, appraisement and report. The Appraiser, after examination, made on the invoice the following report, and returned the same to the Collector, as and for his appraisement, from which no appeal was claimed or taken to merchant appraiser: "Wool, class 3, dutiable at invoice value six cents per pound less 10 per centum;" said report bearing date August 2, 1873; and upon this appraisement the Collector assessed and exacted the duty as aforesaid. It is admitted and agreed, if it be material and competent, that the appraiser made the said report to the Collector as and for his appraisement, believing that he had no legal right to appraise the wool at less than the invoice value, although in fact he believed the true market value of said wool at the last port or place whence exported to the United States, at the time of exportation, excluding charges thereon, was less than twelve cents per pound. The plaintiff contended that this was not a legal or sufficient appraisement. The defendant, as Collector, exacted the duty of six cents per pound less 10 per centum, upon the ground that whatever the market value or wholesale price of this wool might have been at Rosario at the time of shipment and exportation, inasmuch as the invoice showed the value to be above twelve cents per pound, it was legally liable to the duty exacted. This wool was of the third class named in the first section of the Act of March 2, 1867, 14 Stat. at L. 559, which provides "that upon wools of the third class, the value whereof at the last port or place whence exported to the United States, excluding charges in such port, shall be twelve cents or less per pound, the duty shall be three cents per pound. Upon wools of the same class, the value whereof at the last port or place whence exported to the United States, including charges in such port, shall exceed twelve cents per pound, the duty shall be six cents per pound."

If the court shall be of opinion upon the foregoing facts that said duty was illegally assessed and exacted of the plaintiff, then judgment shall be entered for the plaintiff for an amount equal to one half of the duties paid [17] in gold, with interest, to be ascertained by an assessor to be appointed by the court, and costs. On the contrary, if the court shall be of opinion that the duty was properly assessed and exacted, judgment shall be entered for the defendant, with costs.

Mr. Charles Levi Woodbury, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Asst. Atty-Gen., for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court: [17]

The duties chargeable upon the importations in question were levied and collected under section 1 of the Act of March 2, 1867, "to provide increased revenue from imported wool and for other purposes." 14 Stat. at L. 559. It provides that "from and after the passage of this Act, in lieu of the duties now imposed by law on the articles mentioned and embraced in this section, there shall be levied, collected and paid on all unmanufactured wool, hair of the alpaca, goat, and other like animals, imported from foreign countries, the duties hereinafter provided." For the purpose of fixing the duties to be charged thereon, the articles mentioned are divided into three classes, as follows: class 1, clothing wool; class 2, combing wools; class 3, carpet wools and other similar wools, the last being "such as Douskoi, native South American, Cordova, Valparaiso, native Smyrna, and including all such wools of like character as have been heretofore usually imported into the United States from Turkey, Greece, Egypt, Syria and elsewhere." The importations affected by this suit were of this class. It was further provided that "Upon wools of the third class, the value whereof at the last port or place whence exported into the United States, excluding charges in such port, shall be twelve cents or less per pound, the duty shall be three cents per pound; upon wools of the same class, the value whereof at the last port or place whence exported to the United States, excluding charges in such port, shall exceed [18] twelve cents per pound, the duty shall be six cents per pound."

By the Act of June 6, 1872, 17 Stat. at L. 230, § 2, the duties on wool imposed by the Act of 1867, among other things, was reduced 10 per centum of such duties.

As the value of the wool in question, at the last port or place whence exported into the United States, excluding charges in such port at the time of shipment, was less than twelve cents per pound, under these provisions of the law, standing alone, it would be subject to a duty of but three cents per pound, and it is contended by the plaintiff in error that the case is governed exclusively by these sections. But as the wool was bought in Rosario, and was shipped from there to the United States, and was invoiced there and entered at the custom house in Boston at the price paid for it in the currency and weight in which it was bought, which, upon being reduced to United States currency and weight, showed the cost to be above twelve cents per pound, it is contended on the part of the Collector that it was properly chargeable according to that value, with the duty actually exacted of six cents per pound.

This conclusion is based upon a proviso, occurring in the seventh section of the Act of March 3, 1865, "amendatory of certain Acts imposing duties upon foreign importations." 13 Stat. at L. 491, and repeated in the ninth section of the Act of July 28, 1866, "to protect the revenue, and for other purposes." 14 Stat. at L. 330. The first of these sections is as follows:

"Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That, in all cases where there is or shall be imposed any ad valorem rate of duty on any goods, wares or merchandise imported into the United States, and in all cases where the duty imposed by law shall be regulated by or directed to be estimated or based upon the value of the square yard, or of any specified quantity or parcel of such goods, wares or merchandise, it shall be the duty of the collector within whose district the same shall be imported or entered, to cause the actual market value or wholesale price thereof, at the period of the exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from which the same shall have been imported into the United States, to be appraised; and such appraised value shall be considered the value upon which duty shall be assessed.' That it shall be lawful for the owner, consignee or agent of any goods, wares or merchandise which shall have been actually purchased or procured otherwise than by purchase, at the time and not afterwards, when he shall produce his original invoice or invoices to the collector, and make and verify his written entry of his goods, wares or merchandise, as provided by section 36 of the Act of March 2, 1799, entitled 'An Act to Regulate the Collection of Duties on Imports and Tonnage,' to make such addition in the entry to the cost or value given in the invoice as in his opinion may raise the same to the actual market value or wholesale price of such goods, wares or merchandise, at the period of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from which the same shall have been imported; and it shall be the duty of the collector, within whose district the same may be imported or entered, to cause such actual market value or wholesale price to be appraised in accordance with the provisions of existing laws; and if such appraised value shall exceed by 10 per centum or more the value so declared in the entry, then, in addition to the duties imposed by law on the same, there shall be levied, collected and paid a duty of 20 per centum ad valorem on such appraised value; Provided, That the duty shall not be assessed upon an amount less than the invoice or entered value, any Act of Congress to the contrary notwithstanding."

[19]

The second section is as follows:

"Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That in determining the dutiable value of merchandise hereafter imported, there shall be added to the cost or to the actual general market value at the
in the principal markets of whence the same shall have the United States, the cost shipment and transhipment
penses included from the p
duction or manufacture, w
water, to the vessel in whic
to the United States, the va
or covering of any kind in
are contained; commission
but in no case less than 2½ age, export duty and all oth
charges for putting up, pre
for transportation or shipme
of a general character incur
of a general invoice shall rata among all parts of such part thereof charged with d
shall be advanced accordin
and all wines or other artic
duty by grades shall be gr
according to the actual va
Provided, That all addit
entered value of merchandi
be regarded as part of the merchandise; and if such a
by 10 per centum the value
entry, in addition to the law, there shall be levi
paid a duty of 20 per cent
Provided, That a duty sha
sessed upon an amount less entered value; Provided fu herein contained shall apply
carpet wools costing twel
pound, unless the charges
the cost above twelve cents
case one cent per pound du

In our opinion the rule
visos in both these sections,
not be assessed upon an am
invoice, or entered value,
valuation of wools, for the
ing the rate of duty chargeal
the Acts of 1867 and 1872,
properly applied in the pres
true that the Act of 1867
classification of wools and
and not an ad valorem dut
the duty varies according pound of the article, and a fore, as necessary to the a rate of duty as if it were st
duty; and there is nothing which, by express words or tion, repeals the proviso in
in the previous Acts of 186

In the Act of 1865, the r
of general application, not where there is or shall be imp
rate of duty on any goods,
dise imported into the Unit
"in all cases where the d
shall be regulated by, or di ed or based upon, the value
or of any specified quanti
goods, wares, or merchan
more inconsistency betwee
the Act of 1867 than if the pressly added to the section
which contains the substitu

wools for dutiable purposes and fixes the varying rates of duty upon them. It would be an unsound and unsafe rule of construction which would separate from the tariff revenue system, consisting of numerous and diverse enactments, each new Act altering it, in any of its details, or prescribing new duties in lieu of existing ones on particular articles. The whole system must be regarded in each alteration, and no disturbance allowed of existing legislative rules of general application beyond the clear intention of Congress.

"In the interpretation of our system of revenue laws, which is very complicated," as was said in the case of U. S. v. Sixty Seven Packages of Dry Goods, 17 How. 85, 93 [58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 54, 56], "this court has not been disposed to apply with strictness the rule which repeals a prior statute by implication, where a subsequent one has made provision upon the same subject, and differing in some respect from the former, but has been inclined to uphold both, unless the repugnancy is clear and positive so as to leave no doubt as to the intent of Congress."

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

BRIDGEWATER IRON COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
HERMAN LISSBERGER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 8-10.)

Unrecorded transfer of corporation stock—validity of.

A transfer for a valuable consideration of shares in a Massachusetts manufacturing corporation, not recorded as required by a statute of that State, is valid against a subsequent attachment by a creditor having knowledge or notice of the transfer.

[No. 80.]

Argued Dec. 3, 4, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Charles A. Welch, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Darwin E. Ware, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action of tort, brought by a citizen of New York against a manufacturing corporation established under the laws of Massachusetts, for refusing to issue to him a certificate of twenty shares of its capital stock.

At the trial, the plaintiff introduced evidence tending to show that the defendant Corporation in 1874 accepted a new charter from the Legislature of Massachusetts (Mass. Stat. 1874, chap. 38, which made it subject to the provisions of the general Act of 1870, chap. 224; that on August 10, 1877, George B. Stetson, being the owner of these shares, executed to the plaintiff a transfer of them, absolute in form but intended as collateral security for a debt due from him to the plaintiff, and annexed the transfer to his certificate, and delivered both to the plaintiff; and that on December 15, 1878, the plaintiff tendered them to the defendant Corporation, and duly demanded that the transfer be recorded on its books and a new certificate issued to him.

The defendant Corporation introduced competent and uncontroverted evidence that on May 24, 1878, it brought an action against George B. Stetson on a debt due to it from him, and duly attached these shares on mesne process and afterwards obtained judgment and execution, under which the shares were levied on and sold to the defendant in November, 1878.

To meet this, the plaintiff offered evidence tending to show that, before the attachment, an agent of the plaintiff informed a director of the defendant Corporation of the transfer to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff wanted the Corporation to know it; and the director mentioned it to Nahum Stetson, the defendant's treasurer, clerk and business agent.

The defendant took no objection to the admission or sufficiency of this evidence, otherwise than by requesting the court to instruct the jury that "If said evidence was competent to prove a notice to said Nahum, or to put him on the inquiry whether said shares had been transferred to the plaintiff, yet no such notice was effectual to deprive the defendant of the right as creditor to attach said shares as the property of said George B. Stetson, under the statutes of the State of Massachusetts." [9]

The court declined so to rule; and instructed the jury "that if they, upon the evidence, believed that said Nahum, being the treasurer, clerk and business agent of the Company, knew or had notice that said George B. Stetson had conveyed said shares to the plaintiff, prior to said attachment, the plaintiff was entitled to recover."

To this instruction the defendant excepted and, after verdict and judgment for the plaintiff, tendered a bill of exceptions which was allowed.

The principal question argued by counsel and the only one presented by the bill of exceptions for decision is, whether a transfer for valuable consideration, of shares in a Massachusetts manufacturing corporation, not recorded as required by the Statute of Massachusetts of 1870, chap. 224, § 26, is valid against a subsequent attachment by a creditor having knowledge or notice of the transfer.

That statute provides that "Shares may be transferred by the proprietor, by an instrument in writing under his hand, which shall be recorded by the clerk of the corporation in a book to be kept for that purpose;" and "the purchaser named in such instrument so recorded shall, on producing the same to the treasurer and delivering to him the former certificate, be entitled to a new certificate." These provisions were re-enacted in the Public Statutes of Massachusetts of 1882, chap. 106, § 30; and similar provisions had existed since 1809. Mass. Stat. 1808, chap. 65, § 4; 1829, chap. 53, § 4; R. S. 1836, chap. 38, § 12; Stat. 1846, chap. 45, § 1; Gen. Stat. 1860, chap. 60, § 18. [10]

By a series of decisions of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, on which the plaintiff in error relies, it has been held that these provisions, taken in connection with the contemporaneous statutes of that State, authorizing and facilitating the attachment of such shares by creditors of the owner, are not to be construed as intended merely for the convenience and benefit of the corporation and the regulation of its relations to its stockholders; but are to be considered as in the nature of a Registry Act, regulating the transfer of the stock as to third persons, and therefore preventing an unrecorded transfer from taking effect against a creditor afterwards attaching the shares without notice of the transfer. Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray, 373; Blanchard v. Dedham Gaslight Co. 12 Gray, 213; Sibley v. Quinsigamond Bank, 133 Mass. 515, 521; Central National Bank v. Williston, 138 Mass. 244.

But the learned counsel for the plaintiff in error fails to show that an unrecorded transfer of shares has ever been held invalid as against a subsequent attachment by a creditor who has notice or knowledge of the transfer. The language and the reasoning of the opinions in the very cases that he cites clearly imply the contrary And under the early Massachusetts Registry Act of 1783, chap. 37, § 4, which provided that no unrecorded deed of lands should "be good and effectual in law to hold such lands against any other person or persons but the grantor or grantors and their heirs only," it was always held that, the intent of the statute being to give notice to subsequent purchasers and attaching creditors, a deed was valid, without record, against those who had notice or knowledge of it. Farnsworth v. Childs, 4 Mass. 637; Priest v. Rice, 1 Pick. 164.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[45] BROOKE MACKALL, JR., Appt.,

v.

ALFRED RICHARDS.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 45-48.)

Practice—mandate of this court—further proceedings on change of circumstances.

1. An appeal will not be entertained from a decree of an inferior court in exact accordance with the mandate of this court upon a previous appeal. Where such appeal is taken upon application of the appellee, this court will examine the decree entered and, if it conforms to the mandate, dismiss the case with costs.

2. Where one appeal was taken for the sole purpose of correcting a certain error, it is proper to construe the mandate as in effect nothing more than an order for such correction, leaving the remainder of the decree to stand.

3. Where, since the original decree, the rights of the parties have so changed as to make it improper to carry the decree into execution, relief can only be had through some form of original proceeding. It cannot be had by way of defense before decree upon the mandate.

4. The decree in this case, although rendered at general term, was still the decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

[No. 999.]

Submitted Dec. 8, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

On motion to dismiss.

The history, facts, and case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Wm. B. Webb a ten, for appellee, in support
Mr. W. Willoughby, for position.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite d
ion of the court:

This is an appeal from a preme Court of the District
tered at general term upon a m court. In Stewart v. Salam [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1044], this rule
ed: "An appeal will not be e
court from a decree entered i
or other inferior court in exact our mandate upon a previous decree when entered is in e
and the appeal would be from selves. If such an appeal is we will, upon the application examine the decree entered an
to the mandate, dismiss the ca
it does not, the case will be re
propriate directions for the co
ror."

This suit was begun in the S
the District of Columbia, May ject to the payment of certa
much of lot 7, in square 22
Washington, as had not been
the Marshal of the District of fred Richards by deed bearing 1870. A decree was entered complainants, at special term
May, 1873. This decree was eral term, October 16, 1873, a March 19, 1877. Under the d
made and reported to the c
upon the return Mackall file
cause the property sold had n
ly described. Upon hearing,
were sustained and the sale
court then took steps to fix t
the property, and on the 11 1879, a decree was entered at recting that the sale be made certain description. From th
taken to the general term, w
was affirmed April 5, 1881, in cept that one of the two truste
appointed to make the sale wa
own request, and the other dir
alone. An appeal was thereu court, where the only error a
the boundaries of the propert
neously fixed. At the last term heard and the cause remanded
"to set aside the de ree from w is prosecuted, and to order the s
of complainant's demands, an
as may be consistent with the court and with law, of all of l
side of that on which the bui Palace Market stands." Mack
112 U. S. 369 [Bk. 28, L. ed.
production of this mandate,
entered a decree at general ter
respects like that appealed fro
description of the property, wh
conform exactly to the order o

Upon examination, therefore that the decree as entered is in the mandate. As no complaints were made on the second appeal about the terms of sale or the manner in which the sale was to be made, it was quite right in the court to follow the old decree in those particulars, which has been substantially done. As the appeal was taken for the sole purpose of correcting the description, it was proper to construe the mandate as in effect nothing more than an order for such a correction, leaving the remainder of the decree to stand.

The decree upon the mandate, although rendered at general term, was still the decree of the Supreme Court of the District. Richards v. Mackall, 113 U. S. 540 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1132]; and the order on the trustee to report his sale to this court can work no injury. The order to take possession was part of the original decree; and as no objection was taken to it on the former appeals, it ought not to be permitted now.

A motion was made by Mackall in the court below after the mandate was received, for leave to file what was called a "supplemental bill" but which was in reality a supplemental answer to the original bill, setting up new defenses growing out of matters occurring since the original decrees. This was properly denied. No discretion was left in that court to grant such a motion. The order of this court was in effect to enter the precise decree which has been made. If since the original decree the debts have been paid or anything else has happened which makes it improper to carry the decree into execution, resort must be had to some form of original proceeding appropriate to relief on that account. It cannot be done by way of defense before decree upon our mandate. The order of this court places the case where it would be if the original decree had been what it is now.

It follows that the appeal must be dismissed under the rule, with costs; and it is so ordered.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

ASA C. CALL, Appt.,
v.
HENRY H. PALMER.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 98-103.)

Usury, what constitutes—intent—new security—unauthorized acts of agent.

1. To constitute usury, within the prohibition of the usury laws, there must be an intention knowingly to contract for or to take usurious interest.

2. When an agent who is authorized by his principal to lend money for lawful interest exacts for his own benefit more than the lawful rate, without authority or knowledge of his principal, the loan is not thereby rendered usurious.

3. Where the promisor in a usurious contract makes it the consideration of a new contract with a third person not a party to the original contract or to the usury paid or reserved upon it, and the new contract is not a contrivance to evade the statutes against usury, the latter is not illegal or usurious.

[No. 67.]

Argued Nov. 18, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Iowa.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Woods:

This was a suit in equity brought by Henry H. Palmer, the appellee, against Asa C. Call, the appellant, to foreclose a mortgage on the land of the latter given by him to secure his note for $11,000. [98]

The record disclosed the following facts: Albert C. Burnham, residing in Illinois, was a partner in the firm of Burnham, Ormsby & Co., bankers, at Emmetsburg, Iowa. He had in his hands for investment $10,000 belonging to his relative, one Mrs. Davidson. Call applied in writing to Burnham, Ormsby & Co. for a loan of $10,000. Soon after the application was made Call met Burnham at Emmetsburg, Iowa, and they entered upon a treaty for the loan. Burnham, thinking Call's proposition to be a favorable one, decided to accept it for Mrs. Davidson; and after his return to Illinois sent the money to Burnham, Ormsby & Co., at Emmetsburg, to be lent to Call on the terms proposed by him. Burnham, Ormsby & Co. took the note of Call dated in November, 1872, for $10,000, payable to A. C. Burnham, or order, on November 1, 1875, with 10 per cent interest, payable semi-annually, which Call secured by a mortgage on certain of his real estate in Iowa. Call received from Burnham, Ormsby & Co. $8,000 for his note, they retaining $2,000 as a compensation for their services in negotiating the loan. No part of this sum was paid to Mrs. Davidson; she did not know that it had been deducted from the $10,000 lent by her to Call, and she never authorized Burnham or Burnham, Ormsby & Co. to lend her money at a greater rate of interest than 10 per cent, or to retain any commission or bonus out of the sum lent. In short, she received no benefit from the usury and had no knowledge of it. A. C. Burnham held the note as the agent and trustee of Mrs. Davidson, but subject to her control. Afterwards the appellee, Palmer, who lived in New Jersey, bought of Burnham the $10,000 note of Call, with five coupon notes of $500 each, not then due, given by the latter for interest thereon. The notes were indorsed by Burnham to Palmer in September, 1873, and Palmer paid therefor in cash to Burnham for Mrs. Davidson the face of the principal note, $10,000, and the accrued interest. In this purchase Palmer acted for himself without the intervention of any agent whatever. [99]

On November 13, 1875, the principal note being past due, Call, in order to raise money to pay it, applied in writing to Burnham, Ormsby & Co. to lend him $11,000 for five years. They, as agents of Palmer, agreed to loan Call the money. They took his note, dated November 1, 1875, for $11,000, payable to the order of Palmer, on November 1, 1880, with 10 per cent interest, payable semi-annually, secured by a mortgage executed by Call on his lands in Iowa.

The consideration for the note was as follows: Palmer delivered up to Call the $10,000 note, which he had purchased from Mrs. Davidson

---

NOTE.—Usury—acts of agent of lender; when render transaction usurious. See Zabriskie v. Spielman, 46 N. J. L., 35; Fisher v. Porter, 23 Fed. R., 162; Meers v. Stevens, 106 Ill., 549; Jordan v. Humphrey, 31 Minn., 435; Fellows v. Longyor, 91 N. Y., 324; Phillips v. Mackellar, 92 N. Y., 34; N. E. Mfg. Security Co. v. Hendrickson, 13 Neb., 157.

[illegible]

1887

[illegible]

[illegible] Sherry Chalmers Whitney S. Chase, [illegible]

The [illegible] Burnham [illegible] principal [illegible] agent, [illegible] no [illegible] liability [illegible] agent.

When a third person has dealt with an agent in relation to a loan, knowing that the principal will be a stranger to the transaction, it becomes the duty of such third person to see to the agent's authority, or at least to contract solely on the credit of the principal, in the same way as if the agent were not interposed.

Story, Agency, §§ 159, 404, 419, [illegible]; Lime Rock Bank v. Plimpton, 17 Pick. 159; Freeman v. Bail, 3 Iowa, 467; Hackamack v. Hackamack, 6 Ib. 74.

Where there is notice of the usury the new security is also usurious.

Cuthbert v. Haley, 8 T. R. 390; Powell v. Waters, 8 Johns. 492; Dey v. New York, 2 Hill, 222; Kent v. Walton, 7 Wend. 257; Barrow v. Barstow, 3 Mass. 48; Campbell v. McHarry, 3 Iowa, 257; Wendleborne v. Parks, 18 Iowa, 341; Chapman v. Black, 2 B. & Ald. 569.

If the assignee give up the usurious note and take another without knowledge of the usury, the substituted security is valid.

2 Pars. N. & B. 419, and authorities there cited.

A renewal between the original parties or others cognizant of the usury is in like manner usurious.

Id. 420; Edwards, B. & N. 351, and authorities there cited; Cuthbert v. Haley, 8 T. R. 390; Chapman v. Black, 2 B. & Ald. 569.

The Statute of Iowa acts upon the original contract or consideration, without reference to the form which that contract may subsequently assume, or the writings by which it is evidenced.

[100] Smith v. Chapen, 9 Iowa, 283; Garth v. Cooper, 12 Iowa, 365; Burrows v. Cook, 17 Iowa, 441; Bacon v. Lee, 4 Iowa, 494; French v. Rowe, 15 Iowa, 576; Dicely v. Cedar Falls, 21 Iowa, 569.

Mr. M. P. Morris, for appellee.

Mr. Justice Woods deliver[illegible] of the court:

The [illegible] that the note given [illegible] was infected with usury [illegible] the hands of [illegible] was [illegible] usurious, by reason [illegible] Burnham. Bunnay & Co. [illegible] $600 as a consideration for the loan for [illegible].

The note which is the basis of this suit was made in Iowa, and the contract must be governed by the law of Iowa. De Wolf v. Johnson, 10 Wheat. 390; 6 L. ed. 363; Gardner v. Thomas Bank, 8 U. S. 466 (6 L. ed. 45).

The code of Iowa of 1873, title 14, chap. 3, sec. [illegible] provides: "The rate of interest shall be six cents on the hundred for the year in * * * money, [illegible] become due when there is a contract for any interest and no rate is stipulated. It is the same above contemplated parties may give a written for payment of interest, not exceeding ten cents on the hundred by the year.

"Sec. 979. No person shall, directly or indirectly, receive in money, goods or things in action, or in any other manner, any greater sum or value for the loan of money, or upon contract founded upon any bargain, sale or loan of any personal property, than is in this chapter reserved.

"Sec. 980. If it shall be ascertained in any suit founded on any contract that a rate of interest has been contracted for greater than is authorized by this chapter, either directly or indirectly, on money or property, the same shall work a forfeiture of ten cents on the hundred for the year upon the amount of such contract to be sued and taken by the county in which the suit is brought, and the plaintiff shall have judgment for the principal sum, without either interest or costs. * * *

"Sec. 981. Nothing in this chapter shall be so construed as to prevent the proper assignee in good faith and without notice of any usurious contract recovering against the usurer the full amount of the consideration paid by him for such contract, less the amount of the principal money, but the same may be recovered of the usurer in the proper action before any court having competent jurisdiction."

We are of opinion that under these sections, as construed and administered by the Supreme Court of Iowa, the defense of usury was not [illegible].

The $[illegible] loan to Hall by Burnham was the money of Mrs. Davidson; and the note taken therefor, though taken in the name of Burnham, was her note. Counseling that Burnham acted as her agent in making the loan, it does not follow that Mrs. Davidson is chargeable with making a usurious contract. It was said by this court in Bank of United States v. Weagner, 9 Pet. 397; 34 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 170, 171 [illegible]: "That in construing the usury laws the uniform construction in England has been (and it is equally applicable here) that, to constitute usury, within the prohibitions of the law, there must be an intention knowingly to contract for or to take usurious interest. * * * Where the contract on its face is for legal interest only, there it must be proved that there was some corrupt agreement or device or shift to cover up [illegible] and that it was in the full contemplation of [illegible] parties. * * * There must be an intent to take illegal interest." To the same effect are the cases of Lloyd v. Scott, 4 Pet. 205 [29 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 833]; Condit v. Baldwin, 21 N. Y. 219; and Jones v. Berryhill, 25 Iowa, 289.

It is clear, therefore, that Mrs. Davidson cannot be charged with taking or reserving usurious interest, unless she was bound by the acts of her agent, Burnham. But she was not so bound. It is settled that when an agent who is authorized by his principal to lend money for lawful interest exacts for his own benefit more than the lawful rate, without authority or knowledge of his principal, the loan is not thereby rendered usurious. Dagnel v. Wigley, 11 East, 62; Solartee v. Melville, 7 Barn. & C. 427; Barrette v. Snowden, 5 Wend. 181; Condit v. Baldwin, 21 N. Y., 219; Bell v. Day, 32 N. Y. 165; Conover v. Van Mater, 18 N. J. Eq. 486; Rogers v. Buckingham, 33 Conn. 81; Gokey v. Knapp, 44 Iowa, 32; Wyllis v. Ault, 46 Iowa, 46; Brigham v. Myers, 51 Iowa, 397.

In Gokey v. Knapp, ubi supra, the Supreme Court of Iowa said: "Although Danforth may have been the agent of Knapp for the purpose of loaning the money, and may have contracted for more than 10 per cent interest, yet the loan was not necessarily usurious. An authority to loan money at a legal rate of interest does not include, by implication, the authority to loan it at an illegal rate. An authority to violate the law will never be presumed. When Danforth exacted, in addition to the 10 per cent interest which was embraced in the note, something for the benefit of himself, he went outside the legitimate purposes of his agency, and as Knapp did not authorize it expressly or by implication, he should not be affected thereby."

So in Brigham v. Myers, 51 Iowa, 397, it was held to be "well settled that when an agent for loaning money takes a bonus or commission to himself beyond the legal rate of interest, without the knowledge, authority or consent of his principal, it does not affect with usury the loan of the principal."

These decisions seem to be founded on plain principles of justice and right; for when two persons, the agent and the borrower, conspire together and for their own purposes violate the law, how can punishment for their acts be justly imposed on the innocent third party, the lender?

The fact on which stress is laid by counsel for defendant, that Burnham in his treaty with Call did not disclose his agency but professed to be acting for himself, appears to be an immaterial circumstance. The misrepresentation of Burnham did not injuriously affect any right of Call, unless it can be said that he was entitled to know who the real lender was, so as to place himself in a position to plead usury against her. It can hardly be contended that the penalties imposed for a violation of the usury laws are intended as a reward to the borrower.

According to the principles of jurisprudence as generally administered, and especially as applied by the Supreme Court of Iowa under the same law of that State, if suit had been brought by Mrs. Davidson herself to enforce the payment of the note given by Call to Burnham for her, the defense of usury would have failed. It cannot, therefore, hold as against Palmer.

But the defense of usury set up in this suit must fail for another reason. For it is settled that where the promisor in a usurious contract makes it the consideration of a new contract with a third person not a party to the original contract, or to the usury paid or reserved upon it, and the new contract is not a contrivance to evade the statutes against usury, the latter is not illegal or usurious. Cuthbart v. Haley, 8 T. R. 390; Bearce v. Barstow, 9 Mass. 48; Powell v. Waters, 8 Cow. 669; Kent v. Walton, 7 Wend. 257; Houghton v. Payne, 26 Conn. 396.

This rule is recognized by the Supreme Court of Iowa. Thus, in Wendlebone v. Parks, 18 Iowa, 546, it was held in substance that when the maker of a usurious note, which was secured by a deed of trust, borrowed money of a third party to pay the same, and, instead of executing new securities for the money so borrowed, caused the note to be transferred by the payee to the lender, as evidence and security for the new debt, the note was not tainted with usury in the hands of the second holder.

The authorities cited are conclusive against Call on both the grounds noticed. As the propositions upon which Palmer relies to defeat the plea of usury have both been sustained by the Supreme Court of Iowa while the present law against usury was in force, it is unnecessary to construe or discuss the statute. The result of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the State is that there is nothing in the statutes of Iowa which, upon the facts of this case, is a bar to the relief demanded by Palmer in his bill.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[55]

*ANGUS M. CANNON, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 55-80.)

Polygamy—construction of Act of March 22, 1882—indictment, sufficiency of.

1. Under the Act of March 22, 1882, a man "cohabits" with more than one woman, when, holding out to the world two or more women as his wives, by his language or conduct or both, he lives in the same house with them and eats at the table of each a portion of the time, although he may not occupy the same bed, sleep in the same room or actually have sexual intercourse with either of them.

2. Objections, that the indictment does not allege that the defendant is a male person and does not allege a cohabitation with the women as wives or as persons held out as wives, cannot be raised after the defendant has pleaded to it, especially as no substantial right was thereby prejudiced.

3. In an indictment for a misdemeanor it is sufficient to charge the offense in the words of the statute, unless they fail to cover every element of the offense charged.

4. While this court can say that the conduct of the defendant in this case was unlawful, it cannot undertake to indicate in advance what the conduct of a polygamous husband towards his plural wives must be, in order to conform to the requirements of the law.

[No. 1169.]

Argued Nov. 20, 23, 1885. Decided Dec. 14, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah

---

*The question of jurisdiction having for the first time been raised and discussed in the parallel case

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

On May 10, 1886, the court, having dismissed the writ of error in a similar case, Snow v. U. S. 118 U. S. 346, for want of jurisdiction, recalled the mandate and dismissed the writ of error in this case.

Mr. Franklin S. Richards, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John Goode, Solicitor-Gen., for defendant in error.

[56] Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

Angus M. Cannon was indicted by a grand jury in the District Court of the Third Judicial District in and for the Territory of Utah, in February, 1885, for a violation of section 3 of the Act of Congress approved March 22, 1882, chap. 47, entitled "An Act to Amend Section Fifty-Three Hundred and Fifty-Two of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in Reference to Bigamy and for Other Purposes." 22 Stat. at L. 31. Section 1 of the Act amends section 5352 of the Revised Statutes, which was a re-enactment of section 1 of the Act of July 1, 1862, chap. 122 (12 Stat. at L. 501); and, in order that the amendment may be understood, the original and new sections 5352 are here placed side by side, the parts in each which differ from the other being in italic:

Original.	New.
"Every person having a husband or wife living, who marries another, whether married or single, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, is guilty of bigamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500, and by imprisonment for a term not more than five years; but this section shall not extend to any person by reason of any former marriage whose husband or wife by such marriage is absent for five successive years, and is not known to such person to be living; nor to any person by reason of any former marriage which has been dissolved by decree of a competent court; nor to any person by reason of any former marriage which has been pronounced void by decree of a competent court, on the ground of [57]	"Every person who has a husband or wife living who, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, hereafter marries another, whether married or single, and any man who hereafter simultaneously, or on the same day, marries more than one woman, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, is guilty of polygamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500, and by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years; but this section shall not extend to any person by reason of any former marriage whose husband or wife by such marriage shall have been absent for five successive years, and is not known to such person to be living, and is believed by such person to be dead;

of Snow v. U. S. reported in book 30, in the order of its date of decision, judgment in this case was vacated by filing the following:

CANNON v. UNITED STATES—No. 1169.

Mr. Justice BLATCHFORD delivered the opinion of the court:

The decision in Snow v. United States [118 U. S. p. 346], dismissing the writs of error for want of jurisdiction, shows that there was no jurisdiction of the writ of error in this case. As the decision, reported in 116 U. S. 55 [above case], was made at the present term, the judgment rendered on the 14th of December, 1885, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah, is set aside and vacated; the mandate is recalled; and the writ of error is dismissed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Ct. U. S.

as he shall think proper; but no such amnesty shall have effect unless the conditions thereof shall be complied with.

Sec. 7. That the issue of bigamous or polygamous marriages, known as Mormon marriages, in cases in which such marriages have been solemnized according to the ceremonies of the Mormon sect, in any Territory of the United States, and such issue shall have been born before the first day of January, Anno Domini 1883, are hereby legitimated.

Sec. 8. That no polygamist, bigamist or any person cohabiting with more than one woman, and no woman cohabiting with any of the persons described as aforesaid in this section, in any Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, shall be entitled to vote at any election held in any such Territory or other place, or be eligible for election or appointment to or to be entitled to hold any office or place of public trust, honor or emolument, in, under or for any such Territory or place, or under the United States."

Section 9 of the Act contains provisions declaring vacant registration and election offices, and enacting that persons shall be appointed to execute those offices, by a board of five persons, which is directed to canvass votes to be returned to it for members of the legislative assembly, with the proviso "that said board of five persons shall not exclude any person otherwise eligible to vote, from the polls, on account of any opinion such person may entertain on the subject of bigamy or polygamy; nor shall they refuse to count any such vote on account of the opinion of the person casting it on the subject of bigamy or polygamy."

The indictment against Cannon was as follows: "The grand jury of the United States of America within and for the district aforesaid, in the Territory aforesaid, being duly empaneled and sworn, on their oaths do find and present; that Angus M. Cannon, late of said district, in the Territory aforesaid, to wit: on the first day of June, in the year of our Lord 1882, and on divers other days and continuously between the said first day of June, A.D. 1882, and the first day of February, A. D. 1885, at the County of Salt Lake and Territory of Utah, did unlawfully cohabit with more than one woman, to wit: one Amanda Cannon and one Clara C. Mason, sometimes known as Clara C. Cannon, against the form of the statute of the said United States in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the same."

The defendant pleaded not guilty, and the case was tried in April, 1885, resulting in a verdict of guilty, and a judgment imposing a fine of $200, imprisonment in the penitentiary for six months, and further imprisonment till the payment of the fine.

After the jury was empaneled and sworn, and the prosecution had called a witness, the defendant objected to the giving of any evidence under the indictment, on the ground that the indictment was defective and did not charge any criminal offense, nor any offense under the statutes of the United States, nor the offense described in the statute, either in the statutory words or equivalent words, and especially did not show that the person charged was a male person; and was insufficient to warrant a verdict or support a judgment of conviction. The court overruled the objection, and the defendant excepted. The following proceedings then took place, as shown by the bill of exceptions:

Clara C. Cannon, a witness called for the prosecution, was sworn, when the defendant renewed the said objection to the indictment, with a like ruling by the court and a like exception. The witness testified as follows: "My full name is Clara C. Cannon. I know the defendant. I have been his wife. I was his wife. I was married to him about ten years ago, and have since lived at 246 First South Street, Salt Lake City. I live there now, and have lived in the same house since shortly after I was married. The defendant has lived in the same house part of the time, and in the same house during the past three years. I have one living child, which is a child of that marriage, born January 11, 1882. I have had two other children by that marriage, both born before the living one. In this house I occupy two rooms on the ground floor, a parlor and a dining room, on the east side. My kitchen is back, not attached to my part of the house. I have occupied this part of the ground floor since I first went to live in the house. There is a hall running through the house on the ground floor, and the rooms I occupy on that floor are on the east side of the hall. I know [61] Amanda Cannon. She has lived in the same house that I live in during the past three years. She has occupied, on the ground floor, two rooms on the west side of the hall, beside her kitchen, which is attached to the back of the main building, and is not the kitchen I use. I suppose Amanda Cannon is defendant's wife. I have heard him speak of her as his wife, as Mrs. Cannon, and she has lived in the house ever since I went to live there. She has nine children, I think. During the past three years, I think, all her children have been living there at home, but not all the time. My little child lives with me in my part of the house; I mean the child of this marriage. The children of Amanda Cannon live with her in her part of the house. During the past three years and prior to the month of February in this year, the defendant has been in the habit of taking his meals with me, in my part of the house, a portion of the time, about one third of the time. There were stated intervals; he took his meals with me every third day; with me and my children. I have a son and daughter grown up, and two orphan children. He took his meals with me and the child of this marriage and the other children every third day. He took his meals with Amanda Cannon and her family one third of the time. He took all three of his meals with me every third day, on week days, and on Sunday morning he had breakfast at my house; that is, he took his meals with me two days of each week, and also his breakfast Sunday morning, which made one third of the time. On Sunday he took his dinner at Sarah's, and his supper at Amanda's. There are four rooms on the second floor of the house used as bed rooms; and a hall, with two of the rooms on either side of it. The rooms open into the hall. During the past three years I have occu pied the bed room in the northeast corner, and Amanda has occupied the one in the southwest corner of the house. The defendant has occupied the bed room in the southeast corner. The room occupied by me as a bed room, and the one occupied by the defendant as a bed room, are on the same side of the hall, and there is no intervening room. The house I speak of is in Salt Lake County, Utah Territory." Cross examined: "My oldest daughter [62] is twenty-three years old and my son twenty. I have a little girl, Clara Hardy, twelve years old, and a little girl ten years old, who are orphans. Their mother was a niece of mine; and when she died she left them to me. These, with my little daughter Alice, three years old past, are the members of my family. My daughter Alice was three years old last January. The two orphan children have lived with me for the last five years. The two little girls and my oldest daughter and the youngest daughter have occupied my room with me. We have two beds, and have all slept in that room."

Q. State whether that state of things and that relation with your children and the orphans continued until February last.

Objected to by the prosecution, on the ground that it is immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent. The objection was argued, the prosecuting attorney announcing that the objection was on the relevancy, materiality, and competency of the evidence offered, and not on the ground it was not a proper subject of cross examination or that the offer was out of order, but that any proof tending to show nonaccess was immaterial; and defendant's counsel admitted and stated to the court that the evidence was offered as tending to show, with other evidence to be given, nonaccess during the time charged in the indictment, and as tending to disprove any presumption of sexual intercourse which might be raised by testimony of the witness. The court sustained the objection, stating that the question presented by the objection had been deemed by both parties as being properly raised by the interrogatory objected to; and the defendant excepted.

Q. Was Amanda Cannon married to defendant prior to the time you was married to him?

Counsel for the prosecution objected to the question as irrelevant, incompetent, and immaterial. The court sustained the objection, and defendant excepted to the ruling. The following questions were severally propounded to the witness, counsel stating that the sole purpose for which the questions were asked was to establish sexual nonintercourse.

Q. Did you hear and know of the passage of the Act of Congress usually called the "Ed-[63] munds Act," about the time it was passed?

Q. What had been the habit of defendant prior to that time, as to his occupation of your room and bed, and the room and bed of Amanda Cannon?

Q. About the time of the passage of that law did he say anything to you and the other members of the family in respect to his intention to not violate that law, and what did he say?

Q. Did you assent to what he proposed?

Q. After that did any change occur in his habit as to occupying your room and bed, and what, if any, was the change?

Q. After March 22, 1882, has t
at any time occupied your room c
he had any sexual intercourse wit

To each of these questions the attorney objected, on the ground
dence sought was irrelevant, im
incompetent, and the objections
solely on these grounds, and not t
the questions, or time or manner o evidence. The court sustained ea and to the ruling on each the c cepted.

George M. Cannon, a witness s prosecution, testified: My fathe
Angus M. Cannon; he is the def
My mother's name is Sarah M. Ca heard my father state he was marr
da Cannon.

Q. Have you heard your father married to Sarah Cannon?

Defendant objected to the que ground it is immaterial; that Sara not named in the indictment, nor with her charged.

The prosecuting attorney expl intended to show that Sarah and A non were married to defendant
ceremony, and that he offered th
show whom he had the right to ness.

The court overruled the objec
lowed the evidence for this purpos
fendant excepted to the ruling.

Witness. I have heard my fath married to my mother and Amand
one and the same time.

Angus M. Cannon, Jr., sworn cution, testified: My father's name
Cannon and my mother's name Cannon. I have lived during t
years in the same house with m
mother. My mother has nine ch
of them are living at home and
this period. I took my meals th
there on my mother's side of the h
taken my meals at the same table
of the family. My father has tak about one third of the time at Clar
of the time at Sarah's and one thir
with my mother. About every takes his meals with my mother a dren. There are four sleeping a the second story of the house; two of the hall way which goes nort
and the rooms on each side open During the period mentioned Clar
has occupied the northeast bed
father has occupied the southe
mother the southwest bed room.
ined: Clara Cannon has occupie
east bed room to my knowledge
years.

Q. Who occupied it with her?

Objected to as immaterial, etc
sustained and defendant excepted.

My father has occupied the sam
Clara and Amanda Cannon. I h at home continuously for the past years. I have been away proba
five and six months and, with th
I have been there more than three

Q. Do you know where your f
that time passed his nights?

Objected to. Objection sustained, and defendant excepted to the ruling.

The prosecution here rested.

George M. Cannon recalled for further cross examination: the substance of what my father said about his marriage to Sarah and Amanda Cannon was, that he married them at the same time. He said he married them prior to any Act against polygamy, and when he considered it legal. He perhaps stated the year, but I don't at present recollect it. I am in my twenty-fourth year.

[66] Clara C. Cannon recalled by the defendant and testified: I am a member of what is called the Church of Latter-Day Saints, and I have been a member for twenty-four years. The defendant is also a member of that church. I don't know how long he has been a member, but it is ever since I first knew him. Mrs. Amanda Cannon is a member of the same church, and has been since I first knew her; that is, thirteen years.

Q. Was Mrs. Amanda Cannon married to the defendant prior to your marriage to him?

Objected to by counsel for prosecution as irrelevant and immaterial. Objection sustained, and defendant excepted to the ruling.

Defendant's counsel then made the following offer of proofs: "We offer to prove, by this and other witnesses to be called, that Amanda Cannon was married to the defendant before the marriage with this witness; that, prior to the passage of the Edmunds Law, he had alternately occupied the sleeping room and bed of each; that each, with her family, occupied, and still occupies, separate apartments, including separate dining rooms and kitchens; that after the Edmunds Law had passed both Houses of Congress, and before its approval by the President, the defendant announced to witness, Amanda, and their families, that he did not intend to violate that law, but should live within it so long as it should remain a law, and at the same time assign his reasons for so doing; and thereafter and during the times alleged in the indictment he did not occupy the rooms or bed of or have any sexual intercourse with the witness, and to this extent, by mutual agreement, separated from the witness; that, during all the time mentioned in the indictment, the two families have taken their meals in their respective dining rooms; that defendant has taken his meals with the witness and her family, in her dining room, two or three days each week, has provided for the support of the witness and her family distinct from other family expenses, and allowed them to occupy separate apartments in the same house occupied by him and Amanda, and this is the extent of his relations with the witness; and also, that the defendant was financially unable to provide a separate house for witness and her family; also, that the witness and her family and [67] Amanda and her family are dependent on the defendant for their support. To this offer and each paragraph thereof the prosecution objected, and the objection was sustained by the court, and the defendant excepted to the ruling."

The foregoing was all the evidence given in the case. The court instructed the jury as follows: "The indictment in this case charges that the defendant, on the first day of June, in the year of our Lord 1882, and on divers other days, continuously, between said first day of June, 1882, and the first day of February, 1885, did unlawfully cohabit with more than one woman, to wit: one Amanda Cannon and one Clara C. Mason, sometimes known as Clara C. Cannon. [If you believe from the evidence, gentlemen of the jury, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant lived in the same house with Amanda Cannon and Clara C. Cannon, the women named in the indictment, and ate at their respective tables one third of his time or thereabouts, and that he held them out to the world by his language or his conduct, or by both, as his wives, you should find him guilty.] [It is not necessary that the evidence should show that the defendant and these women or either of them occupied the same bed or slept in the same room; neither is it necessary that the evidence should show that, within the time mentioned, he had sexual intercourse with either of them.] I will state, the law presumes the defendant innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt; that you are the judges of the credibility of the witnesses, the weight of the evidence and of the facts, and if you find the defendant guilty you will say in your verdict, 'We, the jury, find the defendant guilty in manner and form as charged in the indictment;' and, if you find him not guilty, you will say, 'We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty.'" No further or other instructions were given to the jury.

The defendant excepted to the parts of the instructions which are enclosed in brackets. He also submitted the following prayers for instructions, each of which was separately refused, followed by a separate exception:

"1. The offense charged is that defined in the third section of the Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Amend Section 5352 of the Revised Statutes in Reference to Bigamy, and for Other Purposes,' approved March 22, 1882, commonly known as the 'Edmunds Act.' [67]

2. That section is applicable to Utah Territory, and provides that if any male person here since March 22, 1882, has cohabited with more than one woman he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

3. This section does not apply to male persons who have at successive periods cohabited with lawful wives, but only to contemporaneous cohabitation with two women.

4. Cohabitation includes living together as members of one family, a consorting in social intercourse and eating and lodging together. They need not occupy the same bed, but there must be an equivalent intimacy.

5. The word 'cohabit,' in this section, is to be understood in a technical or restricted sense. It does not apply to all persons who live with each other under one roof as members of one family, but only to adults of different sexes who live together in the manner that husbands and wives do, including the intimacy of occupying continuously or for recurrent periods the same bed.

6. (Requested if the last refused.) The word 'cohabit,' in this section, is to be understood in a technical or special sense. It does not apply to all persons of opposite sexes who live with each other under one roof as members of one family, but only to adults of different sexes living together in the manner that husbands and wives do. So understood, it must include a continuous or recurrent occupying of the same apartments, in the manner usual with persons of opposite sex who live in sexual intimacy.

7. No case is within this section which does not include such association of a man with two women in their mode of living as to make it an example of immorality, by necessarily indicating an habitual intimacy with each of two or more women by mutual consent.

8. The cohabitation which is made a misdemeanor by this section is an habitual residence or dwelling by a man with two or more women in intimate sexual relations.

[68] 9. The ingredients of this offense are: first, that the person charged be a male person; second, that he has lived or dwelt with two women, either continuously at the same time or with each in alternate periods of time; third, that he has so lived with each of two or more women in such personal intimacy as to indicate that he has had sexual intercourse with them, respectively, at his and their pleasure.

10. The court will interpret this Edmunds Act by its terms, and in view of the actual situation in this Territory, of which the court is judicially cognizant, and thus deduce that Congress intended to apply a corrective to polygamy and the anomalous status produced by its long practice.

11. The Act is intended to prevent any future polygamous marriages, and to prevent the continued cohabitation of persons who are already in polygamy. The section making cohabitation a misdemeanor has special or primary application to a cohabitation with a plurality of wives. This obvious intention indicates the ingredients of the criminal cohabitation; that it is a living together in the sexual intimacy usual between persons united in the marital relation, immoral in example for not having the sanction of lawful marriage, and pernicious in producing an illegitimate offspring.

12. This Act legitimizes all children born prior to January 1, 1883; it authorizes amnesty to all offenders prior to its enactment, and thus it is shown that the Act was passed in view of the long existence of polygamy in this Territory, and the multitudes of children born therein; it is merciful to those who have broken the laws against polygamy, and humane and paternal to the children born in polygamy.

13. This Act does not command polygamous fathers to abandon their children nor to break off all communication with their mothers. Such fathers are at liberty, and under the strongest moral obligation, to support both. He may hold any friendly and familiar relations, other than sexual, naturally incident in the proper discharge of such duties. All his social familiarity with the mothers of such families, established prior to the passage of said Act, not shown to include all the particulars of cohabitation as the court has defined it, should [69] be considered by the jury with the legal presumption of innocence; and the failure to establish such cohabitation entitles the defendant to acquittal.

14. The existence at the time of the passage of the Edmunds Act of a polygamous relation between the defendant and the women mentioned in the indictment, though an illegal relation, is not and cannot be made by the statute evidence of any fact necessary to or tending to a conviction for violating the third section. Any enactment intended for such a purpose would be ex post facto and void.

15. The law presumes innocence; and therefore that all persons who were cohabiting when the Edmunds Law took effect, contrary to the provisions of that Act, then ceased to do so.

16. No fact in the conduct of the defendant subsequent to the passage of the Edmunds Act can be made more significant of guilt in violating the section against cohabitation, by reason of the existence of the polygamous relation between him and the women mentioned in the indictment, prior to the passage of that statute.

17. The defendant is entitled to show his marital and parental status at the time of the the passage of the Edmunds Act, to explain his subsequent conduct towards the women mentioned in the indictment, and to show an innocent and laudable motive therefor.

18. For this purpose, he may show that he had families of children by said women respectively, at and prior to the passage of said Act; that such women and their children had been and were still dependent on him for their support; that he has continued since to support them; that he has visited them for that purpose and as the father of said children; and that he has not had sexual intercourse with such women since the passage of said Act; and no inference of cohabitation can be drawn from the fact of such relations, from the fact of furnishing support for such mothers and children without living with them, nor from the fact of visiting them, taking meals with them, nor from his living in a separate suite of rooms in the same house, belonging to himself, as that occupied by them, if they occupied separate apartments and habitually lived as a separate and distinct household; nor can such inference be drawn from all such facts. They do not, of themselves, constitute cohabitation.

19. There is no evidence in this case tending to show this defendant recognized Clara C. Cannon as his wife, or held her out to the world as such, since the passage of the Edmunds Bill, and within the dates named in the indictment; and without such proof the jury should acquit the defendant.

20. If the jury find that the defendant has not held out to the world, and announced and recognized as his wife, the Clara C. Cannon named in the indictment, since the passage of the Edmunds Bill, and within the dates named in the indictment, then they should acquit the defendant.

21. Sexual intercourse is a necessary element of the crime of cohabitation; and if the jury find the defendant has not had sexual intercourse with both Clara C. and Amanda Cannon since the passage of the Edmunds Bill, and within the dates named in the indictment, then they should acquit the defendant.

22. In order to find the defendant guilty of the offense charged, it must appear that the defendant had gone through the forms of marriage with both of the women named in the indictment, Amanda and Clara C. Cannon;

that, it not appearing in this case that he was ever married to Clara C. Cannon, the jury should acquit.

23. If the jury find that there never was the form of marriage between Clara C. Cannon and the defendant, they should acquit.

24. There can be no conviction under the indictment in this case, for the reason that there is no charge that the defendant was ever married to either Amanda or Clara C. Cannon, nor any charge that he held out either or both as his wives."

From the judgment the defendant appealed to the supreme court of the Territory, which affirmed it; and he has brought the case to this court by a writ of error.

The principal question argued at the bar was the proper construction of section 3 of the Act of 1882. That question depends on the meaning of the word "cohabit," in the section. The meaning contended for by the defendant is indicated by his offer to show by Clara C. Cannon nonaccess, and facts to rebut the presumption of sexual intercourse with her, and the actual absence of such intercourse; and by the requests for instructions to the jury, which are based on the view that the word "cohabit" necessarily includes the idea of having sexual intercourse. But we are of opinion that this is not the proper interpretation of the statute; and that the court properly charged the jury that the defendant was to be found guilty if he lived in the same house with the two women and ate at their respective tables one third of his time or thereabouts, and held them out to the world, by his language or conduct or both, as his wives, and that it was not necessary it should be shown that he and the two women or either of them occupied the same bed or slept in the same room, or that he had sexual intercourse with either of them.

This interpretation is deducible from the language of the statute throughout. It refers wholly to the relations between men and women, founded on the existence of actual marriages or on the holding out of their existence. Section 1 makes it an offense for a man or a woman, with a living wife or husband, to marry another, and calls such offense polygamy. Section 3 singles out the man, and makes it a misdemeanor for him to cohabit with more than one woman. Section 4 provides that counts for any or all of the offenses named in sections 1 and 3 may be joined in the same information or indictment. This certainly has no tendency to show that the cohabitation referred to is one outside of a marital relation, actual or ostensible. So in section 5, bigamy, polygamy and unlawful cohabitation are classed together, and it is provided that, in any prosecution for any one of such offenses, it shall be sufficient cause of challenge to a juror, that he has been living in the practice of bigamy, polygamy or unlawful cohabitation with more than one woman, or has been guilty of an offense punishable by the preceding sections, or that he believes it to be right for a man to have more than one living and undivorced wife at the same time, or to live in the practice of cohabiting with more than one woman. It is the practice of unlawful cohabitation with more than one woman that is aimed at; a cohabitation classed with polygamy and having its outward semblance. It is not on the one hand meretricious unmarital intercourse with more than one woman. General legislation as to lewd practices is left to the Territorial Government. Nor on the other hand does the statute pry into the intimacies of the marriage relation. But it seeks not only to punish bigamy and polygamy when direct proof of the existence of those relations can be made, but to prevent a man from flaunting in the face of the world the ostentation and opportunities of a bigamous household, with all the outward appearances of the continuance of the same relations which existed before the Act was passed; and without reference to what may occur in the privacy of those relations. Compacts for sexual nonintercourse, easily made and as easily broken, when the prior marriage relations continue to exist, with the occupation of the same house and table and the keeping up of the same family unity, is not a lawful substitute for the monogamous family which alone the statute tolerates. In like manner, bigamy, polygamy and unlawful cohabitation are classed together in sections 6 and 8 of the Act. Section 6 authorizes the President to grant amnesty to persons guilty of bigamy, polygamy or unlawful cohabitation before the passage of the Act. Any unlawful cohabitation, under the laws of the United States, before that time, could only have been ostensibly marital cohabitation, for the only statute on the subject was section 5352 of the Revised Statutes in regard to bigamy. Section 8 excludes from voting every polygamist, bigamist or person cohabiting with more than one woman, and every woman cohabiting with any polygamist, bigamist or person cohabiting with more than one woman. This section was considered by this court in Murphy v. Ramsey [ante, 47], where Mr. Justice Matthews, speaking for the court, in construing the words "bigamist" and "polygamist" in that section, says [56]: "In our opinion, any man is a polygamist or bigamist, in the sense of this section of the Act, who, having previously married one wife, still living, and having another at the time when he presents himself to claim registration as a voter, still maintains that relation to a plurality of wives, although, from the date of the passage of the Act of March 22, 1882, until the day he offers to register and to vote, he may not in fact have cohabited with more than one woman. Without regard to the question whether at the time he entered into such relation it was a prohibited and punishable offense, or whether by reason of lapse of time since its commission, a prosecution for it may not be barred, if he still maintains the relation, he is a bigamist or polygamist, because that is the status which the fixed habit and practice of his living has established. He has a plurality of wives; more than one woman whom he recognizes as a wife, of whose children he is the acknowledged father, and whom with their children he maintains as a family, of which he is the head. And this status as to several wives may well continue to exist, as a practical relation, although for a period he may not in fact cohabit with more than one; for that is quite consistent with the constant recognition of the same relation to many, accompanied with a possible intention to renew cohabitation with one or more [73] of the others when it may be convenient. It is not, therefore, because the person has committed the offense of bigamy or polygamy at some previous time, in violation of some existing statute, and as an additional punishment for its commission, that he is disfranchised by the Act of Congress of March 22, 1882; nor because he is guilty of the offense as defined and punished by the terms of that Act; but because, having at some time entered into a bigamous or polygamous relation, by a marriage with a second or third wife, while the first was living, he still maintains it and has not dissolved it, although for the time being he restricts actual cohabitation to but one. He might in fact abstain from actual cohabitation with all, and be still as much as ever a bigamist or a polygamist. He can only cease to be such when he has finally and fully dissolved in some effective manner, which we are not called on here to point out, the very relation of husband to several wives, which constitutes the forbidden status he has previously assumed. Cohabitation is but one of the many incidents to the marriage relation. It is not essential to it. [74] One man, where such a system has been tolerated and practiced, may have several establishments, each of which may be the home of a separate family, none of which he himself may dwell in or even visit. The statute makes an express distinction between bigamists and polygamists on the one hand, and those who cohabit with more than one woman on the other; whereas, if cohabitation with several wives was essential to the description of those who are bigamists or polygamists, those words in the statute would be superfluous and unnecessary. It follows, therefore, that any person having several wives is a bigamist or polygamist in the sense of the Act of March 22, 1882, although since the date of its passage he may not have cohabited with more than one of them." In the spirit of this interpretation, a man cohabits with more than one woman, in the sense of sections 3, 5 and 8 of the Act, when, holding out to the world two women as his wives, by his language or conduct or both, he lives in the house with them and eats at the table of each a portion of his time, although he may not occupy the same bed or sleep in the same room with either of them, or actually have sexual intercourse with either of them. He holds two women out to the world as his wives, by his conduct, when, being the recognized and reputed husband of each, so understood to be by the two wives and by the son of one of them and by the son of a third reputed wife, he maintains the two wives and the children of each, all in the same house with himself, and regularly eats at the table of each, and acts as the head of the two families.

This meaning of the phrase "cohabit with more than one woman," in the statute, is in consonance with a recognized definition of the word "cohabit." In Webster "cohabit" is defined thus: "1. To dwell with; to inhabit or reside in company, or in the same place or country. 2. To dwell or live together as husband and wife." In Worcester it is defined thus: "1. To dwell with another in the same place. 2. To live together as husband and wife." The word is never used in its first meaning, in a criminal statute; and its second meaning is that to which its use in this statute has relation. The context in which it is found, and the manifest evils which gave rise to the special enactments in regard to "cohabitation," require that the word should have the meaning which we have assigned to it. Bigamy and polygamy might fail of proof for want of direct evidence of any marriage; but cohabitation with more than one woman, in the sense proved in this case, was susceptible of the proof here given; and it was such offense as was here proved that section 3 of the Act was intended to reach: the exhibition of all the indicia of a marriage, a household and a family twice repeated. However, in some divorce cases and in reference to a question of the condonation of adultery, the word "cohabit" may have been used in the limited sense of sexual intercourse, or however its meaning may have been so limited by its context in other statutes, it has no such meaning in the statute before us.

These views of the proper construction of section 3 show that the evidence which the court rejected was properly excluded, and that there was no error in the instructions given to the jury, or in refusing to give those asked, aside from those which were proper to have been given, but were covered by the instructions given. Nor is the charge given open to the objection that the paragraphs in it which follow the first are not confined to the time laid in the indictment.

Objection is taken to the indictment because it does not allege that the defendant was a male person, section 3 making the offense it specifies punishable only when committed by a male person. By the Criminal Procedure Act of the Territory of Utah, passed February 22, 1878, and which was in force from and after March 10, 1878 (Laws of 1878, p. 91), it is provided as follows:

"Sec. 148. All the forms of pleading in criminal actions, and the rules by which the sufficiency of pleadings is to be determined, are those prescribed by this Act.

Sec. 149. The first pleading on the part of the people is the indictment.

Sec. 150. The indictment must contain:

1. The title of the action, specifying the name of the court to which the indictment is presented, and the names of the parties.

2. A clear and concise statement of the act or omissions constituting the offense, with such particulars of the time, place, person and property as will enable the defendant to understand distinctly the character of the offense complained of and answer the indictment. It must be substantially in the following form:

Territory of Utah.

In the ——— Judicial District Court. The People of the Territory of Utah against A. B.

A. B. is accused by the Grand Jury of the Court, by this indictment, of the crime of (giving its legal appellation, such as murder, arson or the like, or designating it as felony or misdemeanor), committed as follows: The said A. B., on the — day of ———, A. D. eighteen ———, at the county of ——— (here set forth the act or omission charged as an offense).

Sec. 151. It must be direct and certain as regards:

1. The party charged.

2. The offense charged.

3. The particular circumstances of the offense."

"Sec. 156. The words used in an indictment are construed in their usual acceptance in common language, except such words and phrases as are defined by law, which are construed according to their legal meaning.

Sec. 157. Words used in a statute to define a public offense need not be strictly pursued in the indictment; but other words conveying the same meaning may be used.

Sec. 158. The indictment is sufficient if it can be understood therefrom:

1. That it is entitled in a court having authority to receive it, though the name of the court be not stated.

2. That it was found by a grand jury of the district in which the court was held.

3. That the defendant is named or, if his name cannot be discovered, that he is described by a fictitious name, with a statement that his true name is to the jury unknown.

4. That the offense committed was within the jurisdiction of the court, and is triable therein.

5. That the offense was committed at some time prior to the time of finding the indictment.

6. That the act or omission charged as the offense is clearly and distinctly set forth, without repetition and in such a manner as to enable the court to understand what is intended, and to pronounce judgment upon a conviction, according to the right of the case."

"Sec. 190. The only pleading on the part of the defendant is either a demurrer or a plea."

Section 192 provides that the defendant may demur to the indictment when it appears upon the face thereof that it does not substantially conform to the requirements of section 150, or that the facts stated do not constitute a public offense.

Section 200 provides that when the objections mentioned in section 192 appear upon the face of the indictment they can only be taken by demurrer, except that the objection that the facts stated do not constitute a public offense may be taken at the trial, under the plea of not guilty, or after the trial, in arrest of judgment.

"Sec. 479. Neither a departure from the form or mode prescribed by this Act in respect to any pleading or proceeding, nor an error or mistake therein, renders it invalid, unless it has actually prejudiced the defendant or tended to his prejudice, in respect to a substantial right."

Certainly under these provisions, the defendant, having pleaded to the indictment and not demurred, must be held to have understood distinctly that the charge was against a male person, as guilty of the offense complained of, the offense being one which only a male person could commit; and the omission from the indictment, of the allegation that he was a male person, could not have prejudiced him or tended to his prejudice, in respect to a substantial right.

The same statutory provisions apply to the objection that the indictment contains merely a charge of unlawful cohabitation with more than one woman, and does not allege a cohabitation with the women as wives or as persons held out as wives. The defendant having pleaded and not demurred, it must be held, under section 150, that the statement of the acts constituting the offense was such as to enable him to understand distinctly the character of the offense complained of, as that offense is now interpreted, and to answer the indictment. The objection now made cannot be regarded as an objection that the facts stated do not constitute a public offense, because the statement is in the words of the statute, and they, as is now held, have but one meaning; and there could not have been any prejudice to the defendant or tendency to prejudice, in respect to a substantial right, in not alleging any more pointedly that he cohabited with the women as wives. [78]

In connection with these statutory rules, section 8 of the Act of Congress makes the offense a misdemeanor. In United States v. Mills, 7 Pet. 138, 142 [32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 636, 637], it was said by this court: "The general rule is that in indictments for misdemeanors created by statute, it is sufficient to charge the offense in the words of the statute. * * * But in all cases the offense must be set forth with clearness, and all necessary certainty to apprise the accused of the crime with which he stands charged." These principles were applied to a case of misdemeanor, in United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 520], and an indictment was held sufficient because it embodied the language of the statute, and that language covered every element of the crime, and thus the offense created by the statute was set forth with sufficient certainty, so as to give the defendant clear notice of the charge he was called on to defend. That case was distinguished by the court from United States v. Carll, 105 U. S. 611 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1135], as this is distinguishable. In Carll's Case, the statute made it an offense to pass a forged obligation of the United States with intent to defraud, and the punishment was a fine and imprisonment at hard labor. The question arose on a motion in arrest of judgment, whether the indictment was sufficient, it setting forth the offense in the language of the statute, without further alleging that the defendant knew the instrument to be forged. This court held that the offense at which the statute was aimed was similar to the common-law offense of uttering a forged bill; that, therefore, knowledge that the instrument was forged was essential to make out the crime; and that the uttering, with intent to defraud, of an instrument in fact counterfeit, but supposed by the defendant to be genuine, though within the words of the statute, would not be within its meaning and object. The omitted allegation in that case, a knowledge of the forgery, was a separate, extrinsic fact, not forming part of the intent to defraud or of the uttering or of the fact of forgery; and in the absence of that allegation it was held that no crime was charged. In other words, the case was of the class provided for under the Utah Statute, where the facts stated do not constitute a public offense. This, as has been shown, is not that case. The word "cohabit" has, in the statute, a definite meaning, including every element of the offense created, as before defined. The allegation of cohabiting with the two women as wives is not an extrinsic fact, but is covered by the allegation of cohabiting with them. [79]

WILLIAM [illegible]

ESOR JOHNSON

[illegible]

Publication—evidence of land department conclusive, except in case of fraud or mistake—restitution of Secretary of Interior.

1. In proceedings required for the alienation of public lands, in the absence of fraud or imposition, the action of the land department, upon matters of fact appropriate to it, is conclusive.

2. If the department issues a patent, under a mistake of law, to one not entitled to it, a court of equity will correct the error by requiring a transfer of the legal title to the true owner.

3. In proceedings before the department, if it appears that the claim of the prevailing party is against public policy or the law, it should be disregarded, although such objection was not raised by the allegations of the parties.

4. Where, in a contest before the department involving the question of the abandonment of a homestead, it appeared that the claimant was not a

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

ent documents have been presented; it must appear that they affected its determination, which, otherwise, would have been in favor of the plaintiff. He must in all cases show that but for the error or fraud or imposition of which he complains, he would be entitled to the patent; it is not enough to show that it should not have been issued to the patentee. It is for the party whose rights are alleged to have been disregarded that relief is sought; not for the government, which can file its own bill when it desires the cancellation of a patent unadvisedly or wrongfully issued. Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 61]; Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 428].

If, now, we apply these doctrines, which have been settled by repeated decisions, the case before us will be readily disposed of. The plaintiff below, Enos Johnson, on the 17th of April, 1875, entered the land in controversy, situated in Emmet County, Michigan, under the homestead laws. Previously, and for many years, he had resided in Kent County, in that State, distant several miles from the land. After the entry he resided upon the land only occasionally, offering as an excuse that the health of his wife required him to remain at "their home in Kent County." At the outset he employed his son-in-law, Shaeffer, and family, to go upon the land and remain there in his employ until his wife's health should so improve as to admit of his leaving her or taking her with him in his personal settlement upon the land It would seem that afterwards some attempts were ostensibly made towards such a personal settlement, but they were at long intervals apart and for comparatively short periods. During these attempts Shaeffer and his family remained on the land, cultivating and improving it. More than a year after his entry Johnson, whilst living at the old home, voted in Kent County It appears also that in June, 1876, at one of the periods, as is alleged, during which Johnson resided with his wife on the land, Lee complained at the land-office that Johnson had abandoned the land for more than six months prior to that date; that a contest was thereupon initiated between Johnson and Lee for the right to the land, that the usual proceedings in such cases were had before the register, by whom testimony was taken and forwarded to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. The commissioner decided in favor of Johnson; but on appeal the decision was reversed by the Secretary of the Interior, and the entry ordered to be cancelled. When the land was subject to a new entry, Lee entered it under the homestead laws; and subsequently, availing himself of the privilege of commutation under the statute, paid the government price and obtained a patent bearing date July 13, 1878.

Without going into any detail of the evidence presented to the Commissioner and the Secretary of the Interior, but taking the general statement of its nature, which we have given, it is clear that their attention was drawn by it to the character of the settlement of Johnson, and that they considered whether his entry was made to acquire a home for himself or for his son-in-law; whether his residence had been sufficiently personal and continuous to save and perfect any right, if in fact he had ever obtained any, and whether or not he had abandoned the land. The findings of the Secretary upon any of these matters must be taken as conclusive, in the absence of any fraud and imposition such as we have mentioned. Upon this point it is only necessary to refer to the cases where this conclusive character of the action of the department, upon matters of fact cognizable by it, has been expressly affirmed. Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72 [80 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 485]; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 340 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 424, 428]; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 535 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 848, 850]; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 426 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 800, 802]; Smelting Co. v. Kemp, Id. 636, 640 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 875, 876]; Steel v. Smelting Co. 106 U. S. 447, 450 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 227].

The Supreme Court of Michigan held the decision of the Secretary of the Interior inconclusive because it was not upon a point in issue between the contestants; stating that the question was that of abandonment, which only was inquired into by the register, or could be considered on appeal; that the jurisdiction of the secretary, if he disposed of the case finally on other grounds, was not appellate but original, and that this had not been conferred; that the register on the hearing and the commissioner on appeal had decided that the plaintiff had not abandoned the land, and upon that ground there was no reversal of the decision. It, therefore, held that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief prayed. [52]

Whilst there are no formal pleadings in such cases, it is undoubtedly true, as a general rule, that in contested matters before the Land Department, as in those before the courts, the decision should be confined to the questions raised by the allegations of the respective parties; but this rule has its exceptions. If in any case it appears from the evidence that the claim of the complaining or moving party is against public policy or the law, so that in no event could he recover a final judgment or decision, whatever be the nature or extent of the testimony upon the point at issue, the tribunal should not hesitate to dismiss the suit or the proceeding.

An illustration of this rule is found in Oceanyan v. Arms Co. reported in 103 U. S. There a large sum was claimed from the vendor of fire arms, as commissions on sales that through the influence of the plaintiff had been made to the Turkish Government, of which he was then an officer. The defendant pleaded the general issue; and it was contended that the illegality of the contract could not be noticed, because not affirmatively pleaded. But the court held that, assuming the contract to be a corrupt one, forbidden by morality and public policy, the objection to a recovery could not be obviated or waived by any system of pleading, or even by the express stipulation of the parties; that it was one which the court itself was bound to raise in the interest of the due administration of justice. 103 U. S. 268 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 542].

So, in the present case, the Secretary of the Interior came to the conclusion, from the evidence returned by the register, that Johnson must be considered, not as a bona fide homestead claimant, acting in good faith, but as one seeking, by a seeming compliance with the forms of law, to obtain a tract of land for his son-in-law, who had previously exhausted his homestead privileges; observing that the element of good faith is the essential foundation of all valid claims under the homestead law. Under these circumstances, so far from having exceeded his jurisdiction in directing a cancellation of the entry, he was exercising only that just supervision which the law vests in him over all proceedings instituted to acquire portions of the public lands. Upon the testimony the question of abandonment could be of no consequence, as no just right in Johnson's favor had been initiated. Upon an application for a rehearing, the secretary reiterated his judgment, stating that he was unable, upon the testimony of Johnson himself, to arrive at the conclusion that he had complied with the provisions of the Homestead Law to an extent to entitle him to its benefits.

[53]

In the bill of complaint it is alleged that in the testimony reported by the register there was an interpolation to the effect that the plaintiff testified that he had intended the land as a homestead for his son-in-law, and not as a personal home for himself; and that while in Kent County, in the spring of 1878, he had voted at an election. His allegation that he gave no such testimony is contradicted; the answer averring that the testimony as reported was read over to him before he signed it and was reported as signed. And in his examination in this case he admits, whilst denying that he testified as stated before the register, that he voted in Kent County a year after he had made his entry; and his direct testimony that he intended the land for Shaeffer could not be more persuasive of the fact than his conduct subsequent to the entry. To allow the conclusions of the Secretary of the Interior, on questions of fact, to be subjected to review by the courts in cases of this kind would open the door to endless litigation.

We are of opinion, therefore, that the Supreme Court of Michigan erred in its decision. The decree of that court will accordingly be reversed, and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions to enter a decree in conformity with this opinion. And it is so ordered.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[145] DANIEL McCLURE, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C., Reporter's ed., 145-154.)

Special statute referring case to Court of Claims, construed—findings of fact by that court, conclusive here.

1. Under the rules regulating appeals from the Court of Claims the evidence cannot be brought up; and the special statute in the present case contains nothing to withdraw the case from the operation of those rules.

2. A cause will not be remanded to the Court of Claims for further findings where the findings desired would simply bring before this court the comparative weight, as evidence, of the facts found on one side with those found on the other.

[No. 90.]

Argued Dec. 8, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

APPEAL from the Court of
On motion.

The case is stated by the co
Messrs. J. M. Wilson, S.
and Joseph E. McDonald,
support of the motion.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, As
opposition.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite d
ion of the court:

This is a motion for an ord
of Claims "to transmit to th
evidence on which the cause determined" in that court; or,
cannot be made, that the cau
"with directions to make retu
whether or not the evidence cause was heard and determin
not, establish and prove the
and distinct propositions of f
the requests for findings of fact
to the said court before the tri
and upon the motion for a n
hearing of said cause, that the
be directed to find specifically facts involved in the case."

The suit was brought und
Act of Congress, passed Feb entitled "An Act for the Relie
McClure, Assistant Paymaste

"Be it enacted, etc., That th
iel McClure, Assistant Payma credits and differences in his master, under his official bo
2, 1859, shall be and are hereb
court of claims, with jurisdic
determine said claims. And shall be satisfied from the evid
the moneys charged to him w
ceived by him, or that other j
grounds exist for credits cla
shall make a decree, setting
to which the said McClure sh receive credit; upon which the ing officers of the Treasury
the amount so decreed as a tlement of his accounts; Pr
testimony of said McClure sh
his own behalf by said court,
termination of said cause the
of his said accounts is suspend
further, That an appeal sha either party as in other cases
pt. 3, 531; Pr. Laws, chap. 37

In his petition filed in the
made three claims for credit $1,183.13, money on deposi
credit as paymaster, with the urer of the United States a
which was seized by the insurg
Confederate States and appropr
use without any fault on his pa
taken from his possession by acting for and in behalf of authorities; and (3) for $1,00
tion made of pay rolls by his
no manner inured to his
There were also three claims
tween his accounts and thos States, being for moneys char
as he alleged were not in fact
(1) $1,432.48, said to have be

him by J. L. Hewitt; (2) $25,000 by C. S. Stevenson; and (3) $4,998 by V. C. Hanna.

The court of claims has found as facts: (1) that the sum of $289.05 was taken from McClure by an armed force in charge of one of the Commissioners of the State of Texas while it was in his hands as government money; and (2) that the sum of $1,183.13 was turned over by the Assistant Treasurer of the United States to the Confederate States while it was on deposit with him to the credit of McClure as paymaster. As to the sum of $1,000, it is found that McClure stated an account showing payments made to troops and accompanied the same with vouchers, one of which was overadded $1,000; and he got credit at the time for the over addition as for money paid out. As to the several items of differences, it is found that the parties by whom the transfers were respectively supposed to be made had each obtained a receipt from McClure for the amount stated, and that they were allowed credit therefor in the settlement of their own accounts at the Treasury. As to the moneys taken by the confederate authorities, the court was satisfied from the evidence that just and equitable grounds existed for their allowance as credits. As to the over-addition, the court was not satisfied from the evidence that any just and equitable grounds existed for the credit thereof to McClure; and as to the several amounts specified in the receipts obtained by the different parties, the court was not satisfied from the evidence that the moneys charged to McClure by the United States were not in fact received by him, or that other just and equitable grounds existed for giving him credit for these amounts.

1. As to bringing up the evidence:

It is not pretended that this can be done unless the statute under which the suit is brought takes the case out of the operation of our rules regulating appeals from the court of claims. The original Act which gave the right of appeal from the court of claims to this court was passed March 3, 1863, and provided that the appeals should be "under such regulations as the supreme court may direct." 12 Stat. at L. 766, chap. 92, sec. 5. This provision is still found in section 706 of the Revised Statutes. At the December Term, 1865, this court adopted certain rules for the regulation of such appeals, and Rule 1 was as follows:

"Rule 1. In all cases hereafter decided in the court of claims in which, by the Act of Congress, such appeals are allowable, they shall be heard in the Supreme Court upon the following record, and none other:

1. A transcript of the pleadings in the case, of the final judgment or decree of the court, and of such interlocutory orders, rulings, judgments and decrees as may be necessary to a proper review of the case.

2. A finding of the facts in the case by said court of claims, and the conclusions of law on said facts on which the court founds its judgment or decree.

The finding of the facts and the conclusions of law to be stated separately and certified to this court as part of the record.

The facts so found are to be the ultimate facts or propositions which the evidence shall establish, in the nature of a special verdict, and not the evidence on which those ultimate facts are founded." See Burr v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 1 Wall. 102 [68 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 562].

This rule was amended in some particulars at the December Term, 1872, but not in a way to affect the present case. It has been in force substantially in its original form from the time of its adoption until now, and has always been strictly adhered to. Such being the case, when Congress passes a special statute allowing a suit to be brought in the court of claims, with a right of appeal to this court, the appeal will be governed by the rules applicable to cases arising under the general jurisdiction of the court, unless provision is made to the contrary.

In Harvey v. United States, 105 U. S. 671 [Bk. 26, L ed. 1206], the suit was brought under a statute passed August 14, 1876, 19 Stat. at L. 490, chap. 279, which authorized the court of claims "to proceed in the adjustment of the accounts between the claimants and the United States as a court of equity jurisdiction; and may, if according to the principles of equity jurisprudence in its judicial discretion, reform said contract and render such judgment as justice and right between the parties may require." An appeal to this court was also given; and we held that as the suit was to be in equity, the parties were entitled to an appeal in equity which should bring up for review the facts as well as the law. But in Tillson v. United States, 100 U. S. 43 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 543], where the court was "authorized and directed to * * * ascertain, determine and adjudge the amount equitably due said firm, if any, for such loss or damage," we decided that "The reference was made to the court as a court, and not to the judges as arbitrators. The determination is to be made according to the fixed rules which govern that court in the adjudication of causes, and not at the discretion of the judges. The same principles of jurisprudence and the same statutory regulations as to practice are to be applied here that would be if the case had come into the court under its general jurisdiction. It is to be ascertained and determined what, if anything, is due the claimants from the Government, according to the rules of law applicable to the settlement in that court of controversies between the Government and its citizens. * * * To our minds the word 'equitably' means no more than that the rules of law applicable to the case shall be construed liberally in favor of the claimants." [150]

This suit clearly comes within the principle of Tillson's Case. It is in the nature of a defense to an action at law brought by the United States to recover the balance claimed to be due upon the account as stated at the Treasury. The statute requires the court to hear and determine judicially: (1) whether the disputed sums charged to McClure were in fact received by him; and (2) whether any other just or equitable grounds exist for the credits claimed by him. The statute under which the court of claims is organized would have been enough to give that court jurisdiction of the claims for credit on account of the moneys seized by the confederate authorities. R. S. sec. 1059, clause 3, and sec. 1062. But under that statute McClure could not have given testimony in his own behalf. The special Act relieves him from that disability and allows him to join his

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

found on one side with those found on the other. In other words, whether the evidence offered on the part of McClure is sufficient to overcome the effect as evidence of his receipts and the other testimony against him. The rule contemplates no such practice. All we can do is to declare the law upon facts which, so far as we are concerned, must be taken to be undisputed.

As to the proposed findings, with a view to ascertaining the existence of "just and equitable grounds for credits claimed," they are clearly immaterial for the purpose of a judicial determination of the rights of the parties.

At most they would only show that McClure had been compelled to conduct his business under very unfavorable circumstances; that the amounts disbursed by him had been large; that much of his business had necessarily been done by his clerks, upon the accuracy of whose statements and calculations he was compelled in a great measure to rely; that with the exception of the present differences his accounts had always been found correct; that he had sometimes given receipts in advance of the time he had actually got the money, and by reason of the limited facilities for transacting business in his office it was possible for a receipt to be got without the money being actually paid over; that there had been great delay in advising him of the errors in his accounts, and things of a like character. These are facts proper for the consideration of Congress on an application by McClure for legislative action in his favor; but, under the most liberal construction of the rules which govern courts of justice in determining the rights of parties, they fall far short of what is necessary for affording him judicial relief.

The motion is denied.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

Cited post, 555, in U. P. R. Co. v. U. S.

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY, Plf. in Err.,
v.
AMELIA AUGUSTA GUNTHER, EXEX., AND GEORGE A. GUNTHER, EXR. of CHARLES GODFREY GUNTHER, Deceased.

(See S. C. "Liverpool & London Ins. Co. v. Gunther," Reporter's ed. 113-131.)

Breach of conditions of fire insurance policy—instructions to jury—practice and pleadings under New York Code.

1. Where the answer fairly covered a certain defense, although so indefinitely that, had a motion been made at the proper time, greater certainty might have been required, and evidence proper in support such defense had been admitted without objection, it was improper for the court to instruct the jury, on the ground that the proper foundation had not been laid in the pleadings, that they should disregard such evidence.

2. It is contrary to the practice established by the New York Code, to deprive a defendant of a defense, legitimately arising from the evidence in the case, admitted without objection. The objection should have been raised at such a time that the pleadings could have been amended if necessary.

3. Where the policy contained conditions that if the assured should keep or use certain prohibited articles without written permission the policy would be void; and that certain articles should not be stored, used, kept or allowed on the premises, temporarily or permanently, for sale or otherwise, unless with written permission indorsed on the policy; a violation of these prohibitions, by anyone permitted by the assured to occupy the premises, is a violation by the assured himself.

4. The privilege indorsed on the policy "to use gasoline gas, gasometer, blower and generator being underground about sixty feet from main building, in vault; no heat employed in process," did not sanction the keeping, using or storing of gasoline or its equivalent, burning fluid or oil, except for actual use in that gas apparatus.

[No. 61.]

Argued Nov. 13, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of New York.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Matthews:

This is an action at law brought by Charles Godfrey Gunther, a citizen of New York, in the Supreme Court of that State, against the plaintiff in error, a Corporation created by the laws of Great Britain, and consequently an alien, and by the latter removed into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York. There was a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff below, brought here for review by this writ of error. [113] [114]

The object of the action was to recover the amount claimed to be due on two policies of fire insurance, issued by the defendant below, in favor of the plaintiff, one for $20,000 on the two story hotel, frame building, with one story frame kitchen and two story frame pavilion building adjoining and communicating, situate in Gravesend Bay, of Bath, Kings County, Long Island; $1,000 on the two story frame stable occupied in part as a dwelling, and $200 on frame bathing houses; and the other for $8,500 on the contents of the buildings insured. The loss by fire is alleged to have occurred on August 15, 1879, while both policies were in force.

The execution of the policies and the fact of the destruction by fire of the insured premises were admitted by the answer, which, however, denied generally all the allegations of the complaint not expressly admitted or otherwise controverted in the answer, and in addition set out the following special defense:

"Tenth. For a separate and distinct defense to the causes of action alleged in the complaint, in addition to the matters and things hereinbefore set forth, the defendant avers that it was provided in and by the terms and conditions of said policies of insurance, among other things, as follows: 'If the assured shall keep gunpowder, fireworks, nitro-glycerine, phosphorus, saltpeter, nitrate of soda, petroleum, naphtha, gasoline, benzine, benzole, or benzine varnish, or keep or use camphene, spirit gas or any burning fluid or chemical oils, without written permission in this policy, then and in every such case this policy shall be void;' and further, 'That petroleum, rock earth, coal, kerosene, or carbon oils of any description, whether crude or refined; benzine, benzole, naphtha, camphene, spirit gas, burning fluid, turpentine, gasoline, phosgene or any other inflammable liquid, are not to be stored, used, kept or allowed on the above premises, temporarily or permanently, for sale or otherwise, unless with written permission indorsed on this policy, excepting the use of refined coal, kerosene or other carbon oil for lights, if the same is drawn and the lamps filled by daylight; otherwise this policy shall be null and void.'

[115]

"And the defendant avers that the said conditions of insurance were broken and violated on the part of the plaintiff, among other things, in that without written permission of the defendants, indorsed on said policies or otherwise, there were stored, used, kept and allowed on the insured premises mentioned and described in said policies, benzine or benzole, or other inflammable burning fluids or liquids, prohibited by said policies; and defendant avers that the fire mentioned and referred to in the complaint originated and was caused by such storing, using, keeping and allowance of such prohibited articles on said insured premises; and defendant avers that it is advised and believes that, by reason of the premises, the said policies became and were null and void."

Each of the two policies, after the description of the premises insured, contained the following clause: "Privilege to use gasoline gas, gasometer, blower and generator being underground about sixty feet from main building, in vault; no heat employed in process." Among the conditions in the body of the policies is also the following:

"Petroleum, rock earth, coal, kerosene or carbon oils of any description, whether crude or refined; benzine, benzole, naphtha, camphene, spirit gas, burning fluid, turpentine, gasoline, phosgene or any other inflammable liquid, are not to be stored, used, kept or allowed on the above premises, temporarily or permanently, for sale or otherwise, unless with written permission indorsed on this policy, excepting the use of refined coal, kerosene or other carbon oil for lights, if the same is drawn and the lamps filled by daylight. Otherwise this policy shall be null and void."

To the first policy there was attached the following: "Privileged to use kerosene oil for lights, lamps to be filled and trimmed by daylight only." And also the following: "Privileged to keep not exceeding five barrels of kerosene oil on said premises."

[116]

To the second policy the first only of the foregoing privileges was attached.

On the trial, the plaintiff, having produced the policies sued on, with the renewal receipts showing that they were in force at the time of the loss, was called as a witness and testified, among other things, as follows:

"I was the owner of the insured property at the time of the insurance, and have continued such until the present time. A fire occurred on the 15th of August, 1879, about dusk, by which the building and its contents were totally destroyed. I was seated on the piazza of the building proper in sight of the pavilion. I saw some parties with pails and a light. There were some children playing. Mr. Lanier Walker was playing with some boys around some small trees that I had planted in the lot, and my attention was attracted by hallooing, and I saw the men come out as though they were on fire. It did not occur to me then that there was any fire in the oil room, although I saw it. I saw these men, and ran out and said: 'Roll in the grass.' One man struck for the water and the other one had the fire thrashed out by the crowd. In another instant I saw the oil room burning. The wind was from the southwest, blowing very hard right over the kitchen. The pavilion immediately caught, and in one hour's time or less the building was level with the ground."

The proofs of loss were read in evidence and the amount of the loss proven. The plaintiff also testified that during the summer of 1879 he had a room at the hotel where he stayed on an average of four nights out of the week. The rest of the time he was in New York. Mrs. Fanny Walker kept the hotel as his tenant, her husband, Mr. John Walker, being manager for her.

The plaintiff having rested his case the defendant introduced evidence, not objected to, tending to prove the following facts:

A gas-making apparatus for the use of gasoline, including a gasometer, generator and blower, about sixty feet from the house, and all under ground but the roof, had been in use for lighting the main building for about eleven years up to and including the summer of 1878 but its use was discontinued in the fall of 187 and it was not in use at all during the year 1879

There was an oil room in the basement o the hotel under the pavilion, about ten by twelv feet, with low ceiling. In this room the lighting material was kept.

The fire originated in the oil room "abou dusk, August 15, 1879." Three persons wer in the room at the time: Jacob Constine, Jame Marrion and one Schuchardt. The last name was in Walker's employ as night watchma and had charge of the oil room. The othe were employed at premises about a mile di tant from the Locust Grove Hotel, called t Bath Park Hotel, where gasoline was used f lighting the last named hotel and an adjoini pavilion.

Constine and Marrion were sent by the boo keeper of the Bath Park House to the Locu Grove Hotel to borrow five gallons of gasolin and each of them carried a wooden pail which to fetch it. On reaching Locust Gro they saw Walker, who directed Schuchardt give them the gasoline. Schuchardt took th into the oil room. He carried a glass lant with a wire frame around it, "a regular clo stable lamp with wire and then little holes top." The lamp was lighted.

Schuchardt placed the lantern on the floor a drew fluid from a barrel which was raised stanchions, a little above the floor. He d from the end of the barrel, into which a pi of gas pipe had been placed as a faucet. pouring into the pails it was found that on them leaked; and Schuchardt got a five gal can into which to pour the oil, and while fil the can there was "a sort of bluish flame explosion, and the place was full of fire."

The fire spread with great rapidity. So chardt was burned to death. Constine was badly burned and was laid up thirteen weeks. Marion was burned a little, not much.

The hotel and all the buildings were destroyed by the fire. "In one hour's time or less the building was level with the ground."

There was no conflict of evidence as to the origin of the fire.

Walker purchased in New York and had shipped to the hotel, on August 13, a barrel of kerosene, and a half barrel of benzine containing about twenty-one gallons, which were received and put into the oil room under the pavilion on the morning of August 14, the day before the fire. There was evidence tending to show that gasoline, benzine or naphtha was used in torches for the purpose of lighting the pavilion; and also other evidence that it was intended for use in lighting grounds for a picnic.

The plaintiff introduced evidence in rebuttal tending to prove that no gasoline or benzine had been brought to the premises or was kept there. The testimony having been closed on both sides, the defendant's counsel then requested the court to direct the jury to find a verdict for the defendant, on the ground that it appeared from the undisputed evidence that there was a violation of the condition of the policy providing that in the use of refined kerosene oil the same must be drawn by daylight; the evidence being undisputed that three persons went into the oil room with a lighted lamp, and that whatever was drawn there was drawn, not by daylight, but by the use of a lighted lamp, the presence of which was the direct cause of the fire. The court refused so to direct the jury, to which refusal the defendant's counsel then and there excepted.

The defendant's counsel requested the court to instruct and charge the jury as matters of law, as follows:

1. That the several conditions contained in the policy respecting the keeping, using or allowance on the insured premises of the products of petroleum, specified therein, were lawful provisions and formed a part of the conditions of the insurance which if violated rendered the policy void.

2. That if the jury believe from the evidence that gasoline, naphtha or benzine were kept, used or allowed on the insured premises at the time of the fire, whether permanently or temporarily, the plaintiff cannot recover, and the defendant is entitled to a verdict.

3. That if the jury believe from the evidence that gasoline, naphtha or benzine was used in the summer of 1879, previous to the fire, on the insured premises, for lighting the pavilion by means of the torches described in the evidence, then the plaintiff cannot recover, and the defendant is entitled to a verdict.

4. That if the jury believe from the evidence that any fluid product of petroleum used for lighting purposes was actually drawn, after sundown, in the oil room by the light of a lamp, the flame of which ignited the fumes or vapors of such fluid and caused the fire, then there was a violation of the conditions of insurance, and the plaintiff cannot recover, and the defendant is entitled to a verdict. Also, and as a part of the above request, that the permission indorsed on the policy to keep five barrels of kerosene oil did not vary or affect the conditions of the policy in drawing refined oil by daylight; and if the fire was caused by drawing refined kerosene oil after sundown, and in the presence of a lighted lamp, the plaintiff cannot recover, and the defendant is entitled to a verdict.

5. That if the jury believe from the evidence that the risk of fire was increased by the actual presence on the insured premises of gasoline, naphtha or benzine, then the plaintiff cannot recover, and the defendant is entitled to a verdict.

6. That, irrespective of the questions raised by the preceding fourth and fifth requests, if the jury believe from the evidence that the fire was caused by the ignition of the fumes of gasoline, naphtha or benzine in the oil room, while such gasoline, naptha or benzine was being drawn from a barrel or keg, or poured from one vessel to another in the oil room, then the plaintiff cannot recover, and the defendant is entitled to a verdict.

7. That if any of the conditions of the policy were violated by the presence or use of gasoline, naphtha or benzine on the insured premises, it is immaterial whether or not the plaintiff knew of such violation. If the fact of the violation is established, the defendant is entitled to a verdict.

8. That the permission in the policy to use gasoline gas—the generator, gasometer and blower to be under ground sixty feet from the main building, no heat to be used in the process—did not authorize the plaintiff or anyone occupying the premises under him, to use gasoline, naphtha or benzine for lighting the pavilion by the torches described by defendant's witnesses, or to keep gasoline, naphtha or benzine [120
in the oil room for use in such torches.

9. That in weighing the evidence the jury must determine on which side the preponderance of proof lies, and decide accordingly. That the testimony of the plaintiff in his own favor must be scrutinized in view of his interest as plaintiff; and that the evidence of witnesses not discredited or impeached, who swear positively to certain facts as within their own knowledge and actual observation, is not to be overcome by mere negative testimony of other witnesses that such facts were not observed by them at the same time and place.

At the conclusion of the charge, a juror asked the court whether the jury were to consider the matter of drawing oil in the daylight.

The court thereupon charged and instructed the jury that there was no question in the case in reference to the drawing of the oil by daylight, no such question having been made by the pleading; to which ruling and charge the defendant's counsel then and there excepted.

The defendant's counsel then excepted specifically to that part of the charge which instructed the jury that any question arose in the case under the permission in the policy to use gasoline gas.

The defendant's counsel then further excepted specifically to the refusal of the court to charge that if benzine was allowed on the premises at all, the plaintiff cannot recover, so far as the court did refuse.

The defendant's counsel then further excepted to that portion of the charge which confined the questions in the case to the three questions specified in the charge as being the sole questions which the jury were to consider.

The defendant's counsel then further excepted specifically to that portion of the charge which instructed the jury that if the benzine was brought to the insured premises by Walker for an outside purpose it did not vitiate the policy.

The defendant's counsel then further excepted specifically to that portion of the charge which instructed the jury that the only effect of the question whether torches were used was in reference to the question of the half barrel [121.] of benzine being brought to the insured premises or not.

The defendant's counsel then further specifically excepted to the refusal of the court to charge the several propositions contained in the foregoing second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth requests on the part of the defendant in the language as requested, and separately to each separate refusal to charge each separate request, so far as the court did so refuse.

In the charge to the jury the circuit court stated, in substance, that under the pleadings and upon the evidence there were but three questions for their consideration. The first was, whether in fact the half barrel of benzine, testified to, had been brought to the premises and stored in the oil room; if not, the whole defense was taken away and the verdict must be for the plaintiff.

Second. If otherwise, had it been brought over and stored there by the authority of Walker in his management of the premises for his wife under her lease? If it had been brought and stored there by him for an outside purpose, referring to some testimony in reference to its intended use in lighting the picnic grounds, then the verdict should be for the plaintiff.

Third. This question was stated by the court as follows:

"If it was brought there, and brought there by Walker in the course of his management, then would bringing that benzine there and putting it in the oil room come within what would be expected when the Company gave the assured the privilege of using the gasoline gas, the gasometer, generator and blower to be under ground, sixty feet from the main building? It would not come within that, unless you can say that by the common and ordinary mode of the use of such apparatus, as it would be understood by this contract to be used, it was proper to store somewhere else benzine or gasoline for use in the apparatus. If you can see that it would come within that, then that would be written permission to have so much stored there, although it was not to be used for that purpose. And if you find that the benzine was there and then that Walker got it there, still, if you find that it came within that clause [122] of the policy, then you may return a verdict for the plaintiff; otherwise, you must return a verdict for the defendant.

"If the defendant has made out these three things, then you must return a verdict for the defendant, and you must find this upon the proof, and not upon any conjecture.

"And I feel bound to say to you that as to the use of a gasometer, generator and blower, it is a matter with which perhaps you might not be familiar. (I am not sufficiently so to know what the ordinary use would be). The only evidence directly is what one of these manufacturers and dealers in such things and familiar with them (I don't remember his name) said; he said the gasometer was used to store the gasoline or benzine or whichever was used in it. That is all the direct evidence I call to mind on that subject. Still, I submit it to you to say, on the whole, what you think the fact is in this view."

Mr William Allen Butler, for the plaintiff in error:

The court erred in refusing to charge the jury as requested, that the presence of benzine or gasoline on the premises, whether with or without the knowledge of the plaintiff, avoided the policies. The performance by the insured of that part of the contract which prohibited the allowance as well as the use on the premises "temporarily or permanently, for sale or otherwise," was a condition precedent to the right of recovery.

Mead v. N W. Ins. Co. 7 N. Y. 530; Matson v. Farm Buildings Ins. Co. 73 N. Y. 310; Williams v. Peoples' Fire Ins. Co. 57 N. Y. 274; Duncan v. Sun Fire Ins. Co. 6 Wend. 488; Fire Asso. of Phila. v. Williamson, 26 Pa. St. 196; Loehner v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. 17 Mo. 255.

Being absolute in its terms, the prohibition operated in case of its breach as an avoidance of the policies, irrespective of the intent or purpose for which Walker, the person immediately concerned in the violation, brought the prohibited article upon the premises, the fact being undisputed that Walker was lawfully in charge. The joint possession by Walker and wife of the premises by authority of the insured was his possession.

Diehl v. Adams Co. Mut. Ins. Co. 58 Pa. St. 443; Howell v. Baltimore Equitable Society, 16 Md. 377; Kelly v. Worcester Mut. F. Ins. Co. 97 Mass. 284.

When the breach of a valid condition of insurance by the tenant is established, the policy is avoided whether the landlord knew of the violation or not.

Duncan v. Sun Ins. Co. 6 Wend. 493; Fire Asso. of Phila. v. Williamson, 26 Pa. St. 196; Worcester v. Worcester Mut. F Ins. Co. 9 Gray 27, Brueck v. Phœnix Ins. Co. 21 Hun, 542; Steinmetz v. Franklin F. Ins. Co. 6 Phila. 21.

Mr. George H. Forster, for the defendant in error:

There was no error in the charge of the court on the point of the keeping, use, or allowance of benzine on the insured premises.

The explanation of this part of the charge,—that if benzine was brought by a stranger, or for a strange or entirely outside purpose, not done in the course of Walker's management there, as his wife's manager, but for some purpose over which Mr. Gunther had no control, then it would not be by the insured—was entirely proper. The court made this still clearer, by stating that it must be for some entirely outside purpose, and by instructing the jury that they were not to guess at that, but that it must be proved.

See Gates v. Madison Co. Mut. Ins. Co. 5 N. Y. 469, and cases there cited; Insurance Co. v. McDownnell, 50 Ill. 120; Aurora Ins. Co. v. Eddey, 55 Ill. 218; Mackay v. Burlington F.

Co. 35 Ia. 174; Daniels v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co. 12 Cush. 417; Sanford v. Mechanics Mut. F. Ins. Co. 12 Cush. 541; Hynds v. Schenectady Co. Mut. Ins. Co. 11 N. Y. 554; White v. Mut. Assurance Co. 8 Gray, 566; Steinbach v. La Fayette F. Ins. Co. 54 N. Y. 90.

No violation of the policy by the drawing of refined petroleum after daylight was pleaded by the answer; nor was the evidence undisputed of any such violation of the policy as was assumed by this request.

Williams v. Mechanics and Traders Fire Ins. Co. 54 N. Y. 577, 579.

Defendant made no application to amend; and as the defense was not pleaded nor made available by amendment or a motion to amend, the question was not in the case whether or not any such defense actually existed.

Hunt v. Hudson River F. Ins. Co. 2 Duer, 481: Dimon v. Dunn, 15 N. Y. 498; Codd v. Rathbone, 19 N. Y. 37; Wright v. Delafield, 25 N. Y. 266.

The defendant insured a frame hotel and gave a written privilege to use gasoline gas, gasometer, blower and generator. This permission involved the right to bring gasoline to the premises and store it in a proper place. It was proper for the court to charge the jury as it did, as to what weight was to be given that clause, and what right was given under that privilege as to the storage of gasoline. The court properly construed the policy and the written permission; and that construction is to be based upon what the privilege authorized and not on its exercise or nonexercise, to a greater or less extent, during part of the time after the policy was issued.

Home Ins. Co. v. Balt. Warehouse Co. 93 U. S. 542 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 869); Bayley v. London and L. Ins. Co. 4 Ins. L. J. 503; Putnam v. Commonwealth Ins. Co. 18 Blatchf. 368.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

The first question to be examined is whether the circuit court erred in withdrawing from the jury the right to consider the facts proven as to the drawing of the oil in the oil room after dark in the vicinity of a lighted lamp, which was the admitted cause of the fire, as constituting a defense to the action under the pleadings.

The tenth paragraph in the answer, setting up a separate and distinct defense, recited two conditions in the policy; the first, that the assured should not keep any burning fluid without written permission in the policy; the second, that kerosene, carbon oils of any description, whether crude or refined, or any other inflammable liquid, "are not to be stored, used, kept or allowed on the above premises, temporarily or permanently, for sale or otherwise, unless with written permission indorsed on this policy, excepting the use of refined coal, kerosene or other carbon oil for lights, if the same is drawn and the lamps filled by daylight; otherwise this policy shall be null and void." It then alleged a breach of these conditions, in substance, as follows: that without the written permission of the defendants, indorsed on said policies or otherwise, there were stored, used, kept and allowed on the insured premises, benzine or benzole or other inflammable burning fluids or liquids, prohibited by said policies, and that the fire referred to in the complaint originated therefrom and was caused thereby.

It is true that the answer does not specifically set out as part of the defense that kerosene was kept on the premises to be used for lights, but that, in breach of the condition which permitted such use, it was drawn after dark and with a lighted lamp near; but the right to keep it and use it in the manner specified in the condition is an exception from the general prohibition, which forbids the mere keeping of it without written permission; so that, strictly speaking, an averment that the article was kept and used on the premises, in violation of the condition, includes the use of it, otherwise than for lights, and the drawing of it otherwise than by daylight. Under the allegations of the answer, although not so definite and certain as might have been required, upon motion made in due time, it seems to us it was competent for the defendant to prove and rely upon any keeping and use of burning fluid prohibited by the conditions set out.

Whatever obscurity there was in pleading the defense, considered apart from the facts subsequently disclosed in evidence, nevertheless, all the testimony necessary to its establishment was offered and admitted without objection. It was offered and admitted as tending to prove that there had been a breach of the conditions of the policy; and the whole matter of the defense was covered by the testimony, on examination and cross examination of the witnesses, [127]
both on the part of the defendant in chief and on that of the plaintiff in rebuttal. On the conclusion of the testimony on both sides the matter now insisted on was specially called to the attention of the court by a request on the part of the defendant's counsel to direct a verdict for the defendant on that ground alone, when, if it was a matter of surprise to the opposite party, opportunity for meeting it might still have been given; or if the pleadings were considered not to be sufficiently explicit, an amendment might have been required and made. The request was refused, and it does not appear from the record to have been on the ground that the defense was not within the issues; but the refusal was absolute and unqualified. We refer to it, not for the purpose of intimating that the court was bound to grant the request, but because we think the matter ought to have then been either submitted to the jury or put in shape for such submission, if the rights of the adverse party required any change in the pleadings, or opportunity for the production of other evidence. By the course actually taken the defendant was deprived of the benefit of a defense, legitimately arising upon the evidence actually in the case, admitted without objection; and this, we think, was contrary to the practice as established under the laws of New York, as appears from the cases cited of N. Y. Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nat. Protection Ins. Co. 14 N. Y. 85; Williams v. Mech. & Traders Fire Ins. Co. 54 N. Y. 577; and Williams v. Peoples Fire Ins. Co. 57 N. Y. 274.

The New York Civil Code of Procedure, which furnishes the rule of practice in such cases, is explicit on the point. In section 539 it is provided that "A variance between an allegation in a pleading and the proof is not material, unless it has actually misled the adverse party to his prejudice in maintaining his action or defense upon the merits. If a party insists that he has been misled, the fact and the particulars in which he has been misled must be proved to the satisfaction of the court. Thereupon, the court may in its discretion order the pleading to be amended upon such terms as it deems just." And section 540 declares that "When the variance is not material, as prescribed in the last section, the court may [128] direct the fact to be found according to the evidence, or may order an immediate amendment without costs."

There are other errors, however, in the charge to the jury equally fatal to the judgment, which, as the case must be remanded for a new trial, it becomes important to point out.

The circuit court charged the jury, in substance, that it was not a breach of the conditions of the policy if they should find a half barrel of benzine was stored by direction of Walker in the oil room, unless they should also find that he acted by the express or implied authority of the assured; that is, unless in doing so he was acting in the management of the property as the agent of his wife, and within the limits of the authority conferred upon him for the purpose of managing the property according to the terms and purposes of her tenancy; and accordingly the jury was told that if he had brought the prohibited article on the premises, not for the legitimate use of the hotel, but for an outside purpose, it constituted no defense. The outside purpose referred to was suggested by some testimony that the benzine was brought for the purpose of being used in lighting an adjacent grove for a picnic. Whether this use was for the entertainment of the guests of the hotel, or to attract custom, does not appear from the evidence; but, in any view, we think the construction of the policy, on which the charge to the jury was based, was erroneous.

One of the conditions of the policy is, that if the assured shall keep or use any of the prohibited articles without written permission, it shall be void; another is, that the articles named "are not to be stored, used, kept or allowed on the above premises, temporarily or permanently, for sale or otherwise, unless with written permission indorsed on the policy," etc.

A violation of these prohibitions by anyone permitted by the assured to occupy the premises, is a violation by the assured himself. The Company stipulates that it will not assume the risk arising from the presence of the articles prohibited; and if they are brought upon the premises in violation of the policy by one in whose possession and control the latter have been placed by the insured, he assumes the risk which the Company has refused to accept. In our opinion the defendant in error was chargeable with the acts of Walker if he brought upon [129] the insured premises and stored in the oil room any of the prohibited articles, although they were not intended to be used on the premises, but for lighting a neighboring grove for a picnic. Walker was in no sense a stranger or a trespasser. With his wife he was in the lawful occupation of the premises and, with the implied assent of the insured at least, was intrusted with the control and management of them. And under the terms of the conditions in this policy, it must be held that the insured shall suffer the consequences of Walker's acts in doing that which, if done, the Company had stipulated that it would not be liable. The insured engaged that the prohibited thing should not be done; and when he committed the control of the insured premises to another the latter became his representative, for whom he must answer as for himself.

This construction of such a condition is well supported by authority. Kelley v. Worcester Mutual Fire Insurance Company, 97 Mass. 284. In this case it was held that "A policy of insurance obtained upon a building by the owner, and containing a proviso that it shall be void if the building shall be occupied or used for unlawful purposes, is avoided by a tenant's use of the building for an unlawful purpose, even if without the owner's knowledge." In distinguishing the case from those cited by counsel adversely, the court said: "In some of the cases cited for the plaintiff the prohibited use was not so constant or habitual or of such a nature as to fall within the terms of the provision, and in the others the knowledge or assent of the assured was expressly required in order to avoid the policy."

In New York it has been the settled law since the case of Duncan v. Sun Fire Insurance Company, 6 Wend. 488. In Mead v. Northwestern Ins. Co. 7 N. Y. 530, it was said, in such a case: "It is equally unimportant that the respondent was ignorant that such business was carried on; the question whether a warranty has been broken can never depend upon the knowledge or ignorance or intent of the party making it, touching the acts or the fact constituting the breach." Matson v. Farm Buildings Ins. Co. 78 N. Y. 310.

In Fire Association v. Williamson, 26 Pa. St. 196, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania said: "Neither is it material that the landlord did not know that his tenant kept gunpowder. His contract with the insurance company was that it should not be kept without permission, and it was his business to see that his tenants did not violate the contract in this respect." Diehl v. Adams Co. Mutual Ins. Co. 58 Pa. St. 443; Howell's Exrs. v. Baltimore Equitable Society, 16 Md. 377.

The circuit court also erred in the charge to the jury that under the circumstances disclosed by the evidence it was no breach of the conditions of the policy to have in the oil room a quantity of gasoline although not intended for use in the gas apparatus, the use of which had in fact been discontinued, if the oil room was a place where such fluid might have been properly stored, when intended for use in the apparatus.

The only direct evidence in the case, as to the usual and suitable place for the keeping of gasoline when used in such an apparatus, was, that it should be deposited at once in the apparatus itself, one part of which is a generator where atmospheric air is carbonized by being forced through the gasoline. But waiving any question on that point, it is clear that the privilege indorsed on the policy, in the following terms: "To use gasoline gas—gasometer, blower and generator being underground about sixty feet from main building, in vault; no heat employed in process," did not sanction the keeping, using or storing of gasoline or its equivalent, burning fluid or oil, except for actual use in that gas apparatus. There is no express permission to keep gasoline given in the words of the privilege. Such permission is implied only when and because the use of gasoline is necessary to the enjoyment of the privilege. Otherwise and for all other purposes and uses, it is expressly prohibited. The implication cannot be extended beyond the necessity for a fair and reasonable exercise of the privilege granted.

But the evidence on the trial was uncontradicted, that at the time of the fire and for nearly a year previously the use of the gas apparatus had been discontinued. The plaintiff below himself testified that it was not used during the season of 1879, and that its use had been purposely discontinued. And the privilege indorsed on one of the policies "to use kerosene oil for lights, lamps to be filled and trimmed by daylight only," and "to keep not exceeding five barrels of kerosene oil on said premises," was dated September 17, 1878, at the time when, according to the testimony of the plaintiff, the use of the apparatus for lighting the premises by means of gas from gasoline ceased at the end of the season of 1878.

It is, of course, not to be denied that this did not supersede the privilege to use the gasoline apparatus, and that this privilege had not been otherwise exhausted or withdrawn. The insured had the right at any time to resume its exercise, and in doing so would have been justified in obtaining, keeping, storing and using, in the accustomed manner, the necessary quantity of gasoline for supplying it. This is implied in the grant of the privilege. But if the privilege itself is not actually exercised, no such implication arises; and the prohibition against gasoline, according to the terms of the condition, must have full effect. It was error, therefore, in the court to instruct the jury that the naked privilege to use a gas apparatus, not actually exercised, nor intended to be exercised, but in fact abandoned, justified the insured in keeping and storing gasoline, in any quantity, in any place, or for any time.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is, therefore, for these reasons reversed; and the cause is remanded, with directions to grant a new trial.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

ROBERT C. HEWITT, Appt.,
v.
LEWIS S. FILBERT et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 142-145.)

Practice—citation necessary to appeal.

A citation is one of the necessary elements of an appeal taken after the term, and if it is not issued and served before the end of the term to which it stands returnable, the appeal becomes inoperative.

[No. 555.]

Submitted Dec. 7, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

On motion to dismiss for want of a citation.

The case is sufficiently stated by the court.

Messrs. Wm. F. Mattingly and C. C. Cole, for appellee, in support of motion:

A citation was necessary because the second appeal was not at the same term at which the decree appealed from was entered.

Villabolos v. U. S. 6 How. 90 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 356); Dodge v. Knowles, 114 U. S. 430 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 296).

In this case it was also necessary because the security was not offered or approved until after the expiration of the term at which the appeal was granted.

Saje v. R. R. Co. 96 U. S. 712 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 641); Haskins v. St. L. etc. R. Co. 109 U. S. 106 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 873); R. R. Co. v. Blair, 100 U. S. 662 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 587).

A citation being necessary, the failure to have one signed and served is fatal to the appeal.

Wilson v. Daniel, 2 Dall. 401 (3 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 654); Lloyd v. Alexander, 1 Cranch, 365 (5 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 137); Ex parte Crenshaw, 15 Pet. 119 (40 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 682); Villabolos v. U. S. 6 How. 90 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 356); U. S. v. Curry, 6 How. 106 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 363); Bacon v. Hart, 1 Black, 38 (66 U. S. bk. 17, L. ed. 52); Castro v. U. S. 3 Wall. 46 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 163); Alviso v. U. S. 5 Wall. 324 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 492); Washington v. Dennison, 6 Wall. 495 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 863); Sage v. R. R. Co. 96 U. S. 712 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 641); R. R. Co. v. Blair, 100 U. S. 661 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 587); Haskins v. St. L. etc. R. Co. 109 U. S. 106 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 873); Dodge v. Knowles, 114 U. S. 430 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 296).

Mr. S. S. Henkle, for appellant, contra:

The issue and service of a citation in cases where it is required by law is not essential to the jurisdiction of this court.

Edmonson v. Bloomshire, 7 Wall. 306 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 91); Pough v. Davis, 110 U. S. 227 (Bk. 28, L. ed. 127).

This court has repeatedly held that the giving of a bond was not essential to the perfecting of an appeal.

Ex parte Milwaukee, etc. R. R. Co. 5 Wall. 188 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 676); Seymour v. Freer, 5 Wall. 822 (72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 564).

Citation is merely notice to the opposite party that an appeal has been taken, and may be waived by the appellee or his counsel; and it is absolutely waived by the appearance of counsel.

U. S. v. Yates, 6 How. 608 (47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 576); Carroll v. Dorsey, 20 How. 204 (61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 803); Dayton v. Lash, 94 U. S. 112 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 33); Chic. & Pac. R. R. Co. v. Blair, 100 U. S. 661 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 587).

The purpose of the citation is notice. It is not jurisdictional; and if by accident it be omitted, a motion to dismiss an appeal in open court allowed at the proper term will never be granted until an opportunity to give the requisite notice has been furnished.

Dodge v. Knowles, supra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court: [142

This is a motion to dismiss an appeal for want of a citation. The facts are these: A decree was entered by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on the 21st of November, 1882, dismissing the bill in a suit between Robert C. Hewitt, complainant, and Lewis S. Filbert and others, defendants. On the same day an appeal was allowed in open court, but that appeal was never docketed in this court by the appellant. It was, however, docketed by the appellee, and dismissed under Rule 9, on the 15th of October, 1883, but the mandate was not sent down until March 25, 1885. In the meantime, on the 26th of June, 1884, Hewitt appeared in the Supreme Court of the District, at general term, and, on his ex parte application, an order was entered allowing him a second appeal upon his giving security in the sum of $500. After the close of the term at which this order was made, and on the 18th of August, a bond was approved by one of the justices and filed in the office of the clerk of that court. The case was docketed in this court on the 20th of August, 1884, but no citation has ever been issued or served.

[143]

Except in cases of appeals allowed in open court during the term at which the decree appealed from was rendered, a citation returnable at the same term with the appeal or writ of error is necessary to perfect our jurisdiction of the appeal or the writ, unless it has been in some proper form waived. The San Pedro, 2 Wheat. 142 [15 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 205]; Yeaton v. Lenox, 7 Pet. 220 [32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 664]; Villabolos v. United States, 6 How. 90 [47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 356]; United States v. Curry, Id. 111 [47 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 365]; Castro v. United States, 3 Wall. 50 [70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 163]; Alviso v. United States, 5 Wall. 824 [72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 492].

In Dayton v. Lash, 94 U. S 112 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 33], it was held that if a citation was actually issued but not served before the first day of the term to which it was returnable, leave might be granted to make the service during that term. In this way the language of the court in Villabolos v. United States, and United States v. Curry, which seemed to require service as well as issue of the citation before the return day of the appeal or writ of error, was to some extent qualified; but the authority of those cases as to the necessity of an actual issue of the citation and service before the end of the return term was in no way impaired. On the contrary, it was fully recognized. So in Chic. & Pac. R. R. Co. v. Blair, 100 U. S. 661 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 587], where an appeal was allowed in open court at a term subsequent to that in which the decree appealed from was rendered, but when the solicitors of the appellee were present and had actual notice of what was done, leave was granted to issue a citation and have it served during the return term of the appeal.

Appeals allowed by the court in session and acting judicially at the term when the decree was rendered have always been given a different effect from appeals allowed after the term or writs of error. Thus, in Reily v. Lamar, 2 Cranch, 349, decided in 1805, only two years after the Act allowing appeals in cases of equity and admiralty and maritime jurisdiction was passed, [2 Stat. at L. 244, chap. 40, sec. 2], it was stated by Chief Justice Marshall "to be the opinion of the court that, the appeal having been prayed, pending the court below, a citation was not necessary; and, therefore, the case was properly before the court" without a citation.

[144]

It has since been decided that if the appeal is allowed in open court at the term, but the appeal bond is not accepted until after the term, a citation will be necessary to bring in the parties. Sage v. Cent. R. R. Co 96 U. S. 715 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 643]. But if an appeal allowed in such a way is docketed in this court at the return term our jurisdiction of the appeal becomes perfect, and what remains to be done to get in the parties is matter of procedure only, and not jurisdictional so far as the bringing of the appeal is concerned. Hodge v. Knowles, 114 U. S. 438 [Bk. 29, L. ed. 296]. As was said in that case: "The judicial allowance of an appeal in open court at the term in which the decree has been rendered is sufficient notice of the taking of an appeal. Security is only for the due prosecution of the appeal. The citation, if security is taken out of court or after the term, is only necessary to show that the appeal which was allowed in term has not been abandoned by the failure to furnish the security before the adjournment. It is not jurisdictional. Its only purpose is notice. If by accident it has been omitted, a motion to dismiss an appeal, allowed in open court and at the proper term, will never be granted until an opportunity to give the requisite notice has been furnished; and this, whether the motion was made after the expiration of two years from the rendition of the decree or before." The reason of this is that the allowance by the court in session before the end of the term at which the decree was rendered, and when both parties are either actually or constructively present, is in the nature of an adjudication of appeal which, if docketed here in time, gives this court jurisdiction of the subject matter of the appeal, with power to make all such orders, consistent with the practice of courts of equity, as may be appropriate and necessary for the furtherance of justice. In legal effect the judicial allowance of an appeal in this way transfers the cause to this court, if the appellant dockets the appeal here at the proper time. If not docketed, the appeal which has been allowed becomes inoperative for want of due prosecution. Grigsby v. Purcell, 99 U. S. 506 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 354], and cases there cited.

But a citation is one of the necessary elements of an appeal taken after the term, and if it is not issued and served before the end of the term to which it must be made returnable the appeal becomes inoperative. The rule is thus stated in Castro v. United States, which was a case of an appeal taken after the term and in which a citation was necessary: "The writ of error, or the allowance of appeal, together with a copy of the record and the citation, when a citation is required, must be returned to the next term of this court after the writ is sued out or the appeal allowed; otherwise the writ of error or the appeal, as the case may be, will become void, and the party desiring to invoke the appellate jurisdiction will be obliged to resort to a new writ of error or a new appeal." There is nothing in any of the cases to the contrary of this. As without a citation or its waiver we cannot take jurisdiction of this appeal, and it is conceded that none has been issued or served, and there is no sufficient evidence of a waiver, the motion to dismiss is granted.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JOHN F. COYLE, Appt.,

v.

HENRY S. DAVIS, ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 108-113.)

Absolute conveyance—when considered a mortgage—parol evidence to fix as.

1. Parol evidence of the existence of a debt and that an absolute conveyance, with a covenant of warranty and without a defeasance, either in the conveyance or in a collateral paper, was intended to secure it and to operate only as a mortgage, must be clear, unequivocal and convincing, or the presumption that the instrument is what it purports to be must prevail.

2. The presumption in favor of the conveyance is strengthened when it appears that there is no considerable disproportion between the price paid and the value of the property.

[No. 86.]

Argued Dec. 9, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Benj. F. Butler and O. D. Barrett, for appellant.

Messrs. Walter D. Davidge and Henry E. Davis, for appellees:

Although a deed absolute on its face may be shown by parol to have been intended as a mortgage, it is necessary to show facts and circumstances dehors the instrument, raising an equity superior to its terms.

Pierce v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 116.

Something more must be established than an alleged verbal agreement controlling the intent as expressed by the instrument.

Blackwell v. Overby, 6 Ired. Eq. 88; Kelly v. Bryan, 6 Ired. Eq. 283; Brothers v. Harrill, 2 Jones, Eq. 209; Glisson v. Hill, 2 Jones, Eq. 234. See also Todd v. Campbell, 32 Pa. St. 250; Rhines v. Baird, 41 Pa. St. 263; Haines v. Thomson, 70 Pa. St. 434; Sulphen v. Cushman, 35 Ill. 186.

"The burden rests upon the moving party of overcoming the strong presumption arising from the terms of a written instrument. If the proofs are doubtful and unsatisfactory, if there is a failure to overcome this presumption by testimony entirely plain and convincing beyond reasonable controversy, the writing will be held to express correctly the intention of the parties."

Haviland v. Blake, 97 U. S. 624 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 1027); N. Mut. Life Insurance Co. v. Nelson, 103 U. S. 544 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 436); Young v. Duvall, 109 U. S. 573 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 1036).

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, made in General Term, July 6, 1880, dismissing the bill of complaint, in a suit in equity brought by John F. Coyle against Henry S. Davis, William E. Spalding and William W. Rapley. The bill was filed May 24, 1869, to redeem a parcel of land in the City of Washington alleged to be covered by a mortgage held by the defendant Davis. The substantial averments of the bill are, that Coyle, Spalding and Rapley, in April, 1863, purchased the land as tenants in common, and it was by their mutual consent deeded to Rapley; that Coyle's share was incumbered by a deed of trust executed as security for a loan made to Coyle by one Riggs; that, in order to pay Riggs, Coyle, in June, 1866, applied to Davis for a loan of $6,000; that Davis had, for a long time, made many professions of warm friendship for Coyle, and of willingness and desire to serve him, and had acquired Coyle's full confidence; and, upon such application, offered to make to Coyle such a loan as would both pay Riggs and settle up all Coyle's accounts with Spalding and Rapley, in respect of the land; and as security for the loan asked a mortgage on Coyle's undivided one third of the land, which would thus be free from all incumbrance and indebtedness; and suggested that a statement of Coyle's accounts with Spalding and Rapley be furnished to him, Davis; that on or about June 12, 1866, Davis was furnished with a written instrument signed by Spalding and Rapley, fully setting forth Coyle's account in respect of the land; that thereupon Davis, well knowing that one third interest in the land [110 was worth about $30,000, and would increase in value, urged Coyle to take a loan from him of about $17,000, in order to settle his account with Spalding and Rapley as well as pay his debt to Riggs, and to give him, Davis, a mortgage on Coyle's interest, as security; that as inducement to this course, Davis represented that the arrangement proposed by him would be freer from complication than any other, and would give him an independent security for the loan; and that his business as well as his desire to serve Coyle would afford him opportunity to effect, for the benefit of Coyle, a highly advantageous sale of said interest in the premises, from the proceeds of which he could retain the balance due on his loan and pay over the residue to Coyle; and that this arrangement would tend to the benefit of both parties; that Coyle acceded to the proposition, and Davis loaned to Coyle $17,659.46, by advancing $6,000 to pay the debt to Riggs, and assuming the payment, to be made as it should fall due, of the unpaid balance on Coyle's one-third interest, viz: $11,659.46; that as security for the loan, Davis took a mortgage on Coyle's undivided one third of the land, in the manner following, to wit: Rapley and Coyle, on or about July 6, 1866, conveyed to Davis, Coyle's undivided one-third interest in the land, by a deed absolute in form, but the force and operation of which were defeated by the understanding, agreement and contract between Coyle and Davis, that the deed was executed as security for the loan; and that between the parties the conveyance should have the operation, force and effect of a mortgage, and none other; and that Davis should enter upon and take possession of the mortgaged property, as security for the loan and subject to an account for its rents and profits, and whenever Coyle should offer to redeem the property an account should be had in respect of the rents

Note.—Mortgages; construction of absolute conveyance as a mortgage. See Conway v. Alexander, 11 U. S. (7 Cranch), 218, bk. 3, 221, note.

Admissibility of parol evidence in such cases. See Stephens v. Edwards, 22 U. S. (9 Wheat.), 489, bk. 6, 142, note.

and profits, received by Davis, on the one hand, and of Coyle's debt, principal and interest, on the other hand, and on proffer of payment of the sum thus found due, if any, from Coyle to Davis, Davis, by conveyance of the property to Coyle, should surrender possession of it to Coyle; and while Davis should continue in possession as mortgagee, if he should have an opportunity to effect an advantageous sale of the [111] property, he should do so for the benefit of Coyle, and should convey title to it and receive the purchase money and deduct the balance, if any, due on the loan, over and above the rents and profits meanwhile received by him, and pay over the residue to Coyle; and that Davis went into possession of the property and had received its rents and profits for three years, and had frequently admitted that the transactions between him and Coyle were as above set forth.

The answer of Davis alleges that Rapley, on taking a conveyance of the land, incumbered it, by a deed of trust, with a debt of $20,000, to secure unpaid purchase money, which was not paid when the deed from Coyle to Davis was made; and that at that time there was a further incumbrance on Coyle's interest of $4,100 as a debt to Riggs, secured by a deed of trust of that interest. It denies the allegations of the bill as to the application for a loan or the offer of a loan or the asking for a mortgage, or the suggesting or furnishing of a statement of account, and all the other allegations of the bill as to the making of a loan or of a mortgage, or of a deed as security for a loan or as a mortgage. It alleges the facts to be that, about six or eight weeks before the making of the deed to Davis, he was applied to by one Winder, acting as agent for Coyle, to make a loan to Coyle, to be secured by a deed in fee of Coyle's interest in the property, which application was rejected, and it was renewed in person by Coyle, with the same result; that when Coyle renewed it, he exhibited to Davis a paper purporting to show the cost of the property and the money value of the one-third interest of Coyle, after deducting the balance due by him on account of such interest, and $6,666.66 as one third of the unpaid purchase money; that, afterwards Coyle proposed to Davis to sell his interest to him for $20,000, but he rejected that proposition and finally, in July, 1866, offered Coyle $18,000 in cash for such interest, which offer Coyle accepted; that Davis insisted that before the purchase money should be paid the account of Coyle in respect of the property should be settled; that thereupon the indebtedness of Coyle to Spalding and Rapley in respect of the property was ascertained, by a settlement dated July 7, 1866, a copy of which is [112] annexed to the answer, to be $6,258.71; that Davis paid the $6,258.71 to Spalding and Rapley, and paid to Riggs what was due to him, and paid the balance in cash to Coyle, less the $6,666.66, which was reserved, with the approbation of Coyle, to pay his share of the unpaid purchase money, and was afterwards paid by Davis; that on July 7, 1866, Davis received from Coyle a deed executed by Coyle and Rapley and their wives, conveying to him in fee simple the one-third interest of Coyle; that he took possession of it and has received its rents and profits, as absolute owner, recognized as such by Coyle and his cotenants; that Coyle's interest at the time Davis purchased it was not worth $30,000, and Coyle never asked from Davis more than $20,000 for it; and that Davis never admitted that he was mortgagee in possession in respect of Coyle's interest.

The volume of proof taken on the issue thus raised is large, and the evidence is contradictory, as is common in such cases, where, admittedly, a loan of some kind was at some time talked about. The conveyance to Davis of the undivided one-third interest of Coyle being to him, his heirs and assigns, forever, with a covenant of warranty and without a defeasance, either in the conveyance or in a collateral paper, the parol evidence that there was a debt, and that the deed was intended to secure it and to operate only as a mortgage, must be clear, unequivocal and convincing, or the presumption that the instrument is what it purports to be must prevail. This well settled rule of equity jurisprudence was applied by this court in Howland v. Blake, 97 U. S. 624, 626 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1027, 1028]. The case stated in the bill herein is not supported by the weight of the evidence. On the contrary, it sustains the allegations of the answer. Especially, the force of the letter of Coyle to Davis, of June 11, 1867, is not broken by any satisfactory explanation. It would serve no useful purpose to discuss the testimony at length. There is but one point to which it is needful to refer. Great stress is laid, in cases of this kind, on inadequacy of consideration, where there is a considerable disproportion between the price paid and the real value of the property. Russell v. Southard, 12 How. 139, 148 [53 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 927, 931]. There is testimony on both sides, on the question of disproportion, in this case. But the preponderance is very large on the part of Davis, that the share of Coyle in the property was sold for about its sale value, in view of its condition. There was a poorly built and poorly arranged building on the premises, which was incapable of actual partition; the law did not permit a partition by a sale in invitum; and Coyle's interest was a minority interest. These considerations made it difficult of sale at all.

Decree affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,

Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 154-158.)

Practice—appeal from Court of Claims—what reviewable on—section 5261, R. S.—special findings.

1. An appeal from the Court of Claims brings up for review only the decisions of that court upon questions of law arising in the course of the trial, or in the application of the law to the facts as finally found by it.

2. An appeal under section 5261, R. S., is subject to the general rules regulating appeals from the court of claims.

3. Certain special findings which were requested in the court below were properly refused, as they related to mere incidental facts amounting only to evidence which had performed its entire office when the facts were found.

[No. 1034.]

Argued Dec. 7, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims.

On motion to remand.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. John F. Dillon, J. M. Wilson and Sidney Bartlett for appellant, in support of motion.

Mr. John Goode, Solicitor-Gen., for appellee, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court:

[155] This suit was brought by the Union Pacific Railway Company against the United States under sections 5260 and 5261 of the Revised Statutes, to recover among other things the price of the transportation of mails by the Company in accordance with the requirements of its charter. These sections are as follows:

"Sec. 5260. The Secretary of the Treasury is directed to withhold all payments to any railroad company and its assigns on account of freights or transportation over their respective roads of any kind, to the amount of payments made by the United States for interest upon bonds of the United States issued to any such company, and which shall not have been reimbursed, together with the 5 per centum of net earnings due and unapplied, as provided by law.

"Sec. 5261. Any such company may bring suit in the court of claims to recover the price of such freight and transportation; and in such suit the right of such company to recover the same upon the law and the facts of the case shall be determined, and also the rights of the United States upon the merits of all the points presented by it in answer thereto by them; and either party to such suit may appeal to the supreme court; and both said courts shall give such cause or causes precedence of all other business."

One of the principal controversies in the case was as to what would be "fair and reasonable rates of compensation" for such transportation, not to exceed the amount paid by private parties for the same kind of service." When the case was here on a former appeal, this court, adopting the ruling of the court of claims, said that it would be proper "to look over the entire field of service in determining what was a fair and reasonable charge for a road which was similar to but not identical with any other. For instance, if it should appear that the receipts of passenger cars were less than the receipts of postal cars, and the cost and running expenses no greater, we are inclined to think that that fact might be a proper element in the problem of estimating the amount of fair and reasonable rates of compensation." And we also said that "upon a re-trial, if the parties do not agree upon the amount or upon the rule of computation, the compensation, at fair and reasonable rates, must be determined upon a consideration of all facts material to the issue, not to exceed the amounts paid by private parties for the same kind of service." Union Pacific R. R. Co. v. United States, 104 U. S. 667. [Bk. 26, L. ed. 885].

Accordingly, when the case went back, evidence was offered to show:

1. What the public paid for express service, and the similarity of this service in its nature and cost to the mail service;

2. The earnings per car of the cars employed in the passenger service;

3. What the Company charged and the public paid per pound for carrying extra baggage;

4. What the Company charged and the public paid for carrying first class freight on passenger trains; and how much more it was worth to carry the same class of matter in passenger trains; and

5. That connecting roads allowed the Company on through business 50 per cent more than they themselves received, and the reason for such allowance.

The motion papers also show that, before the first trial of the cause, a stipulation was entered into by the parties agreeing on the amount due the Company for mail service in case one or another of several proposed rules for estimating the price should be adopted by the court.

Before the trial began the court was requested to find specifically the facts as to the several kinds of service about which evidence had been furnished, and the nature, extent, and character of the mail service. The court did not comply with this request, but found generally that "The amounts allowed and retained by the Treasury Department for transportation of mails * * * are a fair and reasonable compensation for the service, and not in excess of the rates paid by private parties for the same kind of service," and gave judgment accordingly. [157] The case is now here on appeal by both parties, and the Railway Company has moved that the court of claims be directed "to send up to this court the entire record in said case, including the interlocutory rulings, and all the evidence on which the case was heard;" or, if that cannot be done, that the case be remanded with instructions to "specifically pass upon, affirmatively or negatively, each of said requests, or make a finding of facts on the subject embraced in each of said requests;" and that the court be directed to incorporate in the record the stipulation already referred to, and a certain letter mentioned and set out in the motion papers.

So far as the first branch of the motion is concerned, it must be denied on the authority of McClure v. United States, [ante, 572] just decided. There is nothing in the statute under which this suit was brought to show an intention by Congress to allow any other appeal to this court than such an one as is given by the statute conferring general jurisdiction on the court of claims. The suit is to be at law and not in equity. The recovery is to be upon the law and the facts of the case, but that is no more than is required in every suit at law or in equity. Under our rule the facts are to be settled by the court of claims, and an appeal brings up for review only the decisions of that court upon questions of law arising in the course of the trial or in the application of the law to the facts as finally found. There is nothing unusual in this. In an ordinary suit at law the facts are settled in the trial court, and questions of law are only carried to the appellate court for review. Upon writs of error we hear the case only on findings of fact or exceptions to rulings of the court in the progress of the trial. Generally, in suits at law there is but one trial upon questions of fact.

The second branch of the motion is also covered by the decision in McClure's Case. The special findings which were requested and refused related to mere incidental facts which amounted only to evidence, and were therefore inadmissible as part of the record to be sent here. The Francis Wright, 105 U. S. 381 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1100]. They were in reality nothing more than requests for a finding of what the evidence was. The parties seem to have followed the suggestion on the former appeal, and after looking over the entire field of service [158] they brought in everything which, in their opinion, could be of use to the court in determining what would be a reasonable compensation for the service rendered, subject to the requirement of the statute that it should not be more than was paid to private parties for the same kind of service. The question to be determined was one of fact, as much so as the amount of recovery in any action quantum meruit. A conclusion could only be reached by considering all the testimony, weighing the facts, and estimating their comparative value as evidence. This presented in no just sense a question of law. Every fact that was proven according to the motion was simply evidence, and as evidence had performed its entire office when the facts were found. It has no place in the record which is to come here for review.

The motion is denied.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[158]

HATTIE A. BURNETT, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 158-161.)

Pension laws—"total disability"—rights of widows—statutes construed.

1. The words "total disability" in pension laws have a technical signification which cannot be disregarded.
2. Under section 4702, R. S. a widow is only entitled to receive the same pension to which her husband would have been entitled for a total disability, although in fact he had received a larger pension because of a permanent specific disability.

[No. 951.]

Submitted Nov. 23, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. A. L. Merriman, for appellant.

Mr. John L. Blair, for appellee.

[158] Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

By an Act of Congress of March 3, 1879, the Secretary of the Interior was directed to place on the pension roll the name of Ward B. Burnett, and pay him a pension of $50 per month in lieu of the pension then received by him. 20 Stat at L. 665, chap. 290. The subsequent Act of June 16, 1880, provides that all soldiers then receiving a pension of $50 per month, under the provisions of the Act of June 18, 1874, entitled "An Act to Increase the Pension of Soldiers and Sailors Who Have Been Totally Disabled" (18 Stat. at L. 78, chap. 298), shall receive, in lieu of all pensions then paid to them by the United States, the sum of $72 per month; those whose pensions were thus increased from $50 to $72 per month, to receive the difference between those sums monthly, from June 17, 1878, to the date when that Act took effect. 21 Stat. at L. 281, chap. 236.

On the 17th of July, 1882, General Burnett received from the Department of the Interior a certificate showing that he was entitled to a pension "for gun-shot wounds of left leg, and rheumatism" at the rate of $30 per month, to commence on the first of August, 1848, and $31.25 per month from June 4, 1872, and $50 per month from June 4, 1874, and $72 per month from June 17, 1878.

By an Act approved July 25, 1882, it is provided that no person then receiving, or who should thereafter receive, a pension under a special Act shall receive, in addition thereto, a pension under the general law, unless the special Act expressly states that the pension granted thereby is in addition to the pension which such person is entitled to receive under the general law. 22 Stat. at L. 176, chap. 349.

Gen. Burnett died on June 24, 1884, from the effect of wounds received in the war with Mexico. The appellant, his widow, claims the same pension, $72 per month, that her husband was receiving at his death. The interior department granted her a certificate for a pension at the rate of only $30 per month, to continue from June 24, 1884, during her widowhood. Her claim for a larger pension having been denied, the matter was referred by the department to the court of claims. The claimant, in her petition in that court, asked for judgment against the United States for $210, that being the difference between $30 per month and $72 per month from the date of her husband's death to the commencement of this action. A demurrer by the Government to the petition having been sustained, the case has been brought to this court.

The only question presented by the parties for our consideration is whether, under existing statutes, the widow of General Burnett is entitled to the same pension that he was receiving at his death.

Section 4692 of the Revised Statutes provides that "Every person specified in the several classes enumerated in section 4693, who has been, since the 4th day of March, 1861, or who is hereafter disabled, under the conditions therein stated, shall * * * be placed on the list of invalid pensioners of the United States, and be entitled to receive for a total disability, or a permanent specific disability such pension as is hereinafter provided in such cases; and for an inferior disability, except in cases of permanent specific disability, for which the rate of pension is expressly provided, an amount proportionate to that provided for total disability; and such pension shall commence as hereinafter provided and continue during the existence of the disability." 17 Stat. at L. 566; 18 Id. 61; 19 Id. 403.

Section 4693 specifies who shall be beneficiaries under the preceding section, among whom is "any officer of the army, including regulars, volunteers or militia * * * disabled by reason of any wound or injury received, or disease contracted, while in the service of the United States and in the line of duty." 17 Stat. at L. 566, 567; 19 Id. 403.

Section 4695 provides that "The pension for total disability shall be * * * for lieutenant-colonels and officers of higher rank in the military service * * * $30 per month." 17 Stat. at L. 567; 19 Id. 264. Other sections fix the amount of pensions in cases of disabilities known as permanent specific disability and inferior disability.

It is then provided, by section 4702, that "If any person embraced within the provisions of sections 4692 and 4693 has died since the 4th day of March, 1861, or hereafter dies by reason of any wound, injury or disease which, under the conditions and limitations of such sections, would have entitled him to an invalid pension had he been disabled, his widow * * * shall be entitled to receive the same pension as the husband or father would have been entitled to had he been totally disabled, to commence from the death of the husband or father, to continue to the widow during her widowhood," etc. Act of March 3, 1873, 17 Stat. at L. p. 569, chap. 234, § 8.

It would seem to be too clear for discussion that the construction which the court placed upon the statutory provisions is correct. It is not to be doubted that the words "total disability" in the pension laws have a technical signification which cannot be disregarded. And when the statute fixes $30 per month as the pension, in case of total disability, of an officer of the rank of General Burnett, and declares that his widow shall receive the same pension as her husband would have received had he been totally disabled, there is no room left for a construction that would give her a pension in excess of that amount. If it is supposed that the law operates unjustly against the officers and soldiers who became totally disabled in the service, or that an unreasonable distinction is made between different kinds of disability, the remedy is with another department of the Government. The courts must give effect to the intention of Congress as manifested by the statute. They cannot make but can only declare the law.

The judgment is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JOSIAH FISK, Plff. in Err.,
v.
POLICE JURY OF JEFFERSON, LEFT BANK.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, ex rel. JOSIAH FISK, Plff. in Err.,
v.
POLICE JURY OF JEFFERSON, LEFT BANK.

(See S. C. "Fisk v. Jefferson Police Jury," Reporter's ed. 131-135.)

Municipal ordinance fixing compensation—La. State Constitution impairs obligation of contract for.

1. After services have been rendered under a municipal law, resolution or ordinance which fixes the rate of compensation, there arises an implied contract to pay for those services at that rate; and the obligation of such contract cannot be impaired by the State.

2. A provision in a State Constitution may be a law impairing the obligation of a contract as well as one found in an ordinary statute.

[Nos. 69, 70.]

Submitted Nov. 18, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana.

The case is stated by the court.

Messrs. Chas. Louque and B. F. Jonas, for plaintiffs in error. [132]

No counsel appeared for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases are brought before this court by writs of error to the Supreme Court of Louisiana.

As they involve precisely the same questions between the same parties they may be decided together.

Josiah Fisk, who was an attorney at law, brought three suits in the proper court of the Parish of Jefferson to recover for salary and fees due him from the parish as district attorney; and he obtained judgments in each case against the Police Jury, which is the governing body of the parish.

Being unable to obtain the payment of these judgments in any other mode, he first made application for a writ of mandamus to compel the assessment and collection of a tax for the payment of two of these judgments, and afterwards for another writ in regard to the third judgment; the two judgments being for his salary and fees under one appointment, and the other under a second appointment.

The inferior court granted the writ in one case and denied it in the other. But on appeal to the supreme court of the State, the writs were denied in both cases.

The ground of the jurisdiction of this court to review these judgments is the assertion by plaintiff in error that they were founded on a law of the State which impaired the obligation of his contract, to wit: the contract on which he procured the judgments already mentioned.

The services for which the judgments were recovered were rendered in the years 1871, 1872, 1873 and 1874. During this period there was in force the Act of the Legislature of 1871, of which section 7 is as follows: [133]

"That no city or other municipal corporation shall levy a tax for any purpose which shall exceed 2 per centum on the assessed cash value of all the property therein listed for taxation; nor shall the police jury of any parish levy a tax for any parish purposes during any year which shall exceed 100 per centum of the state tax for that year, unless such excess shall be first sanctioned by a vote of the majority of the voters." Acts of 1871, p. 109, § 7.

NOTE.—Constitutional law; impairment of obligation of contracts. See Fletcher v. Peck, 10 U. S. (6 Cranch), 87, bk. 3, 162, note.

But by the Constitution of the State of 1880 it was declared that no parish or municipal tax, for all purposes whatsoever, shall exceed ten mills on the dollar of valuation. The Police Jury showed that they had exhausted their power when the application for mandamus was made by levying the full amount of taxes permissible under this constitutional provision, and the supreme court held they could not be compelled to levy more.

In answer to the argument that as applied to plaintiff's case the constitutional provision impaired the obligation of his contract, the supreme court decided that his employment as attorney for the parish did not constitute a contract, either in reference to his regular salary or to his compensation by fees. And this question is the only one discussed in the opinion, and on that ground the decision rested.

It seems to us that the supreme court confounded two very different things in their discussion of this question.

We do not assert the proposition that a person elected to an office for a definite term has any such contract with the government or with the appointing body as to prevent the Legislature or other proper authority from abolishing the office or diminishing its duration or removing him from office. So, though when appointed the law has provided a fixed compensation for his services, there is no contract which forbids the Legislature or other proper authority to change the rate of compensation for salary or services after the change is made, though this may include a part of the term of the office then unexpired. Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. 402 [51 U. S. bk. 13, L. ed. 472].

[134] But after the services have been rendered, under a law, resolution or ordinance which fixes the rate of compensation, there arises an implied contract to pay for those services at that rate. This contract is a completed contract. Its obligation is perfect and rests on the remedies which the law then gives for its enforcement. The vice of the argument of the Supreme Court of Louisiana is in limiting the protecting power of the constitutional provision against impairing the obligation of contracts to express contracts, to specific agreements; and in rejecting that much larger class in which one party having delivered property, paid money, rendered service, or suffered loss at the request of or for the use of another, the law completes the contract by implying an obligation on the part of the latter to make compensation. This obligation can no more be impaired by a law of the State than that arising on a promissory note.

The case of Fisk was of this character. His appointment as district attorney was lawful and was a request made to him by the proper authority to render the services demanded of that office. He did render these services for the parish; and the obligation of the Police Jury to pay for them was complete. Not only were the services requested and rendered, and the obligation to pay for them perfect, but the measure of compensation was also fixed by the previous order of the Police Jury. There was here wanting no element of a contract. The judgment in the court for the recovery of this compensation concluded all these questions. Hall v. Wisconsin, 103 U. S. 10 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 305]; Newton v. Comrs. 100 U. S. 559 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 711].

The provision of the Constitution restricting the limit of taxation, so far as it was in conflict with the Act of 1871, and as applied to the contract of plaintiff, impaired its obligation by destroying the remedy pro tanto.

It is apparent that if the officers whose duty it is to assess the taxes of this parish were to perform that duty as it is governed by the law of 1871, the plaintiff would get his money. If not by a first year's levy, then by the next. But the constitutional provision has repealed that law, and stands in the way of enforcing the obligation of plaintiff's contract as that obligation stood at the time the contract was made.

It is well settled that a provision in a State Constitution may be a law impairing the obligation of a contract as well as one found in an ordinary statute. We are of opinion, therefore, that as it regards plaintiff's case this restrictive provision of the Constitution of 1880 does impair the obligation of a contract. Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535 [71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 403]; Nelson v. St. Martin's Parish, 111 U. S. 716 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 574].

The judgments of the Supreme Court of Louisiana are therefore reversed, and the cases are remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, ex rel. SAMUEL R. STEWART, Plff. in Err.,

v.

POLICE JURY OF JEFFERSON, LEFT BANK.

(See S. C. "Stewart v. Jefferson Police Jury," Reporter's ed. 135-137.)

Construction of state statutes—limit of taxation in Louisiana for indebtedness.

1. The Law of Louisiana, requiring the court when rendering a judgment against a parish to order the levy of a tax to pay it, is properly construed with reference to the tax limit fixed by the Act of 1872.

2. A judgment creditor upon a judgment obtained on a contract made subsequent to the passage of the Act of 1872 is not entitled to a mandamus to compel the levy of a tax in excess of the limit fixed by the Act.

[No. 71]

Submitted Nov. 18, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Charles Louque and B. F. Jonas, for plaintiff in error.

No counsel appeared for the defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This, like the two cases just disposed of, is a writ of error to a judgment denying the plaintiff a writ of mandamus.

C. W. Besancon was employed as an attorney, by a resolution of the Police Jury, passed December 11, 1874, to defend in certain suits about roads in the parish; and for services in that behalf rendered during the years 1875 and 1876 he recovered against the Police Jury of the parish a judgment for $1,138 on April 7, 1877.

This judgment he afterwards assigned to Stewart, who procured a writ of mandamus to compel the Police Jury to levy a tax to pay it. The case came by appeal into the Supreme Court of the State, which at first affirmed this judgment, but on a rehearing finally reversed the order of the inferior court and denied the writ.

The opinion rendered on the first hearing was based upon the proposition that the limit of taxation of the parish for the years 1875 and 1876 was 14½ mills on $100, and that the statute then required that when a court, in a case like this, rendered a judgment against the police jury, it should at the same time order the levy of a tax sufficient to pay it. And though no such order was made in plaintiff's case, the opinion held that the law in this respect became a part of the judgment, and the plaintiff was entitled to the writ to enforce the levy and collect the tax.

On the rehearing the court decided that this Act of 1869, which had permitted a tax on the parish to the extent of 14½ mills, had been repealed by the Act of 1872.

The first section of that Act is as follows:

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That section 7 of the Act recited in the above mentioned title and approved March 8, 1871, be so amended and re-enacted as to read as follows: "That no city or other municipal corporation shall levy a tax for any purpose which shall exceed 2½ per centum on the assessed cash value of all the property therein listed for taxation, except the City of New Orleans, which may levy a tax of 2½ per centum; nor shall the police jury of any parish levy a tax for any parish purposes, except to pay indebtedness incurred prior to the passage of this Act, during any year, which shall exceed 100 per centum of the state tax for that year, unless such excess, whether levied by village, city or parochial authorities, shall first be sustained by a vote of the majority of the said voters of said village, city or parish, at an election held for that purpose. No per capita tax except the poll tax authorized by the Constitution, shall be assessed or collected in this State."

If this Act was the measure of the taxing power of the parish in 1874, 1875 and 1876, when the contract with Besancon was made and the services rendered, then it is conceded that there is no right to a mandamus in this case.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana held this to be so, and we are not prepared to say they are wrong in a construction of their own statutes, both of which were in existence when the contract was made.

It is insisted, however, on the part of the plaintiff, that the law which required the court, when rendering a judgment against the parish, to order the levy of a tax sufficient to pay the judgment, was not repealed by this Act of 1872 and was unaffected by it, and therefore he should now have by writ of mandamus what he ought to have had by the order of the court as part of his judgment. To this the court in its opinion replies that the Act of 1872 being an absolute limit to the power of taxation by the parish authorities, any order of the court rendering the judgment should be in subordination to that limit and must have been governed by it. So that, though the power of a court to order a levy sufficient to pay its judgment, as a part of the judgment itself, may have remained, it could levy by that order no tax beyond the limit fixed by law at the time the contract was made, unless that limit had been enlarged instead of diminished by subsequent statutes.

In both these views of the case we concur; and the judgment of the Supreme Court of Louisiana is accordingly affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

COUNTY OF SAN MATEO, Plff. in Err., [138]
v.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 138-142.)

Practice—dismissal of writ of error on settlement of controversy—costs.

Where it appears that there is no longer an existing cause of action between the parties to a writ of error pending in this court, it will be dismissed.

[No. 106.]

Argued on merits, December 19, 20, 21, 1883. Restored to original position on the docket, October 15, 1883. Motion to dismiss submitted, December 17, 1885. Decided December 21, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of California.

On motion of plaintiff in error for leave to dismiss.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

The elaborate argument on the merits was by the following counsel:

Messrs. A. L. Rhodes, A. L. Hart, Atty-Gen. of California, Benjamin H. Brewster and Alfred Barstow, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Roscoe Conkling, George F. Edmunds, S. W. Sanderson and Henry Beard, for defendant in error.

Mr. John W. Ross, special counsel for plaintiff in error, in support of motion.

Messrs. A. L. Rhodes and Alfred Barstow, counsel of record for plaintiff in error, contra.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court: [138

NOTE.—Parties on appeal or error. None but parties to the record can be heard on appeal or writ of error. See Harrison v. Nixon, 34 U. S. (9 Pet.), 483, bk. 9, 201 note; Owings v. Kincannon, 32 U. S. (7 Pet.), 399, bk. 8, 727, note.

This motion was made on the 18th of November last by Mr. John W. Ross, who had been specially appointed by the board of supervisors of the County as counsel for that purpose. Upon suggestion that counsel of record desired to oppose the motion, an order was made that notice be given them to appear and show cause against it if they desired to do so. This they have done, and it now appears that the suit was begun in a state court April 22, 1882. An answer was filed by the Railroad Company May 25, 1882. On the 30th of June the suit was removed to the Circuit Court of the United States. An amended answer was filed August 16, 1882, and on the same day a demurrer was filed to the answer. On the 6th of September the counsel for the County executed to the Railroad Company a receipt, of which the following is a copy.

"County of San Mateo, Plaintiff, v. Southern Pacific Railroad Company, Defendant. } In U. S. Circuit Court, Ninth Circuit. No. 2807.

[139] Received, San Francisco, September 6, 1882, of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the sum of seven thousand two hundred and forty-seven $\frac{63}{100}$ dollars ($7,247.63), and the sum of $724.76 dollars attorney's fees, all to be credited upon any judgment that may be obtained by the plaintiff in the above entitled action.

In case judgment shall be rendered in said action in favor of said defendant, then said sum of money, less our fees agreed to be paid by said County, shall be paid into the treasury of the said County of San Mateo as a donation by said defendant in lieu of taxes for the fiscal year 1881-2, declared invalid. But in the event that a law shall be hereafter passed providing for a reassessment of property in said complaint in said action in said County for said year, then said sum of money is to be treated as a part payment for taxes for said fiscal year.

(Signed) Rhodes & Barstow,
Attorneys for San Mateo Co. in said action."

On the 20th of September the following stipulation was filed in the cause:

"The County of San Mateo v. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company. } No. 2807.

It is stipulated in the above entitled actions that each of them be and hereby is submitted upon the plaintiff's demurrer to the first affirmative defense (second defense) in the defendant's answer. And it is further stipulated that judgment final in the action may be rendered upon the demurrer, it being agreed that for the purpose of this proceeding the other defenses are withdrawn from the consideration of the court.

Rhodes & Barstow,
Attys. for plaintiff.
L. D. McKisick,
Atty. for defendant."

On the 25th of September a judgment was rendered upon the demurrer in favor of the defendant and the suit dismissed. The next day a writ of error was brought to this court and docketed here October 13, 1882. The case was elaborately argued before us December 19, 1882; [140] but before a decision was reached a stipulation was entered into between the parties, as follows:

"In the Supreme Court of the United States.
The County of San Mateo v. Southern Pacific Railroad Company. } No. 1063

Whereas, certain actions brought by the People of the State of California, or by certain counties of said State, against said defendant and other railroad companies operating railroads in said State, for the recovery of taxes assessed against said companies for state and county purposes, were, during the month of August last, tried before and submitted to the Circuit Court of the United States, Ninth Circuit, for the District of California, which actions have since been decided against the plaintiffs;

And whereas, the attorneys for the respective parties to said actions against whom judgments have been rendered intend to sue out a writ or writs of error in one or more of said actions, and to prosecute the same with as much diligence as possible, and to move the supreme court that the same be advanced on the calendar for argument;

It is hereby stipulated by and between the parties to the first mentioned action that the further consideration of the said action by the supreme court may be deferred until the argument of one or more of the last mentioned cases.

San Francisco, September 18, 1883.

(Signed) A. L. Rhodes,
Atty. for plff. in error.
(Signed) S. W. Sanderson,
Atty. for defendant."

And thereupon the following order was made:

"The County of San Mateo, Plaintiff in Error v. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

The parties having stipulated that the further consideration of this cause may be postponed until certain other cases are disposed of, this cause is restored to its original position on the docket, there to await the further action of the court."

It now appears that, according to the claim of the counsel of record, there is due on account of the taxes sued for, including penalty, attorneys' fees, and interest at the rate of 2 per cent per month, from the time of delinquency until now, the sum of $14,899.07. It also appears that on the 11th of the present month the Railroad Company paid into the treasury of the County the sum of $7,613.30. The County has also had the use of the $7,247.63 paid on the 6th of September, 1882, from the time of such payment until now. The only condition attached to the payment made on the 11th of this month is that, if when the account is finally settled between the County and Rhodes & Barstow upon the basis of the assessment roll, principal, interest, delinquency and attorneys' fees, it shall appear that the payments, including that to Rhodes & Barstow, are more than the actual amount due, the excess shall be returned to the Railroad Company. The payments have been:

To Rhodes & Barstow, taxes	$7,247 63
Attorneys' fees	724 76
To the County	7,613 30
In all	$15,585 69

As this is more than the entire sum estimated

by the counsel for the plaintiff to be due, it is clear that the debt for which the suit was brought has been unconditionally paid and satisfied.

As to the objection that this was by agreement of parties made a test case, and many others are depending on its adjudication, it is sufficient to say that both sides agree that the suit of the County Santa Clara against the same Company presents all the questions that are in this case; and that the parties have stipulated this need not be taken up for decision until that is heard. The interests of the State, therefore, will be as well protected by the determination of that case as of this. For the reason that there is no longer an existing cause of action in favor of the County against the Railroad Company this writ of error is dismissed, each party to pay its own costs.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

WINCHESTER AND PARTRIDGE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

EDWARD CREARY, WILLIAM BRUGGERHOFF, ANDREW NEIL, PAUL PRESSLER, N. R. MORRIS AND JOHN HANCOCK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 161-167.)

Evidence — declarations of vendor or agent of vendee made after transfer of possession—when admissible—fraud.

1. Declarations of the vendor of personal property and of the agent of the vendee, made after the surrender of such property by the vendor to such agent, are inadmissible against the vendee to show the character of the sale when made.

2. Declarations of the vendor after sale are inadmissible against the vendee in support of a charge of combination or conspiracy to defraud creditors, unless the alleged common purpose to defraud is first established by independent evidence, and unless they have such relation to its execution as to constitute a part of the res gestæ.

3. Where the vendor, after the surrender of possession, remains merely as a clerk or salesman, he is not in possession within the meaning of the rule allowing in favor of creditors, proof of the declarations of a vendor of personal property, who is allowed to control, manage and dispose of it after sale.

[No. 65.]

Argued Nov. 17, 18, 1885. Decided Dec. 21, 1885.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Texas.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr M. P. Morris, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. B. D. Lee, Jeff. Chandler and Eppa Hunton, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The Winchester and Partridge Manufacturing Company, a Wisconsin corporation, brought this action to recover damages for the seizure and sale under an attachment sued out, on the 30th day of March, 1882, by J. E. Hayner & Co., against the property of John A. Webb & Co., of certain goods, wares and merchandise, constituting a stock in trade; of which property the plaintiff claims to have been, at the time the attachment was issued and levied, the owner by purchase from the defendants in the attachment suit. The seizure and sale were made by direction of Hayner & Co., who, prior to the levy, executed to the defendant Creary, the officer who received the attachment, an indemnifying bond with sureties. Before the levy the officer was informed, by plaintiff's agent and also by John A. Webb, that the property belonged to plaintiff.

The defense proceeds upon the ground that the alleged sale was fraudulent and void as against the defendants, Hayner & Co., and other creditors of the vendors.

The evidence, so far as competent, tended to establish the following facts: on and prior to the 13th of March, 1882, John A. Webb and Joseph W. Webb were engaged at Austin, Texas, under the firm name of John A. Webb & Co., in selling wagons, agricultural implements, machinery, etc. In the course of business they became largely indebted to various persons, firms and corporations with whom they had dealt; among others, to the plaintiff in the [163] sum of $19,000, and to the defendants, Hayner & Co., in the sum of $16,262. On the day last named they sold, after inventory and by bill of sale, their entire stock in trade and a large amount of unsettled accounts, to the plaintiff for the sum of $48,000, which was at that time the fair value of the property. Of the purchase price, $19,000 was paid by the cancellation of plaintiff's claim against the vendors; and the balance was paid by its promissory notes, of different amounts and payable at different times. These notes were used by Webb & Co. in payment of their debts, no part of them being withheld from creditors. At the time of the sale the vendors were insolvent. That fact was recognized by them, and was known as well to plaintiff as to Hayner & Co., and to other creditors. By the sale of March 13, 1882, the vendee intended to obtain, and the vendors intended to give to it, a preference over all other creditors. Before the sale the plaintiff requested Webb & Co. to transfer to it only so much of their property as was necessary to discharge its claim. This was refused by Webb & Co., who, in view of the character of their stock, insisted upon selling nothing less than the whole of it, together with their unsettled accounts. Plaintiff would not have purchased at all if Webb & Co. had been able to secure them in any way. It made the purchase because there was no other mode of saving its claim. Immediately upon the sale being effected, Webb & Co. surrendered, and the plaintiff by its agent Spaulding took possession of the articles sold; and through him thereafter and until the before mentioned attachment was levied, conducted the business, exercising absolute control over the property. Within a day or two after taking possession, the plaintiff caused such an alteration in the sign of the establishment as showed that the business was being conducted by it as the successor of John A. Webb & Co. After the sale the members of that firm remained in the employment of plaintiff, as clerks or salesmen, at a fixed monthly compensation. This was in pursuance of an understanding with the plaintiff at the time of the sale; their knowledge of the business and their acquaintance with customers being re-[164] garded by it as important in the disposition of the property. Plaintiff also retained in its employment others who had been clerks for Webb & Co. While the latter thought they had been unduly pressed by Hayner & Co., and for that reason did not at the time of the sale feel as kindly towards them as towards other creditors, and intended by the sale to give a preference to other creditors over Hayner & Co. (of which fact plaintiff was informed at the time of its purchase), they had no purpose to hinder and delay Hayner & Co. in the collection of their debts, except as that result was involved in their giving preference to the plaintiff; nor had plaintiff any purpose, in the whole transaction, except by means of the purchase to secure its own debt. The evidence discloses a race of diligence between creditors, who knew the failing condition of their common debtors, and knew that the latter had the right to make a preference among them.

NOTE.—Sales; fraud; possession retained by vendor. See Brooks v. Marbury, 24 U. S. (11 Wheat.), 78, bk. 6, 433, note; Smith v. Acker, 23 Wend. 653, note in L. ed.

The defendants, in their answer, charge that the alleged purchase by plaintiff was pursuant to a combination and conspiracy between it and the firm of John A. Webb & Co., whereby a pretended sale was to be made with a secret reservation of an interest in the vendors beyond what was necessary to discharge plaintiff's claim against them; in other words, that there was a purpose and design on the part of the vendors and the vendee, to put the property of the debtors in such condition that plaintiff would be secured while Webb & Co. held at bay other creditors whom they did not intend to prefer, particularly, Hayner & Co., and thus hinder and delay them in the collection of their demands.

It is contended that the charge of combination and conspiracy was established by various declarations and statements of John A. Webb, and of Spaulding, the plaintiff's agent, made after the sale of the 13th of March, 1882. To the admission of these declarations and statements as evidence the plaintiff objected. Its objection was overruled, and exception was taken in proper form to the action of the court. The competency of that evidence is the principal question to be determined.

[165] We are of opinion that the court below erred in allowing the defendants to introduce proof of these declarations and statements made after the sale. The instruction to the jury upon this point was in these words: "That it is true, as contended by the plaintiff, that if the sale, when made, was not vitiated because of fraud, and the sale was one that passed the title to the plaintiff as against the creditors of Webb & Co., then no act or declaration of the Webbs or that of Spaulding, afterwards made, could affect plaintiff's right to have and hold the property. Evidence of what was said and done afterwards by the person in possession and in charge of the goods has been admitted, with a view to ascertain the true character of the sale when made, and can only be considered with reference thereto." The jury must have understood, from this language, that they were at liberty, in ascertaining the true character of the sale when made, to find that plaintiff participated in the fraud charged, if the statements of John A. Webb and of Spaulding after the sale justified that conclusion. But such is not the law.

Webb & Co. were not in possession, within the meaning of the rule announced in some cases that permits, in favor of creditors, proof of the declarations of a vendor of personal property, who is allowed, after sale, to control, manage and dispose of it just as he had before done. They were not, in any legal sense, in possession after March 13, 1882. The plaintiff was itself in actual possession, exercising by its agent full control. The vendors, it is true, entered plaintiff's service as soon as the sale was made and possession was surrendered; but only as clerks or salesmen, with no authority except such as employees of that character ordinarily exercise. What they might say, not under oath, to others, after possession was surrendered, as to the real nature of the sale, was wholly irrelevant. They were competent to testify under oath, and subject to cross examination, as to any facts immediately connected with the sale, of which they had knowledge; but their statements out of court, they not being parties to the issues to be tried, were mere hearsay. After the sale, their interest in the property was gone. Having become strangers to the title, their admissions are no more binding on the vendee than the admissions of others. It is against all principle that their declarations, made after they had parted with the title and surrendered possession, should be allowed to destroy the title of their vendee.

It is, however, insisted that Webb's declarations after the sale were admissible in support of the charge of combination or conspiracy to defraud the defendants, Hayner & Co., and other creditors. Without extending this opinion by a review of the adjudged cases in which there was proof of concert or collusion between vendor and vendee to defraud creditors, and in which the subsequent declarations of the vendor were offered in evidence against the vendee to prove the true character of the sale, it is sufficient to say that such declarations are not admissible against the vendee, unless the alleged common purpose to defraud is first established by independent evidence, and unless they have such relation to the execution of that purpose that they fairly constitute a part of the res gestæ. There was no such independent evidence in this case, and there is no foundation for the charge of a conspiracy between the vendors and the vendee to hinder creditors outside of certain statements which Webb is alleged to have made after his firm had parted with the title and surrendered possession.

It is argued that these subsequent declarations of Webb were competent for the purpose of contradicting him as a witness in behalf of the plaintiff, by showing that he had made statements out of court different from those made as a witness in behalf of the plaintiff. No foundation was laid for any such use of those declarations. Besides, if any such foundation had existed, the court should have instructed the jury that in determining, between the parties to the record, the true character of the sale, the subsequent declarations of Webb were competent, only as impeaching his credibility as a witness.

It is also contended that the declarations and admissions of Spaulding, the plaintiff's agent, in controlling and disposing of the property, were evidence against the plaintiff. But this position cannot be sustained. What Spaulding and the Webbs did, in and about the management of the property after the sale, could be proven if it served to explain the nature and extent of plaintiff's possession. It was for the jury to say whether there was a real change of possession and control. But nothing that Spaulding said, after the sale, to others, was competent upon the issue as to the character of the sale; that is, whether it was made in good faith, or with the intent on the part of Webb & Co. and the plaintiff to hinder and delay creditors. Spaulding was plaintiff's agent to control and manage the property. It was not within the scope of his agency to make admissions or declarations as to the circumstances under which, and the purpose for which, the plaintiff bought the property. Such admissions or declarations are only recitals of the details or circumstances of a past occurrence, and are not proof of the existence of the occurrence. They constitute, in their essence, hearsay evidence.

We are of opinion, upon the whole case, that the jury were misdirected as to the law of the case, by those portions of the charge which allowed them to consider as evidence the subsequent declarations or admissions of Webb and Spaulding, in respect to the true character or nature of the sale to plaintiff.

The judgment is reversed, with directions to set aside the verdict and award a new trial.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

R. W. MOWER, Plf. in Err., v. NATHAN FLETCHER AND JOHN D. BICKNELL.

SAME v. NATHAN FLETCHER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 380-386.)

Title to lieu school lands in California—preemption—confirmation.

1. If the proper officers of the United States approve a selection of lieu school lands, the school sections being in disputed territory outside the limits of an unsettled survey by the United States of a private claim, and issue the proper certificate thereof, and the purchaser under such a title enters into the possession of the land and improves, cultivates and holds it, no one by forcibly or surreptitiously getting into possession can make a preemption settlement which will defeat his title.

2. The Act of March 1, 1877, confirmed the title of the State of California to the lands in question; and such confirmation inured to the benefit of those holding under the State.

[Nos. 102, 103].

Argued Dec. 17, 18, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. W. J. Johnston, U. J. Baxter and Edwin Baxter, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. James K. Reddington, and M. D. Brainard, for defendants in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court: [381]

The federal question in each of these cases is the same, and it arises on the following facts: By the Act of March 3, 1853, 10 Stat. at L. 244, chap. 145, "to provide for the survey of the public lands in California, the granting of preemptions therein, and for other purposes," sections 16 and 36 of the public lands in each township, surveyed or unsurveyed, were granted to the State "for the purposes of public schools." By section 7 it was provided that if section 16 or section 36 in any township should be taken by a private claim other lands might be selected in lieu by the proper authorities of the State. A plat of the survey of township 2 south, range 13 west, San Bernardino meridian, was filed in the United States land-office at San Francisco, April 22, 1868, and on the same day the State's locating agent selected S. ½ N. W. ¼ and N. ½ S. W. ¼, sec. 32, in that township, in lieu of S. E. ¼ sec. 36, T. 4 S., R. 4 W., same meridian, "claimed to be within a Mexican or Spanish grant." In the case to which Fletcher alone is defendant in error it is found as a fact "that at the time of making said application and selection the S. E. ¼ of sec. 36 * * * was and has been ever since and is now in place, and is the property of the State of California, and has never been under the claim of any confirmed and finally surveyed Mexican or Spanish grant." In the other case there is no finding on this subject, but it is found "that at the time of said selection and location the owners of the Rancho Sausal Redondo claimed that said (selected) lands were within the limits of said rancho." [382] According to the findings in the last case the dispute between the United States and the claimants of the rancho seems to have continued until about March 22, 1875, when a survey was finally approved that excluded the selected lands from the grant, and a patent was issued according to this survey. The lieu selection as made by the agent was duly certified by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office and the Secretary of the Interior to the State, November 23, 1871, and the land selected was patented by the State to Elmore W. Squiers, October 20, 1875, who had bought from the State a long time before. The title thus acquired by Squiers afterwards passed to the defendant in error Fletcher, who, on the 20th December, 1875, entered into a contract with Mower, the plaintiff in error, for the sale of the W. ½ of the S. W. ¼ of the N. W. ¼, 20 acres, for $1,000, of which $500 was paid in hand, and for the balance Mower gave his note payable eighteen months after date, with interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month, taking back from Fletcher an agreement for a conveyance of the land on payment of the note. Under this contract Mower took possession of the land he bought, and on the 12th of March, 1876, made and filed with the register of the proper land-office a declaratory statement of his intention to claim under the preemption laws the whole of the S. ½ N. W. ¼ and N. ½ S. W. ¼ of the section including the twenty acres he had bought from Fletcher. On the 12th of December, 1876, he tendered to the register and receiver of the proper land-office proof of his settlement, improvements, and general compliance with the requirements of the preemption laws, and also tendered the price and all legal fees and commissions, and requested to be allowed to enter the lands as a preemptioner. This was refused by the register and receiver, and he thereupon appealed to the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, where the case is now pending undetermined. Mower moved upon the lands outside of the twenty acres in January, 1877. In doing so he took possession of a dwelling-house erected by Squiers. The lands had all been enclosed, and at the time Mower moved on to them the north eighty acres were enclosed on three sides, and there [383] were upon the tract a bearing orchard of about fifteen hundred trees, fifteen years old, and a dwelling-house, corrals, and out houses, all put there by Squiers.

On the first of March, 1877, Congress passed an Act "relating to indemnity school selections in the State of California," 19 Stat. at L. 267, chap. 81. Section 2 of that Act is as follows:

"Sec. 2. That where indemnity school selections have been made and certified to said State, and said selection shall fail by reason of the land, in lieu of which they were taken, not being included within such final survey of a Mexican grant, or are otherwise defective or invalid, the same are hereby confirmed, and the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, in lieu of which the selection was made, shall, upon being excluded from such final survey, be disposed of as other public lands of the United States; Provided, That if there be no such sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, and the land certified therefor shall be held by an innocent purchaser for a valuable consideration, such purchaser shall be allowed to prove such facts before the proper land-office, and shall be allowed to purchase the same at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, not to exceed 320 acres for any one person; Provided, That if such person shall neglect or refuse, after knowledge of such facts, to furnish such proof and make payment for such land, it shall be subject to the general land laws of the United States.

Section 3 declares that the confirmation shall not extend to lands settled upon under the homestead or preemption laws, "Provided, That such settlement was made in good faith upon lands not occupied by the settlement or improvement of any other person, and prior to the date of certification of said lands to the State of California by the Department of the Interior."

Mower having neglected to pay his note when it fell due, Fletcher, on the 2d of August, 1877, after tendering a deed for the land, brought suit for the recovery of the money. Mower answered, setting up a failure of title to the land and therefore a want of consideration for the note. The supreme court held that Fletcher had good title, and gave judgment for the amount of the note and interest. To reverse that judgment the writ of error in the suit of [384] Mower v. Fletcher was brought.

On the 24th of April, 1879, Fletcher and Bicknell, who held title under the patent to Squiers, brought suit to recover possession and quiet their title to the part of the lands upon which Mower had entered, not included in the twenty acres sold by Fletcher to him. To this Mower set up his preemption claim as a defense, and insisted that the title under the selection by the State was invalid. The supreme court decided that Mower acquired no right to the possession by his atttempt at a preemption settlement, and gave judgment accordingly. To reverse that judgment the writ of error in Mower v. Fletcher & Bicknell was brought.

All questions of mere irregularity in the selection of lieu lands by the State, and in the grant by the State to Squiers, were conclusively settled, so far as the parties to this suit are concerned, by the issue to the State of the lists, certified by the Commissioner of the Land-Office and the Secretary of the Interior, and by the patent from the State to Squiers. Frasher v. O'Connor, 115 U. S. 102 [ante, 311]. By an Act of August 3, 1854, 10 Stat. at L. 346, chap. 201, it was provided that where a law granting lands to the States or Territories does not convey the fee-simple title, "lists of such lands * * * certified by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, under the seal of his office, either as originals, or copies of the originals or records, shall be regarded as conveying the fee simple of all the lands embraced in such lists that are of the character contemplated by such Act of Congress, and intended to be granted thereby but where lands embraced in such lists are not of the character embraced by such Acts of Congress, and are not intended to be granted thereby, said lists, so far as these lands are concerned, shall be perfectly null and void, and no right, title, claim or interest shall be conveyed thereby." This statute is now section 2449 of the Revised Statutes.

In the argument for the plaintiff in error it was contended that this S. E. ¼ of section 36 was not actually within the limits of any Mexican claim when the lieu selection was made and that consequently the certified list conveyed no title.

It is found as a fact in the case of Mower v. Fletcher that when the selection was made the S. E. ¼, section 36, "was, and has been ever since, in place, and is the property of the State of California, and has never been under the claim of any confirmed and finally surveyed Mexican or Spanish grant." This is not inconsistent with the fact that when the selection was made the land was within the limits of an unconfirmed Mexican claim, the boundaries of which had not been fixed by a final survey. The finding that the S. E. ¼ of section 36 is the property of the State is not, under the circumstances, the equivalent of a finding that it was the undisputed property of the State when the lieu selection was made. Such being the case we are at liberty to presume it was as represented, within the claim of a Mexican grant when the selection was made and certified. As in the case of Mower v. Fletcher & Bicknell there is no finding on the subject, the same presumption arises there.

In Frasher v. O'Connor it was decided that the survey made in 1868 of the Sausal Ranch Redondo was sufficient to authorize the State to select, under its various grants, lands outside of the then surveyed boundaries, subject, of course, to a defeat of title if in the end the survey as made should be set aside and the boundaries of the grant finally extended so as to in clude the selections. This was because by section 8 of the Act of July 23, 1866, 14 Stat. at L. 220, chap. 229, it was provided that "all land not included in such grant as so set off shall be subject to the general laws of the United States." As the survey finally made fixed the boundaries so as to exclude the selected lands, the title of the State related back to the selection, and this inured to the benefit of Squiers under his patent from the State.

The question still remains, however, whether, if school selections are found in disputed territory outside the limits of an unsettled survey by the United States, of a private claim, the State must wait until the boundaries are finally fixed before it can get its lieu lands. Without determining whether, if lieu lands are selected and certified under such circumstances, the United States can reassert title when it is finally ascertained that the school sections were not covered by the claim, we have no hesitation in saying that if the proper officers of the United States approve such a selection and issue the proper certified lists, and a purchaser under such a title enters into the possession of the land and improves, cultivates, and holds it, no one by forcibly or surreptitiously getting into possession can make a preemption settlement which will defeat his title. Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 732]. As was said in that case, p. 519, [734] "The generosity by which Congress gave the settler the right of preemption was not intended to give him the benefit of another man's labor and authorize him to turn that man or his family out of his home. It did not propose to give its bounty to settlements obtained by violence at the expense of others. The right to make a settlement was to be exercised on unsettled land; to make improvements on unimproved land. To erect a dwelling house did not mean to seize some other man's dwelling."

This disposes of the claim of preemption, and that being out of the way it is clear that the Act of March 1, 1877, confirmed the State's title and made that of Fletcher good when the note of Mower to him fell due, and when he was bound to convey under his contract.

The judgment in each of the cases is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JOHN C. WEBB, Admr. of AMANDA A. STERLING, Deceased, ET AL., Appts.,

v.

HENRY BARNWALL, ET AL., Assignees in Bankruptcy of CRAWFORD, WALSH, SMITH AND COMPANY as Partners, and of ROBERT W. SMITH ET AL., as Individuals.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 193-197.)

Statute of Limitations—Bankruptcy Act—practice.

1. A bill in equity to enjoin a judgment obtained in an action at law on a mere legal title is a continuation of that suit.

2. Such a bill against an assignee in bankruptcy may be filed within the time limited by section 5057, R. S., after the complainant has been evicted or his title held insufficient, where he was in possession under what he supposed to be a good title.

[No. 99.]

Argued Dec. 17, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Middle District of Alabama.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Wm. E. Earle and H. A. Herbert, for appellants.

Messrs. D. S. Troy and H. C. Tompkins, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

The bill of complaint brought by Amanda Sterling and her four sons against Barnwall and Gaynor, as assignees in bankruptcy, was dismissed on demurrer, solely, as appears from the opinion of the circuit judge, because the suit was barred by the limitation of suits by or against assignees in bankruptcy found in section 5057 of the Revised Statutes, to wit: [193]

"No suit, either at law or in equity, shall be maintainable in any court, between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest, touching any property or rights of property transferable to or vested in such assignee, unless brought within two years from the time when the cause of action accrued for or against such assignee."

The bill sets out that on the 5th day of February, 1873, Robert W. Smith was the owner of certain real estate in the Town of Selma, in the bill fully described; and on that day he and his wife Sarah conveyed the same to Cary W. Butt in trust for the use and benefit of said Robert W. Smith and Charles Walsh; that afterwards said Walsh and Smith, being indebted to Edwin A. Glover in the sum of $20,000, caused the trustee Butt to convey this real estate, in which they had the sole beneficial interest, to said Glover, who received the same in satisfaction of the debt August 31, 1873; that Glover thereupon entered into possession of said property, and that he and his devisees have retained such possession ever since; that, by the will of Glover, who died in 1874, the real estate in question was devised to Amanda Sterling and her sons, the complainants.

The bill then alleges that Walsh and Smith were members of a copartnership with others, under the name of Walsh, Smith & Co., which owed the debt to Glover already mentioned as the consideration of the conveyance to him by Butt, the trustee; that said partnership and the individual members thereof, including Walsh and Smith, were declared bankrupts by the proper court on June 12, 1874, and that Henry W. Barnwall and William E. Gaynor were appointed assignees in said proceeding, and all the estate, both real and personal, of said bankrupts, was by the register duly assigned to them. The bill proceeds to show that these assignees instituted an action of ejectment against complainants, who were in possession of the land under the will of Glover, to recover that possession. This suit was begun in the District Court of the United States for the Middle District of Alabama in October, 1876. A judgment was rendered against complainants, which was affirmed on appeal to the cir- [194]

cuit court, December 19, 1877. Complainants allege that the plaintiffs in that suit recovered, on the ground that the legal title, which controls in a court of law, never was in Butt, the trustee, but by the Statute of Uses vested immediately in the said Walsh and Smith.

The bill then alleges that while the complainants may not have had the legal title, and so could not successfully defend the action at law, they have a perfect and just title in equity which, in this suit, they ask the court to protect. They, therefore, pray for a decree to compel defendants to convey to them the strict legal title which they hold, and for an injunction against them in regard to the judgment, which they ask may be perpetual.

This bill was filed August 1, 1881, within fifteen months after final judgment in the action of ejectment.

[196] The circuit court, treating the bill as an original bill and as the commencement of a new and independent suit, held that the period of limitation of such suits against the assignees began to run at the date of their appointment in 1874. The two years had, therefore, long been passed and the claim was barred.

But if we assume, as appellants argue, that the occasion for a suit in equity did not arise until the final judgment at law, then the bill in this case was in time.

We think the latter is the sound rule. Complainants were in possession under what they supposed to be a good title, until they were evicted or their title held to be insufficient; they had no occasion to seek to establish their title by a suit in equity, and such a suit they brought within the time of the statute after they ascertained that it was necessary to protect their possession.

But if this were not so clear, it must be held in the courts of the United States, under previous decisions of this court, that the present bill in equity to enjoin the judgment at law, obtained on the mere legal title, while the equity is in the other party, is a continuation of that suit, and therefore the proceeding was commenced when the action of ejectment was brought.

In the case of Simms v. Guthrie, 9 Cranch, 19 [13 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 642], Simms had obtained judgment in an action of ejectment in the circuit court on a patent from the State of Virginia against Guthrie. Thereupon Guthrie filed his bill in chancery in the same court setting up a superior equitable title by a prior entry to that on which Simms' patent had issued, and asking an injunction and a decree for the legal title. It was urged as an objection to this bill that there were necessary parties who could not be made defendants in the circuit court. But this court said that for omitting to bring in these parties an original bill might be dismissed. That, however, was a bill to enjoin a judgment in the circuit court, and the bill must be [197] brought in the same court, and the court would dispense with the parties who could not be brought in. In Dunn v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 1 [33 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 845], where an equitable title was set up by bill in chancery against a judgment at law recovered in a circuit court of the United States, the court said: "The injunction bill is not considered an original bill between the same parties as at law." It also said if Graham, the successful party in the judgment at law, had lived, the court might have issued an injunction to his judgment at law without a personal service of process except on his attorney, and it is now the settled practice to order such substituted service on the attorney when the plaintiff in the judgment does not reside within the jurisdiction of the court.

In the case of Dunlap v. Stetson, 4 Mason, 549, Mr. Justice Story said: "I believe the general, if not the universal practice has been to consider bills of injunction upon judgments in the courts of the United States, not as original but auxiliary and dependent suits, and properly sustainable in that court which gave the original judgment, and has it completely under control." This language is cited with approval and the point illustrated in the case of Jones v. Andrews, 10 Wall. 327 [77 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 935], and in Christmas v. Russell, 14 Wall. 69 [81 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 762].

The case before us comes precisely within the principle of these decisions.

The bill in chancery is a continuation of the litigation commenced by the action at law, and its object is to enjoin the judgment in that suit and to correct its injustice by an equity proceeding in the same court.

The bar of the statute as to this relief cannot become perfect until two years of inaction have justified a plea of that kind.

The decree of the Circuit Court is therefore reversed and the case remanded to that court, with directions to overrule the demurrer, and for such further proceedings as to equity belongs.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

JOSEPH F. FIELD, Appt.,

v.

OLIVER DE COMEAU ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 187-190.)

Patent law—construction.

Letters patent, No. 155077, for an improvement in glove fastenings, is not infringed by a spring fastening which acts in a different manner; said patent not being for a combination of springs in every form for closing the wrists of gloves.

[No. 84.]

Submitted Dec. 7, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Eugene N. Elliot, for appellant.

No counsel appeared for appellees.

Mr. Justice Matthews delivered the opinion of the court:

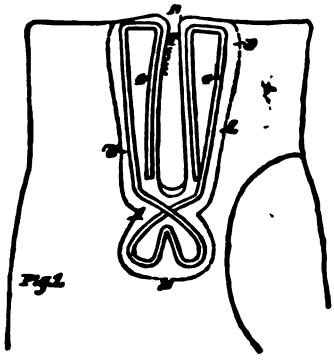
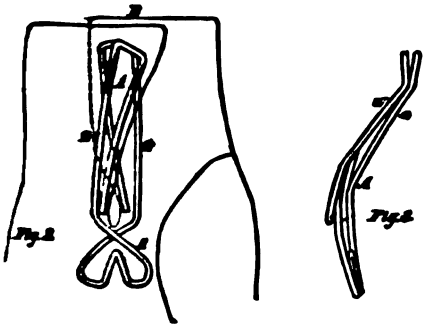
The appellant, who was complainant below, filed his bill in equity to restrain an alleged infringement by the appellees of letters patent No. 155077, for an improvement in glove fastenings issued to him September 15, 1874.

The bill was dismissed at the hearing on the ground that the defendants had not infringed

The material part of the specification forming part of the letters patent is as follows:

"The object of my invention is to cause a glove to fit closely to the hand and wrist of the wearer without the use of buttons or other fastenings; and I attain this object by extending a spring, A, entirely around the split portion B of the glove, in the manner plainly shown in Figure 1 of the accompanying drawing, so that when released the ends a a of the said spring shall overlap, as shown in Figure 2, and thus close the glove upon the wrist.





The spring is entirely concealed within the material of the glove, and may be secured to the latter in any suitable manner; but I prefer to simply stitch it in place, as indicated by the dotted lines x in Figure 1.

The spring may also be variously shaped; but I prefer to construct it of a single piece of wire, bent to the form shown, as I have ascertained by experiment that a spring of this form is most suitable for the purpose, while it possesses the further advantage of presenting no sharp or abrupt ends, which would be apt to force their way through the material of the glove.

The edge view, Figure 3, shows the method of bending the spring to conform to the shape of the hand of the wearer of the glove.

I am aware that springs have been combined with the wristlets of gloves, but they have always extended entirely around the latter, thus rendering it impossible to fold the glove, which was consequently clumsy and inconvenient to carry in the pocket. This objection, it will be evident, is entirely overcome by my invention.

I claim:

The combination, substantially as described, of a spring, A, with the split portion, B, of a glove, for the purpose specified."

The drawings referred to are annexed.

Judge Wheeler holding the circuit court, in deciding the case, stated the grounds of his action in dismissing the bill, in an opinion contained in the transcript, as follows:

"The orator has a patent, No. 155,077, dated September 15, 1874, for an improvement in glove fastenings, consisting of the combination of a spring inserted in the material of the glove, and extending around the edges of the slit, which permits drawing the wrist of the glove over the hand, and adjusted so as to spring open by the insertion of the hand and to close automatically and overlap itself, and cause the edges of the slit to overlap each other when the glove is on. The defendants deny infringement. They make and sell for use springs for gloves to be inserted into the material, and with arms extending along each edge of the slit, jointed at the apex, working together like the blade and handle of a jack-knife. The only question is, whether the use of such springs is an infringement. The plaintiff stated in the specification of his patent that springs had been combined before with the wrists of gloves, but of a different form. So his patent is not and could not be maintained as a patent for the combination of springs in every form with the wrists of gloves to close them. It proposes to be and is a patent of his style of spring combined with the wrists of gloves for that purpose. The question is, whether the defendants' spring is substantially like his. His is a spring throughout, and pulls constantly upon the parts of the material until they come together and overlap. The defendants' has stiff arms, and pulls the parts together only when closed far enough to have the spring on one arm operate in the opposite direction upon the cam-shaped end of the other, and it pulls the edges apart until the arms are at right angles to each other when opened far enough to cause the spring to act the other way on the cam. When so opened it will not close itself as the orator's will, but has as much tendency to remain open as it has to remain closed after being closed. It is said by an expert called by the orator that if the edge of the cam, which throws the arms apart, was removed, the spring would become more like the orator's in its operation; but he probably failed to notice that the spring operates on the same edge of the cam, although on different sides of its pivot, both in opening and closing the spring; and that if this edge was removed the spring would not move arms together or either way at all. The form of the defendants' spring is different from the orator's; its mode of operation is different, and the result of its operation is somewhat different. It cannot be said to be the same as the orator's, or to be substantially like the orator's. Each got the idea of closing the wrists of gloves by means of springs from others; the orator carries out the idea in his mode and the defendants in theirs, and as neither has control of anything but the particular mode, neither can justly say that the other uses his mode." [190]

For these reasons, which we cannot restate in a more satisfactory manner, the decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[198] JOHN DOE, ex dem. State of ALABAMA and ex dem. JOHN SWANN and JOHN A. BILLUPS, Trustees, etc., Plff. in Err.

v.

VANCE C. LARMORE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 198-200.)

Public lands—railroad grants—statute construed as extension of time—rights of grantees.

1. The Act of April 10, 1869, to renew certain grants of lands to the State of Alabama, previously granted by the Act of June 3, 1856, to aid a certain railroad company, is not to be construed as making a new grant but is to be treated as an extension of the time named in the original grant for the completion of the road.

2. The completion of the road within the time fixed by the new Act perfected the title of the company under the original grant; and this title inured to the benefit of its prior grantees.

[No. 98.]

Submitted Dec. 17, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Samuel F. Rice, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John T. Morgan, for defendant in error.

[198] Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court;

This case cannot be distinguished in principle from St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company v. McGee, 115 U. S. 469 [ante, 446], decided at the present Term. The suit was ejectment to recover the possession of certain tracts of land granted June 3, 1856, by an Act of Congress to the State of Alabama to aid in building a railroad "from Gadsden to connect with the Georgia and Tennessee and Tennessee line of railroad through Chattanooga, Wills, and Lookout Valleys." 11 Stat. at L. 17, chap. 41. Sections 3 and 4 of this Act are identical with sections 4 and 5 of the Act involved in McGee's Case; and they provided that if the road was not completed in ten years all unsold land should revert to the United States. On the 30th of January, 1858, the Legislature of Alabama by a joint resolution transferred this grant to the Wills' Valley Railroad Company, "to be used and applied by said company upon the terms, conditions, and under restrictions in said Act of Congress contained." Sess. Laws Ala. 1857-8, p. 431.

[199] On the 29th of June, 1860, the lands involved in this suit were certified to the State by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office under the grant; and on the 20th of February, 1861, they were sold by the company to Larmore, the defendant, and certain other persons, who paid the purchase money and entered into possession. The proceeds of the sale were used in building the road, and, on the 7th of June, 1866, the company conveyed the lands in fee simple to the purchasers "against the claim and title of the said Wills' Valley Railroad Company, and of any person or persons claiming under said company." The other grantees named in the deed have since conveyed all their interest to Larmore, who is now in possession. The road was not completed within ten years after the passage of the Act of Congress; and on the 10th of April, 1869, another Act was passed, entitled "An Act to Renew Certain Grants of Land to the State of Alabama" (16 Stat. at L. 45, chap. 24), by which this grant was revived and renewed.

The name of the Wills' Valley Railroad Company was changed to Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad Company in 1868; and on the second of March, 1870, the company under that name obtained from the State a loan of state bonds to aid in the completion of its road. The road was afterwards finished so as to perfect title under the original grant. On the 8th of February, 1877, the State executed a deed to John A. Billups and John Swann, Trustees, which purported to convey the lands in dispute, under a compromise agreement with the railroad company, to protect the interests of the holders of the state bonds which had been loaned to the company in 1870.

The claim of the plaintiff is, that as the lands in question were not fully earned when the sale was made under which Larmore holds title, and the road was not completed within the ten years fixed by the Act of 1856, these lands, as well as those not sold at the end of the ten years, reverted at the end of that time to the United States and passed again to the State under the Act of 1869, which is to be construed as a new grant. We held otherwise in McGee's Case; and under that ruling the Act of 1869 is to be treated as an extension of the time named in the original Act for the completion of the road. As between the company and Larmore the title passed under the deed of 1866, which was executed to give effect to the sale in 1861. The completion of the road within the time fixed by the new Act perfected the title of the company under the original grant, and this title inured at once to the benefit of Larmore.

As the judgment below sustained Larmore's title and dismissed the suit, it was right; and it is consequently affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

HENRY C. BROWN, Appt.,

v.

JAMES B. GRANT, Governor, WILLIAM H. MEYERS, Lieutenant-Governor, MELVIN EDWARDS, Secretary of STATE, AND D. F. URMY, Attorney-General of the STATE OF COLORADO, ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 207-213.)

Admission of State—property of Territory passes—capitol site—jurisdiction.

1. Unless otherwise declared by Congress, the title of every species of property owned by a Territory passes to the State upon its admission to the Union.

1. Lands conveyed to a Territory "its successors and assigns forever," and duly accepted as the site for its capitol, pass to the State when admitted, although the Territory may not have occupied them, there being no condition requiring the erection of buildings thereon within any specified time.

2. The question whether the grantor has been deprived of his property without due process of law is within the jurisdiction of this court.

[No. 588.]

Argued Dec. 14, 15, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court. See, also, the report of the opinion of this court dismissing a writ of error to the Supreme Court of Colorado in a suit between these parties involving the subject matter of this suit. Brown v. Colorado, Nr. 27, 132; 5 Colo. 496.

Messrs. James H. Brown, G. C. Bartels and J. H. Blood, for appellant.

Messrs. Thornton H. Thomas and Theodore H. Thomas, Atty-Gen. of Colorado, for appellees.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the final decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado, dismissing, upon demurrer to the bill, a suit in equity instituted in that court by Henry C. Brown against James B. Grant, Governor, William H. Meyers, Lieutenant-Governor, Melvin Edwards, Secretary of State, and D. F. Urmy, Attorney-General of the State of Colorado, and against certain other persons constituting a board of managers for the erection of the capitol building for that State.

The case made by the bill is substantially as follows:

By the third section of an Act of the Council and House of Representatives of the Territory of Colorado, entitled "An Act to Locate the Seat of Government of the Territory of Colorado," approved December 9, 1867, it was, among other things, provided that

"Sec. 3. The persons appointed, as aforesaid, in section 2 of this Act, shall, within sixty days after the date of their appointment, proceed to select a site for the capitol of said Territory, within the said City of Denver, which site shall contain not less than ten acres of land; and if the site so selected shall be conveyed to the Territory of Colorado by the person or persons holding the title thereto, without charge to said Territory, and so as to vest the title to the same, absolutely and in fee simple, in said Territory, the site so selected shall be and remain the property of said Territory, for the purpose of erecting a capitol and other public buildings thereon."

On the 11th of January, 1868, the plaintiff, by deed duly acknowledged, conveyed to the Territory a tract of ten acres of land, part of a larger tract owned by him in the immediate vicinity of Denver. The consideration is stated to be $1,000 paid to the grantor by the Territory, but the land was, in fact, donated by him in the belief that the erection thereon of the capitol and other public buildings would enhance the value of his adjoining lands. The deed contains the following recitals:

"The said land being so conveyed to said Territory in pursuance of the Act entitled 'An Act to Locate the Seat of Government of the Territory of Colorado, approved the 9th day of December, A. D. 1867,' so as to vest the title to the same absolutely and in fee simple in said Territory, for the purpose of erecting a capitol and other public buildings thereon only; to have and to hold the same, together with all and singular the appurtenances and privileges thereunto belonging or in anywise thereunto appertaining; and all the estate, right, title, interest and claim whatever of the said party of the first part, either in law or equity, to the only proper use, benefit and behoof of the said party of the second part, its successors and assigns forever.

And the said party of the first part, the aforesaid parcel of land unto the said party of the second part, its successors and assigns, against the claim or claims of all and every person whatsoever, he, the said Henry C. Brown, does and will warrant and forever defend by these presents."

Contemporaneously with the execution of the deed, the Legislative Assembly of the Territory adopted a memorial to Congress, asking, for reasons therein stated, a liberal appropriation for the erection of suitable capitol buildings for the use of the Territory. By an Act of the Territorial Legislature, approved February 9, 1872, it was directed that proposals be received for the erection of a capitol building, and that it "be erected upon the ground heretofore donated to the Territory for that purpose by Henry C. Brown." On the same day another memorial to Congress was adopted, asking an appropriation of $100,000, collected from internal revenue taxes within the Territory, for the purpose of assisting in the erection of a capitol building at the seat of government of the Territory. Thereafter on 18th of February, 1874, another Act was passed providing for the appointment of capitol commissioners, with authority to have the custody of and expend in the improvement of the capitol grounds, and in the erection of capitol buildings thereon, money appropriated or donated for that purpose; to sell all lands and lots donated for capitol purposes, except capitol site, the money so raised to be used in the erection of a capitol building or buildings, to be completed, paid for and delivered to the Territory on or before January 1, 1876.

[209]

The bill alleges that the Territory of Colorado did on or about the first day of August, 1876, "depart this life," and on the same day, "by proclamation of U. S. Grant, the then President of the United States of America, the State of Colorado was admitted into the Union," the "said Territory never having during its life occupied or made use of said tract of land donated to it by your orator, either for the purpose of erecting capitol or other public buildings thereon, or for any other purpose whatsoever."

The Constitution adopted by the people of Colorado under the Enabling Act of Congress provided that the General Assembly should not change or locate the seat of government of the State, but at its first session, subsequent to the year 1880, should submit the question of its permanent location to the popular vote at a general election, until which vote no expenditure for capitol buildings should be made. The same Constitution provided "that all property, real and personal, belonging to the Territory of Colorado at the adoption of this Constitution shall be vested in and become the property of the State of Colorado."

On the 9th of May, 1879, the plaintiff took possession of the ten acre tract and constructed around it a substantial board fence. At the [210] same time he executed and put on record a deed revoking and annulling his conveyance of 1868. The reason assigned in that deed for its execution is, that "neither the said Territory nor its successor, the State of Colorado, has ever accepted the said conveyance or located or erected a capitol or other public buildings on said tract of land as in and by said deed (of 1868) provided."

The bill alleges that plaintiff has been in complete possession of said land ever since May 9, 1879; that, at the general election, in 1881, the seat of government was located, by a popular vote, at Denver; and that her officers of state and board of managers for the erection of state capitol buildings at Denver are about to take and, unless restrained, will take possession of said ten acre tract for the purpose of erecting said buildings thereon.

He prays that they be enjoined from disturbing his possession of the premises until he shall receive just compensation therefor.

A demurrer to the bill having been sustained, upon the ground that it did not set forth a cause of action, the suit was dismissed.

As all the parties to this suit are cititzens of the State of Colorado the circuit court was without jurisdiction, unless the suit is one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States. It is not clear upon what precise ground the plaintiff contends that the suit belongs to that class. We suppose his claim to be that when the Territory became a State, the property he had given to the former became his again, and that the provision in the Constitution of the State, "that all property, real and per- [211] sonal, belonging to the Territory of Colorado" at the adoption of that instrument "shall be vested in and become the property of the State of Colorado," deprived him of his property without due process of law; that is, it was thereby taken from him, for public use, without just compensation being first made, or in some legal mode secured, to him. Assuming that the suit, upon that basis, arises under the Constitution of the United States, it is difficult to conceive of one in which the question has merit.

Before the execution of the deed of January 11, 1868, the Territorial Legislature had located the seat of government at Denver. It was there when the appellant's gift was made. The gift had direct reference to the Territorial enactment authorizing commissioners to accept a conveyance of not less than ten acres of land, without charge to the Territory, and so as to vest in it an absolute fee-simple title. The title was so conveyed by Brown to the Territory, "its successors and assigns forever," for "the purpose of erecting a capitol and other public buildings thereon only." The deed was duly accepted; for, if the Act under the authority of which the land was obtained, and the execution and registration of the deed, are not complete proof of such acceptance, surely the Act of 1872, requiring the capitol building to be erected "upon the ground (t)heretofore donated to the Territory for that purpose by Henry C. Brown," is ample evidence of that fact. It is idle to say that the Territory never accepted the conveyance. Upon what legal ground, then, can the appellant defend his resumption of possession in 1879? His conveyance contained no condition under which he could demand the erection of a capitol building within any specified time, in default of which the property would revert to him. The Territorial Legislature wisely invested commissioners with authority to accept a conveyance of an absolute fee-simple title, and reserved to itself the determination of all questions concerning the time within which the proposed building should be erected. And it cannot be said, in view of the allegations of the bill, that the Territory did not move as rapidly in creating indebtedness for that purpose as the public necessities permitted or the public interests required. If it were conceded that the removal of the seat of government from Denver, or the abandonment of this land as the site of capitol buildings, would, under all the circumstances, entitle Brown to claim the property, or compensation therefor, it is sufficient to say that no such state of facts now exists.

But the appellant contends that he made this gift upon the implied condition that the Territory, not the State, should erect the public buildings in question. Apart from the fact that the terms of the deed are inconsistent with such a condition, the supposition cannot be indulged for a moment that the plaintiff did not look forward to the time when the Territory would become one of the States of the Union; an event which would necessarily tend to accomplish the very object that he had, as he avows, in making the donation, viz.: to increase the value of other lands owned by him, of which the ten acres in question formed a part. The reference in the deeds of 1868 and 1879 to the successors of the Territory is persuasive evidence of the fact that the plaintiff contemplated the organization of its people as a State. Now that the State proposes to construct capitol buildings on the land donated for that very purpose, the plaintiff asks the intervention of a court of equity to prevent her agents from entering upon the premises until he receives compensation for what was in law a donation to the public as an organized body, whether under a territorial government or as a State. He is not entitled to such aid.

The suggestion, that the clause of the Constitution providing that the State is the owner of all the property which the Territory held upon its becoming a State deprived him of his property, is not entitled to serious consideration. Unless otherwise declared by Congress, the title to every species of property owned by a Territory passes to the State upon its admission into the Union. The provision in the State Constitution to that effect was only declaratory of what was the law.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U

JOSEPH A. SMITH, Appt. and Plf. in Err.,

v.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY, Secretary of the Navy, ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 167-186.)

Writ of prohibition to naval court-martial—jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia—discretion—jurisdiction of this court—parties—practice—jurisdiction of naval court-martial, of naval officer serving as a chief of bureau and paymaster-general.

1. A final judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on a petition for a writ of prohibition to the Secretary of the Navy, and a court-martial convened by his order to try a public officer for offenses punishable with dismissal, may be reviewed by this court, if the salary of which such officer might thereby be deprived exceeds $2,000.

2. Whether the court below should grant or refuse a writ of prohibition is not a matter of discretion where the court whose action is sought to be prohibited is clearly without jurisdiction, and the defendant objected to its jurisdiction at the outset and is without other remedy; and a refusal to grant it, where all the proceedings appear of record, may be reviewed on error by this court.

3. If an officer of the navy, while serving by appointment of the President as chief of a bureau and paymaster-general in the navy department, makes contracts or payments in violation of law, to promote the interests of contractors, he may lawfully be tried and convicted of scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals and to the dishonor of the naval service, by a court-martial composed of naval officers; and a writ of prohibition will not issue to prevent such trial and conviction.

4. Where a court-martial has jurisdiction of the subject matter of the principal charge, the addition of another charge, varying in form but for the same or similar acts, affords no ground for issuing a writ of prohibition.

5. A naval court-martial may, at any time before its dissolution by the Secretary of the Navy, be recovened by him to reconsider its proceedings.

6. A writ of prohibition cannot be made to serve the purpose of a writ of error, or certiorari.

7. Upon an application for a writ of prohibition to a naval court-martial, the Secretary of the Navy should not be joined as a party defendant.

8. It seems that proceedings upon a petition for a writ of prohibition must be considered as on the common-law side of a court having both common-law and equity powers.

9. Whether the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has power in any case to issue a writ of prohibition to a court-martial is not decided.

[No. 1145.]

Argued Dec. 11, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

APPEAL from and in error to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Messrs. Jeff. Chandler and Eppa Hunton, for appellant and plaintiff in error.

Mr. William A. Maury, Asst. Atty-Gen., for appellees and defendants in error.

Mr Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a petition, filed September 21, 1885, praying the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to issue a writ of prohibition to the Secretary of the Navy, and to a general court-martial of naval officers convened by his order of June 25, 1885, to try the petitioner, a pay inspector in the navy, and, by appointment of the President, confirmed by the Senate of the date of June 27, 1882, "Chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing and Paymaster-General in the Department of the Navy, with the relative rank of Commodore," upon certain charges and specifications, a copy of which was made part of the petition.

The first of those charges was "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals," under which were fourteen specifications, alleging that "the said Joseph A. Smith, then being a pay inspector in the United States Navy, and having been theretofore, as such officer of the navy, duly appointed Chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, with the title of Paymaster-General in the Department of the Navy," and being responsible for the proper and reputable administration thereof, and it being his duty to protect the interests of the government in the making of contracts for supplies for the navy, did various acts which [169] were set forth in different forms and with much detail, but the substance of which was that he enlarged existing contracts so as to include at the contract price additional supplies not required by the necessities of the service, without consulting the Secretary of the Navy or the sureties on the contractor's bond or giving any opportunity for competition, and when the market was falling extended the time of delivery of supplies contracted for, thereby necessitating the acceptance of supplies of an inferior quality; falsified a copy of a contract, and thereby enabled the contractor to obtain payment at a place other than that required by the contract; and by directions and instructions to pay officers caused to be paid claims which had been refused by other pay officers and which, as he knew, had been declared illegal by the accounting officials of the Treasury; and by so causing pay officers to pay these claims, and to pay them out of appropriations for years other than those in which the contracts were made, greatly embarrassed those officers in the performance of their duties; and thereby willfully and knowingly, in disregard of his duties and responsibilities as chief of bureau, subordinated the interests of the government to those of the contractors, in violation of law and "to the great scandal and disgrace of the service and the injury of the United States."

The second charge was "culpable inefficiency in the performance of duty," under which were four specifications, alleging that he failed in his duty in not obliging contractors to comply with the terms of their contracts, and in allowing deliveries to be made after the time for delivery had expired; and also in purchasing more supplies than the current needs of the navy required, and in purchasing unfit supplies, and in not affording due opportunity for competition.

In the application for a writ of prohibition, the petitioner alleged that immediately upon the organization of the court-martial he objected that it had no jurisdiction of him or of the charges and specifications against him, or of the subject-matter contained in them, or any [170] part thereof; but the court-martial overruled all his objections to its jurisdiction, and proceeded to hear evidence on the charges, and to try him thereon. He further alleged that none of the charges or specifications in any degree arose out of or were involved in any case arising in the land or naval forces of the United States, or in the militia; but all, as appeared on their face, pertained exclusively to duties required of and performed by him in the exercise of a purely civil office and under a civil commission; that none of the specifications charged him with the violation of any law of the United States, or of any rule of procedure in the Navy Department, or of any order of the Secretary of the Navy; that each of the acts complained of had been approved by the late Secretary of the Navy in the lawful exercise of his discretionary power over the subject, and that the exercise of his discretion could not be reviewed by his successor or by a court-martial; that throughout the trial the petitioner insisted on his objections to the jurisdiction; that after the conclusion of the testimony and arguments the court-martial went into secret session and excluded him and his counsel from its presence and, as he was informed and believed, rendered some judgment adverse to him and submitted it to the Secretary of the Navy for his approval, but it had not been approved; that all the proceedings at the trial, with the finding and judgment of the court, were made up and signed by the judge advocate, and returned to the exclusive custody of the Secretary of the Navy, and the court discontinued its sessions, and adjourned without day; that afterwards the Secretary of the Navy made an order, the terms of which were unknown to the petitioner, directing the court-martial to reconvene on September 25, 1885, and to take additional action in the matter of the charges and specifications and evidence submitted to it as aforesaid; that it was about to reconvene accordingly and, without permitting the presence of the petitioner or his counsel, to reconsider the evidence and the principles of law involved in his trial, and to re-examine and readjudge his case; that the proceedings about to be taken by the court-martial were not only unauthorized for want of jurisdiction, but would deprive him of the right of trial by jury, and put him twice in jeopardy for the same offense, in violation of the Con-[171] stitution of the United States; and that he was without remedy, except by the writ of prohibition.

On September 23, the petitioner moved for an order upon the defendants to show cause why a writ of prohibition should not issue as prayed for; and it was ordered that the petition be entertained and certified for hearing in the first instance to the court in General Term.

On September 24 the Secretary of the Navy filed a plea, averring that the court ought not to hear or take further cognizance of the petition and proceedings, because their object and purpose were "to prohibit and restrain him from the exercise of powers and duties appertaining to his said office of Secretary of the Department of the Navy; whereas, it is beyond the jurisdiction of this court and the judicial power of the United States to restrain or otherwise intermeddle with the exercise of the said powers and duties which belong to and form a part of the political powers and duties of the Government of the United States."

On the same day, the members of the court-martial filed a plea and answer, in which they "say that they are advised that this court has no jurisdiction to arrest by writ of prohibition any proceeding they may take in the court-martial referred to in the said petition;" and "not waiving in anywise, but insisting on their jurisdictional exception or plea, answering" admitted that the petitioner pleaded to the jurisdiction of the court-martial, and that his plea was overruled; but alleged that he was subject to its jurisdiction, and that there was nothing in the legislation of Congress, creating the office of Paymaster-General of the Navy, manifesting an intention to withdraw the incumbent of that position from amenability to a court-martial for offenses committed while exercising the same; that the first charge and the specifications pursuant thereto were founded on the twenty-second of the Articles for the Government of the Navy, contained in section 1624 of the Revised Statutes, and on section 127 of the Orders, Regulations and Instructions for the administration of Law and Justice in the United States Navy, which prescribes that "When the offense is a disorder or neglect not specially provided for, it should be charged as scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals;" and the second charge and the specifications pursuant thereto were founded on the ninth paragraph of the eighth Article for the Government of the Navy; that the question whether the acts and omissions charged against the petitioner were offenses was a matter for the exclusive decision of the court-martial; and that the court-martial did not and could not adjourn itself without day, but, as appeared by orders, copies of which were produced, was by order of the Secretary of the Navy of August 11 "adjourned until further orders," and by his order of September 16 directed to reassemble on September 25; and concluded by praying to be dismissed with costs.

On September 25 the petitioner filed a replication, in which he "joins issue with the defendants upon the return and answer filed to the petition for the writ of prohibition;" and upon a hearing in general term the court entered the following judgment: "The court being of opinion that it has not jurisdiction of the matter complained of, it is therefore considered that the petition be and it is hereby dismissed, with costs, to be taxed by the clerk."

The petitioner in open court prayed and was allowed an appeal from that judgment, and also sued out a writ of error to reverse it.

The final judgment or decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in any case in which the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeds the sum of $5,000 may be reviewed and reversed or affirmed in this court upon writ of error, if the judgment is at law, or upon appeal, if the decree is in equity. R. S. §§ 691, 692, 705; R. S. D. C. §§ 846, 847; Act of March 3, 1885, chap. 355, 23 Stat. at L. 443.

The objection, founded on Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487 [ante 458], and cases there cited, that this court has no appellate jurisdiction of the present case, because there is nothing in dispute the value of which can be estimated in money, cannot be sustained. The matter in dispute is whether the petitioner is subject to a prosecution which may end in a sentence dismissing him from the service and depriving him of a salary as Paymaster-General during the residue of his term as such, and as Pay Inspector afterwards, which in less than two years would exceed the sum of $5,000. R. S.

§ 1556, 1565, 1624, arts. 8, 22, 48, 53. The case cannot be distinguished in principle from those in which it has been held that a judgment awarding a peremptory writ of mandamus to admit one to an office, or a judgment of ouster from an office, might be reviewed by this court upon writ of error, if the salary during the term of the office would exceed the sum named in the statute defining its appellate jurisdiction. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Wheelright, 7 Wheat. 534 [20 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 516] United States v. Addison, 22 How. 174 [63 U. S. bk. 16, L. ed. 304].

It is often said that the granting or refusal of a writ of prohibition is discretionary, and therefore not the subject of a writ of error. That may be true where there is another legal remedy, by appeal or otherwise, or where the question of the jurisdiction of the court whose action is sought to be prohibited is doubtful or depends on facts which are not made matter of record; or where a stranger, as he may in England, applies for the writ of prohibition. But where that court has clearly no jurisdiction of the suit or prosecution instituted before it, and the defendant therein has objected to its jurisdiction at the outset and has no other remedy, he is entitled to a writ of prohibition as matter of right; and a refusal to grant it, where all the proceedings appear of record, may be reviewed on error. This is the clear result of the modern English decisions, in which the law concerning writs of prohibition has been more fully discussed and explained than in the older authorities. Re Forster, 4 B. & S. 187, 199; Mayor, etc. of London v. Cox, L. R. 2 H. L. 239, 280; Worthington v. Jeffries, L. R. 10 C. P. 379, 380; Chambers v. Green, L. R. 20, Eq. 552, 555. See also Weston v. City Council of Charleston, 2 Pet. 449 [27 U. S. bk. 7, L. ed. 481], reversing on error S. C., Harper, 340.

The petitioner in the present case objected at the very beginning of the proceedings before the court-martial that it had no jurisdiction to try him on the charges laid before it; and the facts upon which his objection to its jurisdiction are based, as well as the final judgment dismissing his petition for a writ of prohibition, appear of record. The case is therefore within the appellate jurisdiction of this court.

The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia having both common-law and equity powers, it would seem that the proceedings in this case must be considered as on the common-law side of that court, and that the proper mode of invoking the appellate jurisdiction of this court is by writ of error. In England, from long before the Declaration of Independence, writs of prohibition have usually issued from the courts of common law, and do not appear to have issued from a court of chancery in any case in which a court of law might issue them, except during vacation, when the courts of common law were not open. 2 Hale, P. C. 147; Lord Holt, in Blackborough v. Davis, 1 P. Wms. 41, 43; Anon. 1 P. Wms. 476; Montgomery v. Blair, 2 Sch. & Lef. 136; Re Foster, 24 Beav. 428; Re Bateman, L. R. 9 Eq. 660. And in this country, so far as we are informed, such writs have never been issued but by a court of common-law jurisdiction. But as the petitioner has both taken an appeal and sued out a writ of error, it is immaterial which is the proper form of bringing up the case.

The hearing below was upon a rule to show cause why a writ of prohibition should not issue as prayed for. The question at that hearing was the general question whether the court should issue a writ of prohibition. That question could not, at that stage of the case, be narrowed or divided by the pleadings filed by the defendants. The judgment, as recorded, although it contains a statement of the court's "opinion that it has no jurisdiction of the matter complained of," is a general judgment dismissing the petition, with costs, which could [175] not have been awarded upon a judgment of dismissal for want of jurisdiction. Mayor v. Cooper, 6 Wall. 247 [73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 851]; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94, 98 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 643, 644]. The writ of error brings in question the judgment, not the opinion, of the court below. If the petition was rightly dismissed for any reason, whether because that court had no jurisdiction to issue a writ of prohibition to a court-martial or because the court-martial had jurisdiction of the charges against the petitioner, the judgment must be affirmed.

It is argued in behalf of the petitioner that the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia is authorized to issue writs of prohibition, on the same grounds on which it was held in United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 167], to be authorized to issue writs of mandamus, namely: because by the Act of February 27, 1877, chap. 69, § 2, 19 Stat. at L. 253, that court has cognizance of "all cases in law and equity between parties, both or either of which shall be resident or be found within said District;" as well as because it has all the powers formerly exercised by the courts of Maryland, which, as declared by the Court of Appeals of that State in Price v. State, 8 Gill, 295, 310, included "all the powers exercised in England by the Court of King's Bench, so far as these powers are derived from rules and principles of the common law, and so far as the same are suited to the change in our political institutions, and are not modified by our constitutional or statutory enactments." On the other side, it is contended that neither the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia nor any other court of the United States is empowered to issue writs of prohibition to a court-martial.

Whether the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has power in any case to issue a writ of prohibition to a court-martial is a question of great importance not heretofore adjudged by this court; and we are not inclined, in the present case, either to assert or to deny the existence of the power, because upon settled principles, assuming the power to exist, no case is shown for the exercise of it. In deciding the case upon the facts before us, and expressing no opinion upon the broader question, because the determination of the case does not require it, we take the same course that has [176] been followed by eminent English judges in disposing of applications for writs of prohibition under similar circumstances. Ex parte Smyth, Tyrwh. & Gr. 222, 225; S. C. 2 Cr. M. & R. 748, 753; 1 Gale, 274, 277; Re Foster, 4 B. & S. 187, 198.

The object of a writ of prohibition is to prevent a court of peculiar, limited or inferior jurisdiction from assuming jurisdiction of a matter beyond its legal cognizance. It can only be issued to restrain the exercise of judicial functions. When the suit complained of is brought by a private person, he may be joined as a defendant. But when it is a suit or prosecution on behalf of the Government, the writ of prohibition can go to the court only. 3 Bl. Com. 112; Ex parte Braudlacht, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 367; Thompson v. Tracy, 60 N. Y. 31; Connecticut River Railroad v. Franklin County Comrs. 127 Mass. 50, 59, 60.

The Secretary of the Navy being an executive officer and not a member of the court-martial sought to be prohibited, it is quite clear that his acts concerning the petitioner cannot be the subject of a writ of prohibition. The reasons against issuing a writ of prohibition to the court-martial require fuller statement.

A writ of prohibition is never to be issued unless it clearly appears that the inferior court is about to exceed its jurisdiction. It cannot be made to serve the purpose of a writ of error or certiorari, to correct mistakes of that court in deciding any question of law or fact within its jurisdiction. These rules have been always adhered to by this court, in the exercise of the power expressly conferred upon it by Congress to issue writs of prohibition to the district courts sitting as courts of admiralty; United States v. Peters, 3 Dall. 121 [3 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 535]; Ex parte Easton, 95 U. S. 68 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 373]; Ex parte Gordon and Ex parte Ferry Co. 104 U. S. 515, 519 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 814, 815]; Ex parte Pennsylvania, 109 U. S. 174 [Bk. 27, L. ed, 894], as well as by the courts of England and of the several States, in the exercise of their inherent jurisdiction to issue writs of prohibition to courts-martial Grant v. Gould, 2 H. Bl. 69; [177] State v. Wakely, 2 Nott & McCord, 410; State v. Stevens, 2 McCord, 32; Washburn v. Phillips, 2 Met. 296. And this court, although the question of issuing a writ of prohibition to a court-martial has not come before it for direct adjudication, has repeatedly recognized the general rule that the acts of a court-martial, within the scope of its jurisdiction and duty, cannot be controlled or reviewed in the civil courts, by writ of prohibition or otherwise. Dynes v. Hoover, 20 How. 65, 82, 83 [61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 838, 845]; Ex parte Reed. 100 U. S. 13 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 588]; Ex parte Mason, 105 U. S. 696 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 1213]; Keys v. United States, 109 U. S. 336 [Bk. 27, L. ed. 954]; Wales v. Whitney, and Kurtz v. Moffitt, [ante, 277, 458.] See also Wise v. Withers, 3 Cranch, 331 [7 U. S. bk. 2, L. ed. 457]; Meade v. Deputy Marshal of Virginia, 1 Brock. 324; Re Bogart, 2 Sawyer, 396; Re White, 9 Sawyer, 49; Barrett v. Hopkins, 2 McCrary, 129.

In the leading case of Grant v. Gould, 2 H. Bl. 69, under an article of war subjecting to punishment at the discretion of a court-martial any officer or soldier convicted of "having advised or persuaded any other officer or soldier to desert His Majesty's service," the petitioner for a writ of prohibition had been charged with "having advised and persuaded" two soldiers in the Coldstream Regiment of foot guards "to desert His Majesty's service, and to enlist into the service of the East India Company, knowing them at the same time to belong to the said regiment of foot guards." The sentence did not in terms find him guilty of having advised or persuaded them to desert the King's service; but merely stated that the court-martial was of opinion that he was "guilty of having promoted and having been instrumental towards the enlisting of" the two soldiers "into the service of the East India Company, knowing them at the said time to belong to the said regiment of foot guards; and deeming this crime to be precisely of the same nature with that which is set forth in the charge, and to differ only in this: that it is rather inferior, but in a very slight degree, in point of aggravation," adjudged him to be punished. It was argued for the petitioner that he had not been found guilty of advising or persuading to desert, which was the substance of the offense charged, but, at the utmost, of promoting and aiding in the enlistment into the service of the East India Company, which of itself was no offense under the Articles of War or the Mutiny Act. But Lord Loughborough, delivering the judgment of the court of common pleas, discharging the rule for a writ of prohibition, said: "Taking the whole of the case together, it is clear that there is ground to suppose that they meant to convict him of the charge. But if, by the nicety which they used in penning the sentence, that sentence were to be invalidated, it could not be by a prohibition, whatever it might be by a review, or by an appeal. The most that can be made of it is an error in the proceedings; but we cannot prohibit upon that account. The sentence in the case of an unfortunate admiral * was certainly an inaccurate one. The question there was whether the court had not mistaken the law, yet a prohibition was not thought of. But it is unnecessary to discuss the sentence further; it would be extremely absurd to comment upon it as if it was a conviction before magistrates, which was to be discussed in a court where that conviction could be reviewed." 2 H. Bl. 107.

Of questions, not depending upon the construction of the statutes, but upon unwritten military law or usage within the jurisdiction of courts-martial, military or naval officers, from their training and experience in the service, are more competent judges than the courts of common law. This is nowhere better stated than by Mr. Justice Perry in the Supreme Court of Bombay, saying: "And the principle of the noninterference of the courts of law with the procedure of courts-martial is clear and obvious. The groundwork of the jurisdiction and the extent of the powers of courts-martial are to be found in the Mutiny Act and the Articles of War; and upon all questions arising upon these Her Majesty's judges are competent to decide; but the Mutiny Act and Articles of War do not alone constitute the Military Code, for they are, for the most part, silent upon all that relates to the procedure of the military tribunals to be erected under them. Now this procedure is founded upon the usages and customs of war, upon the regulations issued by the Sovereign, and upon old practice in the army, as to all which points common-law judges have no opportunity, either from their law

* See Admiral Byng's Trial (official ed. fol. London, 1757), 3, 4, 125-130; 1 McArthur on Courts-Martial, 4th ed. 103, 328; 2 Id. 274, 387-398.

[179] books or from the course of their experience, to inform themselves. It would therefore be most illogical, to say nothing of the impediments to military discipline which would thereby be interposed, to apply to the procedure of courts-martial those rules which are applicable to another and different course of practice." Perrit's Case, Perry's Oriental Cases, 414, 419. So in Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. 19, 35 [25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 537, 542], Mr. Justice Story, delivering the opinion of this court, said that the law by which courts-martial were bound to execute their duties and to regulate their mode of proceeding, in the absence of positive enactments, was "the general usage of the military service, or what may not unfitly be called the customary military law." The same view, as regarding naval courts-martial, was asserted and acted on by this court in Dynes v. Hoover, 20 How. 65, 82 [61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 838, 845.]

The material provisions of the Revised Statutes and of the Navy Regulations, affecting the nature of the office and duties of the petitioner, and the jurisdiction of the court-martial over him, are as follows:

By section 415 of the Revised Statutes "There shall be at the seat of Government an Executive Department, to be known as the Department of the Navy, and a Secretary of the Navy who shall be the head thereof." By section 419 "The business of the Department of the Navy shall be distributed in such manner as the Secretary of the Navy shall judge to be expedient and proper among the following bureaus," one of which is "Seventh. A Bureau of Provisions and Clothing." And by section 420 "All of the duties of the bureaus shall be performed under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy, and their orders shall be considered as emanating from him and shall have force and effect as such."

By section 421 "The chiefs of the several bureaus in the Department of the Navy shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, from the classes of officers mentioned in the next five sections respectively, or from officers having the relative rank of captain in the staff corps of the navy, on the active list, and shall hold their offices for the term of four years." By section 425 "The Chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing shall be appointed from the list of paymasters of the Navy of not less than ten years standing." By sections 1471, 1472, he "shall have the relative rank of commodore while holding said position," and the title of Paymaster-General; and by section 1473, upon being retired from that position by reason of age or length of service, he shall have the relative rank of commodore.

By section 178, in case of the death, resignation, absence or sickness of the chief of any bureau, his duties are to be performed by his deputy, or if there be none, by the chief clerk of such bureau, unless the President shall direct them to be performed by some other officer in other department.

Chapter 10 of title 15 of the Revised Statutes, entitled "Articles for the Government of the Navy," contains the following:

"Sec. 1624. The Navy of the United States shall be governed by the following articles:"

"Art. 8. Such punishment as a court-martial may adjudge may be inflicted on any person in the Navy—

"First. Who is guilty of profane swearing, falsehood, drunkenness, gambling, fraud, theft or any other scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals;"

"Ninth. Or is negligent or careless in obeying orders, or culpably inefficient in the performance of duty."

"Art. 22. All offenses committed by persons belonging to the navy, which are not specified in the foregoing articles, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct."

"Art. 23. All offenses committed by persons belonging to the navy while on shore shall be punished in the same manner as if they had been committed at sea."

The Orders, Regulations and Instructions for the Administration of Law and Justice in the United States Navy, issued by the Secretary of the Navy under authority of the President in 1870, provide, in section 126, that when a charge "comes directly under any enactment, it should be set forth in the terms used therein;" and in section 127, that "when the offense is a disorder or neglect not specially provided for, it should be charged as 'scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals.'"

By section 1547 of the Revised Statutes, passed since the adoption of the Navy Regulations of 1870, "the orders, regulations and instructions issued by the Secretary of the Navy prior to July 14, 1862, with such alterations as he may since have adopted, with the approval of the President, shall be recognized as the Regulations of the Navy, subject to alterations adopted in the same manner." This legislative recognition of the Navy Regulations of 1870 "must," as was said by Chief Justice Marshall of a similar recognition of the Army Regulations in the Act of April 24, 1816, chap. 69, § 9, 3 Stat. at L. 298, "be understood as giving to these regulations the sanction of the law." United States v. Maurice, 2 Brock. 96, 105; Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 538]. [181]

It is argued for the petitioner that his office of Paymaster-General and Chief of a Bureau in the Department of the Navy, under a distinct appointment by the President and confirmation by the Senate, is a separate office of a purely civil character; that the duties of that office are not military, but civil only, relating to the business of the Navy Department, performed under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy, who is exclusively a civil officer and, in case of a vacancy in the office of Chief of Bureau, or of his absence, to be performed by a deputy or chief clerk, who is also exclusively a civil officer; and therefore that a violation of those duties can be prosecuted in the civil courts only, and not by court-martial.

On the other hand, it is argued that the petitioner is an officer of the navy; that no one but an officer of the navy of a certain rank can be appointed to the office of Chief of Bureau and Paymaster-General; that the petitioner's appointment to that office gives him the relative rank of commodore in the navy; that the duties of Paymaster-General are naval duties performed by a naval officer; and therefore that any violation of those duties is triable and punishable by naval court-martial.

The charges on which the court-martial was ordered to try the petitioner are drawn up in two aspects. The leading charge is for "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals," and various acts done by the petitioner as Paymaster-General are set forth in fourteen specifications under that charge. The other charge is for "culpable inefficiency in the performance of duty," with four specifications, some of which, at least, allege, though in different forms, acts set forth in the specifications [182] under the first charge.

If the court-martial has jurisdiction of the principal charge and of some or all of the specifications under it, the addition of the second charge with its specifications affords no ground for issuing a writ of prohibition. The evidence taken before the court-martial is not produced or relied upon by the petitioner. The question presented by the record before us is whether the court-martial should be prohibited from trying him on the charges and specifications laid before it; and the case comes within the rule stated by Chief Justice Shaw in Washburn v. Phillips, already cited: "Unless it appears upon the face of the proceedings that the court has no jurisdiction of any part of the subject matter of these charges, it is not a case for a prohibition." 2 Met. 299. There may indeed be cases in which two matters before the inferior court are so distinct that a writ of prohibition may go as to the one and not as to the other. But when the leading charge is within its jurisdiction, and the other charge, though varying in form, is for the same or similar acts, like a second count in an indictment, and the same sentence may be awarded on the first charge as upon both, a writ of prohibition should not issue. Enraght v. Penzance, 7 App. Cas. 240.

The essential point to be determined, therefore, is whether the court-martial has jurisdiction of the first charge; and whether it would have jurisdiction of the second, if that were the only one, is immaterial.

In Dynes v. Hoover, above cited, this court held that the jurisdiction of courts-martial, under the Articles for the Government of the Navy established by Congress, was not limited to the crimes defined or specified in those articles, but extended to any offense which, by a fair deduction from the definition, Congress meant to subject to punishment, being "one of a minor degree, of kindred character, which has already been recognized to be such by the practice of courts-martial in the army and navy services of nations, and by those functionaries in different nations to whom has been confided a revising power over the sentences of courts-martial;" or which, though not included, in [183] terms or by construction, within the definition, came within "a comprehensive enactment, such as the 32d article of the Rules for the Government of the Navy; which means that courts-martial have jurisdiction of such crimes as are not specified, but which have been recognized to be crimes and offenses by the usages in the navy of all nations, and that they shall be punished according to the laws and customs of the sea." 20 How. 82 [61 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 845].

The 32d of the Articles for the Government of the Navy, established by the Act of April 23, 1800, chap. 33, 2 Stat. at L. 49, in force at the time of that decision, has been retained in the existing article 22, before cited, substituting only, at the beginning, the word "offenses" for "crimes," and, in describing the mode of punishment, the words "as a court-martial may direct," instead of "according to the laws and customs in such cases at sea." As the article in its new form still applies only to offenses "not specified in the foregoing articles," the alteration was evidently intended to change only the rule of punishment, leaving within the jurisdiction of courts-martial cases not so specified, but recognized as military offenses by the usages of the naval service.

It does not, therefore, appear to us important to inquire whether, by the rules that govern military courts, the first charge should be considered as made under the concluding words of the first clause of article 8, punishing "profane swearing, falsehood, drunkenness, gambling, theft or any other scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals;" or under article 22, punishing "all offenses committed by persons belonging to the Navy, which are not specified in the foregoing articles;" for in either view, as we have already seen, it should, under the Regulations of 1870, recognized and sanctioned by Congress, be charged as "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals."

Under every system of military law for the government of either land or naval forces, the jurisdiction of courts-martial extends to the trial and punishment of acts of military or naval officers which tend to bring disgrace and reproach upon the service of which they are members, whether those acts are done in the performance of military duties, or in a civil position, or in a social relation, or in private business.

Two cases, often cited in books on military law, show that acts having no relation to the public service, military or civil, except so far as they tend to bring disgrace and reproach upon the former—such as making an unfounded claim for the price of a horse, or attempting to seduce a brother officer's wife during his illness—may properly be prosecuted before a court-martial, under an article of war punishing "scandalous and infamous conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman;" for the sole ground on which the sentence was disapproved, by the King in the one case and by the Governor-General of India in the other, was that the court-martial while finding the facts proved, expressly negatived scandalous and infamous conduct, and thereby in effect acquitted the defendant of the charge. 2 McArthur, Courts-Martial, 4th ed. 298; Hough, Precedents in Military Law, 288; Samuel, Military Law, 650–652; Simmons, Courts-Martial, 4th ed. 418–420; De Hart, Courts-Martial, 375–377.

In a third case, a lieutenant in the Army was tried in England by a general court-martial for conduct on board ship while coming home from India as a private passenger on leave of absence from his regiment for two years. The charge was that being a passenger on board the ship Cæsar on her voyage from Calcutta to England, he was accused of stealing property of one Ross, his servant; and that the officers and passengers of the ship, after inquiring into the accusation, expelled him from their table and society during the rest of the voyage; yet that he, "under circumstances so degrading and disgraceful to him, neither then nor at any time afterwards took any measures as became an officer and a gentleman to vindicate his honor and reputation; all such conduct as aforesaid being to the prejudice of good order and military discipline." Before and at the trial, he objected that the charge against him did not, expressly or constructively, impute any military offense, or infraction of any of the Articles of War, or any positive act of misconduct or neglect, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline; or state any fact which, if true, subjected him to be arraigned and tried as a military officer. But the court-martial proceeded with the trial, found him "guilty of the whole of the charge produced against him, in breach of the Articles of War," and sentenced him to be dismissed the service, and added "that it has considered the charge produced against the prisoner entirely in a military point of view, as affecting the good order and discipline of the Army; and that it does not mean by its sentence to offer any opinion as to the original charge of theft, of which the prisoner was accused by the man Ross." The sentence was approved by the King, and carried into execution, and for that reason the Court of King's Bench denied a writ of prohibition. Lord Denman, in delivering judgment, said that the court did not think it necessary to consider whether the charge was so framed as to bring the party within the Articles of War; but that it agreed with Lord Loughborough's remark in Grant v. Gould, above cited, that it would be extremely absurd to expect the same precision in a charge brought before a court-martial as was required to support a conviction by a justice of the peace. Re Pw, 5 B. & Ad. 681, 688; S. C. 2 Nev. & Man. 632, 644.

Under the sixty-first of the Articles of War for the Government of the Army of the United States, which, omitting the words "scandalous or infamous," provides that "Any officer who is convicted of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman shall be dismissed from the service," it is observed in the most recent treatise on military law, and supported by copious references to precedents: "While the act charged will more usually have been committed in a military capacity, or have grown out of some military status or relation, it is by no means essential that this should have been its history. It may equally well have originated in some private transaction of the party (as a member of civil society, or as a man of business), which, while impeaching his personal honor, has involved such notoriety or publicity, or led to such just complaint to superior military authority, as to have seriously compromised his character and position as an officer of the Army and brought scandal or reproach upon the service." 1 Winthrop, Military Law, 1023 et seq. See also 4 Opns. Attys-Gen. 413, 417; Runkle v. United States, 19 C. Cl. 396, 414.

This being the first case of an application to a court of the United States for a writ of prohibition to a court-martial, we have cited the authorities bearing upon the subject more fully than might have been thought fit under other circumstances.

It is hardly necessary to add that by the Navy Regulations of 1870, §§ 260–265, the court-martial could only be dissolved by the Secretary of the Navy, and might, at any time before he had dissolved it, be lawfully reconvened by him to reconsider its proceedings. Ex parte Reed, 100 U. S. 13 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 538].

To order a writ of prohibition to issue in the present case would be to declare that an officer of the Navy, who, while serving by appointment of the President as Chief of a Bureau in the Navy Department, makes contracts or payments, in violation of law, in disregard of the interests of the government, and to promote the interests of contractors, cannot lawfully be tried by a court-martial composed of naval officers, and by them convicted of scandalous conduct, tending to the destruction of good morals and to the dishonor of the naval service.

This we are not prepared to do, being clearly of opinion that such conduct of a naval officer is a case arising in the naval forces, and therefore punishable by court-martial under the articles and regulations made or approved by Congress in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it by the Constitution, to provide and maintain a navy and to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces, without indictment or trial by jury.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

ROBERT W. HEALY ET AL., Plffs. in Err., [191]

v.

JOLIET AND CHICAGO R. R. CO. AND CHICAGO AND ALTON R. R. CO.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 191, 192.)

The Healy Slough is not a navigable stream at the point where it is crossed by the bridge maintained by the Chicago and Alton Railroad Company.

[No. 97.]

Argued Dec. 16, 17, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

The history and facts of the case sufficiently appear in the opinion of the court.

Mr. Samuel F. Rice, for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. George W. Smith, for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court: [191]

This is a writ of error to the Supreme Court of Illinois.

The plaintiffs in error, who were plaintiffs below, brought suit in the Circuit Court of Cook County of that State, praying for an abatement, or other appropriate relief, against a railroad bridge across Healy Slough, built by the Joliet and Chicago R. R. Company in 1856, and now kept up and maintained by the Chicago and Alton R. R. Company. This bridge is alleged to be an obstruction to the navigation of the slough, and therefore a nuisance, in regard to which plaintiffs suffer special damage as owners of certain real estate situated above the bridge, which obstructs the access of vessels coming from Lake Michigan or from the Chicago River through that river and through the slough to plaintiffs' lots.

NOTE.—Navigable waters—what are, of the United States. U. S. v. The Montello, 87 U. S. (20 Wall.), 430, bk. 22, 391, note.

It is alleged that this slough, at the point where the bridge was built, was a navigable water of the United States, in the navigation of which plaintiffs had especial interest, and that it was navigable from the Chicago River up to and beyond the lots of plaintiffs, and that this navigability was seriously impaired by the bridge of defendants.

The answer denied that the slough was a [192] navigable stream, and asserted authority under the charter of the Joliet and Chicago Railroad Company to build the bridge as had been done. Much testimony was taken as to the nature and character of the slough in reference to its navigability; and on hearing, the Circuit Court of Cook County dismissed the bill. An appeal was taken to the Appellate Court of the First Judicial District of the State, which reversed the judgment of the circuit court and granted relief against the bridge as a nuisance.

On further appeal to the supreme court of the State, the judgment of the appellate court was reversed, and the order of the circuit court dismissing the bill was affirmed.

It appears from the opinions delivered in the appellate court and in the supreme court, both of which are found in the record, that there was no difference between them on any question of law, but that they differed on the question whether the slough was in fact a public navigable water at the time the bridge was built over it. The court of appeals says: "Whether the Healy Slough is navigable in such sense as to constitute it a common highway must depend upon its capabilities, in its natural state and ordinary volume of water, of being utilized for purposes of commerce or transportation. This presents a mere question of fact to be determined by the evidence in the record." On this evidence that court held that in its natural state the slough was a navigable highway for the public.

The supreme court says in its opinion: "The question raised may be treated simply as a question of fact, viz: is the body of water spanned by the railroad bridge navigable in the sense of that term as used in the law? We think it is not."

On this question of disputed fact, so far as we have any right to inquire into it under this writ of error, we concur in the opinion held by the supreme court, and by the circuit court, and do not deem it necessary to set out in this opinion a comparison or examination of the evidence, which is voluminous, as it can serve no good purpose.

The decree of the Supreme Court of Illinois is affirmed.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

WILLIAM G. FORD, Admr. of JOHN G. ROBINSON, Deceased, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 213-218.)

Court of claims—jurisdiction—limitation of actions.

The clause of section 1059, R. S., which invests the court of claims with jurisdiction of claims referred to it by either House of Congress, is subject to other clauses, defining its jurisdiction and fixing the period within which all claims must be asserted against the United States.

[No. 1108.]

Submitted Dec. 18, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Gilbert Moyers and George S. Boutwell, for appellant:

The construction which gives effect to the statute must prevail over that which gives no effect and is without force.

Smith, Com. 671, § 527; Dwarris, Stat. 144, § 12, Sedgwick. Stat. 200; Ogden v. Strong, 2 Paine, 584; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53; People v. Burnes, 5 Mich. 114.

This statute was designed to revive a jurisdiction which by the lapse of time had ceased to exist. A remedial statute must be so construed as not to defeat the object for which it was enacted.

Sedg. Stat. 193; Cook v. Hamilton Co. 6 McL. 112; United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. 72 (37 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 1004); Whitney v. Emmett, 1 Baldw. 303; United States v. Morris, 14 Pet. 464 (39 U. S. bk. 10, L. ed. 543).

Mr. A. H. Garland, Atty-Gen., for appellee.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

By resolution of the Senate of the United States adopted on the 23d of February, 1885, a bill pending before that body for the relief of William G. Ford, administrator of John G. Robinson, deceased, was referred "in accordance with the provisions of article 1 of section 1059 of the Revised Statutes, to the Court of Claims, together with the vouchers, papers, proofs and documents appertaining thereto."

The bill to which the resolution referred was as follows:

"A bill for the relief of William G. Ford, administrator of John G. Robinson, deceased.

"Be it enacted, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the claim of William G. Ford, administrator of John G. Robinson, deceased, for the interests of the American legatees of the said Robinson, which were not provided for in the award of the mixed commission under the Treaty of Washington of the date of September 24, 1873, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the court of claims, relieved from the bar of the Statute of Limitations; and the said court of claims is authorized to receive as evidence, at its discretion, the testimony already taken by said mixed commission in the said case, as though taken over again; and either party may take further and additional testimony, under the order and rules of the court, as in other cases; Provided, That before final judgment shall be rendered by the said court the said William G. Ford shall duly execute, according to law, a new administration bond, in such penalty and with such sureties as the said court shall seem sufficient and approve."

The petition of the claimant was filed in the court of claims on the 10th of March, 1885. It represented that he is a citizen of the United States, and a resident of the City of New York; that John G. Robinson was born in England, and was a subject of Great Britain, residing during the recent civil war in New Orleans; that on or about March 7, 1863, his intestate purchased of one Robert B. Hurt, of Madison County, Tennessée, 238 bales of cotton, worth about $38,260, which was delivered to said Robinson, at Ponchatoula, Louisiana, on or about the date last named; that the cotton "was seized by the United States military authorities, under command of General Banks; and under the direction of said authorities the same was sold in New Orleans, and the proceeds thereof appropriated to the use and benefit of the United States Government;" that his claim, as administrator of Robinson, for the proceeds of such sale, was, on or about the 25th of March, 1872, presented to the mixed commission on British and American claims, under the 12th article of the Treaty of May 8, 1871, and by that commission was allowed to the extent of only $29,638, in gold, as the value of the interest of Mary G. Barker, the only surviving legatee under the will of Robinson, who was a British subject; that petitioner believed that award to be unjust to the devisees under the will of Robinson, who were citizens of the United States, and petitioned Congress for relief; that his petition, with vouchers, etc., were referred by the Senate to the court of claims, under section 1059 of the Revised Statutes, and that said Robinson died in Biloxi, Mississippi, on or about August 25, 1869, without having given any aid or comfort to the rebellion. He prayed judgment against the United States for $66,195, which was the balance of the proceeds derived from the sale of the cotton.

In the court of claims the United States moved to dismiss the petition, upon the ground that the action was barred by the limitation of six years prescribed by section 1069 of the Revised Statutes. Subsequently, a general demurrer to the petition having been filed, the case was heard upon the motion to dismiss, as well as upon the demurrer. The motion to dismiss was denied; but the action, in the opinion of that court, being barred by the limitation of two years prescribed by the Captured and Abandoned Property Act of March 12, 1863, was dismissed.

By section 1059 of the Revised Statutes the court of claims has jurisdiction to hear and determine the following, among other matters: "First, all claims founded upon any law of Congress, or upon any regulation of an executive department, or upon any contract, expressed or implied, with the Government of the United States, and all claims which may be referred to it by either House of Congress. * * * Fourth. Of all claims for the proceeds of captured or abandoned property, as provided by the Act of March 12, 1863, chap. 120, entitled 'An Act to Provide for the Collection of Abandoned Property, and for the Prevention of Frauds in Insurrectionary Districts within the United States,' or by the Act of July 2, 1864, chap. 225, being an Act in addition thereto; Provided, That the remedy given in cases of seizure under the said Acts, by preferring claim in the Court of Claims, shall be exclusive, precluding the owner of any property taken by agents of the Treasury Department as abandoned or captured property in virtue or under color of said Acts, from suit at common law, or any other mode of redress whatever, before any court other than said court of claims; Provided, also, That the jurisdiction of the court of claims shall not extend to any claim against the United States growing out of the destruction or appropriation of or damage to property by the army or navy engaged in the suppression of the rebellion." 18 Stat. at L. 318, chap. 80.

The Act of March 12, 1863, providing for the collection and disposition of captured or abandoned property, permits any person claiming to have been the owner of any such property, "at any time within two years after the suppression of the rebellion," to "prefer his claim to the proceeds thereof in the court of claims." 12 Stat. at L. 820. [216]

Section 1069 provides that "Every claim against the United States, cognizable by the court of claims, shall be forever barred, unless the petition setting forth a statement thereof is filed in the court or transmitted to it by the secretary of the Senate, or the clerk of the House of Representatives, as provided by law, within six years after the claim first accrues; Provided, That the claims of married women first accrued during marriage; of persons under the age of twenty-one years first accrued during minority; and of idiots, lunatics, insane persons and persons beyond the seas at the time the claim accrued, entitled to the claim, shall not be barred, if the petition be filed in the court, or transmitted, as aforesaid, within three years after the disability has ceased; but no other disability than those enumerated shall prevent any claim from being barred, nor shall any of the said disabilities operate cumulatively." 12 Stat. at L. 767, chap. 92.

The assignments of error assume that the reference by the Senate to the court of claims, of the bill before that body for the relief of claimant, had the effect to invest that court with full jurisdiction to hear and determine his claim, relieved from any bar arising from limitation, whether the limitation of six years prescribed by section 1069 of the Revised Statutes (which is brought forward from the Act of March 3, 1863, amendatory of the Act of 1855, establishing the Court of Claims), or that of two years, established by the Captured and Abandoned Property Act of March 12, 1863.

The statutes regulating the jurisdiction of the court of claims do not sustain this position. It is undoubtedly within the power of Congress to place claims referred to that court by the Senate or by the House of Representatives, on a better footing than other claims, by providing that they may be determined upon their merits, without reference to lapse of time, or any previous bar by limitation. But Congress had no purpose by its general legislation to establish such [217] a policy. It has, in special cases, invested the court of claims with jurisdiction to determine a claim, relieved of the bar of limitation. Such was Erwin's Case, arising under the Captured and Abandoned Property Act, the purpose of the statute which referred it being construed as manifesting the intention of Congress, in respect of that particular claim, to remove the bar of limitation, and, without otherwise changing the claimant's position from what it would have been had he instituted suit in proper time, to permit an adjudication of the claim upon its merits. Erwin v. United States, 97 U. S. 392 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 1065]. No such result can be reached in this case, because Congress has not referred the demand of the claimant to the court of claims for determination. The clause of the statute investing that court with jurisdiction to hear and determine all claims referred to it "by either House of Congress," must be interpreted in the light of other clauses defining its jurisdiction, and fixing, in respect of all claims, the period within which they must be asserted against the United States. Congress, by statute, which has received the approval of the President, has declared that all claims specifically for the proceeds of captured or abandoned property, must be brought within two years after the suppression of the rebellion: that the jurisdiction of the court of claims shall not extend to claims growing out of the destruction or appropriation of, or damage to, property by the army or navy engaged in the suppression of the rebellion; and that, except where the claimant is laboring under certain disabilities, that have no application here, every claim against the United States, cognizable by the court of claims, shall be forever barred, unless filed in that court, or transmitted to it by certain officers, within six years after the claim first accrued. The argument here is that these statutory provisions are suspended in their operation as to every claim belonging to either of these classes, which one branch of Congress chooses to refer to the court of claims. Any such interpretation must be rejected. It is unreasonable to suppose that Congress intended to invest one of its branches with authority to suspend a general Statute of Limita- [218] tion. Every claim cognizable by the court of claims must be determined with reference to the limitation prescribed for claims of the class to which it belongs, unless Congress, by statute, otherwise directs. The court of claims has jurisdiction to hear and determine a claim referred to it by either House of Congress because, and only because, the law-making power has so declared; but, unless Congress otherwise prescribes, that reference will not itself entitle the claimant to a judgment, if his claim is not well founded in law, or, when so referred, was barred by limitation. He acquires no new right by the reference, except to demand that his claim be heard and determined by the court, just as would have been done had it been one of which the court could have taken cognizance by the voluntary suit of the claimant. Had he chosen, before going to Congress, to sue in the court of claims he would have been confronted with the Statute of Limitations. He cannot avoid that obstacle by procuring from one branch of Congress a reference of his claim to that court.

This construction of the statutes requires an affirmance of the judgment; for, if it was intended by the petition to present a claim under the Captured and Abandoned Property Act of 1868, it is barred by the limitation of two years prescribed for all claims under that statute; if it was intended to present a claim growing out of the appropriation of property by the Army engaged in the suppression of the rebellion, the Act of February 18, 1875, 18 Stat. at L. 318, now the last proviso in subdivision 4 of section 1059 of the Revised Statutes, excludes all jurisdiction to hear and determine it; and, if his claim is of the class defined in section 1069, it is barred by the limitation of six years.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

GEORGE E. CONEY AND PETER R. CARLL, Appts.

v.

ALVRED E. WINCHELL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 227-231.)

Removal of causes—foreclosure of mortgages under Connecticut Statute—parties.

In a suit to foreclose a mortgage under the Connecticut Statute, brought against the grantee of the mortgagor, the latter is an indispensable party where it is sought to charge him with any insufficiency in the appraised value of the property to discharge the debt; and if he and the mortgagee are citizens of the same State, the cause cannot be removed.

[No. 1016.]

Submitted Dec. 18, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Simeon E. Baldwin and John H. Whiting, for appellants.

Mr. John W. Alling, for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Waite delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an appeal under section 5 of the Act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, from an order of the circuit court remanding a case which had been removed from a state court. The facts are these:

On the 10th of May, 1881, Peter R. Carll, a citizen of Connecticut, gave his three notes to Alvred E. Winchell for $10,000, $6,000 and $5,000 respectively, all payable five years from that date, with interest at 6 per cent per annum. To secure the payment he executed to Winchell a mortgage on certain property in New Haven, Connecticut. He afterwards conveyed his "title, right and interest" in the mortgaged property to George E. Coney, a citizen of New York.

A statute of Connecticut, passed in 1878 and still in force, is as follows:

"Sec. 1. The foreclosure of a mortgage shall be a bar to any further suit or action upon the mortgage debt, note or obligation, unless the person or persons who are liable for the payment thereof are made parties to such foreclosure.

[228] "Sec. 2. Upon the motion of any party to a foreclosure, the court shall appoint three disinterested appraisers, who shall, under oath, appraise the mortgaged property within ten days after the time limited for redemption shall have expired, and shall make written report of their appraisal to the clerk of the court where said foreclosure was had, which report shall be a part of the files of such foreclosure suit, and such appraisal shall be final and conclusive as to the value of said mortgaged property; and the mortgage creditor in any further suit or action upon the mortgage debt, note, or obligation, shall recover only the difference between the value of the mortgaged property as fixed by such appraisal and the amount of his claim."

On the 16th of January, 1885, Winchell brought this suit against both Carll and Coney in the Superior Court of New Haven County, Connecticut, for: (1) "a foreclosure of said mortgage" and, (2) "possession of the mortgaged premises." In his bill he sets out the making of the notes and mortgage by Carll; the conveyance of the mortgaged property by Carll to Coney; a claim for $4,120 interest unpaid, and that Coney "with the said Carll, is now in possession of the" property. Carll and Coney filed separate demurrers to the bill, and on the 9th of May, 1885, which was in time, Coney petitioned for the removal of the cause to the Circuit Court of the United States under the second clause of section 2 of the Act of 1875, on the ground that there was in the suit a controversy wholly between himself, a citizen of New York, and Winchell, a citizen of Connecticut, which could be fully determined between them, and as to which Carll was only a nominal party. On the presentation of this petition, the state court declined to proceed further in the suit, but the circuit court, when the case was docketed there, ordered it to be remanded. From that order this appeal was taken.

In Ayres v. Wiswall, 112 U. S. 187 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 693], it was decided that in a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage by sale, in which it was sought to charge the mortgage debtor with the payment of any balance of the mortgage debt that might remain due after the security was exhausted, the debtor was a necessary party, and that, if his citizenship stood in the way, the suit could not be removed, even though, were he not a party, the persons with whom he had been joined and to whom he had conveyed the property after the mortgage would be entitled to a removal. Such a case we held did not fall within either the first or second clause of section 2 of the Act of 1875.

The principle of that case governs this. In Connecticut, mortgages are not foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged property, but by strict foreclosure. If there is a failure to redeem within the time limited in the decree, the mortgage debtor remains liable for the debt after deducting the value of the property foreclosed. Under the old practice this value was ascertained in the suit to collect the deficiency. In this connection counsel for the appellants say:

"In ordinary cases this suit might not be brought for four or five years after the foreclosure, and, in case of non-negotiable notes, for ten or fifteen years. It was therefore often difficult, in such suit, to ascertain the value of the property at the time of foreclosure. To meet this difficulty the Statute of 1878 was passed. It furnishes a way in which the value of the mortgaged premises can be ascertained at the time the title becomes absolute; provides that such value so found shall be conclusive in any further suit upon the note; authorizes the joining of the maker of the note as a party, so that he can have an opportunity to obtain such appraisal and be heard as to such value; and bars any further suit against the maker unless he is so made a party."

And again:

"Before the statute, as now, the foreclosure of the property reduced the obligation by the value of the property. By the statute this value is to be ascertained by an appraisal, and it is conclusively presumed to equal the obligation, unless the maker of the note is given an opportunity to be heard as to this appraisal. This gives him no interest in the property, no equity of redemption to be extinguished, no right whatever except the right to have an appraisal. And the appraisal, and only the appraisal, is made final and conclusive in the future action on the obligation."

This is a suit brought to foreclose under the statute; that is, to get the property without releasing the debtor from liability for the debt over the value of the property, and in so doing to fix the value. It is true there is not in the bill a prayer for appraisal, but that is not necessary. Any party to the suit can call for an appraisement by simply making a motion to that effect. The appraisement is one of the incidents of a suit for foreclosure when the person liable for the payment of the debt is a party. As in this case Carll, the mortgagor, conveyed the land to Coney after the mortgage was made, Winchell in foreclosing had his election to sue Coney alone, or Coney and Carll together. If he sued Coney alone, he would get the land, in case it should not be redeemed, but Carll, upon the foreclosure, would be discharged from all liability for the debt. If, however, he sued both Coney and Carll he would not only get the land, but hold Carll for the full amount of the debt over its value. He did elect to sue both. He has but a single cause of action and that his mortgage. The relief he seeks is a decree which shall give the foreclosure, and at the same time save the liability of Carll for what may remain due on the debt. This he cannot do unless he makes Carll a party, because in such a suit the mortgage debtor has the right to have it determined to what extent the mortgage debt is paid by the foreclosure. To use again the argument of counsel: he is entitled to an opportunity to obtain an appraisal and to be heard as to the value of the foreclosed property. True, there can be no recovery against him in the foreclosure suit for the balance that may remain due, but the value of the mortgaged property can be determined in a way that will conclude him when he is sued for the debt. This being the case, he is not only a necessary but an indispensable party to a suit for the relief which is asked in this case. The mere fact that he is made a party determines the character of the suit to be for foreclosure and the saving of his liability for the debt. An adjudication of value binding on him is within the scope of the bill, and as it may be had upon mere motion as an incident to the decree of foreclosure which is prayed for, the suit is to be looked upon as brought for that purpose with the rest. We can see no difference, so far as a right to removal is concerned, between a suit for foreclosure which seeks a money decree against the [231] mortgagor for a balance of the mortgage debt, and one in which his liability for the debt is to be saved, and the value of the mortgaged property applied in payment to be conclusively settled against him.

[230]

The order remanding the suit is affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

---

[219]

CITY OF MILWAUKEE, Appt.,

v.

CHARLES A. KŒFFLER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 219-226.)

Illegal tax—equity jurisdiction—injunction.

A bill in equity to set aside and restrain the collection of a tax levied on personal property by a municipal corporation cannot be maintained upon the sole ground of the illegality of the tax by reason of the nonresidence, within the limits of such municipality, of the person against whom the tax is levied.

[No. 1054.]

Submitted Dec. 18, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Wisconsin.

The case is stated by the court.

Mr. Joshua Stark, for appellant:

The mere illegality of a tax is not sufficient ground for the interposition of a court of equity to enjoin its collection.

This is true, especially of those denominated "personal."

State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 663); Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108 (78 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 65); Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 548 (82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 232).

The same doctrine is held by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, and by the courts of many other States.

Van Cott v. Supervisors, 18 Wis. 247; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Fort Howard, 21 Wis. 44; Quinney v. Town of Stockbridge, 33 Wis. 505; Williams v. Detroit, 2 Mich. 560; Henry v. Gregory, 29 Mich. 68; Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406; Brewer v. Springfield, 97 Mass. 152; Loud v. Charlestown, 99 Mass. 208; Hunnewell v. Charlestown, 106 Mass. 350; Rockingham Sav. Bk. v. Portsmouth, 52 N. H. 17; Dodd v. Hartford, 25 Conn. 232; Green v. Mumford, 5 R. I. 472; McCoy v. Chillicothe, 3 Ohio, 370; Brooklyn v. Meserole, 26 Wend. 132; Moores v. Smedley, 6 Johns. Ch. 28; Susquehanna Bk. v. Supervisors, 25 N. Y. 312; Heywood v. Buffalo, 14 N. Y. 534; Wilson v. Mayor, etc. of New York, 4 E. D. Smith, 675; Messeck v. Columbia Co. 50 Barb. 190; Ritter v. Patch, 12 Cal. 298; Conley v. Chedic, 6 Nev. 222; Sayre v. Tompkins, 23 Mo. 443; McPike v. Pew, 48 Mo. 525; Barrow v. Davis, 46 Mo. 394.

It is suggested in the opinion in the State Railroad Tax Cases, supra, that the rule denying equitable relief against taxes might not be so rigidly applied to taxes levied by counties, towns and cities, as to those levied for the use of the State; and it has since been held in Bridge Co. v. District of Columbia, 1 Mackey, D. C. 217, that a sale for municipal taxes would be enjoined, on the mere ground that the tax was illegal, although the rule would be otherwise as to taxes imposed by the Sovereign.

The suggestion referred to can hardly have been intended to apply to those general taxes levied by cities and other municipal corporations, to be expended in the support of government.

The revenues of the municipality and its ability to discharge its high governmental functions, as an integral part of the State, depend upon the prompt payment of the taxes levied by the municipality.

It is a significant fact that Dows v. Chicago, Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, and most of the cases cited in which relief in equity against taxes on the mere ground of illegality was denied, affected only the revenues of cities or other municipal corporations.

Courts of equity do, it is true, often interfere at the suit of taxpayers to restrain municipal corporations from entering into contracts and incurring obligations which are not authorized by law, and to set aside and annul the illegal and unauthorized acts of such corporations.

Suits to enjoin the collection of an unconstitutional tax, or a tax levied in violation of an Act of Congress, or of some contract of exemption, or one creating a cloud upon the title to real property, or seriously interfering with a corporate franchise, are cases of this class. See Allen v. B. & O. R. R. Co. 114 U. S. 311 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 200); Cummings v. National Bk. 101 U. S. 153 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 903); Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 185). But they rest upon other grounds than mere illegality. Courts of equity will always interfere at the suit of taxpayers to prevent acts of a municipal corporation ultra vires, the effect of which will be to impose unauthorized burdens upon persons or their property.

Mr. James G. Jenkins, for appellee:

The case is a proper subject of equitable cognizance.

West v. Ballard, 32 Wis. 172.

In some of the cases the rule proceeds upon the ground that the taxes went to make up the revenue of the State; and the broad distinction is asserted between the restraining of taxes going to the State and those going to a municipality. In the latter case courts have exercised equitable jurisdiction and restrained the collection of the tax.

Worth v. Fayetteville, 1 Winst. (N. C.) 70; Parmley v. Railroad Cos. 3 Dill. 32; Bridge Co. v. District of Columbia, 1 Mackey, 217.

This distinction is broadly taken by Mr. Justice Miller in State R. R. Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 615 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 674); Cummings v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 153 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 903); Allen v. B. & O. R. R. Co. 114 U. S. 311 (Bk. 29, L. ed. 200).

In the case at bar the injunction may rightly issue and equitable relief be rightly granted within the recognized principles of equity, because here the complainant was not a resident of the city nor subject to taxation therein. His personal property was not by law subject to be taxed by the municipality; he was a resident of and assessed in and paid taxes to the Town of Wauwatosa, and there discharged all the burdens which the law imposed upon him and upon his property with respect to the State, with respect to the county, with respect to the town, and with respect to the public schools. The officers of the municipal corporation of Milwaukee had absolutely no jurisdiction over him or his property, because they had lawful jurisdiction only as to personal property owned by residents of the city. Under such circumstances equity will intervene to prevent the enforcement of the unauthorized and illegal proceeding.

Barber v. Furr, 54 Iowa, 57 and cases cited. Brandirff v. Harrison Co. 50 Iowa, 164; Beverly v. Sabin, 20 Ill. 357; Ottawa v. Walker, 21 Ill. 610; Darling v. Gunn, 50 Ill. 424; Munson v. Miller, 66 Ill. 380; Lebanon v. Ohio & M. R. R. Co. 77 Ill. 539; Kimball v. Merchants Ser. L. & T. Co. 89 Ill. 611; Union Trust Co. v. Weber, 96 Ill. 357; Commissioners v. Markle, 46 Ind. 96; Knight v. Turnpike Co. 45 Ind. 139; Shoemaker v. Grant Co. 36 Ind. 175; Riley v. W. U. Tel. Co. 47 Ind. 511; School Board App. 74 Pa. St. 252; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331 (59 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 401); Dorn v. Fox, 61 N. Y. 264; Mohawk & H. R. R. R. Co. v. Clute, 4 Paige, Ch. 384; Gould v. Atlanta, 55 Ga. 678; R. R. Co. v. Wyoming, 1 Wyoming, 96; Home v. Green, 52 Miss. 452; Blakeslee v. Murphy, 44 Conn. 188; Lapene v. McCan, 28 La. Ann. 749; Robinson v. Reid, 50 Ala. 69; Grass v. Hess, 37 Ind. 198; Earl v. Matheney Co. 60 Ind. 202; Smith v. Pearce, 6 Baxter, (Tenn.) 72.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin.

The bill, originally filed in a state court and afterwards removed into the Circuit Court of the United States, prayed for an injunction to restrain the collection of a tax assessed by the City of Milwaukee against Kœffler. The tax was assessed against him as a resident of that City on account of his personal property; and his complaint alleges that he did not reside in Milwaukee in the year for which the tax was levied against him, nor for some years before or since, and that the assessment is therefore void.

The answer of defendant, filed in the state court before the removal of the case, denies complainant's allegation as to nonresidence and, averring his citizenship and residence there, adds:

"And for a further and separate answer and defense, the defendant alleges and shows unto the court that the plaintiff, if he is able to prove the allegations of his complaint herein, has a complete and sufficient remedy at law; and that for this reason this court, as a court of equity, should not and will not interfere, assume or take jurisdiction of this action, and the defendant objects for that reason to any and all interference of this court, as a court of equity, in the matter of which plaintiff complains, and asks that this action be dismissed."

Replication being filed, the case was heard on these issues, and on a considerable mass of testimony as to the question of residence in Milwaukee.

On the hearing it appears that the judges of [220] the circuit court, assuming that complainant was not a resident of that City, were divided in opinion on the question of the jurisdiction of the court as a court of equity, to grant relief. This question they present to us in the following certificate:

"The case coming on to be heard at this term upon the pleadings and proofs, it occurred as a question whether a bill in equity to set aside and restrain the collection of a personal tax or a tax levied upon personal property by a municipal corporation can be maintained on the sole ground of the illegality of the tax by reason of the nonresidence within the limits of such municipality of the person against whom the tax is levied.

On which question the opinions of the judges were opposed.

Whereupon, on motion of the plaintiff, by his counsel, that the point on which the disagreement hath happened may during the term be stated under the direction of the judges and certified under the seal of the court to the supreme court to be finally decided, it is ordered that the foregoing state of the pleadings and the following statement of facts, which is made under the direction of the judges, be certified according to the request of the plaintiff by his counsel, and the law in that case made and provided, to wit:

That Charles A. Kœffler, the plaintiff, in 1882, when the assessment and levy of tax against him on account of personal property were made, was not and for several years prior thereto had not been a resident of the City of Milwaukee, but was and had been a resident of the Town of Wauwatosa, in the County of Milwaukee, Wisconsin."

In accordance with the opinion of the presid- [222] ing justice, a decree was made setting aside the assessment of the tax and enjoining the City and its officers from collecting it.

We are of opinion that both this court and the Supreme Court of Wisconsin are committed to a contrary doctrine.

The case of Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108 [78 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 65], was a bill in equity in the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Illinois, brought by Dows, a citizen of New York, to restrain the City of Chicago from collecting a tax upon the shares of stock which he owned in a national bank located in that city. He alleged that the tax was illegal because his shares were assessed at a higher rate than other moneyed capital in the city, and because, not being a resident of Chicago, but of New York, his personal property belonged to his domicil, and any tax levied on it by the City of Chicago was void.

The bill was dismissed on demurrer, on the ground that a court of equity had no jurisdiction to give relief, for the reasons stated in the bill. It will be observed that in that case, as in this, the tax was resisted as a tax on the person on account of personal property, upon the ground that the party assessed did not reside within the city, and the corporation, therefore, had no power to tax him.

The property for which the tax was assessed was in each case intangible property. In the first case it was bank shares, the certificates of which were undoubtedly held at the residence of Dows in New York; and in the present case it was for money loaned on mortgages.

Looking at the case then made by the bill, one in which the assessment of the tax was not only irregular but void, the court, in the language of Mr. Justice Field, said:

[223] "Assuming the tax to be illegal and void, we do not think any ground is presented by the bill justifying the interposition of a court of equity to enjoin its collection. The illegality of the tax and the threatened sale of the shares for its payment constitute of themselves alone no ground for such interposition. There must be some special circumstances attending a threatened injury of this kind, distinguishing it from a common trespass and bringing the case under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction before the preventive remedy of injunction can be invoked. It is upon taxation that the several States chiefly rely to obtain the means to carry on their respective governments; and it is of the utmost importance to all of them that the modes adopted to enforce the taxes levied should be interfered with as little as possible. Any delay in the proceedings of the officers upon whom the duty is devolved of collecting the taxes may derange the operations of government, and thereby cause serious detriment to the public. No court of equity will therefore allow its injunction to issue to restrain their action, except where it may be necessary to protect the rights of the citizen whose property is taxed, and he has no adequate remedy by the ordinary processes of the law. It must appear that the enforcement of the tax would lead to a multiplicity of suits, or produce irreparable injury, or, where the property is real estate, throw a cloud upon the title of the complainant, before the aid of a court of equity can be invoked. In the cases where equity has interfered, in the absence of these circumstances, it will be found, upon examination, that the question of jurisdiction was not raised, or was waived."

The opinion contains an examination of the adjudged cases, by which the proposition is sustained, in one of which, that of Cook County v. Chicago, etc. R. R. Co. 35 Ill. 465, the general principle is well stated by the Supreme Court of Illinois, namely: "that while a court of equity would never entertain a bill to restrain the collection of a tax, except in cases where the tax was unauthorized by law, or where it was assessed on property not subject to taxation, it had never held that jurisdiction would be taken in those excepted cases, without special circumstances showing that the collection of [224] the tax would be likely to produce irreparable injury or cause a multiplicity of suits."

In the case of Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547 [82 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 231], the principle is thus stated: "It has been the settled law of the country for a great many years that an injunction bill to restrain the collection of a tax, on the sole ground of illegality of the tax, cannot be maintained. There must be an allegation of fraud, that it creates a cloud upon the title, that there is apprehension of a multiplicity of suits, or some cause presenting a case of equity jurisdiction. This was decided as early as the days of Chancellor Kent, in Moores v. Smedly, 6 Johns. Ch. 28, and has been so held from that time onward."

In the State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 613 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 663, 673], these decisions are reviewed with others, and the whole question very fully considered, as the importance of the cases and the ability of the counsel who argued them required; and after citing the language in Dows v. Chicago, and Hannewinkle v Georgetown, the court adds: "We do not propose to lay down in these cases any absolute limitation of the powers of a court of equity in restraining the collection of taxes; but we may say that in addition to illegality, hardship or irregularity the case must be brought within some of the recognized foundations of equitable jurisprudence, and that mere errors or excess in valuation or hardship or injustice of the law, or any grievance which can be remedied by a suit at law, either before or after payment of the taxes, will not justify a court of equity to interpose by injunction to stay collection of a tax."

An intimation in the opinion in that case to the effect that, in cases of taxes assessed by counties, towns or cities, a more liberal use of the control of courts of equity may be necessary, has been cited in the brief in the present case as affording ground for sustaining the injunction here. But no class of cases was there mentioned as justifying this interference, and it is evident that the mere facts that the tax was levied by a local corporate body, and was also illegal, were not in themselves supposed to be sufficient; for the cases cited in the sentences preceding that remark, of Dows v. Chicago and Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, were both cases of taxes by towns, to which the doctrine of the restricted powers of a court of equity was applied.

The rule against the interference of a court of equity, and the exceptions to the rule are restated with careful accuracy in the very recent case in this court of the Union Pacific Railway Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 525 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 1101].

As to the decisions of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, its language, in the case of Quinney v. Stockbridge, 33 Wis. 505, is as emphatic as that of this court. "The complaint," says the court, "charges the seizure of certain personal property belonging to plaintiffs by the treasurer, under and by virtue of the warrant for the collection of the taxes, and asks an injunction to prevent the treasurer from selling the same. It is well settled, in this court at least, that the writ of injunction will not be granted for such a purpose, and that the illegal seizure and threat of the officer to sell the goods and chattels of the plaintiff constitute no ground for equitable interference." In the case of Van Cott v. Supervisors of Milwaukee County, 18 Wis. 247, which, like the present case, was a bill to enjoin the collection of a tax on personal property, and in nearly every other respect is like this, except that the County of Milwaukee was defendant there, and here it is the City, the same court gave the reasons for the rule adopted by it in the following language: "Our reasons, in brief, are, that by the wrong such as is complained of here no irreparable mischief is threatened, no cloud is thrown over the title to real estate, which a court of equity may be called upon to remove, and the plaintiff has an ample remedy at law. To say nothing of the special remedies given by statute, which with diligence and attention on the part of the taxpayer will always prove effectual, and nothing of the remedies by certiorari, mandamus, prohibition, etc., as heretofore applied in such cases, it seems to us that the remedy by action against the assessors in cases where they exceed their jurisdiction, and the right which the party always has to recover back the money paid for taxes illegally imposed, if collected by distress and sale of his goods, or if, upon levying a warrant, he pays to save his property, constitute a complete answer to the application of a court of equity to restrain or prevent the collection." It is then shown that the corporation being liable in an action to recover back the tax wrongfully exacted, the return of this sum is, both in law and equity, full compensation.

There is nothing to take the case before us out of the principle here laid down; and the decision of the highest court of Wisconsin, that the remedy at law is ample, must command our respect.

In the latest case in Michigan, Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 407, Cooley, Justice, says: "It was decided at an early day in this State that equity had no jurisdiction to restrain the collection of a personal tax, even conceding it to be illegal, the ordinary legal remedies being ample for the party's protection," citing Williams v. Detroit, 2 Mich. 560, and Henry v. Gregory, 29 Mich. 68. He also shows by additional citations that the same principle has been asserted in the courts of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, California, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Ohio, Missouri, New York and Maryland.

In the case before us we see no reason for departing from the settled doctrine both of this court and of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin.

There is nothing here presented which brings the case under any of the recognized heads of equity jurisdiction, and the mischiefs which must attend the exercise of the right to contest in the courts of equity every tax which is asserted to be illegal or unauthorized, are too serious to justify any such departure.

The question on which the judges of the Circuit Court divided is, therefore, answered in the negative; and as that court has no equitable jurisdiction in the case, its decree is reversed and the case remanded, with directions to dismiss the bill.

True copy. Test:
James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

HERMAN PRESSER, Plff. in Err., [252]

v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 252-269.)

Constitutional law—validity of the Military Code of Illinois—construction of.

1. Statutes must be interpreted, if possible, so as to make them consistent with the Constitution and the paramount law.
2. Statutes that are constitutional in part only will be upheld so far as they are not in conflict with the Constitution, provided the parts are separable.
3. The States have the power to control and regulate the organization, drilling and parading of military bodies and associations, except when they are authorized by the militia laws of the United States.
4. The Second Amendment to the Constitution is a limitation only upon the power of Congress and the National Government, and not upon that of the States.
5. Citizens of the United States have no right to associate together to drill or parade with arms, independent of any Act of Congress or State law, within the protection of the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.
6. The fifth and sixth sections of article XI. of the Military Code of Illinois, which forbids bodies of men to associate together as military organizations, or to drill or parade with arms in cities and towns unless authorized by law, are not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

[No. 78.]

Argued Nov. 23, 24, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

The history and facts of the case appear in the opinion of the court.

Messrs. Allen C. Story and Lyman Trumbull, for plaintiff in error:

The Act in question is in direct conflict with subdivisions 12, 14, 15, 16 and 18 of section 8, article 1 of the Federal Constitution, and the various Acts of Congress upon the subject of "militia."

Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 1 (18 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 19); Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 209 (22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 78) Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 702); Hannibal & St. J. R. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465 (Bk. 24, L. ed. 527); McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 579); Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 529); Story, Const. sec. 1208; Opinions of Justices, 14 Gray, 614; McCall's Case, 5 Phil. Rep. 259; Cooley, Const. Lim. 177, n., 178, 179; U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 552 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 591); People v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585; Livingston v. Van Ingen, 9 Johns. 507; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 96); Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. 19 (25 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 537).

It is also in conflict with subdivision 3, section 10, art. 1, Federal Constitution.

Cases above cited; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1 (48 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 581); Mills v. Martin, 10 Johns. 7; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 745); Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 227); Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1 (21 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 547); Poole v. Fleeger, 11 Pet. 185 (36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 680).

It is also in conflict with article II, amendments to Federal Constitution.

See authorities first above cited.

It is also in conflict with the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 74 (83 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 408); U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 543 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 588); Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 430 (79 U. S. bk. 20, L. ed. 452); Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 49 (73 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 749); Lemmon v. People, 20 N. Y. 607; Willard v. People, 4 Scam. 461; Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 580 (60 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 773).

It is also in conflict with subdivision 3, § 9, art. 1, Fed. Const.

Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 390 (1 U. S. bk. 1, L. ed. 650); Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87 (10 U. S. bk. 3, L. ed. 162); Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 356); Sheppard v. People, 25 N. Y. 406; Lapeyre v. U. S. 17 Wall. 206 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 610); Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. 456 (58 U. S. bk. 15, L. ed. 127); Ex Parte Garland, 4 Wall. 333 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 366).

The power of arming, organizing and disciplining the militia, being confided by the Constitution to Congress, when Congress acts upon the subject and passes a law to carry into effect the constitutional provision, such action excludes the power of legislation by the States on the same subject. Congress has exercised its functions and covered, so far as it deemed expedient, the ground assigned to it by the Constitution.

Act of May 8, 1792, 1 Stat. at L. 271, R. S. § 1625 et seq.; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 24 (18 U. S. bk. 5, L. ed. 24). There is nothing in the case of Sturges v. Crowninshield, in conflict with this doctrine.

The Fourteenth Amendment makes all persons born or naturalized in the United States citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside, and then declares that no State shall make any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States. The citizen has secured to him the right to keep and bear arms as part of the militia which Congress has the right to organize, and to arm and drill in companies.

U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 552 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 591).

The organization of the Illinois National Guard, provided for by the Illinois Code, does not conform to the Act of Congress. It does not constitute any part of the militia upon which the president may call to enforce the laws of the United States, when resisted by combinations too powerful to be overcome by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings.

Act, Feb. 28, 1795; 1 Stat. at L. 424; R. S. §§ 5298, 5299

It is purely a state force, sworn to serve the State in its military service, subject at all times to the orders of the Governor, prohibited from leaving the State without his consent under a penalty; and, so far from being a part of the militia organized in pursuance of the Act of Congress, the Illinois National Guard, in its organization, arming, and the purpose for which it is organized, contravenes the spirit and intent of the national Act, and if permitted to stand, it prevents the organization, arming and disciplining of all the male citizens of the State as Congress has prescribed.

Mr. George Hunt, Atty-Gen. of Illinois, for defendants in error:

The Federal Constitution does not take from a State its right to call out the militia for any or all lawful purposes for its own protection and preservation. Without depriving a State of any rights, it vests in Congress the power to provide for using the militia for the purposes therein enumerated and none other.

The power of the State to provide for the organization of its own militia is not derived from the Constitution of the United States. The power existed and was exercised before the adoption of the Constitution; and its exercise by the States is not prohibited by that instrument. It is only such legislation as is repugnant to the authority of Congress that must give way, even when the authority conferred upon Congress is being exercised.

Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713 (70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 96); Livingston v. Van Ingen, 9 Johns. 566; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122 (17 U. S. bk. 4, L. ed. 529); Blanchard v. Russell, 13 Mass. 1.

The right of the people to assemble even for a lawful purpose is not such a right as it is the duty of the general government to enforce.

U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 588). See Dunne v. People, 94 Ill. 120.

The Act is purely a police regulation enacted in the interest of the public peace and good order. The right of a State to provide against unlawful assemblies has never been questioned.

N. W. Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 70 Ill. 634; Lakeview v. Rose Hill Cem. Co. 70 Ill. 191; Galena & C. U. R. R. Co. v. Dill, 22 Ill. 264; Same v. Appleby, 28 Ill. 283.

Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

Herman Presser, the plaintiff in error, was indicted on September 24, 1879, in the Criminal Court of Cook County, Illinois, for a violation of the following sections of article XI. of the Military Code of that State:

"Sec. 5. It shall not be lawful for any body of men whatever, other than the regular organized volunteer militia of this State, and the troops of the United States, to associate themselves together as a military company or organization, or to drill or parade with arms in any city or town of this State, without the license of the Governor thereof, which license may at any time be revoked; And provided further, that students in educational institutions, where military science is a part of the course of instruction, may, with the consent of the Governor, drill and parade with arms in public, under the superintendence of their instructors, and may take part in any regimental or brigade encampment, under command of their military instructor; and while so encamped shall be governed by the provisions of this Act. They shall be entitled only to transportation and subsistence, and shall report and be subject to the commandant of such encampment; Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed so as to prevent benevolent or social organizations from wearing swords.

Sec. 6. Whoever offends against the provisions of the preceding section, or belongs to or parades with any such unauthorized body of men with arms shall be punished by a fine not exceeding the sum of $10, or by imprisonment in the common jail for a term not exceeding six months, or both." Laws of 1879, page 203.

The indictment charged in substance that Presser, on September 24, 1879, in the county of Cook, in the State of Illinois, "did unlawfully belong to, and did parade and drill in the City of Chicago with an unauthorized body of men with arms, who had associated themselves together as a military company and organization, without having a license from the governor, and not being a part of, or belonging to, 'the regular organized volunteer militia' of the State of Illinois, or the troops of the United States."

A motion to quash the indictment was overruled. Presser then pleaded not guilty, and both parties having waived a jury the case was tried by the court, which found Presser guilty and sentenced him to pay a fine of $10.

The bill of exceptions taken upon the trial set out all the evidence, from which it appeared that Presser was thirty-one years old, a citizen of the United States and of the State of Illinois, and a voter; that he belonged to a society called the Lehr und Wehr Verein, a corporation organized April 16, 1875, in due form, under chapter 32, Revised Statutes of Illinois, called the General Incorporation Laws of Illinois, "for the purpose," as expressed by its certificate of association, "of improving the mental and bodily condition of its members, so as to qualify them for the duties of citizens of a republic. Its members shall therefore obtain, in the meetings of the association, a knowledge of our laws and political economy, and shall also be instructed in military and gymnastic exercises;" that Presser, in December, 1879, marched at the head of said company, about four hundred in number, in the streets of the City of Chicago, he riding on horseback and in command; that the company was armed with rifles and Presser with a cavalry sword; that the company had no license from the Governor of Illinois to drill or parade as a part of the militia of the State, and was not a part of the regular organized militia of the State, nor a part of the troops of the United States, and had no organization under the militia law of the United States. The evidence showed no other facts. Exceptions were reserved to the ruling of the court upon the motion to quash the indictment, to the finding of guilty, and to the judgment thereon. The case was taken to the Supreme Court of Illinois, where the judgment was affirmed. Thereupon Presser brought the present writ of error for a review of the judgment of affirmance.

The position of the plaintiff in error in this court was, that the entire statute under which he was convicted was invalid and void, because its enactment was the exercise of a power by the Legislature of Illinois forbidden to the States by the Constitution of the United States.

The clauses of the Constitution of the United States referred to in the assignments of error, were as follows:

Art. I. sec. 8. "The Congress shall have power * * * To raise and support armies. * * * To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions. To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the States, respectively, the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia, according to the discipline prescribed by Congress. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper, for carrying into execution the foregoing powers," etc.

Art. I. sec. 10. "No State shall, without the consent of Congress, keep troops * * * in time of peace."

Art. II. of Amendments. "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

The plaintiff in error also contended that the enactment of the fifth and sixth sections of article XI. of the Military Code was forbidden by subdivision 3 of section 9, art. I, which declares "No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed," and by article XIV. of Amendments, which provides that "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law.' [261]

The first contention of counsel for plaintiff in error is that the Congress of the United States having, by virtue of the provisions of article I, section 8, above quoted, passed the Act of May 8, 1792, entitled "An Act More Effectually to Provide for the National Defense by Establishing an Uniform Militia Throughout the United States," (1 Stat. at L. 271,) the Act of February 28, 1795, "To Provide for Calling Forth the Militia to Execute the Laws of the Union, Suppress Insurrections, and Repel Invasions," (1 Stat. at L. 424,) and the Act of July 22, 1861, "To Authorize The Employment of Volunteers to Aid in Enforcing the Laws and Protecting Public Property," (12 Stat. at L. 268,) and other subsequent Acts, now forming "Title XVI., The Militia," of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the Legislature of Illinois had no power to pass the Act approved May 28, 1879, "To Provide for the Organization of the State Militia, entitled the Military Code of Illinois," under the provisions of which (sections 5 and 6 of article XI.) the plaintiff in error was indicted.

The argument in support of this contention is that the power of organizing, arming and disciplining the militia being confided by the Constitution to Congress, when it acts upon the subject and passes a law to carry into effect the constitutional provision, such action excludes the power of legislation by the State on the same subject.

It is further argued that the whole scope and object of the Military Code of Illinois is in conflict with that of the law of Congress. It is said that the object of the Act of Congress is to provide for organizing, arming and disciplining all the able-bodied male citizens of the States respectively, between certain ages, that they may be ready at all times to respond to the call of the nation to enforce its laws, suppress insurrection and repel invasion and thereby avoid the necessity for maintaining a large [262] standing army, with which liberty can never be safe; and that on the other hand, the effect if not object of the Illinois Statute is to prevent such organizing, arming and disciplining of the militia.

The plaintiff in error insists that the Act of Congress requires absolutely all able bodied citizens of the State, between certain ages, to be enrolled in the militia; that the Act of Illinois makes the enrollment dependent on the necessity for the use of troops to execute the laws and suppress insurrections, and then leaves it discretionary with the Governor by proclamation to require such enrollment; that the Act of Congress requires the entire enrolled militia of the State, with a few exemptions made by it and which may be made by state laws, to be formed into companies, battalions, regiments, brigades and divisions; that every man shall be armed and supplied with ammunition; provides a system of discipline and field exercises for companies, regiments, etc., and subjects the entire militia of the State to the call of the President to enforce the laws, suppress insurrection, or repel invasion; and provides for the punishment of the militia officers and men who refuse obedience to his orders. On the other hand, it is said that the state law makes it unlawful for any of its able bodied citizens, except eight thousand, called the Illinois National Guard, to associate themselves together as a military company, or to drill or parade with arms without the license of the Governor, and declares that no military company shall leave the State with arms and equipments without his consent; that even the eight thousand men styled the Illinois National Guard are not enrolled or organized as required by the Act of Congress, nor are they subject to the call of the President, but they constitute a military force, sworn to serve in the military service of the State, to obey the orders of the Governor, and not to leave the State without his consent; and that, if the state Act is valid, the national Act providing for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia is of no force in the State of Illinois, for the Illinois Act, so far from being in harmony with the Act of Congress, is an insurmountable obstacle to its execution.

[263] We have not found it necessary to consider or decide the question thus raised, as to the validity of the entire Military Code of Illinois; for, in our opinion, the sections under which the plaintiff in error was convicted may be valid, even if the other sections of the Act were invalid. For it is a settled rule "that statutes that are constitutional in part only will be upheld so far as they are not in conflict with the Constitution, provided the allowed and prohibited parts are separable." Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 80 [Bk. 24, L. ed. 377]; Penniman's Case, and Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S. 717, 459 [Bk. 26, L. ed. 604, 409]. See also Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 550].

We are of opinion that this rule is applicable in this case. The first two sections of article I. of the Military Code provide that all able bodied male citizens of the State between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, except those exempted, shall be subject to military duty, and be designated the "Illinois State Militia," and declare how they shall be enrolled and under what circumstances. The residue of the Code, except the two sections on which the indictment against the plaintiff in error is based, provides for a volunteer active militia, to consist of not more than eight thousand officers and men; declares how it shall be enlisted and brigaded, and the term of service of its officers and men; provides for brigade generals and their staffs, for the organization of the requisite battalions and companies and the election of company officers; provides for inspections, parades, and encampments, arms and armories, rifle practice and courts-martial; provides for the pay of the officers and men, for medical service, regimental bands, books of instruction and maps; contains provisions for levying and collecting a military fund by taxation, and directs how it shall be expended; and appropriates $25,000 out of the treasury, in advance of the collection of the military fund, to be used for the purposes specified in the Military Code.

It is plain from this statement of the substance of the Military Code that the two sections upon which the indictment against the plaintiff in error is based may be separated from the residue of the Code and stand upon their own independent provisions. These sections might have been left out of the Military Code and put in an Act by themselves, and the Act thus constituted, and the residue of the Military Code, would have been coherent and sensible Acts. If it be conceded that the entire Military Code, except these sections, is unconstitutional and invalid, for the reasons stated by the plaintiff in error, these sections are separable and, put in an Act by themselves, could not be considered as forbidden by the clauses of the Constitution having reference to the militia, or to the clause forbidding the States, without the consent of Congress, to keep troops in time of peace. There is no such connection between the sections which prohibit any body of men, other than the organized militia of the State and the troops of the United States, from associating as a military company and drilling with arms in any city or town of the State, and the sections which provide for the enrollment and organization of the State militia, as makes it impossible to declare one without declaring both invalid.

This view disposes of the objection to the judgment of the Supreme Court of Illinois, which judgment was in effect that the legislation on which the indictment is based is not invalid by reason of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, which vest Congress with power to raise and support armies, and to provide for calling out, organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, and that provision which declares that "no State shall without the consent of Congress * * * keep troops * * * in time of peace."

We are next to inquire whether the 5th and 6th sections of article XI. of the Military Code are in violation of the other provisions of the Constitution of the United States relied on by the plaintiff in error. The first of these is the Second Amendment, which declares: "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

We think it clear that the sections under con sideration, which only forbid bodies of men to associate together as military organizations, or to drill or parade with arms in cities and towns unless authorized by law, do not infringe the right of the people to keep and bear arms. But a conclusive answer to the contention that this amendment prohibits the legislation in question lies in the fact that the amendment is a limitation only upon the power of Congress and the National Government, and not upon that of the States. It was so held by this court in the case of United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 588], in which the Chief Justice, in delivering the judgment of the court, said, that the right of the people to keep and bear arms "is not a right granted by the Constitution. Neither is it in any manner dependent upon that instrument. The Second Amendment declares that it shall not be infringed; but this, as has been seen, means no more than that it shall not be infringed by Congress. This is one of the Amendments that has no other effect than to restrict the powers of the National Government, leaving the people to look for their protection against any violation by their fellow citizens of the rights it recognizes to what is called in New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 139 [36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 662], the 'powers which relate to merely municipal legislation, or what was perhaps more properly called internal police,' 'not surrendered or restrained' by the Constitution of the United States." See also Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243 [32 U. S. bk. 8, L. ed. 672]; Fox v. Ohio, 5 How. 410 [46 U. S. bk. 12, L. ed. 212]; Twitchell v. Commonwealth, 7 Wall. 327 [74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 224]; Jackson v. Wood, 2 Cow. 819; Commonwealth v. Purchase, 2 Pick. 521; United States v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308; North Carolina v. Newsom, 5 Ired. 250; Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. 165; Fife v. State, 31 Ark. 455.

It is undoubtedly true that all citizens capable of bearing arms constitute the reserved military force or reserve militia of the United States as well as of the States; and, in view of this prerogative of the General Government, as well as of its general powers, the States cannot, even laying the constitutional provision in question out of view, prohibit the people from keeping and bearing arms, so as to deprive the United States of their rightful resource for maintaining the public security, and disable the people from performing their duty to the General Government. But, as already stated, we think it clear that the sections under consideration do not have this effect.

The plaintiff in error next insists that the sections of the Military Code of Illinois, under which he was indicted, are an invasion of that clause of the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States which declares: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

It is only the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States that the clause relied on was intended to protect. A State may pass laws to regulate the privileges and immunities of its own citizens, provided that in so doing it does not abridge their privileges and immunities as citizens of the United States. The inquiry is therefore pertinent: What privilege or immunity of a citizen of the United States is abridged by sections 5 and 6 of article XI. of the Military Code of Illinois?

The plaintiff in error was not a member of the organized volunteer militia of the State of Illinois, nor did he belong to the troops of the United States or to any organization under the militia law of the United States. On the contrary, the fact that he did not belong to the organized militia or the troops of the United States was an ingredient in the offense for which he was convicted and sentenced. The question is, therefore: Had he a right as a citizen of the United States, in disobedience of the state law, to associate with others as a military company, and to drill and parade with arms in the towns and cities of the State? If the plaintiff in error has any such privilege he must be able to point to the provision of the Constitution or statutes of the United States by which it is conferred. For, as was said by this court in United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 588], "The Government of the United States, although it is within the scope of its powers supreme and beyond the States, can neither grant nor secure to its citizens rights or privileges which are not expressly or by implication placed under its jurisdiction. All that cannot be so granted or so secured are left to the exclusive protection of the State."

[267]

We have not been referred to any statute of the United States which confers upon the plaintiff in error the privilege which he asserts. The only clause in the Constitution which, upon any pretense, could be said to have any relation whatever to his right to associate with others as a military company is found in the First Amendment, which declares that "Congress shall make no law * * * abridging * * * the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances." This is a right which it was held in United States v. Cruikshank, [supra], was an attribute of national citizenship and, as such, under the protection of and guaranteed by the United States. But it was held in the same case that the right peaceably to assemble was not protected by the clause referred to, unless the purpose of the assembly was to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

The right voluntarily to associate together as a military company or organization, or to drill or parade with arms, without and independent of an Act of Congress or law of the State authorizing the same, is not an attribute of national citizenship. Military organization and military drill and parade under arms are subjects especially under the control of the government of every country. They cannot be claimed as a right independent of law. Under our political system they are subject to the regulation and control of the State and Federal Governments, acting in due regard to their respective prerogatives and powers. The Constitution and laws of the United States will be searched in vain for any support to the view that these rights are privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States independent of some specific legislation on the subject.

It cannot be successfully questioned that the State Governments, unless restrained by their own constitutions, have the power to regulate or prohibit associations and meetings of the people, except in the case of peaceable assemblies to perform the duties or exercise the privileges of citizens of the United States; and have also the power to control and regulate the organization, drilling, and parading of military bodies and associations, except when such bodies [268] or associations are authorized by the militia laws of the United States. The exercise of this power by the States is necessary to the public peace, safety and good order. To deny the power would be to deny the right of the State to disperse assemblages organized for sedition and treason, and the right to suppress armed mobs bent on riot and rapine.

In the case of New York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 102 [36 U. S. bk. 9, L. ed. 648], this court said: "We choose rather to plant ourselves on what we consider impregnable positions. These are, that a State has the same undeniable and unlimited jurisdiction over all persons and things within its territorial limits as any foreign nation, when that jurisdiction is not surrendered or restrained by the Constitution of the United States; that by virtue of this it is not only the right but the bounden duty of a State to advance the safety, happiness and prosperity of its people, and to provide for its general welfare by any and every Act of legislation which it may deem to be conducive to these ends, where the power over that particular subject or the manner of its exercise is not surrendered or restrained in the manner just stated," namely: by the Constitution and laws of the United States. See also Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 203 [22 U. S. bk. 6, L. ed. 71]; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713 [70 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 96]; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462 [72 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 497]; United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41 [76 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 593]; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 588]. These considerations and authorities sustain the power exercised by the Legislature of Illinois in the enactment of sections 5 and 6 of article XI. of the Military Code.

The argument of the plaintiff in error that the legislation mentioned deprives him of either life, liberty or property without due process of law, or that it is a bill of attainder or ex post facto law, is so clearly untenable as to require no discussion.

It is next contended by the plaintiff in error that sections 5 and 6 of article XI. of the Military Code, under which he was indicted, are in conflict with the Acts of Congress for the organization of the militia But this position is based on what seems to us to be an unwarranted construction of the sections referred to. It is clear that their object was to forbid voluntary military associations, unauthorized by law, from [269] organizing or drilling and parading with arms in the cities or towns of the State, and not to interfere with the organization, arming and drilling of the militia under the authority of the Acts of Congress. If the object and effect of the sections were in irreconcilable conflict with the Acts of Congress they would of course be invalid. But it is a rule of construction that a statute must be interpreted so as, if possible, to make it consistent with the Constitution and the paramount law. Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. 433 [28 U.S. bk. 7, L. ed. 732]; Grenada County Supervisors v. Brogden, 112 U. S. 261 [Bk. 28, L. ed. 704]; Marshall v. Grimes, 41 Miss. 27. If we yielded to this contention of the plaintiff in error we should render the sections invalid by giving them a strained construction, which would make them antagonistic to the law of Congress. We cannot attribute to the Legislature, unless compelled to do so by its plain words, a purpose to pass an Act in conflict with an Act of Congress on a subject over which Congress is given authority by the Constitution of the United States. We are therefore of opinion that fairly construed the sections of the Military Code referred to do not conflict with the laws of Congress on the subject of the militia.

The plaintiff in error further insists that the organization of the Lehr und Wehr Verein as a corporate body, under the general corporation law of the State of Illinois, was in effect a license from the Governor, within the meaning of section 5 of article XI. of the Military Code, and that such corporate body fell within the exception of the same section "of students in educational institutions where military science is a part of the course of instruction."

In respect to these points we have to say that they present no federal question. It is not, therefore, our province to consider or decide them. Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590 [87 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 429].

All the federal questions presented by the record were rightly decided by the Supreme Court of Illinois.

Judgment affirmed.

True copy. Test:

James H. McKenney, Clerk, Sup. Court, U. S.

PORT OF MOBILE, Plff. in Err.,

v.

HENRY WATSON.

PORT OF MOBILE, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES, ex rel. HENRY WATSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 289-306.)

Constitutional law—municipal corporations—dissolution—liability of successors for debts—impairment of remedies—mandamus.

1. Where a municipal corporation is dissolved and a new corporation is created, composed of substantially the same community, including substantially the same taxable property, within reduced territorial limits organized for the same general purposes and holding by transfer, without consideration, the public property of the former, it is the successor of the old corporation and is liable for its debts.

2. The obligations of municipal corporations, upon bonds duly issued by them, are secured by all the guarantees which protect the engagements of private individuals.

3. Any legislative enactment which withdraws or limits the remedies for the enforcement of obligations assumed by a municipal corporation, where no substantial equivalent is provided, is forbidden by the Constitution of the United States.

[Nos. 93, 94.]

Argued Dec. 10, 11, 1885. Decided Jan. 4, 1886.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Alabama.

Statement of the case by Mr. Justice Woods:

The object of the first of these suits was the recovery of a judgment for money and of the second the enforcement, by the writ of mandamus, of the judgment recovered in the first. They were argued as one case. In the first case Henry Watson, the defendant in error, was the plaintiff in the circuit court. He brought his action against the Port of Mobile to recover the principal money due on certain bonds issued by the City of Mobile, under its corporate name: "The Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of the City of Mobile," and the interest on the same shown to be due by certain coupons thereto appended. The bonds were issued December 31, 1859, were for $1,000 each and were payable to the order of the Mobile and Great Northern Railroad Company on the first day of January, 1879, with interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum. Upon the margin of each bond was the following recital: "In pursuance of the terms of the contract between the corporate authorities of the City of Mobile and the Mobile and Great Northern Railroad Company, an ordinance approved on the 30th December instant, provides for the sum of $95,000 by a special tax annually to be applied to the payment of $1,000,000 of bonds to be issued by the City of Mobile to aid in the construction of the Mobile and Great Northern Railroad."

The declaration averred that the defendant, the Port of Mobile, was "the legal successor of the said, the Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of the City of Mobile, and bounden for its debts and for the payment of the said bonds and coupons."

The defendant pleaded "that the said alleged bonds and coupons were issued by the Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of the City of Mobile, a different municipal corporation, and not by this defendant, nor by anyone authorized to bind this defendant in the premises; that this defendant is not the successor in law nor in fact of the said the Mayor, Alderman and Common Council of the City of Mobile; nor is this defendant legally bounden to pay the said debt."

In the record there was a paper, entitled "Agreement of Facts," signed by the counsel for the parties. By this paper it was admitted that the contract between the City of Mobile and the Mobile and Great Northern Railroad Company, recited in the margin of the bonds, had been made and the ordinance therein referred to had been passed, and that the plaintiff became the legal holder of the bonds and coupons for value before maturity by the assignment of the railroad company. It was further agreed that two Acts were passed by the Legislature of Alabama on the 11th day of February, A. D. 1879; one entitled "An Act to Vacate and Annul the Charter and Dissolve the Corporation of the City of Mobile, and to Provide for the Application of the Assets Thereof in Discharge of the Debts of said Corporation;" and the other, "An Act to Incorporate the Port of Mobile and to Provide for the Government Thereof"; said Acts were referred to and made part of the agreement. It was further agreed that all the territory now embraced in the Port of Mobile was formerly embraced in the City of Mobile; that the territorial extent of the City of Mobile was about seventeen square miles, and of the Port of Mobile about eight square miles; that the Port of Mobile covered all the thickly settled and closely built portion of the City of Mobile; that the taxable property within the latter, according to the last assessment made by it prior to the passage of the Acts of February 11, 1879, was $16,255,093, and that all of said taxable property was embraced within the limits of the Port of Mobile, except about $900,000, and that about fourteen fifteenths of the resident inhabitants of the City of Mobile were resident inhabitants of the Port of Mobile. It was further admitted that the total indebtedness of the City of Mobile on February 11, 1879, was about $2,500,000, and that it had nominal assets of $775,000, which were largely reduced for the general creditor by prior liens and exemption from levy by execution.

It appeared by the record that the case was submitted to the jury on June 29, 1880, which, on that day, returned a general verdict for the plaintiff, and assessed his damages at $7,308.80, upon which the court at once rendered judgment in his favor. A writ of error sued out by the Port of Mobile brings this judgment under review.

The only question raised upon the trial was, whether, as matter of law, upon the statutes of the State of Alabama, the Port of Mobile was the legal successor of the City of Mobile, and bound for the payment of the bonds and coupons sued on. The validity of the judgment in the case of the Port of Mobile, plaintiff in error, against Watson, will therefore depend upon the answer to that question.

The plaintiff having obtained his judgment against the Port of Mobile, sued out, May 27, 1881, execution thereon, which on the same day was returned by the marshal—"no property found." Afterwards, on the 19th day of January, 1882, he filed in the circuit court his petition, in which he prayed for the writ of mandamus, and charged that the police board of the Port of Mobile had the right and it was their duty to assess and levy a special tax for the satisfaction of his judgment. He therefore, prayed for the writ to compel the Port of Mobile and its officers charged with the levying and collection of taxes to assess, levy and collect a special tax for the payment of his judgment. [292]

In order to understand the questions raised by this petition, it will be necessary to state more fully the contract made by the City of Mobile with the Mobile and Great Northern Railroad Company in reference to the issue of the series of bonds in question, and the legislation of the State of Alabama in reference to the City of Mobile and the Port of Mobile.

By the Act of the Legislature, approved February 29, 1859, the City of Mobile was authorized to aid the construction of the railroad of said company by an issue to the company of bonds of the City to the amount of $1,000,000, under such contract as the City might make with the railroad company, and was vested with power to adopt the ordinances necessary to carry out such contract. In pursuance of this authority the City of Mobile, on December 30, 1859, entered into a contract with the railroad company, in which, among other things, it was provided that the City should issue to the railroad company, on or before January 2, 1860, its bonds to the amount of $1,000,000, and that the City should annually, after January 1, 1860, provide the sum of $95,000, to be applied to the payment of the bonds and coupons thereto attached as they become due, by a special tax to be levied and collected by the City for that purpose, and that the City should pass the by-laws and ordinances necessary to that end. In pursuance of this contract the City of Mobile, on December 30, 1859, passed an ordinance which provided that for the year 1860, and annually thereafter, there should be levied and collected a special tax upon the assessed value of all the taxable property in the City of Mobile sufficient to produce the said sum of $95,000, and that the money so raised should be pledged to the payment of said bonds and the interest [293] coupons. Upon the faith of the Act of the Legislature referred to, and the contract and ordinance of the City of Mobile, bonds of the City to the amount of $1,000,000 were issued to the railroad company and by it assigned and sold.

The City of Mobile having, in the year 1878, made default in the payment of the interest on its debt, which then exceeded $2,500,000, the Legislature, on February 11, 1879, passed "An Act to vacate and annul the charter and dissolve the corporation of the City of Mobile, and to provide for the application of the assets thereof in discharge of the debts of said corporation."

This Act, by its first section, repealed the charter of the City of Mobile, and declared that the corporation of the City of Mobile, known as "The Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of the City of Mobile," was thereby dissolved and abolished.

The Act then provided for the appointment, by the Governor of the State, of three commissioners whose duty it should be to take possession of all the property and assets of the City of Mobile, to hold such property and assets upon the same trusts and subject to the same liens and charges that the same were under when in the possession of the City of Mobile; and, under the direction and pursuant to the orders of the Chancery Court of the County of Mobile, collect the debts and taxes due the City and sell its property and apply the taxes and debts collected and the proceeds of the property sold to the payment of the debts of the City, the floating debt to be first paid. The Act declared that the commissioners should have no power to levy any tax or assessment whatever, but that it should be their duty to treat with the holders of the funded debt of the City of Mobile with a view to its adjustment and settlement, and to report to the Governor the result of their negotiations, together with the draft of such Act as might be proper to carry into effect any scheme of adjustment that might result from such negotiations; all of which it was made the duty of the Governor to submit to the Legislature.

On the same day, to wit: February 11, 1879, the Legislature passed "An Act to incorporate the Port of Mobile, and provide for the government thereof."

[294] This Act incorporated, under the name of the Port of Mobile, the inhabitants residing within certain specified boundaries, which included no territory not embraced within the limits prescribed by the charter of the City of Mobile. The Act provided for the election of eight persons to be styled the Mobile Police Board, for a tax collector and other officers, and made it the duty of the tax collector to collect all taxes and license charges, and to perform and discharge all such other duties as might be required of him by the police board. It empowered the police board to levy and collect, for each year of its existence, upon the assessed value of all property and subjects of state taxation within the Port of Mobile, a tax of six tenths of 1 per centum for the purpose of defraying the expenses of carrying out the provisions of the Act, and made the assessment returned by the assessor of Mobile County for the preceding year that on which the tax should be levied and collected. The Act further provided that the police board should have and exercise the powers thereby conferred on them and no other, and repealed all conflicting Acts and parts of Acts.

After the recovery by the plaintiff of his judgment against the Port of Mobile, on June 29, 1880, the Legislature of Alabama, on December 8, 1880, passed an Act which declared that the Police Board should not levy any other tax than the six tenths of one mill on the dollar authorized by the seventeenth section of the Act of February 11, 1879, "to incorporate the Port of Mobile and provide for the government thereof," and the license taxes authorized by section 30 of that Act.

The Legislature, on December 8, 1880, also passed "An Act to adopt and carry into effect the plans for the adjustment and settlement of the existing indebtedness of the late Corporation," the City of Mobile, etc. This Act was subsequently, on February 24, 1881, re-enacted with material amendments.

The amended Act provided for an issue of $2,500,000 of the bonds of the City of Mobile, to be dated January 1, 1881, and to be payable in twenty-five years, with interest at 3 per cent for five years, 4 per cent for fifteen years, and five per cent for the remaining five years. These bonds were to be used by exchanging them for the bonds of the City of Mobile of the issue of May 1, 1875; but no available provision was made in the Act for the payment or satisfaction of the issue of which the plaintiff's bonds formed a part. The Act further required the commissioners of the City of Mobile, immediately after its passage, to turn over to the Police Board of the Port of Mobile "all the real and personal property which was formerly held and owned" by the City of Mobile "for public use and governmental purposes," such as public buildings, markets, squares, parks, fire engines, engine houses, hose and hose carriages, engineering instruments, and all other property of like character and use, except only the wharves.

Such was the legislation of Alabama in reference to the City of Mobile and the Port of Mobile when the plaintiff filed his petition for the writ of mandamus. The defendants to the petition, namely: the Port of Mobile and the Police Board of the Port of Mobile, filed a demurrer and also an answer to the petition. In the latter they denied that the Port of Mobile was the successor of the City of Mobile, bounden for its debts and the performance of its duties in reference to said judgment; and denied that the Port of Mobile or its police board had any power, or that it was their legal duty to assess, levy or collect the special tax for the purpose of paying said judgment.

The plaintiff demurred to this answer, and upon final hearing upon the demurrer to the petition and the demurrer to the answer, the circuit court ordered "that the respondents, the Port of Mobile, the Mobile Police Board, Richard B. Owen, president, James W. Monette, Robert Adams, Sylvester J. Russell, Daniel McNeill, Patrick J. Hanlon, John Henry, Frank P. Andrews and William Paton, Commissioners of the Port of Mobile and members of said Police Board, do forthwith assess, levy and cause to be collected a special tax upon the property, real and personal, subject to tax by them, the said Port of Mobile and Mobile Police Board, sufficient to pay and satisfy the said judgment of the relator against the Port of Mobile for the debts of the said relator, with interest thereon; and the same to cause to be collected in lawful money; and as collected, in whole or in part, the same to pay over or cause to be paid over to said Henry Watson or his lawful attorney, to satisfy the said judgment, with interest thereon."

This judgment is also brought up for review by the writ of error sued out by the Port of Mobile.

Messrs. Hannis Taylor, J. Little Smith and Braxton Bragg, for plaintiff in error:

"Municipal corporations are mere instrumentalities of the State for the more convenient administration of local government. Their powers are such as the Legislature may confer, and these may be enlarged, abridged or entirely withdrawn at its pleasure."

Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 197).

There is no contract between the State and the public, that the charter of a city shall not at all times be subject to legislative control. All persons who deal with such bodies are conclusively presumed to act upon knowledge of the power of the Legislature. There is no such thing as a vested right held by any individual in the grant of legislative power to them.

U. S. v. Railroad Co. 17 Wall. 322 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 597); Commissioners v. Lucas, 93 U. S. 108 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 822); People v. Morris, 13 Wend. 325; Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. St. 169; Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 29 Vt. 12; Ang. & Ames, Corp. 10th ed. § 31; Dill. Mun. Corp. § 30; Cooley, Const. Lim. 192, 193.

After the repeal of a municipal charter, a State must deal with the outstanding debts in the same capacity in which it deals with its own direct obligations. The obligation clause of the Constitution ceases to operate on the subject matter the moment the State sees fit to repeal the charter and to take back to itself the taxing power once vested by it in the municipality. From that moment the responsibility and the power of the federal judiciary ceases; from that moment the responsibility of the State becomes exclusive. Every holder of municipal bonds acquires no higher guaranty than he would have if he purchased the direct obligations of the State itself.

Hulme v. Board of Levee Comrs. 19 Wall. 653 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 223)

The Port of Mobile is not the legal successor of the dissolved corporation, and liable for its obligations.

The power of the State to make this change of local government is uncontrovertible.

Meriwether v. Garrett, supra.

The mere fact that a new corporation thus created by a State occupies, in whole or in part, the territory occupied by a preceding corporation has in itself no legal significance. The question of successorship depends alone upon the legislative intent.

Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 896); Bellows v. Bank, 2 Mas. C. C. 44; Wyman v. Bank, 14 Mass. 62; Ang. & Ames, Corp. 780; Dill. Mun. Corp. 55; Grant, Corp. 304, 305. See also Morgan v. Beloit, 7 Wall. 613 (74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 203).

In aid of judgment creditors of a municipal corporation by mandamus, federal courts cannot levy a tax or improvise machinery for its collection.

Rees v. Watertown, 19 Wall. 107 (86 U. S. bk. 22, L. ed. 72); Barkley v. Levee Comrs. 93 U. S. 258 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 893); Meriwether v. Garrett, supra.

A part of a State cannot be taxed for the debt of the whole State; a part of a county cannot be taxed for the debt of the whole county; a part of a city cannot be taxed for the debt of the whole city.

Knowlton v. Supervisors of Rock Co. 9 Wis. 410; State v. Merchants' Ins. Co. 12 La. Ann. 802; Adams v. Summerville, 2 Head, 363; Atty-Gen. v. Winnebago L. & F. R. R. Co. 11 Wis. 35; Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 242; Philadelphia Asso. v. Wood, 39 Pa. St. 73.

Messrs. James E. Webb and Gaylord B. Clark, for defendants in error:

The power of the Legislature over a municipal corporation as a mere political agent is unlimited. But a municipal corporation as a legal person, authorized to incur valid obligations to third persons, is beyond the reach of arbitrary legislative action, as to the rights of such third persons.

Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 54, 63, 65, 66, 69; Waring v. Mobile, 24 Ala. 701; University v. Williams, 9 Gill. & J. 365; U. S. v. R. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322 (84 U. S. bk. 21, L. ed. 597); Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266 (Bk. 23, L. ed. 896); Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432; (Bk. 24, L. ed. 760; Police Jury v. Shreveport, 5 La. Ann. 661; State v. Miller, 67 Mo. 604; Slaughter v. Mobile Co. 73 Ala. 184; Oliver v. Worcester, 102 Mass. 489; Richland v. Lawrence Co. 12 Ill. 1.

The Legislature cannot impair the remedy for the enforcement of corporate contracts by taxation.

Von Hoffman v. City of Quincy, 4 Wall. 535 (71 U. S. bk. 18, L. ed. 403); Broughton v. Pensacola, supra; Ralls Co. Court v. U. S. and Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 733, 278 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 1220, 1090; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514 (Bk. 25, L. ed. 699); Louisiana v. Mayor of New Orleans, 109 U. S. 285 (Bk. 27, L. ed. 936.

Where such legislation is attempted, mandamus to compel the exercise of the power, to the extent it was previously possessed, will lie in the absence of any other adequate remedy.

Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358 (Bk. 26, L. ed. 395); Ralls Co. Court v. U. S. supra; Scaine v. Bellville, 39 N. J. L. 526; Comrs. Court of Limestone Co. v. Rather, 48 Ala. 433; Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145; Amy v. Selma, decided at the last term of the Supreme Court of Alabama.

There being no express negation, at the time of its incorporation, on the power of the Port to levy this special tax, the power and duty arose in view of its successorship; and the subsequent amendment restricting this power is void.

Slaughter v. Mobile Co. 73 Ala. 134; Comrs. Court of Limestone Co. v. Rather, and Wolff v. New Orleans, supra.

[299] Mr. Justice Woods delivered the opinion of the court:

It is not disputed that the bonds issued by the City of Mobile upon which the plaintiff brought suit and recovered judgment against the Port of Mobile, were the valid obligations of the City of Mobile, which was bound by its contract to levy and collect annually a tax of $95,000, to be applied to the payment of the principal and interest of the issue of bonds of which those held by the plaintiff formed part. It is apparent from the statement of the case that the Act of February 11, 1879, "to vacate and annul the charter of the City of Mobile and provide for the application of the assets thereof in discharge of the debts of said Corporation," and the Act of the same date, "to incorporate the Port of Mobile and provide for the government thereof," and the several Acts subsequent thereto on the same general subject, make no adequate provision for the payment of the bonds held by the plaintiff, and other bonds of the same issue, of which, according to the answer of the Port of Mobile to the petition for the writ of mandamus, there still remain unsatisfied bonds to the amount of $323,914. The effect of this legislation is to take from the officers of the City of Mobile all power to lay a tax for their payment, and to leave no means for their satisfaction. The assets of the City of Mobile turned over to the commissioners appointed by authority of the Act to vacate its charter, being largely reduced for the general creditor by prior liens and exemptions from levy by execution, and their proceeds being first required to be applied to the floating debt of the city, have afforded no satisfaction to the plaintiff, and it is not pretended that payment could or would be made to him out of the proceeds of such assets. If, therefore, the plaintiff cannot exact payment from the Port of Mobile, the effect of the legislation referred to is to deprive him of all remedy upon the bonds issued by the City of Mobile and the contract providing for their payment, valid when made, and valid still. It is, [300] therefore, a vital question in the case whether the Port of Mobile is the legal successor of the City of Mobile and bound for its debts. The agreement of facts made in the suit upon the bonds is conceded to be a true statement of the facts therein recited. From this paper and other admissions made in the answer of the Port of Mobile to the rule to show cause, and the legislation of the State of Alabama made a part of the record, it appears that on the day when the Act was passed vacating and annulling the charter and dissolving the corporation of the City of Mobile, another Act was passed to incorporate the Port of Mobile; that all the territory embraced within the limits of the Port of Mobile was formed of part of the territory and included all the thickly settled and closely built portion of the City of Mobile; that out of more than $16,000,000 of taxable property of the City of Mobile all but $900,000 was included within the limits of the Port of Mobile, and that fourteen fifteenths of the inhabitants of the City of Mobile were inhabitants of the Port of Mobile. While, therefore, the area of territory of the Port of Mobile was little more than half that of the City of Mobile, it is apparent that the former included substantially the same taxable property and the same body of people as the City of Mobile. It further appears that all the property, except its wharves, of the City of Mobile, used by it for public and governmental purposes, was by the authority of the Act of February 24, 1881, turned over and delivered to the Port of Mobile for its use without compensation to be paid therefor.

We are of opinion, upon this state of the statutes and facts, that the Port of Mobile is the legal successor of the City of Mobile and liable for its debts. The two corporations were composed of substantially the same community, included within their limits substantially the same taxable property, and were organized for the same general purposes.

Where the Legislature of a State has given a local community, living within designated boundaries, a municipal organization, and by a subsequent Act or series of Acts repeals its charter and dissolves the corporation and incorporates substantially the same people as a municipal body under a new name for the same general purpose, and the great mass of the taxable property of the old corporation is included within the limits of the new, and the property of the old corporation used for public purposes is transferred without consideration to the new corporation for the same public uses, the latter, notwithstanding a great reduction of its corporate limits, is the successor in law of the former and liable for its debts, and if any part of the creditors of the old corporation are left without provision for the payment of their claims, they can enforce satisfaction out of the new. In illustration and support of this proposition, the following cases are in point:

In Girard v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. 1 [74 U. S. bk. 19, L. ed. 53], it was held by this court that the annexation to the City of Philadelphia, having a territory of only two square miles, of twenty-eight other municipalities with all their inhabitants, comprising districts, boroughs and townships of various territorial extent, and the changing of its name, did not destroy its identity or impair its right to hold property devised to it.

So in Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S. 266 [Bk. 23, L. ed. 896], it was said by Mr. Justice Field, in delivering judgment, that "When a new form is given to an old corporation, or such a corporation is reorganized under a new charter, taking in its new organization the place of the old one, embracing substantially the same corporators and the same territory, it will be presumed that the Legislature intended a continued existence of the same corporation, although different powers are possessed under the new charter and different officers administer its affairs; and in the absence of express provision for their payment it will also be presumed that the Legislature intended that the liabilities as well as the rights of property of the corporation in its old form should accompany the corporation in its reorganization."

In O'Connor v. Memphis, 6 Lea, 730, the Supreme Court of Tennessee went so far as to say "that neither the repeal of the charter of a municipal corporation, nor a change of its name, nor an increase or diminution of its territory or population, nor a change in its mode of government, nor all of these combined, will destroy the identity, continuity or succession of the corporation if the people or territory reincorporated constitute an integral part of the corporation abolished. * * * The corporators and the territory are the essential constituents of the corporation, and rights and liabilities naturally adhere to them."

In Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514 [Bk. 25, L. ed. 699], a municipal corporation had been dissolved and its territory divided between and annexed to three adjacent corporations. Upon this state of facts the court held that unless the Legislature otherwise provided, the corporations to which the territory and the inhabitants of the divided corporation had been transferred, were severally liable for their proportionate share of its debts, and were vested with its power to raise revenue wherewith to pay them by levying taxes upon the property transferred and the persons residing therein. See also Colchester v. Seaber, 3 Burr. 1866; Cudden v. Eastwick, 1 Salk. 192; People v. Morris, 13 Wend. 325; New Orleans R. R. Co. v. City of New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 476.

In the case of Amy v. Selma, recently decided by the Supreme Court of Alabama and not yet reported, a question almost identical with the one now in hand was considered. The Legislature of Alabama had passed an Act, approved December 11, 1882, entitled "An Act to Vacate and Annul the Charter and Dissolve the Corporation of the City of Selma, and to Provide for the Application of the Assets Thereof to the Payment of the Debts Thereof." That Act repealed the charter of the City of Selma and all Acts amendatory thereof, and declared the corporation dissolved and all offices held under any of said Acts, except for the purposes and during the period provided by the repealing Act, abolished; and that all powers of taxation given to the City of Selma by Acts of the Legislature were resumed by and lodged in the Legislature. It transferred to the custody and control of the State of Alabama all property, real and personal, held and used by the corporation for governmental or other public purposes, and declared that the inhabitants and territory within the territorial limits and jurisdiction of said corporation were resolved into the body of the State. The residue of the Act was substantially similar to the Act of February 11, 1879, "to vacate and annul the charter and dissolve the corporation of the City of Mobile," etc.

This was followed by an Act approved February 17, 1883, "to incorporate the inhabitants and territory formerly embraced within the corporate limits of the municipal corporation, since dissolved, styled the City of Selma, and to establish a local government therefor."

This Act, after reciting the dissolution of the City of Selma and the repeal of its charter, among many other provisions, formed the inhabitants residing within the territory formerly covered by the City of Selma into a municipal corporation under the name and style of "Selma;" provided for officers of the municipality and prescribed their duties; authorized them to levy taxes, but declared that no funds derived by the corporation thereby created from taxes or any other source should be used for the payment of any of the debts of the City of Selma; and transferred and made over to Selma the property which had been held and used by the City of Selma, to be held and used for the same uses and trusts to which it had been devoted while in the possession of the City of Selma.

This Act was followed by an Act approved February 19, 1883, to carry into effect any plan or scheme for the compromise, adjustment and settlement of the existing indebtedness of the late corporation, known as the City of Selma, which might be agreed upon between the creditors of the said City of Selma and commissioners appointed under and by virtue of the Act * * * of December 11, 1882. With this series of Acts in force, the Supreme Court of Alabama, in the case mentioned, was called on to construe the Act "to vacate and amend the charter and dissolve the corporation of the City of Selma, and to provide for the application of the assets thereof to the payment of the debts thereof." It held that this Act was without operation upon the debts and liabilities of the City of Selma lawfully contracted; that the Act of February 19, 1883, to incorporate the inhabitants and territory formerly embraced within the limits of the City of Selma was a reorganization, under the corporate name of Selma, of the same corporators, and embraced substantially the same territory as the City of Selma; that the corporation called Selma was the [304] successor of the City of Selma and bound for the payment of its debts; and that a suit at law, founded on a judgment against the City of Selma, was maintainable against its successor, Selma.

This construction of these statutes of the State of Alabama by its highest court being in accord with our own views and in harmony with former decisions of this court on the same general subject, is decisive of the question in hand, unless there is some material difference between the legislation concerning the City of Selma and that concerning the City of Mobile. The only difference that can be supposed to have any bearing upon the question under discussion is that the Act incorporating Selma embraced the same territory as that covered by the City of Selma; whereas, the Port of Mobile covered little more than half the territory embraced by the City of Mobile. We think this difference between the two cases is an immaterial one. The Supreme Court of Alabama, in the case of the Mobile, etc. Railroad Co. v. Kennedy, 74 Ala. 566, assumed that the City of Mobile and the Port of Mobile had substantially the same corporators and the same boundaries. And we are of opinion that the exclusion from the limits of the Port of Mobile of the sparsely settled suburbs of the City of Mobile, a territory of little value, as fairly appears by the record, and consisting, as stated by the counsel for plaintiff, without contradiction, largely of fields, swamps and land covered with water, will not serve to distinguish this case from the case of Amy v. Selma. We repeat, therefore, that in our judgment the Port of Mobile is the legal successor of the City of Mobile and bound for its debts.

